United States ABCD Girls Enter Kindergarten

The Morlok quadruplets of Lansing, Michigan, are growing up and although they still are so identical it is next to impossible for strangers to identify them, their mother insists that they are developing individual traits. Left to right, they are Helen D., Wilma B., Sarah C. and Edna A.

Michigan Quadruplets Off To School

By WILLIAM R. MULLER

LANSING, Mich. (AP)—The Morlok quadruplets have gone out into the world but if they want to be movie stars they will have to wait until they are old enough to chorus their own "yes."

For almost four hours each day, the blond, hazel-eyed daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Morlok are attending their first kindergarten course. Their names are Edna A., Sarah B., Wilma C., and Helen D. The parents have been asked to allow screen tests of the children but have refused. Mrs. Morlok is firm in her insistence their fame shall not be commercialized and papa Carl backs her up.

"If the children ever want to go on the stage, they can do so when they are old enough to make their own choice," Mrs. Morlok explains. "Right now, it's hard enough for us to let them go around the corner to school."

The ABCD Babies
To the mother, who has had them constantly at her side since they were born in Edward W. Sparrow hospital, May 19, 1930, sharing her babies with the world, even if it's only for four hours' school a day, is proving a sharp experience. She fears that school somehow may separate them from each other and from their family.

"I want them to look just different enough so that Carl and I can tell them apart," Mrs. Morlok says. But she admits that her four perfectly normal and healthy daughters are developing individual traits. She points out those differences to herself from day to day.

When the children were born, nurses at the hospital labeled them A, B, C, D, in the order in which they arrived. Mrs. Morlok appended the initials to their first names. Edna A. has become the leader in all their games and lessons, Mrs. Morlok says. It is Sarah C. who comforts them when they cry, who acts as the balance wheel and smooths over difficulties.

Wilma B. is the comic character of the four, and from her flow most of the witty sayings which the family repeats. Helen D. is the sensitive one.

Edna Likes Red
"The most interesting thing about being the mother of quadruplets," says Mrs. Morlok, "is watching to see what will happen next between them."

Edna A. dictates the color scheme of the dresses the girls wear—and she prefers red, Wilma B. likes green, Helen D., blue, and Sarah C., orange. However, the girls refuse to dress differently, or to wear different shoes, or to leave the house without all going at once.

They are agreeable to having tooth brushes in different shades and carrying handkerchiefs with differing patterns, but that ends the concessions to differences in outward appearances.

If one of the quadruplets wears a hole in her stocking and needs a new pair, the other three want new ones, too. If one has a cold, all seem to catch it. If one plays outdoors, all must play with her.

An allotment of $25,000 was approved for a monument to pioneer Texas women on the campus of the College of Industrial Arts in Denton.

Previous allotments of $50,000 to each of Goliad and Gonzales were included in the final allocations, which were based in part upon recommendations in majority and minority reports of the historical advisory board.

The commission allotted $100,000 for markers to be placed at historical spots and $11,000 for marking graves.

Gin Total Here
Now 1,202 Bales
Cold, wet weather Friday and Saturday of last week retarded movement of the current cotton crop just as it was swinging into full stride.

Through Saturday five Big Spring gins had turned out 1,202 bales. This compares with 758 a week before, or a gain of 447 for the week.

Clear skies and warmer weather Monday enabled pickers to get into the fields and gins were busy again Monday afternoon.

Estimates place the number of bales ginned this season in Howard county at more than 1,600 bales.

is the best way...*

There are no two ways about it! Certainly the easiest way to get the most for your every dollar you spend is to buy products that you know about through the advertisements in your daily paper. You don't have to go out and look for buying opportunities. The advertisements bring them to you. And all you need do is consider the facts, compare values and decide on the soap or the sedan that best fits your judgment and your pocket-book.

Certainly the best way of making your money go farthest is to buy merchandise of proved value. Advertised merchandise. Merchandise that is bought and used by many people. Merchandise that must be superlatively good enough for its maker to keep calling it to the attention of people day after day and year after year.

This is the service—of convenience and profit—that the advertisements offer you every day. It will pay you to read them regularly and take advantage of everything they can do for you.

Cotton Price Level Higher

Spot Quotations During Past Week Remain Steady

Cotton prices were mostly steady and the ten-market average of 10.97 cents on last Friday was 12 points higher than a week earlier, according to the weekly cotton review issued by the market news service of the United States department of agriculture. The review said that the general level of commodity prices declined slightly, but prices of securities advanced further. Domestic and foreign inquiries for spot cotton continued numerous and spots sales increased. Weather conditions continued favorable for harvesting the crop. Forwardings to domestic mills increased sharply and further expansion in domestic mill activity was indicated. Retail and wholesale distribution of finished cotton goods and industrial activity also increased. Sales of unfinished cotton cloth were reported as about equal to mill output and cloth prices were mostly unchanged to slightly higher for industrial fabrics. Exports increased somewhat notwithstanding the dock strike in certain ports on the Gulf of Mexico. Prices of American cotton relative to Indian

In Liverpool declined somewhat. The ten designated market average price of Middling 7-8 inch cotton on October 18, was 10.97 cents, compared with 10.85 cents on October 11, and 12.45 cents on the corresponding day last season. Prices of futures contracts advanced less than prices of spot cotton and the basis quoted in the ten markets was higher than at any other time since the middle of September. Furthermore reports indicated that some cotton is selling at prices higher than quotations. Grade premiums and discounts on October 18, were the same as on October 11, with the ten market average premiums for Good Middling and Strict Middling 48 and 32 points on Middling and discounts for Strict Low Middling and Low Middling 40 and 57 points off Middling. The six-quoting market average premiums for Middling 15-16 and 1 inch were increased 2 points to 33 and 69 points on Middling 7-8 inch. In the Memphis market the premium for Middling 1-16 inches was reduced 5 points to 90 points on Middling 7-8 inches; for 1-8 inches increased 5 points to 130, and for 1-3-16 inches reduced 5 points to 215. Despite light advances in American cotton markets, quoted prices of American and Indian cotton in Liverpool declined slightly but prices of Indian declined less than American on October 18. Omara No. 1 fine was 83.9 percent of American Middling against 82.5 percent on October 10, and 60.9 percent on the corresponding day a year ago. Sales of 312,000 bales reported in the ten designated markets were larger than in any other week so far this season, 156,000 bales more than in the corresponding week a year ago, and 79,000 bales more than in the corresponding week in 1932. Farmers, according to reports, continued to market most of their cotton as fast as it was ginned.

Famed Arctic Explorer Dies

General A. W. Greely Only Recently Honored By Congress

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21 (UP)—Gen. Adolphus W. Greely, 91, famed Arctic explorer, was dead today, victim of an illness which became serious two weeks ago.

Greely led the "farthest north" expedition of 1881. From that expedition of 25 men, seven returned; found by the third of a series of relief expeditions after being marooned four years in the Arctic near latitude 83 degrees, 24 minutes—the then "farthest north." Their polar ship had been crushed in the ice.

It was not until March 27 of this year that Congress took formal recognition of Greely's nineteenth century achievement. Then it voted him the Congressional Medal of Honor, one of three to get that medal for noncombative service. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Dr. John O'Skinner, who as a civilian surgeon was decorated for bravery under fire in Indian wars in 1873, were the others.

Wounded in Civil War

Overlapping Greely's activities as an explorer was an army career that saw him wounded in the Civil War and carried him through to the closing campaigns against Western Indians in 1897.

'Alien' Grasses Sought By Uncle Sam To Carpet Mid-West Dust Storm Belt

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21 (UP)—Government plant explorers, who have introduced so many new crops to this country, have been on the march again, bringing back from the far ends of the earth strange, alien grasses that some day may dot the American great plains.

A two-year search, in which three expeditions took part, has been ended and now more than 2,200 lots of seeds and plantings, collected from Russian Turkestan and Manchuria, are being carefully tested by department of agriculture scientists to see just how they will stand up under drought, wind, severe heat and cold. If any species shows remarkable toughness it will be reproduced in larger quantities preliminary to possible introduction in the great wind-swept sections of this country to reduce the devastation of recurring dust storms by binding the soil. Nearly all lots were collected from areas where the life of a plant is very precarious unless it is extraordinarily resistant.

Many Crops Are 'Aliens'

Russian Turkestan, Manchuria, the Gobi desert, Persia, Russia, Japan, Afghanistan—all have been hunting grounds at one time or another for Uncle Sam's plant explorers. They "bring 'em back alive" for long experiments here. Specimens brought in are inspected for disease and kept isolated while their development is watched for months, sometimes years. The discovery of one weed valuable as a soil holder from among lost of hundreds is considered a real find, the percentage of success being necessarily so small.

Durum and certain types of hard red spring wheat, now a great commercial crop, were unknown here until a department plant hunter found the min Russia and Siberia years ago and brought back a small bag of seed now translated into millions of bushels of marketable grain annually.

Soybeans, growing now in a wide area, were brought back from the Orient—4,000 strains and types at one time; the date palm came from Mesopotamia, Egypt, Tunis, Algiers and Morocco to establish a new industry in dry American regions.

They Travel Far

Sudan grass is a naturalized alien; so are the navel orange, the Pima long staple cotton and many other important and valuable commercial crops.

The explorers have gone into areas never before penetrated by white men; down the high ranges of the Andes, through heavy jungles, into the almost unknown interior of New Guinea. Sometimes they are called "gene hunters," because on occasion the assignment is to find a plant with a specific genetic character—an alfalfa immune to bacterial wilt, for example. To qualify, they must have studied botany, have a wide technical knowledge, robust health and the ability to get along with wild, and sometimes savage natives in the world's out-of-the-way places.

...but, after all is said and done, it's the cigarette itself that counts

...the question is, does it suit you?

Now, when it comes to a cigarette that will suit you... you want to think whether it's mild, you want to think about the taste

That Chesterfields are milder and taste better is no accident...

The farmer who grows the tobacco, the warehouseman who sells it at auction to the highest bidder, every man who knows about leaf tobacco will tell you that it takes mild, ripe tobaccos to make a good cigarette.

In making Chesterfields we use mild ripe home-grown and Turkish tobaccos.

Outstanding

.. for mildness
.. for better taste
