Salvation Army Advisory Council Officers Installed

Members of the Salvation Army in Littlefield were challenged to "restore the wasteland of the human heart" Tuesday at its annual appreciation banquet.

Speaking to the group was Lt. Col. Paul Thronburg, divisional commander of Texas. Thronburg said that the 1966 Salvation Army budget for Texas was slightly under $5 million.

"This was due to the selflessness of the people of Texas who are concerned with the world we live in," he said.

There have always been various ideologies about how to make the world a better place to live, he said. There is Communism, Socialism, Democracy, the Great Society . . .

"But if we want to build a better world, we must build better men," he said. "Utopians have failed, because we have failed to build Utopians."

"In this complex world it behooves each of us to be concerned about each other," he added.

BUT HE KNEW HE WOULDN'T

David Almost Made It Home

EARTH — When David Louis Glascock bid his farewell to the folks in this community to become a fighting soldier in Vietnam, he remarked, "I'll probably never come back alive."

Well, David almost made it. One year and 348 days later, just 19 days short of his discharge, he did come back. But true to his premonition, he wasn't alive.

Instead, he came home in a casket covered with the stars and stripes of the country he was fighting for.

He joined 273 other Americans who were killed in action that week on soil of the far-away land to the East.

It was a good day for David to come home. The sun was shining, hardly a cloud in sight. And the town that he was reared in and loved so much was ready for him.

Flags were flying every where. "I haven't seen so many flags flying in this town in a long time, not even for the rodeo," said one observer. "And they're all in honor of David."

By 3:30 that afternoon, just before the funeral, every business in town had shut its doors, and towards 4 o'clock a long caravan of cars was making its way to the auditorium of Springlake-Earth High School, where David's services were held.

When the services began the auditorium was filled with more than 300 persons who came to pay their last respects.

David, who would have been 23 in July, was born in Amherst, but spent most of his life in Earth. Anyone who lived there very long knew him, and liked him.

Several people who knew David well were quick to say that he was a fine boy.

a good hand while he was at it," the man said.

David attended school at Springlake-Earth Schools, but he never finished.

Records show that he dropped out while a junior and went to work. While he was in school he never participated in extracurricular activities because he always was working somewhere.

After dropping out he went on the payroll of the Halsell Ranch, working as a cowboy. "David liked that work an awful lot, and liked horse riding," a man said.

"He enjoyed that as much as anything," said a member of his family.

David's folks moved from Earth to Rockwall, Tex., just before he was drafted into the Army.

Although David really didn't want to go away, he made a good soldier as a paratrooper in the 173rd Infantry. While in the service he worked his way up in rank and even finished high school.

But, then, he seemed to be a fellow who tried to work hard at everything and do his best. Until he was cut down by "small arms fire" somewhere in Vietnam.

"He was a good soldier. He stood tall," said an aunt.

David and his parents finally returned to Earth, each two years after they had left. David came home to be laid to rest on the wind-swept prairie of the South Plains, and his parents came to bid him a final farewell.

Ironically, David was buried on a day of election in this country. It was on a day he was fighting to preserve, and a day those who killed him seek to destroy.

If you think milk is milk,
this may surprise you.

Some folks think all milks are alike because all milks must meet certain standards and requirements. It just isn't so.

The standards which have been set are for your protection but you must decide for yourself which milk is best for your family. With something as important as milk, we think you want the very best for your family, especially your children.

We know that children are the biggest consumers of Borden's Milk.
And because we know how important it is to their diets, we're convinced that only the best milk is good enough for them.

This is why Borden's Milk is always better than it has to be!
From the dairy farm until it reaches you, Borden's Milk is tested 23 separate times. Tested for flavor. Tested for purity. Tested for quality that far exceeds all regulations.

The Borden Company has been leading the industry in high quality standards for over 100 years. Sometimes this extra care causes Borden's Milk to cost a little more.

But isn't it worth something to know that your children are drinking the best milk you can buy?

AMY'S ADLIBS

This Is Mine?

By Amy Turner

I HAVE READ some about the rules of heredity and environment and I suppose there's a great deal to be said for both, but, then, I wonder:

What happened to me? Mother has just visited us and sailed off in her shining, clean car, with her hair neatly coiffed and her shoes brightly polished, sitting correctly in her absolutely, positively wrinkle-free dress.

I waved goodbye to her after I brushed the hair from my eyes and wiped my hands on my apron before I discovered I hadn't put ON my apron and then looked down to find that I was wearing one blue slipper and one white one. Makes you wonder, doesn't it?

Although, by now, Mother has grown somewhat used to it and simply looks as though to say:

"And this is mine?" Because, you see, Mother is a NEAT woman.

SHE IS one of those marvelous women who comes out of the bedroom in the morning looking as though she is ready for the TV camera.

Well, so do I. In fact, I bear a marked resemblance to Phyllis Diller as I stumble down the hall to put the coffee pot on.

I rather suspect, however, that Mother's a.m. appearance has something to do with the fact that Papa frequently serves her that first cup of coffee in bed. Now, I can't absolutely vouch for this since I haven't had much experience along this line, but I suspect it.

I really can't explain, though, how Mother can scrub a kitchen floor and walk out without a hair out of place, looking like she had just returned from the beauty shop.

Believe me, when I scrub a kitchen floor, I LOOK like I've scrubbed a kitchen floor. In fact, I can look like I've scrubbed a kitchen floor even when I haven't.

NOT THAT Mother didn't really try with me. I remember when she tried to teach me to cook.

She gave up shortly after I had burned three pots of peas which she had carefully shelled. She never could understand how I could sit on a stool not a foot away from the stove and become so engrossed in a book that I couldn't smell peas burning.

Unfortunately, for me, it was easy. Then, when I went away to school, I remember she would come to visit me and, well, sort of recoil at the door to my room.

There she would find me in the midst of all my clutter and mess happily curled up on the bed reading a book. Patiently, poor Mother would start to clean up and pick up.

Of course, the whole problem started when I was very young and Mother made one big mistake . . . she allowed me to learn to read.

SINCE I AM now in the category of a mother, it has just occurred to me that I really shouldn't be writing all of this.

The thought hits me that I do have a 13-year-old daughter who occasionally reads this column . . . in absolute horror, of course, dreading the thought of what I might say and how in the world she is going to explain it to her friends.

I do sympathize with her since I realize she is having a rather difficult time raising me but I understand she has recently developed a simple explanation that goes something like this:

"Can I help it if I have a kook for a Mother? I mean she's OK and all but, well, she's DIFFERENT."

So, with these thoughts in mind, I deem it advisable to add one more thing:

None of the above is true, I made it all up.

OWNER'S REPORT

Answer For Golf Widows

By Bill Turner

GOLF bugs are accused of everything in the world by their wives.

"You think more of pounding that little white ball all over the place than you do of your family" is one approach.

My wife once said, in an embarrassing column, that if "men had to choose between Bardot and that little white ball, they'd take golf everytime."

At any rate, golf widows can get awfully sour on their men at times.

I've always told myself that the reason I can't play golf any better than I do is because I always go to the course with a guilty conscience.

But, like my wife says, I always go anyway.

I DON'T KNOW whether anybody will ever solve the golf widow problem or not.

The solution doesn't seem readily available, as long as golfers head for the course and golf widows are left behind to watch the kids.

Women don't complain near as much if the old man sits down in front of the TV to watch a war picture.

They never holler if he says, "Let's go to the movie."

So there may be a silver lining behind those dark clouds that seem to come up everytime the word "golf" is mentioned.

YOU SEE, there's a new approach coming in golf.

All we'll have to do is announce, "Let's go to the movies."

Then everybody can watch while Dad participates.

This new gimmick is called Golf-O-Tron and already is in operation in some of the larger cities.

It works this way:

You go to the movie house, and then pick out any big name course that you want to play, say like Pebble Beach in California.

You tee off in normal fashion. A projector shows how the hole looks from the tee. If you hit a 200-yard drive, the projector automatically advances down the hole that distance and you can see what your next shot would be if you were actually playing the course.

Distance of shots is measured by a computer. Factors are sound of impact of your club with the ball, the speed with which it travels to the screen and also the trajectory.

Each player must play out the hole, then the projector is reversed to the tee and the next player steps up. Putting is accomplished on a carpet in front of the tee, from as far out as 20 feet.

A fellow who has tried Golf-O-Tron says a player needs every club in the bag to play indoor golf. He says it's pretty darn close to the real thing.

At any rate, maybe the golf widows could live with us playing a little indoor golf, particularly if we were able to convince them it's just like going to the movie.

It all sounds like a real good deal to me. Like maybe playing a little golf (pardon me while I duck).... The year 'round!

THROUGH THE YEARS

15 Years Ago

(Taken from the files of the Lamb County Leader, Thursday, April 4, 1957)

Farmers are advised by Lamar D. Aten, Jr., manager of the Lamb County ASC office, Littlefield, to call and sign From M.Q. 31, which preserves their cotton or wheat history up to their allotment. In other words, explains Aten, if the farmer does not plant 90% of his allotment, he will receive full credit regardless if he plants any of it.

Mayor Ray Keeling was notified Wednesday that Littlefield has been allotted an additional $30,000 for airport improvement by the federal government. The information was released by U.S. Secretary of the Commerce, Sinclair Weeks.

A long range program to replace the chairs in the Community Center was started Monday night. Twelve chairs will be purchased immediately.

25 Years Ago

(Taken from the files of the Lamb County Leader, Thursday, April 2, 1942)

The War Production board Tuesday prohibited retail merchants from selling toothpaste or shaving cream in tubes to any customer who fails to turn in some type of used collapsible tube for each new one purchased.

Plans are underway to secure a Migratory labor camp in Littlefield, and an option was taken last week by Farm Security officials, of a forty acre tract belonging to Leonard Irwin, northeast of the Irwin Cotton Warehouse.

The Littlefield Chamber of Commerce, with the West Texas Chamber cooperating, are making an effort to secure an increase in the tire quotas for Lamb County. In-as-much as the Rationing Board advises they are behind, and getting further behind each week, in providing tires to farmers, the local Board advises they are behind, and getting further behind each week, in providing tires to farmers, the local Chamber of Commerce Secretary, E.C. Cundiff, after contracting County officials, prepared a statement of facts, which has been sent to the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, who will in turn pass same on to the State Administration for action.

The Upper Room

"Thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard." (Acts 22:15)

A boy was hurrying home from school to show his mother something he had found. Along the way, he was showing it to others. I saw his beaming face and spoke to him. He said, "Do you want to see what I've found?" He quickly showed me a shining silver dollar. He was proud of his find and anxious to tell others about it.

We Christians have found a Savior and He has forgiven our sins. We have hope for a free life both now and forevermore. This is more precious than silver and gold.

Is there any wonder that those who have made this find are anxious to tell about it? It is mighty good news to them. They know that it will be good news for others also. Am I grateful for the saving power of Jesus Christ in my life? Am I telling others about Him and what He can do for them?

PRAYER: Dear Father, how thankful we are for the sending of Jesus Christ into the world. We are grateful beyond measure that He has saved our souls. Unloose our tongues and lighten our feet that we may be witnesses for our living Lord, in whose name we pray. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY: Knowing Jesus is too good to keep to myself. —Grover I. Chapman (Texas) Copyright—THE UPPER ROOM

THE ABUNDANT LIFE

Share Happiness

BY BOB WEAR

SOME SAY that happiness is different things to different people, and it seems that all persons are engaged in the pursuit of this happiness. Of course, this is one reason why there is so little happiness. The desire to be happy is universal, but oftentimes the feeling about it is so essentially selfish that the desire never quite knows satisfaction. Nothing is more elusive than happiness when it is sought as an end in itself. It, by its very nature, is made to be shared. It cannot be held as a selfish possession. This good feeling is not to be used and monopolized solely for oneself. We like the way Jane Porter expresses this truth: "Happiness is not perfected till it is shared."

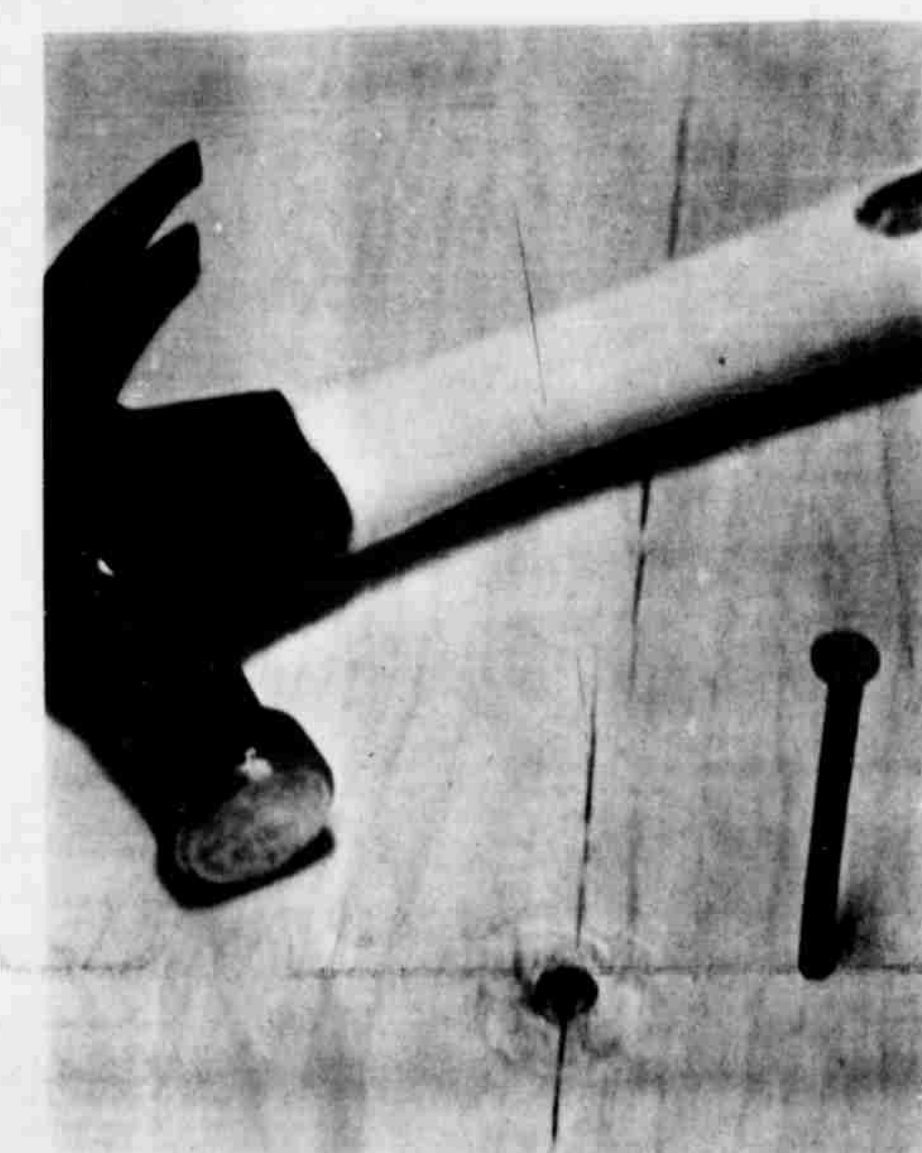

It is right to desire to be happy, but we must not expect it as a reality until we form the right attitudes and establish proper behavior patterns. The opportunity for happiness in our lives is a great blessing from God. A. S. Hardy said, "Happiness is the legitimate fruitage of love and service. Set happiness before you as an end, no matter in what guise of wealth, or fame, or oblivion even, and you will not attain it. But renounce it and seek the pleasure of God, and that instant is the birth of your own."

HAPPINESS doesn't mean that we have everything we would like to have. It doesn't mean that everything is the way we think it should be. It is not realized in obtaining more wealth, or more power, or greater popularity, even though the general view is that these and other similar accomplishments are productive of happiness. Coleridge understood the basis for happiness when he said, "Happiness can be built only on virtue, and must of necessity have truth for its foundation." There are too many folk who try to put their concepts of happiness in a materialistic frame of reference. This is, of course, a frustrating experience, because true happiness is spiritually oriented.

Happiness has the capability of growing and multiplying. In fact, its survival is contingent upon its growth and increase. This is one of the basic characteristics of this good feeling, and one of the reasons that it can be so helpful in our lives. Before this growth and increase of one's happiness can be realized, the happiness must be divided by being shared. The uniquely interesting feature about this is that the more it is divided or shared, the more of it we will have in our own lives. The surest way to keep our happiness is to share it, and sharing does not lessen it, but increases it. On the other hand, the greater our effort to keep it all for ourselves, the less we have. It can even be destroyed by selfishness. A Nielsen has said, "Happiness adds and multiplies as we divide it with others."

EVEN IN these times of difficult living, happiness is a very real possibility for all who will follow the pattern of life which produces happiness - a happiness made better and more enduring by sharing.

THAT REALLY HIT THE NAIL ON THE HEAD

GUEST EDITORIAL

Use Of 'Horse Sense' Has Not Injured Town At All

Hereford came in for some national publicity last week when The Wall Street Journal carried a lead article centered around the fact that the community has been successful in securing several industries. The same article was reprinted with permission in The Sunday Brand.

Some people were happy about the publicity, while others seemed to feel that it was a slap at the town. All in all, we thought it was fairly accurate, including the editorial opinion which ran throughout the article.

When one eyes the Hereford situation carefully, it is obvious that we have not always followed cut and dried paths in hunting industry. This, in a measure at least, accounts for the fact that we have been successful, where others have failed. Hereford's "horse sense" approach is tailored to each individual situation, and it includes nothing more than the individual situation merits. Industry does not grow large by being foolish, and any successful business knows that subsidies are in the long run, going to be paid for by the new industry as well as by the existing ones.

If the Wall Street Journal article missed the boat, it was in the inferred opinion that Hereford had nothing or, at best very little, to offer. While this is possibly true if we were attracting automobile manufacturers, textile factories, and several other lines, it does appear to us that Hereford's entire industrial development has centered around local products, thus affording several advantages to the manufacturer which he would not find elsewhere.

Take the new Texas Meat Packers plant, and the proposed Wilson and Co., plant, for instance. These people will save thousands of dollars each month by being located adjacent to the huge feeding lots which dot the area. Holly sugar, likewise, finds itself in the center of a vast beet production area. The chemical and feed manufacturers have a two-way advantage since they are located in the midst of necessary resources, and are still neighbors with one of the nation's tremendous markets.

Whether the article will tend to attract other new industry to Hereford remains to be seen. However, it certainly is not likely to create any damage, and it might catch the eye of some group interested in expansion.

When you boil it all down, the worst thing of which we were accused amounted to the term, "Yankee Ingenuity" -- and most industrial tycoons would give their eyeteeth to get a little bit of this very thing within their own organization. We admit, in these days of socialistic trends, that it is a bit rare -- but history records that it is also the one big factor which established the United States of America as the greatest producing nation in the history of the world. -- The Hereford Brand.

The Countrywoman

By LIBBY MUDGETT

SHE LISTENS to the whistle of a passing train, but knows that the dogs will soon drown out the pleasing sound with their howling. Their chorus will go on long after the whistling has stopped and their ears no longer hurt. So it is with most complainers; they fall in love with their own wailing and continue to whine long after the cause for complaint is over.

SHE DISCOVERS the first timid leafing out of the cottonwoods; they are always among the last to admit that spring is here. To the eye that is weary of many months of browns and grays, how welcome are the new touches of green around the countryside. Winter, like misery, seems long and drear, but finally ends. Spring, like hope, eventually arrives.

Journey To The Past

BY EVALYN PARROTT SCOTT

"Molly, The Cook," was L. P. Hamilton, ex-cook and cowboy who made his home with the Neesters when the days of ranching faded away and left him without an occupation.

Seems nobody knows just exactly when "Molly" Hamilton hit these parts, but he was with the vanguard of wide-brimmed, spurred riders of the range, then stayed for the next phase of the history of the Empire that was in the making.

It is said the year the Plains were laid out and the Caprock built, "Molly" went to work as a cook for the old Yellowhouse, being located at Nine Mile Camp, south of where Littlefield now stands. He sent out some laundry, and the laundryman knowing where the laundry belonged but not knowing the owner's name, marked it "Molly, the Cook."

In his earlier days here, if a letter came addressed to L. P. Hamilton it might go to the dead letter office, whereas if it was addressed to "Molly, the Cook" it was sure to be delivered.

However, after Molly finally settled on Sudan for his mailing address, this was finally solved as he bought the first mail box, No. 1, when the new postal fixture arrived.

The old-type fixture was lettered with the owners or renters names below the boxes, and Hamilton's name is still printed on box No. 1. The fixture is now in the possession of the L. E. States.

Tradition is that Molly was left as a baby in a cow camp and the four cowboys who found him named him using each of their surnames. Thus his name, James Lee Preston Hamilton. However, it is also noted that in his later years, Molly may have tended to exaggerate.

A fellow with a gift of gab, he gave the early settlers many hours of entertainment with his many spirited stories of his cowboy days, and composed songs to sing to the "fairer sex."

He never mentioned having a family they say, but, like the surroundings of his early life as a babe in a cow camp, some mysterious tales have been told concerning his death in Portales, New Mexico in the 1960's. It seems Molly died in an old folks home there and was buried. Later two ladies in a fine, luxurious car, came asking questions concerning Molly and his burial. They supposedly told someone associated with the cemetery they were his daughters. And it appears they were married to ranchers of considerable means and resided in the Northern part of New Mexico. But, if Molly had a family, this was a secret he kept as he never divulged this to his early intimates of the South Plains.

Some tell of the time he was named Justice of the Peace of Sudan for a spell. Seems his Honor gave a worthless check. He, thereupon, proceeded to purchase a typewriter and when asked what for, he replied, "Well, I got this letter about this bad check I gave, and I can't write; so I bought this typewriter to answer the letter with."

Then there was a time he paid down on a new model T. Ford—when asked how he was going to pay for it—this was his answer, "They told me you can pay down on one, drive it for thirty days, then you receive a notice and you have thirty days to pay before they come and get it. I don't mean to pay for it, I'll just drive it sixty days, then let it go back."

Molly thoroughly enjoyed his sixty days of roaming the country side in his four-wheeled steed before letting it "go back."

Molly knew all about the early day cow waddies, segundos and campas, and would always enlighten anyone, that he was none other than "Molly, Cow Waddie" since cows were invented, who became just "Molly" after the advent of the farmer.

He passed through this way once, when enroute to parts in New Mexico and Arizona. After staying there for a while, he returned to the South Plains where he hung his hat for many years before returning to his possible state of his origination, where he died and was buried.

At the time Molly came to these parts, Henry Crosby was foreman of the Yellowhouse ranch. Henry, at one time, lived five miles west of Sudan. Perry Barnes was then in charge of the old "77" and Buddy Thompson was the Door Key Major Domo, the latter being the old Rufe O'Keefe ranch; and a fellow by the name of Wilson was running the Vapread, where Circleback is now located, that became known later as the John Garner home.

D. P. Ernest was the Circleback boss and lived where Dud Kent later lived. The old Muleshoe was one of the big ones and with headquarters west of where the town of Muleshoe now stands. The town was named after the ranch and in the days of long ago, the Muleshoe brand was a familiar sight from one end of the Plains Country to the other.

Old Molly told of one of the first, if not the earliest, farming efforts on the plains. According to Hamilton, this venture was in the 1890's just two miles north of Sudan where an adventurous pioneer started a small feed crop.

The old wells and tanks were still there in 1920, but by then the half-dugout dwelling of the pioneer had long since disappeared.

It is thought by some the old well and tank Molly was referring to was one located on the John Harvey place in 1920. There was another camp too, in those days, about half a mile north of the Santa Fe wells of Sudan.

But, according to the chronicled tales of Molly, that was before the time of Press Abbott, who worked for the Syndicate and helped put an XIT brand on many a yearling. There was also, O. K. Yantis, later of Littlefield, who also worked for the XIT.

Along about this time, the Martin Land was lying just east of Sudan, later known as the Martin Estate, but it was then under lease to the "Hay Hook" people and it is said what they didn't have, the Jaynes did. O. L. Smith was foreman of the Hay Hook for a long time.

Charley Barber was foreman of the old Bar N, the spread where S. D. Hay's sister, Bertha, later attended dances and dinners while visiting her brother, Simon, in 1921. The old Bar N is where Bula is now located.

Charley Barber was for a long time with "S" Cattle Company before going to the Bar N. Ernest Huffman was here in those days and later was foreman of the Mashed O and stayed to see his outfit one of the largest left in the state.

John Jaynes had a camp at Bull Lake and out in the sandhills southwest of Muleshoe at one time was another camp. This camp, the owner's name being forgotten, as the tales told about this camp would make good material for folklore. Seems this was where the outlaws gathered men on the dodge from the older states, as well as portions of the new empire. And, where one doing a bit of "scouting" (a term applied to one evading the officers of the law) was always welcome.

Then there is the story of a happening in the early '90's. Seems a Negro and a white man got lost in the sandhills north of Sudan—it was winter time and cold. The first night, the Negro froze to death. The next morning, the white man tied his dead companion on his horse and rode all day hunting human habitation. Second morning, the white man, too numb from the cold to put the corpse on the horse was compelled to leave it behind. Found by the cowboys, the white man was unable to retrace his steps to the body of the Negro and it could be his skeleton bones are still lying in the sandhills today. That is, if it was not one of the skeletons found in the sandhills through the years.

There were many cold spells here during the time of Molly, including the winter of 1915, when it dipped to 12 below zero. Cattle by the hundreds froze to death and many a calf lost its ears and tail, presenting a rather bobbed-off look when shipped to market that spring.

The main road across the Plains, at that time, was running through about where Mr. Recor lived in 1920 and the Joe Wests lived in 1920; this being a mile and a half north of the present site of Sudan.

All three things Molly could tell about as he hung his hat on a peg in the homes of many a nester and called that place home before joining another family in a few weeks to regale them with stories of the past. If there was ever a dance or a party, Old Molly usually managed to come early, in time for supper; but, he did not always come empty-handed, as he sometimes was the bearer of fresh fruits and other delicacies not easy to come by in those days.

And—if he did make his home here and there, he possibly did enough odd jobs to recompense for the favor of being allowed to share their room and board. If he had a family of his own, or didn't, he had many adopted families, having been here with the passing of one era into another, he felt part-owner of the new phase and adopted new families upon their arrival to the new frontier.

Waggin' Tongue

By TEX ROGERS

It's an established fact that the 1966 cotton crop in these parts was as near a "bust" as anything could be. Thanks to some mighty early cold weather the cotton situation was really frozen.

But to tell the truth, cotton pickin' across the entire nation and state were mighty slim. All in all, the South Plains producers did a lot better than a lot of other folks who stake their groceries and house payments on that fluffy white stuff.

A U.S. Department of Commerce report on cotton ginnings claims that Lamb County farmers harvested 96,676 running bales of cotton last year, which is down about 50.2 per cent from the 1965 crop of 192,248 bales.

But then we have to take in consideration that 1966 acreage was down about 30.5 per cent from 174,998 acres to 121,586 in 1966.

Across the state, the harvest last year was down more than a million bales, from 4,526,959 in '65 to 3,146,453 in '66. And in the nation, production dropped from 14,474,222 in 1965 to 9,525,290.

Now that might make things look pretty bad for cotton folks, and, in some cases it does. Out here in Lamb County the crop was bad, and it makes things hard for a lot of folks. But in many other places it was even worse.

Take down in South Texas, when in August a real gully-washer poured for days and days so the farmers couldn't get their picking machines or hand pullers into the field; that was a real serious problem.

In Calhoun County, which is a smaller cotton area on the Gulf Coast, production dropped as much as 60 per cent. Total cotton ginned in 1965 was 15,678 but in 1966 it was a mere 5,562, on about the same acreage. We don't have any problems compared to those folks.

Then over in Brazoria County, where production was 14,832 in 1965, it was only 4,485 in 1966. Again, we don't have it so bad.

Of course, cotton pickin' across the state weren't all bad, because in parts of the Rolling Plains farmers last year had the best crop in history. Down in Jones County some 57,156 bales were gathered in 1965, and in 1966 66,928 bales were in, on a third less acres!

More of the same was reported in Nolan, Mitchell and Haskell counties. But, the records show that chances of having real outstanding harvests there are about 1 in 10. And the odds of having a bad year up here are about 1 in 10.

So, no matter how bad we think things are in these parts, they could be a lot worse, and they're certainly a lot better than in other parts of Texas.

Grain Sorghum Yield Best With Pre-Boot Watering

"Results of the 1966 study on the irrigation of grain sorghum definitely point out the necessity of a well timed pre-boot irrigation. A six day delay in this irrigation reduced yields in our test approximately 1,000 pounds per acre," James Valiant, soil scientist, who is directing the irrigation research program at the High Plains Research Foundation, said in an interview this week.

"A preplant irrigation plus irrigation at the pre-boot and flower stages of growth in 1966 again produced the greatest practical efficiency."

"A four year average showed no significant increase in yield with three summer irrigations over two summer irrigations."

Commenting on the future of grain sorghum, Valiant said that grain sorghum will probably be planted on more irrigated acres than any other crop in the High Plains of Texas in 1967 because of the feed grain program requiring only a 20% acreage diversion. With the increase in planted acreage, the use of irrigation water will also increase.

This will require the farmer to carefully plan the most practical use of his available water. The declining level in the ground water formation makes this advance planning more important each year. Efficiency of water use is highly important to the grain sorghum producer.

For this reason, the High Plains Research Foundation is continually studying ways and means to maintain and improve the income from grain sorghum with reduced amounts of underground water.

In irrigating grain sorghum the approximately 20-day period beginning with the six to eight leaf stage and ending with head emergence is the most critical. Pre-boot is the period when the small head can be seen forming if the plant is stripped down.

During this period, the producer should watch soil moisture and signs of plant wilting closely to determine when to irrigate. "The more definite periods of moisture needs are fairly easily seen at certain stages of growth, such as pre-boot, flower, milk, and in some cases, the soft dough stage."

Further information on the timing of irrigation of grain sorghum and other crops can be found in the 1966 Annual Research Report to be published in the near future by the High Plains Research Foundation.

Machines, Chemicals Are Much Used By Cotton Men

Machines and chemicals continue to gain favor with Texas cotton producers. A year-end summary report by Fred C. Elliott, cotton specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, points up their importance in the production of the state's number one crop.

Chemicals, including pre and post-emergence applications and lateral oiling and spot oiling, were used on approximately half of the acreage harvested last year. Pre-emergence chemicals were used on more than 1.1 million acres, Elliott said. The use of these chemicals made for more efficient production by reducing labor and machine costs, Elliott continued. The number of acres treated with DSMA (Disodium Methylarsenate) rose to 617,457.

Rotary-hoe equipped tractors continued to be popular as a mechanical method for weed and grass control. More than 46,000 were used in 175 counties of the state. More than 1,500 flame cultivators were used in 54 counties, he noted.

The number of farms in the state using defoliant or desiccants to prepare cotton fields for harvesting reached 115,819, Elliott said.

Machines continued to replace harvesting labor. Last year spindle-type picking machines numbered 5,847 and were used in 81 counties. More than 42,300 stripper-type harvesters were used in 175 counties.

Elliott said that farmers in more than 1,100 communities were assisted with programs aimed at improving picking and ginning methods for higher grades and growers in 2,339 communities obtained Smith Doxey classing service on their cotton.

UP FOR AUCTION -- This Duroc boar was one of 105 swine, including 37 boars, 67 gilts and one bred gilt, to go before the auctioneer last Wednesday in the first Duroc Sale of Edward Elliott and Waymon Lewis & Son. The sale held in the Littlefield show barn, and John of Aberdeen, S.D., was auctioneer.

Local Farmer Recognized For High Grain Yield

Norman Emfinger of Littlefield was among top farmers throughout the sorghum belt who shot for maximum yields in 1966 in conjunction with the DeKalb Sorghum Master's Club program.

He was one of more than 200 farmers from seven states in this concerted high-yield effort. His measured acre of DeKalb E-57 yielded 7,247.24 pounds per acre.

The Sorghum Master's Club has been in existence four years. The common goal is to produce top economical grain yields under practical farm conditions.

High man in 1966 for the club was Billy Lytal of Dimmitt who produced a top effort of 9,984 pounds per acre. He also had the highest yield in the club for 1965 at 10,521 pounds.

Emfinger's effort on a total of 16.8 acres brought an average yield of more than 5,000 pounds, but he is quick to point out some amazing results. He applied about 80 pounds of actual nitrogen and about 40 pounds of phosphorous on the particular field.

But the most unusual thing was that he planted only about 4 1/2 pounds of seed per acre. That still gave the high yield.

"It was fantastic," Emfinger said. "I really couldn't believe it. We planted on the top of the bed, and it succored out real fast."

Emfinger's Sorghum Master's Club field was planted about May 6-7. He had already pre-watered the field and then heavy rains fell to help the situation. During the growing season one solid irrigation was performed, and then two more were used on every other row.

It's also been pointed out that no herbicides were used on the particular block that brought Emfinger a membership in the Sorghum Master's Club. However, some weed control was practiced on the overall field.

Emfinger has been using DeKalb grain sorghum since about 1954, and seems well satisfied. "I like the E-57 which is a breakthrough of old E-56 because it is good both irrigated and dry farming," he said. "The thing comes up to where you can't get to it, it will still up in dry land."

He also says that less is needed for that particular variety.

Emfinger said definitely more acres of grain sorghum will be planted this year. "I'll use the same way and look after the crop. If we can get the water in can put that yield back there," he said.

Once nematodes get at your cotton, yields go down and so do profits. But with FUMAZONE® 86 soil fumigant applied at only 1 to 2 gallons overall an acre, you can take care of root-knot, sting, meadow and other nematodes—those microscopic, worm-like soil pests that attack plant roots, suck away profits. FUMAZONE 86 soil fumigant increases yields up to 1/2 bale an acre. Many High Plains farmers just like yourself tell us that's exactly what happened to their yields after their soils were treated with FUMAZONE 86. It can be applied right from the drum. No mixing, no diluting, no nozzles clogged with foreign material. You can use the chisel method, the plowsole method or inject FUMAZONE 86 into your irrigation water. Could you ask for greater flexibility? Sure you could. So here it is. Apply FUMAZONE 86 before planting, at planting or after planting. It's the only type of soil fumigant that can be used on living plants. Ask your Dow farm chemicals supplier about it.

Good Landscaping Is In Reach Of Home Owners

A usable, functional and pleasing to look at home landscaping is within the reach of most home owners. Too, adds Everett Janne, Extension landscape horticulturist at Texas A&M University, a properly planned landscape need not require a great deal of time and labor for maintenance.

Janne outlines several ways to reduce maintenance and at the same time improve the usability and attractiveness of yards. He suggests dividing the yard space into use areas. Most yards include the public area, commonly the front yard, the family area and the service area. The latter are usually parts of the backyard.

Use areas should be separated and uncluttered with plantings. Open, organized space within each area results in a more usable and easier to care for yard, he says.

Flower beds, shrub borders and tree masses can be separated from the grassed areas. For this purpose some type of edging material can be used. It may be made from redwood or bricks or metal.

Careful selection of turfgrass varieties, tree and shrub species can also reduce maintenance requirements, Janne says. Some species are resistant to insects and diseases and these should always get consideration. Some also have drought resistance.

Difficulty in growing plants often results from poor surface or internal water drainage, says the horticulturist. Improved slopes can solve the poor surface drainage problem and incorporation of organic matter into the soil can greatly improve internal drainage.

Traffic Safety Laws Being Considered In Legislature

Texas legislature is now considering 22 bills designed to effect Governor Connally's Highway Safety Program.

Proposed legislation would provide for universal driver education for all teenagers; require the vehicle inspection program; raise the minimum driver's license age to 16; require education and 18-hour driver education for teenagers who have not received driver education.

Penalty for conviction of while a license is suspended or revoked would be increased under the new laws. Rehabilitation schools for problem drivers would be established by the Department of Transportation. All drivers would be required to take a road test.

In the type of vehicle they will be licensed to operate.

Traffic Courts of Record would be established if the pending legislation is passed. Motorcycle operators and passengers would be required to wear protective headgear and commercial driver schools and driver training instructors would be licensed.

"The Texas legislature has within its power to take a giant step forward and help save the lives of many of our State's motorists," Robert F. Miller, President, Texas for Traffic Safety, said in commenting upon the bills being considered.

"We need the protection that is afforded by up-to-date and sound traffic laws. I have talked to hundreds of people about traffic safety and there is no doubt in my mind that motorists will support strict but fair traffic laws. I hope that the legislature will give us the traffic safety laws we need," Miller concluded.

Announcing Buick's new GS-340.

If you read the papers, you know how great our new famous GS-400 is. (It's the one in the background.) And you also know you don't get a GS-400 for peanuts. It's a great car. But it's just a little rich for some people. So we set to work and designed the GS-340. It has a smaller engine (but the whole machine weighs less). Its interior is clean and simple and tasteful. And it has its own ornamentation, paint job (see the rally stripe and hood scoops?), and, of course, all the GM safety features. So now you have a car that costs less than the GS-400, but one with its own special brand of excitement. How can you beat that kind of a combination?

TORNADO Safety Rules

TO KNOW WHAT TO DO WHEN A TORNADO IS APPROACHING MAY MEAN THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN LIFE AND DEATH!

I If you are near a tornado cellar:

When time permits, go to a tornado cellar, cave or underground excavation which should have an air outlet to help equalize the air pressure. It should be kept fit for use, free from water, gas or debris; and preferably equipped with pick and shovel. THERE IS NO UNIVERSAL PROTECTION AGAINST TORNADOES EXCEPT UNDERGROUND EXCAVATIONS.

II If you are in open country:

1. Move at right angles to the tornado's path. Tornadoes usually move ahead at about 25 to 40 miles per hour.
2. If there is no time to escape, lie flat in the nearest depression such as a ditch or ravine.

III If in a city or town.

1. Seek inside shelter, preferably in a strongly reinforced building. STAY AWAY FROM WINDOWS!
2. In homes: The corner of the basement toward the tornado usually offers greatest safety, particularly in frame houses. People in houses without basements can sometimes be protected by taking cover under heavy furniture against inside walls. Doors and windows on the sides of the house away from the tornado may be opened to help reduce damage to the building.
3. Standing against the inside wall on a lower floor of an office building offers some protection.

IV If in schools:

1. In city areas: If school building is of strongly reinforced construction, stay inside, away from windows, remain near an inside wall on the lower floors when possible. AVOID AUDITORIUMS AND GYMNASIUMS with large, poorly-supported roofs!
2. In rural schools that do not have strongly reinforced construction, remove children and teachers to a ravine or ditch if storm shelter is not available.

V If in factories and industrial plants:

On receiving a tornado warning, a lookout should be posted to keep safety officials advised of the tornado's approach. Advance preparation should be made for moving workers to sections of the plant offering the greatest protection.

VI

Keep calm. It will not help to get excited. People have been killed by running out into streets and by turning back into the path of a tornado. Even though a warning is issued, chances of a tornado striking one's home or location are very slight. Tornadoes cover such a small zone, as a rule, that relatively only a few places in a warned area are directly affected. You should know about tornadoes though, "just in case."

VII

Keep tuned to your radio or television station for latest tornado advisory information. Do not call the Weather Bureau, except to report a tornado, as your individual request may tie up telephone lines urgently needed to receive special reports or to relay advisories to radio and television stations for dissemination to thousands in the critical area.

Housing Loan Applications Available At FHA Office

Applications for insured housing loans are now being accepted from families in all income groups, Lamb County Supervisor, Truman J. Jones of the Farmers Home Administration said today.

Until recently funds were only available for families with low and moderate incomes.

Jones said home financing for families of above-moderate incomes, can be resumed by the agency under a new allocation of lending authority granted by President Johnson. A Presidential order March 17 authorized the agency to insure $25 million more in housing loans to families of the upper income group between now and June 30.

Action on new applications from persons in the above-moderate income group had been at a virtual standstill since the first of the year.

There has been no interruption of the rural housing loan program for low and moderate income families, which has an allocation of $300 million for fiscal 1967.

Jones said applications from families in all groups are being accepted at the Farmers Home Administration office located in the basement of the Post Office in Littlefield which serves Lamb County.

The county supervisor reported that insured housing loans in the county to date this fiscal year have totaled $55,800, for low and moderate and none for above moderate borrowers.

The Farmers Home Administration, a part of the Department of Agriculture, is the U. S. government agency for insuring home-ownership loans both for farm and non-farm families in rural areas, including towns of not more than 5,500 population.

"The service is available to rural people who are unable to obtain conventional home financing from private lenders on terms they can reasonably be expected to repay or insured loans through other agencies in the housing field," Mr. Jones said.

"We are authorized to serve above-moderate income families in financing homes that are not more elaborate than the prevailing local standard for modern homes."

All rural FHA housing loans may run for a maximum of 3 years, and may cover the cost of a minimum adequate home-site as well as home construction. Current interest rates are 5% for borrowers in the low and moderate income groups and 6 per cent interest plus one-half of a percent mortgage insurance charge for those in the above-moderate income group.

Farmers Home Administration insured loan funds are provided by banks and other private lenders and investors, with the government's insurance endorsement guaranteeing their payment.

COTTON TALKS

From Plains Cotton Growers Inc.

There are at least four good reasons why cotton producers in 1967 will want to use every tool at their command to get a uniform stand of strong, healthy seedlings from first plantings, according to Donald A. Johnson, Executive Vice President of Plains Cotton Growers.

First, there is an unusually short supply of good certified planting seed this year, and growers who fail to get or retain an acceptable stand from first plantings will in many instances be forced to replant with undesirable seed.

Second, because of weather conditions in 1966, vigor of available planting seed is far below average this year.

Third, increased discounts in the Government loan schedule on lower quality cottons will at least in some instances mean lower prices to the farmer, increasing the relative importance of additional production costs incurred by replanting.

Fourth, the reduction in cotton carryover and increases in world consumption levels indicates a much stronger demand and better prices for quality lint this year.

And Johnson says growers cannot hope to get crops off to a good start or produce quality fiber without good seed.

For this reason, he says, all planting seed should be tested for germination and vigor to determine their value.

"Only with a Cold-Vigor Test, which will show the percentage of seed producing vigorous sprouts in seven days at 65 degrees Fahrenheit, can a producer know which planting seed can be counted on to emerge and grow off satisfactorily," Johnson stated. He added that this test can also be an aid to determining the right number of pounds per acre to be planted.

The Cold-Vigor Test is now being done by the Texas Department of Agriculture, P. O. Drawer 88, Austin 78711, and by the Pope Testing Laboratories, P. O. Box 903, Dallas, 75221. A one pound seed sample and a reasonable fee for making the test are required by both.

The official germination test, which is conducted by the State Agriculture Department unless otherwise instructed by the producer, tests seed at 68 degrees for 16 hours per day and 86 degrees for 8 hours per day for a 12 day period.

Johnson says this is a poor indicator of vigor or the ability of seed to produce a uniform stand of healthy vigorous plants when the average temperature is less than 74 degrees during the first two weeks after planting. Average emergence from seed which register 80 per cent germination under official test conditions is only 50 per cent when average or mean soil temperature is 70 degrees Fahrenheit.

On the other hand, a stand of healthy, vigorous plants can usually be secured by planting as soon as possible after the average soil temperature reaches 65 degrees if Cold-Vigor tested seed are used.

Seed are considered to have "passed" the Cold-Vigor Test when they produce 50 per cent or more normal, healthy, vigorous sprouts, 1-1/2 inches long or longer, after seven days in the germinator at 65 degrees.

This means that seed which has passed the Cold-Vigor test can be successfully planted when the average soil temperature is about 5 degrees lower than seed which has only passed the official germination test.

This fact enables producers to get a crop started about a week and sometimes two weeks earlier by using seed with cold tolerance and vigor. And research on the Plains has shown that high yields and best quality cotton are normally produced from early stands of healthy vigorous plants.

Data compiled by C. B. Spencer, Agricultural Director of the Texas Cottonseed Crushers Association, Dallas, indicates that seed with 80 per cent germination, based on the official test, usually produce a stand when planted during the week of May 17-23 in the Lamesa, Seminole, Brownfield and Lubbock areas, and during the week of May 24-30 at Plainview, Hereford and Muleshoe.

Seed which has passed the Cold-Vigor Tests, by comparison, may be planted successfully during the week of April 26-May 2 at Lamesa, Seminole and Lubbock; May 3-9 at Brownfield and Plainview, and May 10-16 at Hereford and Muleshoe.

These dates were calculated on the basis of the 30 year average mean temperatures in the areas used, but they point up the earliness advantage of Cold-Vigor tested seed.

Still on the subject of quality fiber and its relationship to earliness, Johnson also said it is important that plants get a balanced supply of each essential plant food nutrient. Without this balance being available to plants from the day of emergence, bolls are usually shed within ten days after bloom drop, he said.

At least 80 pounds of nitrogen, 40 pounds phosphate, and 60 pounds potash, must be made available to produce a bale per acre crop. Larger amounts must be available for higher yields, and about 70 per cent of the seasonal requirements for water and plant food should be available during the bloom period to prevent excess shedding.

Johnson pointed out that soil tests show over 65 per cent of the soils on the Plains are low in available phosphate, and this causes excessive shedding of early squares, delayed maturity, weak fiber, and low micronaire.

When available, irrigation is a potent factor in the production of an early quality crop. Irrigation facilities should be utilized, when feasible, to prevent plant stress and shedding.

When moisture is limited, transportation of plant food is slowed, bolls are smaller, and the fiber is shorter. For each bale produced on an acre on properly fertilized soil, 10 to 15 inches of moisture must be available when needed. Twice as much moisture or 20 to 30 inches is required to produce a bale on unfertilized soils low in organic matter and in poor physical condition.

Johnson also called attention to the fact that excessive nitrogen and late irrigation often delays maturity, thereby lowering micronaire and other quality factors.

"On the Plains we will always have low temperatures, early freezes, and occasionally excessive rainfall with which to contend," Johnson concluded, "but by planting seed with high vigor and cold tolerance, providing balanced plant nutrients, and utilizing irrigation water to the best advantage, we can greatly improve our chances for a high yielding, high quality crop on the Plains."

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has announced that county referendums on the sale and transfer of cotton allotments across county lines will be held the week of May 15 to 19.

This means growers in 22 of 23 High Plains counties represented by Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., will have the opportunity to vote on whether to permit the transfer of cotton acreage to other counties within the state by sale or lease.

Counties not voting this year are those in which producers gave three-year approval of out-of-county transfers in a similar referendum in 1965 and 1966. Gaines County was the only PCG county authorizing such transfers in 1965, and there were none in 1966.

Across Texas a total of 79 counties registered approval on the issue either in 1965 or 1966.

Concerning the vote in counties on the Plains, PCG President J. D. Smith of Littlefield has said he sees no real reason why producers should oppose out-of-county transfers. "The decision on whether to sell or lease cotton allotments will still be made by individual producers, and in some instances the ability to transfer across county lines could be advantageous."

Littlefield Men To Play Part In WOW Meet

Two residents from Littlefield will play prominent roles in the Woodmen of the World Life Insurance Society's Texas Jurisdictional Convention April 9-12 at the Stephen F. Austin Hotel, Austin.

Robert Kirk, Littlefield, national trustee for the Woodmen, and M. J. Williams, jurisdictional trustee, will be active in convention activity.

Registration for the more than 880 delegates and officers representing the 83,398 Texas members will open April 10 in the Austin and Sun Rooms, according to Jurisdictional President Grady L. Dunn, McKinney, who will preside.

Speakers will include the Mayor of Austin, Lester Palmer; Secretary of State, John L. Hill; Honorable Jack Pope, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court; Honorable William Hunter McLean, Chairman of the State Board of Insurance; J. Richard Sims, Dallas, Chairman of the Board for the Woodmen of the World; R. N. Dossman, Omaha, Nebraska, Executive Vice President; Talmage E. Newton, Omaha, Treasurer; Robert Kirk, Littlefield, National Trustee; and Lena Alexander Shugart, Omaha, Honorary Chairman of the Board.

Texas members of the Tau Phi Lambda, sorority division of the Woodmen, will hold their convention sessions Saturday and Sunday prior to the regular meetings.
