Morgan Says He Paid Income Tax To England; Swope Declares Mitchell Made Claim On Bank

Senators To Hear Claims This Evening

New Secrets Brought Out During Trial

Witness Says Defendant Sold Stock 'To Record A Loss'

NEW YORK (AP)—Through Gerard Swope the government obtained testimony Wednesday that after Charles E. Mitchell, former chairman of the National City Bank and the National City company sold stock to his wife "to record a loss" so he would have to pay no income tax in 1929, he made a claim on the National City company in an effort to avoid loss on the stock.

Names Of Men Who Received Loans Listed

Charles E. Mitchell Obtained Ten Millions, Says Whitney

WASHINGTON (AP)—J. P. Morgan testified Wednesday to the senate investigating committee that, although he paid no income taxes to this country in 1931 and 1932 he did pay such a tax in England.

The senate investigators again digging into Morgan banking secrets Wednesday developed objections from Morgan to having his firm under regulations applied to commercial banks.

The committee obtained the names of bank officials to whom Morgan money was loaned and found out where more of that money was deposited.

Morgan identified recipient loans to include his counsel, John W. Davis, Ambassador Norman H. Davis, Charles G. Dawes and others well known.

George Whitney, Morgan partner, disclosed details of a loan of about ten million dollars to Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the National City Bank. He said it was now "under-collateralized," but guarded by a reserve of more than three million dollars.

England For Revision Of Arms Clauses

Roosevelt's Doctrine Guides Nation In Conference Proposal

GENEVA (AP)—Inspired by President Roosevelt's doctrine that the United States is ready to consult the peers in event of a war menace, England Wednesday introduced at the disarmament conference revised clauses dealing with international security.

These stipulate that in case of breach or threat of a breach of the Briand-Kellogg pact the League of Nations or a non-member such as the United States or Russia may propose general consultation.

Wagering On Horse Races To Be Legal

Governor Signs Bill To Which Plan Was Made A 'Rider'

AUSTIN (AP)—Governor Ferguson Wednesday signed a proposal attached as a "rider" to the departmental appropriation bill to legalize the certificate system of wagering on horse racing.

The departmental bill was signed without changes. The bill with the attached rider would not become effective until ninety days after the legislature adjourns.

Support Of Public In Affected Area Urged By Delegates In Austin

AUSTIN (AP)—The house Wednesday passed a bill to appropriate $500,000 to reimburse farmers in the area in West Texas where pink bollworm quarantine rules were in effect several years. The farmers would be reimbursed for expenses incurred in fumigating cotton to prevent spread of infestation.

The senate has not yet acted on the proposal.

Penrose B. Metcalfe, representative from this district, and C. T. Watson, manager of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce, wired The Herald and the local C. of C. offices Wednesday morning stating that boll worm cost reimbursement bill had passed the House.

Watson, who went to Austin Tuesday with Ranger John E. Williams, W. B. Sneed, County Commissioner George White and Frank Jones said in his message that the senate finance committee of which J. T. Holbrook of Galveston is chairman, would hold a hearing Wednesday night on the measure.

Watson urged business men of the city to get in touch with Senator Duggan of this district and to send messages to Senator Holbrook pointing out why the bill ought to be passed.

It is believed that if the bill passes the senate Governor Ferguson will sign it.

Peace

The whole great international story behind the Roosevelt peace move is being concealed by half-truths and diplomatic denials.

They would have you believe Mr. Roosevelt worked on his message for four months and just happened to select the day before Hitler spoke as a time to deliver it. They also are trying to create the impression that Hitler never intended to say anything but sweet nothings. It was not a crisis. They were just blowing kisses.

Nothing could be further from the truth.

There is no question that Herr Hitler intended to announce last Wednesday that the disarmament provisions of the Versailles treaty were dead words. He also was planning to announce that Germany would start arming at once.

Berlin may deny that until doomsday but our officials have confidential proof to the contrary.

It is also true that Mr. Roosevelt learned the preceding Friday what Hitler had in mind. Mr. Roosevelt then started his message for the one big purpose of making Hitler go easy.

That was the purpose and that was the result.

Every well informed Foreign Office in Europe knew what was happening.

It may also be denied that the French were pulling out their hair about the matter. They actually stilled up to our European field agent, Norman Davis, in Paris and whispered that Hitler was about to touch off the European powder barrel. They said a crisis would be precipitated. They could not do anything about it but we could. They urged us to take action.

Their importunities may have had some influence but not much. We know what was needed.

The reasons for concocting fairy tales about this thing now are obvious. The face of Mr. Hitler must be saved. His people must not be permitted to believe that an outside nation had any influence on him.

Also Mr. Roosevelt must not be subjected to a charge that he interfered in the internal affairs of another country.

The French were worse off after Mr. Roosevelt's message than before. What he sent them was not what they asked for. They wanted to stop Hitler but as usual they did not care to sacrifice much themselves.

The Roosevelt program called for them to sacrifice plenty. Our officials knew when the message was written that the French rely on the type of weapons Mr. Roosevelt sought to abolish. Their military strategy is based on big tanks and heavy artillery. No other nation uses such weapons to the extent they do.

The upshot of the thing was that Hitler wound up on our side and France was isolated in opposition to the world disarmament program.

If Mr. Hitler figured that out ahead of time he is smarter than

Deputy Goes To Coast For Alleged Thief

Bob Wolf To Bring M. W. Barrett Here, Accused In Store Robbery

Deputy Sheriff Bob Wolf left Wednesday morning for Los Angeles, Calif., after it had been learned that M. W. Barrett, wanted to face burglary charges here, had decided to waltz extradition.

Previously Barrett had indicated he would fight extradition.

Barrett, a soda clerk employed at the Cunningham Phillips store during the recent convention rush, is charged with burglarizing the store of fifty dollars in cash, some goods and employee clothing.

The store was looted here Friday night and Barrett, who came here from Colorado, was arrested Sunday in Los Angeles.

Wooten Gets Well In West Side Of Pool

Humble's No. 1 Nat Washers Cores; Wooten Test Going On Pump

One producer was being completed and another was coring in an oil-bearing formation Wednesday in the Edwards pool, extreme western producing sector of the Howard-Glascock county field.

H. O. Wooten's No. 1 W. P. Edwards, in section 17, block 33, westernmost test drilled in the pool, had a show of oil at 2165-75 feet and filled 600 feet in 24 hours. It drilled ahead to below 2,180 feet and, after standing 12 hours, was reported to have flowed to 1,000 feet. It was being placed on a pump Wednesday for official production test.

Humble's No. 1 Nat. W. Washer, south of Wooten (formerly Llano Oil and Development company) No. 1 W. P. Edwards, was coring Wednesday morning at 2,115 feet, according to a report reaching here.

Relief of the very best type will be provided our own farmers if this measure becomes law. To pay this just debt right now would make it possible for many a farmer's family to get by until fall. And payment of the losses incurred because they obeyed bollworm restriction rules and thus protected farmers throughout the cotton belt, would not be a 'dole.' The farmers are due this money. The business men ought to get behind their Chamber of Commerce in its efforts to help get the measure passed.

Wire, telephone—do something right now to let the senate know why this appropriation ought to be passed.

Miss Geraldine Wood has been out of school this week due to illness caused by throat trouble.

Financial Statement Of W. T. C. C. Convention Presented Directors Of Local Body By C. S. Blomshield

Financial statement of the fifteenth annual West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention was read directors of the local Chamber of Commerce in meeting Tuesday evening.

The report was approved and the convention co-chairmen, Carl Blomshield and E. J. Mary were discharged. Mr. Blomshield read the report. Mr. Mary was out of town.

The statement disclosed a total of 2,767 of the convention visitors actually registered, yielding an equal number of dollars in revenue. An additional $137.90 from door receipts at entertainment programs swelled total receipts to $2904.

Disbursements aggregating $2,890.57 was divided as follows:

Stationery, printing, supplies, badges ..... $448.28
Advertising ..... 239.84
Officials and staff ..... 435.42
Speakers expense ..... 105.66

Receipts or receipts bills for every dollar spent are on file in the Chamber of Commerce office here for inspection by anyone wishing to do so.

McReynolds Made Member Of Delegation

Senator Johnson And Rep. Wadsworth Expected To Be Named

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Roosevelt formally announced appointment Wednesday of Chairman McReynolds of the house foreign affairs committee to the American delegation to the London economic conference.

The president still is considering other appointments. Senator Johnson of California and Rep. Wadsworth of New York both are in line for membership.

It was definitely stated at the White House that employment of import taxes to compensate the proposed producers' tax levy on farm products would not be regarded as a violation of the tariff truce.

Rally Called At Midland Thursday On Worm Claims

A telephone call to The Herald Wednesday afternoon urged that a strong delegation from Big Spring and Howard county be present at 8 o'clock Thursday evening at the courthouse in Midland for a meeting to discuss the problem of obtaining reimbursement of farmers throughout the area which has been or is now under pink bollworm quarantine regulations.

It was urged that all counties where farmers have claims be represented.

Representatives will attend from every cotton growing county from El Paso to Howard, including those in the "eastern extension" of the quarantine area, from which regulations were taken some time ago, and those further west upon which regulations still are in force.

The meeting will seek means of assuring passage of the $500,000 appropriation now pending in the senate, as well as obtaining more money to repay farmers in the western area seater El Paso.

La Mode To Hold Cotton Style Show Thursday Evening

The La Mode Shoppe, Third and Rannels streets, will present a cotton style show in his show windows at 8 p. m. Thursday, the management announced.

The store, opposite the Settles Hotel, will be brilliantly lighted and special settings arranged for appearance of the models.

Cotton dresses for sports wear, including linen suits, dresses and slacks; street dresses and evening frocks will be modeled.

Those who will model the dresses are Martha Louise Robinson, Maxine Thomas, Inez Matthews, Lucille Rogers, Theo Covert, Dorothy Jean Frost, Dixie Blocker, Vista Leverett.

ACCEPTS POSITION
Miss Ruth Haney of Fort Worth has accepted position as secretary for Drs. Hall, Bennett, Dillard & Wood. Miss Haney assumed her new position Wednesday.

Railroads Of Nation Expected To Seek Another Reduction Of Wages When Agreement Expires June 1

CHICAGO (AP)—The nation's railroads Wednesday were reported planning to ask union employes to take further reduction in wages.

Such action could be taken June 1 under terms of a contract between the roads and the unions.

The proposed decrease would be effective October 1. Members of upwards of 20 unions would be affected. Official confirmation of the plan was lacking.

Revival Meeting At Tent Draws Crowds

The revival meeting being held at Fourth and Abrams street under direction of Rev. Woodie W. Hall, pastor of the Assembly of God congregation, is being featured by lessons each morning at 10 a. m. by Rev. A. E. Whitworth, secretary of the Texaco District Council of the Assemblies of God, Springfield, Mo., and evangelistic sermons each evening at 8 o'clock by Bessie Wisener, who is delivering some stirring messages. Mr. Whitworth is speaking on "the anti-Christ."

Sentence Of Parks Upheld

AUSTIN (AP)—The court of criminal appeals Wednesday affirmed the conviction of L. M. Parks, given 25 years imprisonment for murder of his wife, Mrs. L. M. Parks, who was drowned in Lake Trammel near Sweetwater last July 8.

Many Buying New Cars In This County

28 Registered Here In 23 Days Of May, Records Show

The new car parade continues to grow despite a prolonged dry spell. April figures showed a gain over March, and May figures, although under the April total, already exceeded March.

41 To 1 For Repeal Cast In Big Town Club Hears

Mr. Quereau Former Resident From San Antonio At Luncheon

Charles Quereau, formerly of Big Spring, but now of San Antonio, was principal speaker at Rotary club at Tuesday's regular meeting in the Settles Hotel. Miss Bessie Hale of Coahoma delighted members of the club with two readings on a program in charge of J. H. Fickie and Rev. Jack Thorne.

Quereau was outspoken in his praise of Big Spring, and said he was very glad again to be a visitor here. "Each one of you should appreciate your home town, that Big Spring has to its credit many assets that other cities in this and other states of the same population do not possess. Especially the new city auditorium is a distinct credit to a city many times the size of your city," said Quereau.

Quereau, talented schoolteacher of Coahoma, gave two readings that brought forth much applause.

Fred Keating, superintendent of the United States Experiment Farm near Big Spring, announced the feeders program to be conducted at the farm on Friday of this week, and extended an invitation to all to attend.

Stacy Dorn, oil operator, of Fort Worth, was a guest of the club.

Report on the attendance committee, which has been going on for several months, was given, and the following were delegated to wait on the tables for their low attendance record for month of April: Joe Edwards, Paige Benbow, E. O. Hillington, Joe Galbraith, Ray Simmons, Robert Piner, Omar Pittman and Max Jacobs.

Next week's program will be in charge of Shine Phillips and Charles Landers.

DARLING FOOL

CHAPTER XIX

A tall woman in a black and white print dress put her hand in the O'Dare front door and yodelled cogily up the stairs. "Yoo-hoo!" A hand appeared over the landing—Mark's freckled face, above the wreath of a bath towel.

"Oh, Mrs. Briggs! Mother's out in the yard. She's peeling peaches for jam."

The tall woman swished her way through the neat hall, with its oak stand harboring three or four discouraged looking umbrellas. She passed through the kitchen, taking a critical view of the white shelves covered in blue oilcloth. Then out to the porch.

"Mrs. O'Dare! Oh, there you are. Just ran in for a minute."

The woman under the maple tree, swaying back and forth gently in the old rocker, looked up and smiled at the newcomer.

"Sit down—do!" She indicated the battered basket chair at her side.

"Isn't it hot? I thought I'd do a bit of preserving. Doesn't seem to matter how hot it gets—I always feel the urge, long about this time."

"You have got energy!" The speaker eyed her hostess disconcertedly. "I'm all tucked out myself. Walking in from town, I just thought I'd come in and have a bit of gossip."

"I'm glad you did," Mrs. O'Dare said cordially, pushing aside a wooden bowl of pairings and rising. "Just sit here in the shade a minute while I put these things on the stove. Then I'll all through. I'll bring out something cool to drink."

Her guest's half-hearted protest followed her into the shaded kitchen where, with a thoughtful frown, she consigned the ripe golden fruit to a blue enamel kettle, setting it over a low flame.

"What's that oil hell-cat want?"

She looked up, her hand at her heart, to see her young son, attired now in bathing suit and dirty white slacks, signaling her from the doorway.

"Mark, you scared me. Don't talk that way."

"Well, she is that, isn't she. Always snooping into somebody's business."

Mrs. O'Dare shook her head deprecatingly at him.

"I'm going down to the river with the kids, Mom. Be back about 8."

"Be careful, son."

He gave her a peck on the cheek and she heard him whistling down the path. Then she turned her attention to the cooling drink she had promised her visitor. Lemons were brought from the ice box and presently from green glasses a tinkling tune sounded.

"My, that tastes good!"

Laura Briggs put her head back, sighing gustily. There were two parentheses etched at either side of her thin-lipped mouth. Her black hair was drawn back from a face which must, in its time, have been lovely, but which now bore the marks of illness and discontent.

"You oughtn't to go walking in the sun like that," said the gentle voice of the woman in blue gingham. "It's bad for you."

"I know, I know," Laura Briggs was impatient. "But it's Rissy—I had to get the stuff for a dress she wants to wear Friday night, and she's at me all the time. Will you let me drive me. He had to go up to the city."

She paused and her listener waited for the declaration which was sure to come. Laura Briggs never came to call unless she desired to unburden herself.

"How're all your folks?" she asked to know.

Mrs. O'Dare's put back a strand of curling hair before she answered. She was a pretty little woman, an older replica of Monica. "They're fine," she assured Laura Briggs. "They're just splendid. How's Rissy?"

But it was plain the other had not come to discuss her daughter. Mark, reflected his mother, had been right. Laura had something on her mind. Well, whatever it was, she would hear it soon. She rocked to and fro, waiting.

"What's this we hear about Bill getting married?" demanded the newcomer with an arch smile.

"You're such a deep one, we never hear the real news from you—"

The woman in the rocker showed no sign that the blow struck home. Her expression was still admirably placid, undisturbed.

"Well, you know Bill," she said lightly. "He's always had a lot of girls—but he's never really been serious. You don't mean Gertrude, do you?"

Mrs. Briggs sniffed disdainfully. Of course, she said, she didn't mean Gertrude. No, it was the other, that blond from the Sweetie Shoppe. Didn't Bill's mother know Bill's girl?

"I've met—such a lot of them," protested Mrs. O'Dare, pretending to brush away a cobweb, avoiding the sharp eyes of the other woman. "I can't remember them all."

"Somehow," said Laura Briggs acidly, "I don't believe Bill's ever brought her to the house. You see, she paused to give her arrow its full flight, "you see, this one's married."

"M-married!" Edith O'Dare stammered over this. Then she was angry. She had always tried to see the best in Laura Briggs, had stood up for her when everybody else was furious at her, but this was really too much. Her Bill—and a married woman!

Coldly she said, "I think you must be mistaken. I'm sure you must." She rose to her feet, a small, flashing guardian of her home, an angry hen brooding over her misbegotten chicks. She waited, withdrawn and a bit disdainful, for her caller to make her adieu. This Laura Briggs did rather badly. She was chagrined at the effect her news had made. What she had expected, she could not say. Tears, perhaps. Harsh words for the errand son, curiosity about the charmer, the blond siren. None of these would Mrs. O'Dare accord her. Chestfallen, she withdrew.

Left alone, the little mother stormed inwardly. Not that she believed there was a word of truth in the fantastic story, she assured herself angrily. And yet—and yet Bill has been spending a great amount of time away from home these days. His absences had been unexplained. Gertrude Hampstead had been very cool to Mrs. O'Dare whenever they had met; had, in fact, looked the other way, pretending not to see.

Bill—her boy—involved with a married woman! She groaned. Suddenly she felt a little sick and faint. The heat of the day, the work she had been doing, and the blow she had just received, combined to defeat her. She was leaning against the door frame, looking white and ill, when Kay breezed in.

"Mum! What on earth's the matter?"

"It's nothing—I just—"

She put up her hand to her eyes, staggering in the bright kitchen.

Kay was thoroughly frightened. "Let me get you some water. Here, lie down on the sofa! That's better." Kay's face was sober now. She looked serious, responsible.

"I'm all right," her mother sat up, setting her mouth firmly. "It's only—tell me this, Kay. Is there any truth in the story about Bill and some married woman?"

"Oh, gosh!" Kay groaned, turning away. "Who told you?"

"I don't like being kept in the dark this way," protested the mother. "You all know—everybody in town knows, apparently—and only I am left out."

"Monnie thought it would worry you," Kay explained. "We thought, or hoped anyway, that it would all blow over." "Bill," said Kay, "has had girls before this—"

"But never one he was so serious about, eh?"

"No," Kay admitted that. "I guess not. Honestly, she's not a bad sort. Mother, she was married to this man when she was only 16. He's no good, I hear, and she's been supporting him. You can't blame her for wanting a divorce." "I can't blame her for anything," Mrs. O'Dare said steadily. "It's only that—"

She could not finish the sentence. Bill, her Bill, missed up in such an affair! She had hoped for great things for Bill, ever since he was a little boy. When his father died and he had had to leave school her heart had ached for him. He was so bright, so earnest. He had a fine mind, with a mechanical turn. She had wanted college for him, wanted him to forge ahead, and now—this! He would be stamped off with another man's wife. The circumstances did not matter. The bare facts only would be remembered.

She was a self-controlled woman. All her children know and appreciated that fact. But now her calm almost deserted her. It had been a hard year. Monnie's palpable unhappiness, Kay's discontent—these things had borne themselves in upon her. And now this!

She dashed the unwilling tears from her eyes. Kay watched as she picked up the telephone.

"Mother! What are you going to do?"

"Do?" She lifted her head proudly. "I'm going to ask Bill to bring this girl to see me, of course. I must know the girl my son plans to marry."

WHIRLIGIG—

Treasury—

It will not be news if Treasury Secretary Woodin retires in the fall. His job has been largely assumed by Budget Director Lewis Douglas.

There is a young man with a future. He is acting backstage in about the same capacity as Ogden Mills did during the last days of the Mellon rule. Woodin sits in the front office. Douglas does the work. Generally they see eye to eye.

If the time should ever come when they do not, the Douglas eye will prevail. Woodin's younger understudy is a fair-haired boy at the White House.

The underlying situation at the Treasury was fully disclosed at the House hearings on the Public Works bill.

Woodin was called to explain the bill. He merely introduced Douglas and then sat down. Douglas made a full statement of the administration position. He did not say Mr. Woodin thinks this or that. He used the word "I". There was no doubt in the minds of those present as to who was the real Secretary of Treasury.

The speculative rumors about Woodin's resignation now always include the tip that Douglas will succeed him. That speculation is premature. Douglas will be very well satisfied to carry on under the present arrangement. The President may consider Douglas too young for the secretaryship. His hair shows no gray. That has always been considered a requisite for a major cabinet post.

Any way the present arrangement is ideal for the time being. It will continue until Woodin decides to break it up. That may be three months or six or even longer.

Reward— Leakage in the State Department has aroused inside commotion there. Secretary Hull is very much put out. He would like to know who tipped a press association ahead of time that Mr. Roosevelt was planning a world peace message. In a press conference the other day he offered $500 reward for the identity of the culprit. Nobody said anything about Prof. Moley, but immediately after the Hull conference Moley called the newsmen in to deny he had given out the information.

The finger of suspicion pointed toward Prof. Moley because he had been seen in conference with the newsmen who wrote the story only a short time before the story was written. The truth is that the first tip on the message came from a New York financial source. Three days before the press association announced the news this source had information that Mr. Roosevelt was dispatching a note to Great Britain. Later it had word the note was going to all European powers. That does not keep Prof. Moley from looking like the boy who raided the jam-pot every time he passes Secretary Hull.

Notes— Mr. Roosevelt was more tickled than you know at the Hitler speech. He understands German and listened to it on the radio. Labor will send a man to the London Economic conference, not to join the discussions but to look on. He has not been selected yet and probably no announcement will be made when he is. The Stock Exchange regulation bill appears to be dead for this session of congress. Commerce Secretary Roper says they ran into difficulties in writing it. It is not included on any of the administration legislative programs. Vice President Garner was influential on the inside with Woodin and Douglas in veering the administration back to the sound money path. A hidden provision in the public works bill gives Mr. Roosevelt the right to make states and municipalities balance their budget before they get government money.

NEW YORK By James McMullin Dollar— The recent firmness of the dollar in foreign exchange is not accidental. The campaign to push the dollar down has been called off for now. More than that, there is inside evidence that American interests have been cooperating with British authorities to achieve a temporary stability. This makes it look as if we are playing England's game. The best authorities say we are doing just that—but for a reason. There will be no upsetting of apple carts before the economic conference. That puts England under a moral obligation to check her weapons at the door when the conference meets. But afterward, we will still have all our ammunition left instead of squandering part of it beforehand.

Chase— The housecleaning at the Chase was nothing if not thorough. Investment bankers in carload lots were given the bum's rush from the board of directors.

Mirror Reflecting '33 Personalities Would Be Interesting If you walk by and glance into the mirror, you will want to linger and take more than a glance. There you will see mirrored some exceptional personalities. For instance, as you look into the mirror

There was a number of distinguished casualties. Apart from Albert H. Wiggin himself (whose retirement from the board was predicted in this column two months ago) the following are conspicuously missing from the new board: Clarence Dillon of Dillon Read, Charles Hayden of Hayden Stone (a close friend of Wiggin's), Frederic W. Allen of Lee Higginson, Frank Altshuler of Lazard Freres and Henry S. Bowers of Goldman Sachs.

As one Wall Streeter puts it "they didn't use a new broom. It was a vacuum cleaner." Only one man is left on the board who could even remotely be called an investment banker. He is H. R. Winthrop of Winthrop Mitchell. His house has participated in investment operations only on a small scale and there were personal reasons for his retention.

Ten of the remaining thirty-six directors were with Aldrich at the Equitable Trust. The Aldrich-Rockefeller set-up is now in complete control.

One stockholder took a leaf from Allied Chemical's history by demanding a detailed accounting of investment assets at the meeting. He was told that the board of directors would think it over or perhaps he would like to talk to Mr. Aldrich privately? The Chase is unquestionably a very strong bank but there has been a decided shrinkage in certain investments and you can hardly blame the bank for not caring to broadcast the details.

Combination—

Local insiders attach significance to the fact that Walter S. Carpenter, Jr. of the Du Pont organization was retained as a Chase director. It indicated that a Du Pont-Rockefeller combination is certainly something to think about.

Du Pont—

The Du Ponts have begun to pick up likely executive talent for broadscale future development. The Celanese Corporation—which just announced a policy of wage increases and re-employment—is now controlled by Du Pont interests.

Allied Chemical—

Allied Chemical's much-discussed investment portfolio has gained about twenty million dollars in value since the first of the year. This is largely due to holdings of 250,000 shares of U. S. Steel Common and a sizeable block of Owens Illinois Glass.

Liquidation—

Approximately one million shares of General Motors have been liquidated against bank loans in the past six weeks. That's thawing with a vengeance.

Oil—

The choice of Axtell Byles to head the American Petroleum Institute means that the oil industry is preparing to play ball with the government on regulation. Byles is a diplomat and a diplomat is badly needed for that particular job. The Rockefeller attitude toward Federal regulation was indicated by the retention of R. C. Holmes as a Chase director. Holmes recently resigned from Texas Corporation because he favored Federal intervention and his directors didn't.

Aviation—

The immediate objective of controlling interests in the big aviation companies (both General Motors and Cord) is to arrive at a point where they can operate profitably without small subsidies. They have heard whispers that they had better be prepared to do just that. Changes in aviation management are reflected by changes in personnel. A lot of nephews and cousins have lost their jobs in the past year.

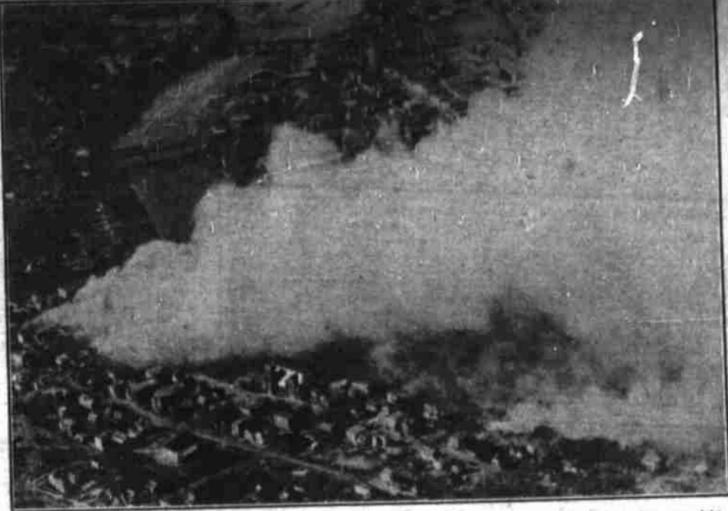

Stores—

Chain food stores foresee that distress selling will not this season dump vegetables and fruits for dumping in their laps as prices ruinous to producers. (Copyright McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Aviation Corporation President Stops At Airport Here Wednesday

E. L. Cord, president of The Aviation Corporation, of which American Airways, Inc., is the operating subsidiary, and C. R. Smith, vice-president of American Airways, in charge of the southern division, stopped here at 6:30 a. m. Wednesday. They were enroute to Dallas from Los Angeles, where they had been on business. Mr. Cord's rapid rise to control of Aviation Corporation was in the headlines throughout the nation a few months ago. Smith, who has been in charge of this division since American Airways took it over from Southern Air Transport, expressed the appreciation of the company for the friendship and patronage of Big Spring. He expressed gratitude to the Herald for the liberal amount of publicity given American Airways activities. "Having this refueling stop on this transcontinental line has made you THE aviation city of West Texas," said Smith, pointing out that one of the most complete set-ups in the country for servicing and protecting the flying public had been put into operation here because of the city's designation as the principal stop between Fort Worth and El Paso. Mr. Cord, a man of studious manner, who is personally strikingly reserved in contrast to the spectacular methods he oftentimes employs in his business dealings, said that business on the southern transcontinental line was encouraging. It was Mr. Cord who recently raised salaries of all employees five per cent, effective at once.

Extray! Formr Students Appear Before Throgs At 1940 Theatre

Eds Note: When Big Spring surpassed Hollywood as the movie metropolis in 1940, former students of Big Spring High School were carving a place for themselves in the world, or carving into some one else's place. All of them are ardent first nighters at the picture premieres, and at these first nights all of them may be seen in the role of actor, spectator, gigolo, or tired business man. The picture, "Onions of Passion," is Dorothy Jordan's greatest production since "Courageous Connie." Cast in the leading roles are R. V. Jones and Hazel Smith. The master of ceremonies, Frank McCleskey, will give you a first hand view of it as he cracks wise at the celebrities.

An uproar of cheering arises from the mass of people assembled before the Greater Siamese theatre. Glimmering rays of light from the huge spot-lights scatter their beams about the sky in a crazy-quilt pattern. And another of Big Spring's famous premieres is under way as the first of the sabled armed ladies and gentlemen begin to arrive. A lavender colored limousine drives to a stop before the carpeted entrance. As a liveried attendant opens the door, I see that it is Elmo Martin, widely known radio promoter, with the star, Hazel Smith, on his arm. She is becomingly dressed in a creation of red, white, and blue since those are his favorite colors. During his high school days, he had a mania for those colors—if you get what I mean.

Next to arrive is Jane Tinsley. She is escorted by the other lead- someone. Claudine Shaw not pestering someone. Mrs. Bumpass not interested in a museum. Dorothy Mae Miller going steady. The Hardin, girls enjoying a chemistry experiment.

Here's a favorite—Truett Grant, operatic basso. I'd ask him to sing, but he's one who would never take a dare. He is escorting Mary Louise Gilmour. Willard Barber is the next arrival. He made his pile packing meat. With him is Claudine Shaw, who is far too good for the big ham-packer. Howard Schwarzenbach, brewer, arrives squiring Lil Fisherman. While I'm waiting for more of the atre-goers to appear, I'll see if I can find something interesting in the crowd. There is something that is amusing—Cariton Coburn is grinding an organ as Ruth Cotten sings. They always did get along nicely. Frances Stockton, who is still looking for her big gas and oil man makes her appearance escorted by Dwayne Ory.

Wendell Short and Grady Harland, millinaire playboys, arrive escorting a group of chorus girls, Catherine Murphy, Doris Smith, Lela Morgan, Ruby Brown and Margie Armstrong. Ralph Duval, who made his money burning furniture arrives with Gertrude Tucker.

More athletes, now—here's some of our professional football team—Elmer Dyer, Henry Richbourg, Clifton Smith, and Bucken Creighton. Dyer runs a drug store as a

Seniors' Plans Are Disclosed

The students of the class of '33 will graduate and soon depart and go their separate and different ways. All have definite plans what they want to do; others have decided what they plan to do. Only difficult money problems will prevent most of the graduates from continuing their education at some other institution.

Out of the seventy-six students who graduate, Texas University will get fifteen. Rick Koberg plans to go there to take a pre-med course; while Ola Mae Hartman will specialize in music. Lillian Harris will make Physical Education his profession in life. Jane Tinsley will take courses in Journalism and Dramatic Arts. Other students who will buy their tickets for Austin next September are: Ralph Duval, Truett Grant, Bill Zaratofetta, Elmo Martin, Ruth Mellinger, Jake Morgan, Cecil Reid, Lillian Seden, Wendell Short, Clifton Smith, and Charles Vines.

Three of the senior girls plan to take a nursing course. They are: Madeline Black, Nerle Grace Choate, and Polly Thomas. Oils Marie Wasson, Gertrude Tucker, and Mildred Sloan are interested in taking business courses and later become efficient secretaries.

Two Big Spring seniors, Gladys Glover and Richard LeFevre, will enroll as freshmen in the San Angelo Junior College next September.

The editor-in-chief of this paper, Fred Koberg, approaches. He is closely followed by the politicians whom he put into office then banished their tactics by editorial edict. These shyders and grafters are Thornton Hart, Orville Hildreth, Harvey Hooser, and Wilburn Barnett.

The S.H.O. sign is out now, so I guess it's about time to go in, since the crowd is thinning, and no one else seems to be coming. No, wait a minute, here's the boy that is always late so that he'll be noticed. Bill Zaratofetta.

And now that you've seen what's happened to most of the 1933 grads, I'll attend to my "fish market." And for the benefit of those who might not know, "fish market" means Mary Jane Reed, Max Lane, and Frances Stumpff.

ber. Helen Belle will attend the San Angelo Business College. The California Institution of Technology will be enlarged by one pupil from Big Spring in the presence of Williams Campbell. Aveline Barron will be studying at the School of Georgia. Elmer Counts will study subjects pertaining to journalism in A. C. C.

Dorothy Rhoton and Ruth Cotten, who intend to major in science, prefer Baylor Belton above the other colleges in the State. Sirmory University was chosen by Lucille Carroll and Dorothy Mae Miller as their preference. Mattie Martin, Catherine Murphy, and Dorothy Payne plan to make Texas Tech the school where they will continue their education. John Anna Barbee will journey to Fort Worth to be enrolled in the Bolter's Beauty College. Jeanne Made Couch chose also to decide to take a beauty course, but has not made definite plans on the college she will enter.

At the College of Industrial Arts, Hazel Smith hopes to spend her college life where she will study Business Administration. Jennie Lucille Kennedy will also be classified as a freshman in this college. Mona Jean Turner wants to enroll in the fall at Texas Woman's College.

J. C. Eudy, Lil Fisherman, Vernice Hildreth, Hattie Mae Fickie, and Frank McCleskey are planning to secure work as soon as possible; afterwards, to attend some college. There are many who plan to attend college but haven't as yet made their choice. Among these are: Virginia Frances, Mary Louise Gilmour, Mildred Herring, Lohue Guthrie, Eldon Harrell, Edwin WHT, Margaret McDonald, Spurgeon Lynn, and Thornton Hart.

Dorothy Burnett has taken such a liking to the high school that she is going to take a Post Graduate course.

Wendroy Campbell is going to study radio and aviation.

Those students who have not yet decided what their life's career will be, or are indefinite as to the future, are: Willard Baber, Margie Armstrong, John Wayne Brown, Erin Ely, Gena Hawk, Doris Smith, Juanita Slusser, and Minnie Earl Johnson.

Abilene Gets 'Phone Rates

Two-Party Business Service Offered At Lower Price

ABILENE—With announcement Tuesday by the Southwestern Bell Telephone company of a new two-party business service at lower cost in Abilene came word from Mayor C. L. Johnson, who led in negotiations for the innovation, that he will take advantage of the arrangement.

The new service will make business telephones, on a two-party flat rate, available at $3 per month, $3 less than the regular $7 charge. A one-party coin-collector service with a guarantee of 15 cents per day—$4.50 per month—is also being introduced here. Both become effective June 15.

The mayor was notified of the new services by District Manager W. L. Blakney of the telephone company, with whom Johnson had instituted negotiations.

The average and small business concern, under present conditions, has felt the necessity of some less expensive class of telephone service," said Johnson, "and the company here has consented to make such available in Abilene. I believe the two-party service will be found adequate in many places. I shall take advantage of it for my business."

Party service for residence telephones already is available here—$2.25 per month for two-party, against $3 for one-party line.

"KING KONG"

"King Kong" wants his beautiful golden Ann as he has never wanted anything before in the millions of years of his life before he and her lover Driscoll—he pursues her and her lover Driscoll to the wall of the native village. Never before has he made an assault against this defense but now he makes a battering ram of himself and the gates give way.

"King Kong" rips off the top of one but after another, peering into each in search of Ann. At first he only rumbles an impatient disappointment, but as he meets failure his tone sharpens to fury. Driscoll is hurrying Ann to the ship, while Denham, hiding behind trees, is excited over a new plan. Instead of making a movie of "King Kong," why not capture him alive?

Denham orders a raft built to float him to the Adventure. "King Kong" exhibited to civilization, will make a fortune for all of them. All think him crazy, but Denham believes he has "King Kong" licked. Always lord of his own world—always victorious—"King Kong" has been beaten at last, and by something beyond his experience—something he will fear!

TOM MOONEY LEAVES PRISON FOR HIS NEW TRIAL

Tom Mooney (center), convicted of complicity in the bombing of San Francisco's 1916 preparedness day parade, is shown as he was released from San Quentin prison by Warden James Holohan (left) into the custody of Undersecretary Howard Barnhart (right), in charge of the party taking Mooney to jail in San Francisco to await his new trial. The governor's chair was kept in view. Since then there has been carved out a new Texas congressional district that fits Stevenson to a "T".

It includes all but one of the ten counties that have been regularly returned to the state legislature as their representative.

The other counties in the Congressional district are Sterling, Runnels, Coleman, Brown, Irion, Tom Green, Concho, McCulloch, San Saba, Mills, Lampasas, Gillespie, Llano, Val Verde, Uvalde and Kinney.

They are all counties with interests the same as those of the Hill country in which Stevenson lives. They are counties to whom a ranchman can talk in his own language.

Ascendancy of Former Congressional John Garner to the vice-presidency leaves the new 21st congressional district without a resident congressman.

Inclusion of Coleman county may also be a factor in deciding Stevenson's choice. State Senator Walter Woodward, of Coleman, is a political strength in that section. He, too, has an eye on the governorship.

Stevenson running for Congress and Woodward running for governor could each aid the other materially by leaving a field open to the other.

Stevenson is equipped to make his future political campaigns on horseback.

Fellow legislators presented him with one of the finest saddles ever exhibited here. It is silver mounted and a beautiful piece of leather work. With it went the broad brimmed hat and chaps.

The gift was really the Speaker's choice. Members went to Mrs. Stevenson to find out what he would like.

It is the custom of the legislators to give the Speaker some memento every session. Usually it is a watch.

Mrs. Stevenson warned, "Don't give him a watch. He never carries one."

The Speaker was finally appealed to personally by some of the legislators. He was loathe to pick his own gift but when told they were going to get him something he said:

"I want a saddle." He never dreamed of the elaborate saddle that it developed into.

"Speaker's Day," as the annual gift day near the close of a session is known, was also marked by other gifts. The Speaker's fondness for cutting cedar posts was remembered and an axe was in the lot. After a day of riding the range and fence building, he was also equipped to sit in a large leather chair (an accompany one for Mrs. Stevenson), put his feet on an ottoman and have his choice of two lamps on a library table. For outdoor use with the saddle and axe went a corn cob pipe.

The pipe brought to light that Stevenson felt it indecorous to smoke his old cob pipe while presiding over the House. He broke in a new dude pipe for state use.

Mrs. Stevenson, who has been one of the most popular women in official life at Austin, was not forgotten. The gifts included silver and china sets. The china came from the House porters.

They approached representatives and asked if it would be all right for them to participate in the "Speaker's Day" gifts.

Explanation was offered that they wanted to give something to Speaker and Mrs. Stevenson "because they're quality folks."

That declaration was probably more revealing than all the eloquent encomiums heaped on the Speaker and Mrs. Stevenson at the exercises.

It certainly found an echo all through the state capitol and Austin.

The 43rd legislature will not set a record for length unless it exceeds 140 days. It had completed the 120 days during which members receive full pay on May 9.

The 140 days session was held by the 39th legislature ten years ago.

Former Speaker Lee Satterwhite who has spent considerable time going over old House Journals, says the average time a legislature is in session, including both regular and called sessions, is from four to six months during the two year period which constitutes a legislative term.

AUSTIN, (UP)—Governor Miriam A. Ferguson's apparent decision not to seek re-election has centered interest on whether Speaker Coke Stevenson of Junction, will run for governor or for congress.

When Rep. T. H. McGregor, close political friend of the Fergusons, in the House of Representatives landed Stevenson for governor, it could only mean the Speaker is the Ferguson choice and that Mrs. Ferguson will not stand in his way by running again.

But whether Stevenson will run for governor is another question. It is a matter on which he remains uncommunicative.

There was no doubt that when Stevenson launched his campaign for Speaker of the 43rd legislature,

Stevenson is equipped to make his future political campaigns on horseback.

Fellow legislators presented him with one of the finest saddles ever exhibited here. It is silver mounted and a beautiful piece of leather work. With it went the broad brimmed hat and chaps.

Errors Contribute Tigers' Tallics; Losers Can Not Hit In Pinches

Tigers took the Broncs for a trouncing Tuesday afternoon on the diamond west of the Casino.

Bronc errors contributed all three Tigers runs, and miserable hitting in the pinches cost them two splendid chances to win.

With the bases loaded, Cruz pulled himself from a hole. Again in the fifth he allowed the bases to go groggy with none out. Yanez, relieving him, tossed three straight balls and then struck out the batter, forced the next to pop-up and the third to foul out to catcher.

In the sixth the Broncs opened with a triple and let the runner die on third.

Batteries: Tigers, Cruz, Yanez and Vega. Broncs, Kinman, Mahon and Gray.

King Of Jungle

While Paramount was conducting its search for a Leopard Woman to play a prominent role in "Island of Lost Souls," it was likewise conducting a search for the role of the Lion Man in "King of the Jungle."

The Leopard Woman search was conducted with a great fanfare of publicity in a nation wide series of contests. Not so the search for a Lion Man. The latter was conducted by mail principally, letters being addressed to colleges, athletic clubs and Y. M. C. As. throughout the country, soliciting photographs of their most perfectly formed athletes—all full length and in gym shorts. And the Olympic games were closely scrutinized for like material.

Competition narrowed to a group composed of Georges Carpentier, sleek French boxing star; Max Baer, Adonis of the prize ring; Nick Lutz and Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame football stars now professional wrestlers; Eddie Cadell, Sanford football flank; Bob Hall and Ory Mahler, also of gridiron fame; and Buster Crabbe, Olympic swimming champion, who was finally selected because he possessed the brawny but graceful required, plus striking screen personality and voice to match. And lo! it was found the possessor of all these attributes had a well historic ability.

Crabbe is well known to sports followers. He competed in the Olympics of 1928 and 1932. He is the holder of five world's championships and thirty-five national championships. Buster is a native of Oakland, Calif. He is twenty-three years of age, stands six feet one inch and weighs one hundred eighty-eight pounds. He is a graduate of the University of Southern California.

"King of the Jungle," in which Buster Crabbe appears as the Lion Man, will be shown at Ritz theater as the feature unit of a roadshow program of five units, on Sunday and Monday.

Hub Underwood, courthouse caretaker, boasts a record.

Tuesday he went after a den of rats undermining a tree and a portion of lawn south of the jail. Of thirty chased from the hole, none escaped alive.

Three water hose, carrying maximum streams of water, were applied to the den the major part of the morning.

As the rats sought to avoid strangulation, Underwood and cohorts baited the rodents for losses.

Woman At Eliasville
Eighty-Eight Years Old, Catches Measles

BRECKENRIDGE—Mrs. I. J. Kirkland is ill with the measles at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. D. Poindexter, in Young county, near Eliasville.

This appears to be an ordinary news item until it is explained that Mrs. Kirkland is 88 years old and that she never had the measles when she was a child, and that now when she has them they are terribly uncomfortable and a nuisance.

Mrs. Kirkland is the grandmother of Ernest Kirkland, County commissioner, and Ernest makes frequent visits to Eliasville to see his grandmother as he is very fond of her.

Ernest gave the American some facts about Mrs. Kirkland Monday which are interesting and should be passed on to its readers.

Mrs. Kirkland was born in Henry county, Kentucky, on March 2, 1845 and was brought from her home there by her parents when four years old to Van Buren, in Navarro county, Texas.

Later her father moved his family to Cross Timbers, which is now Grandview, Texas, and there he built the first dwelling, a hewed log house. Later he built the first store building and a blacksmith shop. He engaged in the dry goods and mercantile business.

When Mrs. Kirkland was 14 years old her parents moved to Arkansas, where they resided two and a half years before coming back to Texas, settling at Alvarado.

At the age of 16, she was married to I. P. Kirkland at Alvarado, and 13 children were born to this union.

Mrs. Kirkland now has 85 grandchildren.

Her many friends and relative over this section are sympathizing with her on having the measles and are hoping she will be up and well again in a few days.

Trial Of Mooney
Abruptly Ended

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—Thomas J. Mooney's trial came to an abrupt end here Wednesday in a directed verdict of acquittal on a heretofore unused indictment charging him with murder in the San Francisco preparedness day parade bombing.

The end came after Mooney abruptly had taken active charge of his own defense in pleading against a motion of unwilling prosecution for a directed verdict.

Judge Ward ordered Mooney returned to prison "within two days."

Legal authorities have said acquittal on the old, unused indictment would not affect Mooney's conviction at his original trial and that he would continue to serve the life sentence on that conviction.

However, it was pointed out, acquittal could be made basis of another application for pardon.

Evangelist's Topic

Rev. Elmer Kondaatke, boy evangelist who is conducting services at the Church of God, 911 Main, preached on "Come Out of Egypt," in the service Tuesday evening. The bondage of sin was compared to the Egyptian bondage. "You must take up all of your possessions and leave the land of sin entirely. If you really desire to have the freedom of Christ in your life today," said the evangelist.

This evening he will speak on "Sin and the Unpardonable Sin." He said he would explain from the Bible exactly what is the sin which cannot be pardoned. An orchestra of six members will play beautiful sacred selections for the devotional period.

Mrs. John B. Thomas and daughter, Miss Read, and son, John R. Jr., of Midland, were visitors in Big Spring Tuesday, spending the day with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Hurt.
