Program Of Work For C-C Is Told

Busy Year Is Slated For Chamber

It's going to be a busy year for the Littlefield Chamber of Commerce.

That fact was brought out Tuesday night at a regular meeting of the C-C's board of directors, who approved the 1967 program of work.

And the first few months of the year may be slightly hectic, with all sorts of projects either in progress or on the drawing board.

Underway at present is an industry search by F. J. Spencer, Houston industrial consultant, who is working closely with Chamber leaders.

Spencer reported eight specific projects in which he is involved to board members Tuesday night.

"We are presently negotiating with one new industry and it looks real good," he told the board.

Although the name of the prospect must be kept confidential for the present, Spencer said this particular negotiation may be culminated "in the very near future."

Spencer also detailed other projects which are being studied and said all are being probed with the idea of "making things happen" in the Littlefield area.

Less than a month away in Chamber activities is the start of an intensive membership drive, headed by Membership Chairman C.A. Dival.

This project will begin April 10 and will be handled by Littlefield "Blue Coats," the city's ambassadors.

It will be a whirlwind drive, Dival said, with the whole thing expected to take just five days, climaxed by a luncheon of all members of the C-C on April 14.

This also will be the first of what may turn out to be quarterly meetings of the entire membership. The idea is being explored to determine if such meetings will spark more interest in the C-C's activities.

Coming out about the time of the start of the membership drive is a four-page bulletin from the Chamber. It could be the forerunner of consistent PRESENT PROGRAM--Those pictured above represent the panel and chairman leading the meeting for Littlefield women held in the XIT Room of the Security State Bank Tuesday morning. The three ladies seated were members of the panel which led discussion on tourism, recreation and fine arts. They are (left to right) Mrs. Allen Hodges, Mrs. Oscar Wilemon and Mrs. Wm. N. Orr. Standing are Jim Kelly, executive vice president of the Chamber and Mrs. T. L. Dunlap, chairman of the meeting.

TO HELP CITY GROW Recreation, Tourism, Fine Arts Discussed By Women

Recreation, tourism and fine arts were topics of discussion Tuesday morning at a meeting of about 30 women on "the woman's role in helping Littlefield grow."

Theme of the meeting in the XIT Room of the Security State Bank was "The Woman's Touch," that featured a three-member panel which discussed recreation, art and tourism.

Members of the panel were Mrs. Oscar Wilemon, Mrs. Allen Hodges and Mrs. Wm. N. Orr. Mrs. T. L. Dunlap served as chairman of the meeting.

Mrs. Dunlap introduced Jim Kelly, chamber manager, who told of the meaning and purpose of the meeting. He pointed out that several area towns had started such organizations to help the chambers in their work. The idea brought forth was that of using the thoughts of women to better the community.

After Kelly had spoken, Mrs. Dunlap introduced the panel members and their topics.

Mrs. Oscar Wilemon spoke to the group about recreation for the community and presented several ideas for recreation such as community singing, sidewalk cafe and others. She then asked for discussion and ideas from those present.

Mrs. Allen Hodges discussed the idea of tourism. She pointed out ways of telling people about our community and attractions for tourists. She reminded the women of the various opportunities in 1968 to attract the tourists coming through Texas for various events and conventions. Mrs. Hodges also noted economical advantages of the tourists.

The final idea was presented by Mrs. Wm. N. Orr on the subject of fine arts. She said that art needed to be brought to the attention of the community more. She defined art as "doing anything well," and suggested that more exhibits of art be brought before the people of the community.

As an added attraction, the women heard a short talk by F. J. Spencer on the assets of Littlefield for drawing industry. He commented that the greatest assets are the people, their spirit, and community pride.

County Tax Rate Will Remain Same

The tax rate for operating the county during 1968 was set by Lamb County Commissioners Court, Monday, at 95 cents per $100 valuation, the same as for 1967.

Tax revenue brought in on the tax rate will go into the general, jury, road and bridge, precinct funds and courthouse and jail returning bonds.

County Judge O. J. Mangum said also added to the county tax rate is the state ad valorem tax rate of 47 cents.

The commissioners also made adjustments of delinquent taxes from the 1965 tax role, adding new properties and cancelling others which were double assessed. The procedure is routine after the state audit is published, Mangum said.

In other business the Commissioners approved purchase of a set of books entitled "United States Code Annotated" for the county law library. Purchase was made for $466.50 after trading in an obsolete set which was donated to the county by a local law firm.

Payment for relaying of a water line and gas line and setting back of fences on right-of-way for a proposed farm market road in the county also was approved.

The road, designated FM 1842, will run north from Fieldton community to U. S. 70 west of Olton.

'Hot Check' Seminar Slated For Friday

A "Hot Check Seminar," sponsored by the Retail Council and Better Business Committee of the Littlefield Chamber of Commerce will be held at 7:30 p.m., Friday, in the district court room at the Lamb County Court House.

County Judge O. J. Mangum and County Attorney Curtis Wilkerson will be main speakers at the meeting. Mangum and Wilkerson will review the state check laws and the functions of their offices in connection with the laws.

CITY MAP--LaQuinta Long, Littlefield Chamber of Commerce secretary, displays map of the City of Littlefield which is being printed Monday in the chamber office. The maps, 10,000 of them, were printed by the Chamber of Commerce and with help from other members. They will be distributed to the membership and various sites in town. The new map shows points of interest in Littlefield, including businesses, schools and parks. On the back of the map are facts about the city and its history.

CLAYTON IN HOUSE

Springlake Hospital District Bill Is Proposed

Bill Clayton of Springlake introduced a bill in the state legislature to create a hospital district in the Springlake-Earth District of Lamb County.

The Springlake Hospital District would provide medical and hospital care for the needy who live in the district.

The election, however, would be held by the commissioners on their own motion or on the motion of a petition of qualified taxpayers. The bill reads before the court and would be established. The same election, the court would authorize the district to issue bonds for construction at a maximum rate of interest of six per cent and the term of the bonds would not exceed 40 years from the date of issuance of the bonds. The voters would decide whether or not the district would have the authority to levy annual taxes at a rate not to exceed one per cent on the $100 valuation of taxable property within the district.

The proposals should be decided by the court and the voters to call other elections at the same propositions. If the vote were favorable, the district would be governed until the first Saturday in April by members of the board of directors. The initial members would be named later in the bill. The first Saturday after the election on the district an election would be called to determine who would be members of the board of directors. Those elected would draw lots to determine which three should be on the board two years, and which three should be on the board one "Thereafter," the bill reads, "on the first Saturday in April of each year, a regular election of directors shall be held. A person elected shall serve a two-year term."

The board, before levying any taxes, would appoint a board of equalization composed of five resident property owners of the district who would see that taxes are assessed, valuations equalized and tax rolls prepared.

Not later than Oct. 1 of each year, the board would levy the tax rate and immediately certify the tax rate to the tax assessor-collector of Lamb County or some other tax assessor-collector as determined by the district.

Clayton's measure provides that when bonds are issued after an election, revenue may be used for "the purchase, construction, acquisition, repair, or renovation of buildings and improvements and equipping them for hospital purposes."

A tax, however, would have to be provided to create an interest and sinking fund to pay the interest and principal as it matures.

The bill reads: "No bonds shall be issued by the hospital district, except refunding bonds, until authorized by a majority vote of the qualified property taxing electors of the district voting at an election called and held for that purpose."

"The bonds of the district may be made optional for redemption prior to their maturity date at the discretion of the board of directors."

Employees Asked Not To Park On Phelps

Littlefield Chamber of Commerce Wednesday reminded employees of stores on Phelps to use off-street parking rather than Phelps or side streets. Workers were reminded that off-street parking is provided so that shoppers will get benefit of free parking on Phelps and side streets.

COACH THOUGHT 4 YEARS AGO

Wolverettes Could Win District, Maybe

BY TEX ROGERS

Four years ago when Dean Foshee took over the freshman girls basketball team at Springlake-Earth High School he had visions of his youngsters maybe taking the district title by the time they were seniors.

Talk like that may sound like Foshee is a pessimist, because last Saturday, after four years of grooming, hours and hours of practices, and many aches and pains, the Wolverettes literally ran away with the State Class A championship by rolling over Cross Plains 105-52.

Four years, one state title and state runner-up honors can change a man a lot. Now Foshee is more optimistic.

Even though he is losing 10 seniors, he feels that his returning cagers could again finish next season with the state championship trophy in their possession again.

"But it will take a little luck," he concedes.

The Wolverettes carried a 37-2 mark to Austin for the state tournament and were a heavy favorite to wind up with the title, after being state runner-up the year before. But for three periods in the opening round, things got a little sticky for the Lamb County sextet.

It seemed that Brownsboro was dogging the Wolverettes into a close match, and the score was 43-42 when the final period opened. Then the South Plains girls broke loose and came out on top 66-45.

"We played poorly the first half of that game," Foshee said. "Brownsboro played a slowdown game and we had foul trouble. By the fourth period we were able to play our type of fast game and we didn't have any trouble."

The final game against Cross Plains was just the opposite. The girls from West Central Texas tried to run with the ball and played right into the hands of the Wolverettes.

"We saw how they were playing, so we started to run, too," the coach said. "We began looking for 100 points right from the first period."

And run they did, and when the buzzer sounded to end the slaughter, the Wolverettes had established 10 new records for tournament play. They included most points scored in a single game and the most for a two-game series at 171.

Despite losing 10 seniors off next year's squad, Foshee thinks chances are good that the Wolverettes will be back in the playoffs.

Missing will be the likes of Anita O'Hair and two guards. But, Marsha Dawson, the 6-1, lightning fast dynamo will be back as a junior forward. Also returning up front will be Susan Britton, who tallied 46 points in the final game.

Looking to the defense, Foshee sees Judy Hitt and Debbie Martin at guards.

Also, Vicki Gregory, a 5-10 freshman this year, should help at forward.

The Wolverettes, who won all competition this year by 20 to 30 points, except in their two losses to a college team, the Wayland Queen Bees, should have the same success next year.

Things even look bright for the years after next. "We look to have good teams for quite a few years," Foshee said.

GOOD WORK, COACH--H. L. Fisher, right, of Fisher's Restaurant in Littlefield gives a congratulatory handshake to Dean Foshee, coach of the Springlake-Earth girls basketball team that won the State Class A chamampionship this week. Looking on are Anita O'Hair, left, and Judy Gover, team captains. Fisher treated the team Tuesday with a dinner at his restaurant.

Baseball Meets Are Scheduled

Persons and parents interested in the Pony League baseball program this summer are slated to meet at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Flame Room of Pioneer Natural Gas Co., announced Y. B. Thompson, league president.

Also, a meeting of persons interested in the Little League program will meet at 7:30 p.m. today, in the Flame Room of Pioneer Natural Gas Co.

A Little League spokesman said Wednesday that it is imperative that parents of prospective players attend the Friday night meeting.

Little interest in the program has been shown by the majority of the parents in the past, he said, and now the Little League program may be in jeopardy if this attitude is not changed.

Spencer To Speak To LHS Students

F. J. Spencer, Houston industrial consultant, will speak to the students of Littlefield High School in an assembly program at 10 a.m. today.

Today, at 4 p.m. in the Flame Room of Pioneer Natural Gas Co., Spencer will be on hand for a meeting with members of the Littlefield Chamber of Commerce.

Chamber members have been urged to attend. He will be available for questions from those present.

COTTON TALKS

From Plains Cotton Growers Inc.

The textile products import situation, which has seen an increase of over 37 per cent in the past year up to the equivalent of over 1 million bales of cotton, is more and more drawing the concentrated fire of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute, raw cotton interests, Congressmen and Senators.

What all seek is (1) a five-year extension of the Long Term Arrangement for Cotton Textile Imports which expires September 30 of this year; (2) to get the LTA administered in such a way as to return textile imports to reasonable levels, and (3) assurances that there will be no further tariff concessions to foreign countries in what is known as the Kennedy Round of tariff negotiations, now in progress.

No less than 31 U. S. Senators, led by John Pastors (D., R. L.) recently spoke in Washington urging a solution to "unfair" textile import competition.

Representatives of the raw cotton industry have held a conference with top level State Department officials, including Under Secretary Nicholas Katzenbach.

ATMI is keeping members of Congress, the State Department and others under a constant barrage of charts and graphs showing increases in imports of the various textile import forms, from yarn to finished products, and with figures on the deficit in U. S. textile trade, textile wages and textile prices declines.

In the House, Congressman George Mahon has advised Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., he will be presenting a statement pointing out how unchecked textile imports could seriously hamper the current cotton program under the Agriculture Act of 1965.

He, along with other Congressmen, will call attention to the progress made in the cotton industry, including increased domestic consumption of raw cotton and 1966 exports projected at 5 million bales, up from 2.9 million in 1965.

This progress has given cotton producers hope of restoring at least a part of the almost 30 per cent cut in planted acreage suffered in 1965 and 1966.

But Mahon fears these hopes may never be realized if textile import policies encourage increases in foreign cotton production by giving unrestrained access to U. S. textile markets.

It is important to note, he says, that about three-fifths of the increase in textile imports came in the form of yarn. Yarn imports expanded in one year from 7 per cent to 21 per cent of the total. And the seven leading suppliers, accounting for 88 per cent of the total last year, are all cotton producing countries except Portugal, which has her own colonial supply.

U. S. cotton exports supplied these countries with less than 3 per cent of the cotton consumed over the last three years.

The seven countries are, in order of yarn and thread exports to the U. S., Mexico, Portugal, Brazil, Spain, Greece, Columbia and Israel. Total U. S. yarn and thread imports jumped from 51,500 cotton bale equivalents in 1965 to 213,000 bale equivalents in 1966.

Cotton cloth imports accounted for over a third of the increase from 1965 to 1966, going from 371,400 bales to 468,800 bales. Nine countries were responsible for most of these imports, and the U. S. is only about 13 per cent of raw cotton requirements.

Donald Johnson, PCG Executive Vice President, says there are so many departments and so many diverse interests involved it is difficult to make any prediction as to the outcome, what is rapidly approaching roar proportions over imports.

But he adds that "covering million bales of cotton are involved and the outcome will obviously have its effect on High Plains cotton producers as well as those from the rest of the Plains."

Information coming from Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., from seed breeders, and the organization's field now indicate that something 500,000 acres -- about 10 per cent of total 1967 plantings in Plains -- will be planted in varieties with the potential to produce one inch or longer staples.

Allowing for some of the cotton falling to reach potential, this could still give High Plains a 25 per cent more of its 1967 crop in the inch and better category, a percentage figure, if reached, would almost double the figure, when only 13.3 per cent of the crop was in these lengths.

In calculating this total, it was found that around 360,000 acres will go into the production of Paymaster 111, and that the remaining 140,000 will be between Lockett 4789, Deloro and several strains of Ancho. "And we are told that this acreage will exhaust virtually all of the available supply quality planting seed in the varieties," said Donald Johnson, Executive Vice President of PCG.

He continued by saying because of this fact, under conditions around planting this year may have an even greater effect on the staple lengths that will be produced. Heavy rain, blowing sand, or seedling disease, even if loss occurs early enough to allow replanting the longer staples, will have to be planted to another variety.

For this reason, Johnson hopes producers will use seed treatment, timing of planting methods to save the first plantings wherever possible.

"If we can in one year double the amount of one inch and longer cotton that we produce on the Plains -- from about 170,000 bales to 340,000 -- it will take some of the pressure off our short staple markets and will be a big step toward clearing our reputation for being an area which almost exclusively produces short staple cotton," Johnson said.

Buy Now, Pay Later Can Mean Financial Woes

"It is almost impossible to live in our present day society without being lured into spending beyond our means," says Mrs. Doris Myers, Extension specialist in home management, Texas A&M University.

Yesterday's luxuries become today's necessities. Everywhere people are on the move. And with each move there is usually an attempt to live just a little better than before. "Buy Now and Pay Later" has become a national slogan.

If you would like to get off the merry-go-round, if you would like to be master of your own pocketbook, if you would like to show some financial progress and develop a reasonable amount of financial security, sit down with your family and do some real thinking about your situation.

(1) What do you want your money to do? Both on a short time basis and several years hence.

(2) Figure out where you stand right now.

(3) Make a plan to accomplish your goals. If this is to get out of debt you must do some real planning and stick to it until you accomplish your goal. You have to make your own plan as nobody is in this same boat with your family. They have their own problems.

(4) Try out your plan and keep a record of your spending.

(5) Periodically check up to see how the plan is working. This is the critical point where most people give up. Instead of tossing it out the window, get your pencil and eraser and start making adjustments . . . be flexible rather than foolish.

Knowing what you own and what you owe can be a big help in making decisions about the plan and the use of credit. With many families the decision to stop credit buying for a while is the wisest one; for others credit can be a wise decision.

Unless you cut them off at the bottom.)

He pointed out a report by Gov. John Connally, and warned that Texas is falling behind in its relative growth in agriculture. California and Texas were equal in agriculture 15 years ago, the Governor said in an earlier report, but the Golden Gate State is earning about $1.5 billion more in agriculture income than Texas now.

The new board in Hightower's bill would be required to: --Make an inventory of present assets, services and facilities in the state;

--Promote new agricultural businesses and industries and expand existing businesses and industries;

--Promote the use and consumption of agricultural products grown by Texas farmers, both in foreign and domestic markets;

--Stimulate the development of new ways and means of converting raw agricultural products into marketable items;

--Hold such conferences, institutes, or seminars concerning agricultural development as it deems necessary and feasible.

The board also would advise the Coordinating Board for Higher Education in its supervision of agricultural research and extension in state supported colleges and universities.

Members of the board would consist of 15 persons appointed by the Governor with confirmation by the Senate, and would represent all portions of the state.

The Senator has good intentions in the fact that he realizes something must be done if Texas agriculturalists are to keep up with the rest of the country. However, steps are being taken already in the same direction Hightower is heading, at least in this part of Texas.

For instance, a Panhandle Economic Program is already in the working stages, and the wheels are turning for a South Plains Development Program which is being handled by the folks in this area.

The SPD Program calls for the same things as Hightower's bill, only the SPD is on a local level without any appointments from the Governor.

By all means, something needs to be done if Texas is to keep its rightful title as the leader of the nation in agriculture. But it seems that the folks out here are doing the job by themselves.

Half Billion Dollar Cost Placed On 1967 Texas Traffic Crashes

Texas Traffic accidents will cost at least $500 million this year, according to an estimate announced by "Texans for Traffic Safety" following a meeting of the Board of Trustees.

Noting that 700 highway patrolmen have the job of patrolling 65,000 miles of highway, Robert F. Miller, president of the safety group, stated, "The lack of trained manpower to police our state's highways is showing up in our rapidly escalating traffic accident rate.

"Conservative estimates place the number of Texans to be injured in traffic accidents this year at 200,000. It is my firm conviction that if adequate trained manpower were available to enforce the traffic laws, this number could be reduced to a humane minimum. Nothing can take the place of enforcement.

"According to recognized authorities, a minimum of 2,500 patrolmen is needed to patrol the state's highways. There are 700 on the job today.

"Two hundred more jobs are authorized, but wages are so low that few qualified men can afford to take them, Mr. Miller stated. "Wages must be raised to realistic levels in order to attract and retain qualified men. The safety of all Texans is adversely affected by the lack of men to properly enforce the laws."

At the recent meeting of "Texans for Traffic Safety," Dr. Otto Lippman, Austin, Chairman of the Transportation Safety Committee, Texas Medical Association, was elected Chairman of the Board of Trustees. Miller, Dallas, President of Trinity Universal Insurance Company, was elected President of the safety group.

Lester O. Taylor, Dallas, President, Texas Automobile Dealers Association, was elected Vice President and John W. Lenehan, Dallas, Regional Vice President, Continental Insurance Company, was elected Secretary-Treasurer.

In addition to the officers, other members of the Board of Trustees include Dr. M. L. Price, Houston, President,

Girlstown Birthday Is Termed Best Yet

Girlstown, USA, nine miles south of Whiteface, observed its 18th year in operation Sunday with two big presents marking the celebration.

The first present was the more than 3,500 persons who visited the facilities the day of the anniversary. The second, and most important, was that Girlstown had a birthday for once with a budget in the black.

Highlighting the celebration was crowning of Miss Girlstown, USA, for 1967, who was Miss Brenda Griffiths, a pretty 15-year-old girl from Fort Worth, and sophomore at Whiteface High School.

During the afternoon at the open house, visitors were shown through the dormitories and other facilities by the young residents, and then saw a performance by the Kawadi Indian Dancers of Boy Scout Troop 80 in Amarillo.

Marshall Cooper, managing director of Girlstown the past three years, said the attendance at the celebration was the best ever, but even more gratifying is the fact that Girlstown is operating in the black financially.

"That is, except for a $10,000 loan which had to be extended," he said.

Although things look bright right now for the home for some 60 girls, things could be a lot better, Cooper said.

"We are doing fine, but we will need more funds in the future if we are to have better programs for our girls," he said.

Cooper said the reason for Girlstown's good condition now was because of the tremendous help given by Littlefield and other area towns during the past months.

He said the contributions of clothing, household furnishings, and other items and money, helped Girlstown to get on its feet.

quarterly bulletins, if it is well accepted.

The year's program of work, which will be outlined in another special publication to be issued in April, includes a wide assortment of responsibilities and goals set up by the C-C.

Here is a brief outline of some of the plans:

The Retail Council plans a "Treasure Chest" promotion for shoppers in April along with a Sidewalk Sale, Back-To-School and Stock-In Festival promotions later in the year.

The Industrial Development Committee will be working closely with the Spencer project in an effort to diversify the community's economy.

The Better Business Committee will sponsor a "Hot Check Seminar" here Friday night. Plans also include other short courses later in the year to benefit the business community.

The Tourist Development Committee is completing a slide presentation on Littlefield entitled "Know Your Community." The program will be unveiled at a meeting of the Littlefield Rotary Club today.

The Municipal Liaison Committee will co-operate with other agencies in a Clean-up, Paint-up, Fix-up campaign in the city.

Committee plans in the Agriculture division call for an annual Farmer-Businessman Day, with a dinner and educational program on farm machinery and latest agricultural practices.

Also planned are the annual farm dinners in various neighboring communities, along with good-will visits between businessmen and rural areas in the Littlefield territory.

Throughout the work program are many other projects which will be coming up during the year, including plans for recreation improvements, airport conventions and, of course, the annual C-C banquet.

Plans in all areas of Chamber activities will be detailed in future issues of the News and Leader.

land they did not build any permanent buildings, but lived mostly in dugouts and used pole corrals.

The Bar-C (-C), a Texas cattle company found a good location on Wolf Creek and ran cattle there several years. Wolf Creek runs through Ochiltree and Lipscomb counties to the Oklahoma border about 30 to 40 miles north and parallel with the Canadian River. Between the river and the creek was rolling country with small streams fed by good springs.

To the north of Wolf Creek was plains country. It was watered by lakes which were filled when it rained. This was ideal pasture land and the Bar-C heard increased until a sizeable crew of men had to be hire, mostly during the summer.

The cowmen used chuck wagons instead of ranch buildings, so they could be moved and the men could be closer to their work. At first three men worked from one wagon. They took turns cooking, doing camp chores and washing dishes.

Wolf Creek empties into the Cimmaron River where a number of Indians had their homes. Small bands of young Indian bucks would gang up in numbers of about 10 and would come up around Wolf Creek to hunt and fool around. They wouldn't work around their own permanent camp, but were always full of fun and frolic. They really lived off the land.

This country was full of terrapins and the Indians never passed up one. An old timer told me he had seen them get off their ponies, catch the terrapins and put them in their war sacks until they had five or six. Then they would stop and herd them into a fire until the terrapins all died and were roasted. The Indians would eat every piece of meat between the shells.

At one of the Bar-C wagons, a cowboy called Slim had the chore of cooking supper. One day he rode into camp to start cooking and saw eight Indians around the chuck wagon. He couldn't understand why they were there or what they were doing.

Three of the Indians were flat on their backs on the ground and their bellies were naked. The other Indians had some small saplings about 10 feet long and one man on each end of the sapling, rolling it across the naked belly of each of the three on the ground.

Slim asked what in the world had happened. It seemed that the party had raided the food in the wagon and found a large sack of dried apples. They ate them as fast as they could to keep each other from getting any. They only chewed the apples enough to swallow, and had a big stomach full by the time the apples had gone.

This made them thirsty, so each took a big drink of water. Dried apples swell at least three times bigger when they soak, so the water the Indians drank made the apples swell in their stomachs.

Those three Indians started hurting so bad they thought they were going to die. The other Indians cut the saplings, trimmed away the bark and started rolling the bellies of their sick friends. That was the way the Indians treated the bellyache.

In two hours they were well enough to get on their ponies and ride off. Slim had a late and scanty supper.

The next spring there were enough cowboys working from the wagon for the boss to hire a cook. The new cook was a Negro man named Jake. He was about 40 years old, very jolly and all the cowboys like him. Jake was a good cook and dark as a bucket of tar.

After Jake got settled and accustomed to the work the boss had him dig a cellar to store the cured meats and extra supplies in. This kept the supplies much cooler and dryer.

The cowboys helped him by cutting down enough trees and branches to cover the cellar. Then they heaped a lot of dirt on this cover and had a nice cool place for storage. The cellar had no ventilation to it and was very dark in the back part. No door was made, but a tarp was thrown over it when it rained.

Jake had a lot of extra time on his hands during the day because most of the time he only cooked breakfast and supper. The men were too far away for a noon meal. He spent a lot of his time sitting in the shade under the wagon and whittling.

One afternoon he was whittling away and heard a noise. He looked up and saw 10 painted Indians riding up the creek towards the wagon. They were not close enough to see him, so he threw down his whittling and made a dive for the cellar.

He went to the rear and crouched down in the dark, hoping the Indians wouldn't find him. Jake was almost scared to death.

The Indians rode up and made a run on the food in the wagon. After they had satisfied their hunger to some extent, they went hunting for something else to eat. One Indian peeped down into the cellar and saw several pieces of meat hanging up. He decided he wanted a big hunk to eat raw, so he went down the steps of the door with his long hunting knife in his hand.

The light was just right for Jake to see the awful painted face of the Indian and the long knife. He knew his time was up. The Indian was going to scalp him.

It was so dark where Jake was that the Indian did not see him. When Jake decided the Indian buck was coming after him, he shrieked and broke out of the dugout. The Indian then got a look at Jake as he rushed by. He saw that Jake was so dark that he must have been some kind of a devil, so he bolted out right behind the Negro, yelling too.

Slim, the cowboy, had come in early that afternoon to get a fresh horse and was only about 400 yards from camp and saw what was happening.

The underground yells had startled the other Indians and when they saw what they thought was a devil come out of the hole, they bolted to their ponies and took off down the creek and yelled every time his feet hit the ground.

Slim thought Jake was running as fast as the Indian ponies, and it was nearly a mile before he could head off the frightened man.

Slim laughed about this the rest of his life. He really laughed about it when he told the story to me 30 years later.

AMY'S ADLIBS

Make A List

By Amy Turner

I ADMIT it. I am a compulsive list-maker. I have even been known to make lists of my lists.

Unfortunately, all this list-making does not usually bring about the efficient results one might imagine.

For example, I always make lists of things to take on trips. Once I found my detailed list packed carefully in the bottom of the suitcase just after I had arrived and discovered I had my good brown shoes and my good black dress.

I always make lists of things I need to do around the house and frequently find that, after all the time it took to make the lists, there isn't any time to do the work.

Well, that one's not really such a bad idea. Then, of course, I always make grocery lists, fold them neatly and place them carefully in the purse I leave at home.

The whole truth of the matter is that I just ENJOY making lists. I can't think of anything that gives a greater sense of accomplishment and requires so little energy.

It definitely gives direction to one's life and, at the same time, provides ample opportunity to sit back and enjoy the fruits of all the things you're GOING to do. (The psychologists could have a ball with that one although The Publisher says it's perfectly obvious to him that I'm just plain lazy . . . well, what can you expect?)

But, at long last, all my years of list-making have paid off. I have found a list that works.

LIKE MANY mothers of my acquaintance, I have fought a continual battle with my children over the chores they are supposed to do.

Now, nobody likes to lose all the time. I mean, you could get a complex from this sort of thing and, after all, there's three of them and one of me.

So, I resorted to my old standby—make a list.

Early one morning, after rushing everyone out the door, I dashed to the typewriter and neatly typed a list of jobs for each child.

Naturally, I made three separate and individual lists with the name of the child in caps at the top. Any mother will readily see the reasoning and necessity for this.

Then, I plainly outlined every, and I mean every, job to be done. This included jobs before school, after school, Saturday mornings and then, just simple basic rules.

Of course, the thing that really makes this work is the notation, again in caps, at the bottom of the page:

"You will not be told to do any of these things. However, any rule broken will mean one turn at 'KP'."

At this point, I remembered someone saying something about the income tax turning us into a nation of liars and you can't argue with that, so, I added another thought:

"I will be the one to decide if a rule is broken. Anyone telling on anyone else is likely to get 'KP' also."

This last little item obviously took most of the fun out of it but I could easily see the advent of a household of little informers.

THE LIST has now been in effect at our house for four weeks and life is, indeed, beautiful.

No longer do I stumble over shoes, toys and books down the hall.

I never have to remind anyone of piano practice or lessons or that it's time to bring in wood or take out the trash.

The children's rooms, if not sparkling, are at least passable.

My lovely children (without being told) jump up from the dinner table, empty their plates and take them to the sink. They dash about the house trying to find anything out of place. I often hear the vacuum running or the joyful sounds of a bathtub being cleaned.

The odd thing here (the psychologists will have to help me out again) is that they really seem to enjoy it!

And, as for me, I have so much time I'm thinking of writing that book I started 15 years ago.

In fact, I've been busy all week making lists of ideas for my first novel.

OWNER'S REPORT

Once A Sucker, Always A Sucker

By Bill Turner

A LITTLE OVER 11 years ago, fresh out of the Navy, Amy and I sailed into Littlefield looking for a job.

We were greeted by one of the worst blizzards ever to hit this area.

In February, 1956, you will recall, the snow got so deep that even milk and bread couldn't be transported into town.

We drove into Littlefield on the first day of the storm.

Amy and I hastily met with the Sam Williams and the Doug Poes, then owners of the Leader-News.

I nailed down the job, which called for me to make $75 a week as an advertising salesman.

There I was, complete with a master's degree in Journalism from a respected university, a little experience, and a yen to be an editor, not a salesman.

It wasn't exactly what I wanted, but it was a job, and it was better than the $60 a week I was offered by the Dallas Times-Herald, the Austin American-Statesman and a few other dailies.

WELL, we left Littlefield in a hurry, trying to beat the storm and make preparations to move here.

We got as far as Lubbock, and just didn't figure we'd better drive anymore.

Luckily, we were able to spend the next three days with an old college buddy and his family. It would have been tough to find a motel room, and tougher to find the money to pay for three night's stay. Everybody was stranded.

But we eventually got back on the road and back to central Texas.

I'll never forget a conversation I had with a former classmate just before I left to return to my new job at Littlefield.

"You're nuts," he said. "The best training available to be an editor, and you take a job as a salesman!"

"Sucker!" Well, things worked out, I did a hitch in advertising and later was offered a chance to become news editor. I was in hog heaven.

ANOTHER FELLOW, a respected publisher, brought the "Sucker" tag back to mind a few days ago.

"You people," he said, "are doing the best news job of anybody around here. You've always got a little extra, like hometown col-ums, lots of pictures and the kinda feature stuff that people like to read."

That was the good part. "But the name of this game is money, and it looks like to me you're running the paper awfully loose. Several pages without a single ad on them."

"And another thing, you're getting about the same price for a subscription to the papers as most weeklies get for one."

I explained that we were doing a little extra to get people to read the paper, and trying to sell more subscriptions.

"When's the last time you raised the rate?" he asked. "Don't know," I said. "It's been the same for about 10 years."

I GOT THAT "You're Nuts" look again. "What else sells for what it did 10 years ago?"

Well, the guy was right. And maybe one of these days we'll be forced to charge a little more.

In the meantime, we're going to try to sell subscriptions and you can play me for a sucker.

Now Red Capitalism

BY PAUL HARVEY

The conquest is complete. A year ago you and I reviewed Russia's "brave experiment" intended to stimulate lagging industrial production.

Following token tests, 10 per cent of all Soviet industry was "reformed." They started paying extra for extra work. Factory managers were allowed to deploy labor and reinvest profits. Bonuses and other capitalist incentives were adopted.

As of last September, 673 Soviet factories had adopted the "new system."

The fourth quarter of 1966 is now all in and added up.

Soviet industry as a whole showed a profit of 10 per cent.

But Soviet industries which had adopted capitalist economic reforms showed a profit of 25 per cent!

Now the order is out to all Russian industry: Shape up or shut down. No longer will the Kremlin treasury pay the upkeep of inefficient factories.

Delighted with the improved efficiency, Premier Kosygin is claiming full credit for Russia's thus-improved economic prospects. He boasts of increased "profits," a word which Marx found repugnant.

So rapidly is the "conversion to capitalism" taking place that where only 673 Soviet factories were switched over by last September — and there was a freeze on further conversions pending a fourth-quarter comparison — today — two months following the freeze — there are already more than 2,500 Russian factories which have adopted initiative and competition and reinvestment and the profit system . . .

By the end of this year, 50 per cent of all Russian industry will be "westernized." And ALL OF IT BY THE END OF 1968!

It is a cruel paradox that while Russia is reverting to less government snooperism of industry, the United States Government is increasing its regulation, regimentation and dictation.

As United States industry comes under more and more bureaucratic control . . . As American workers' wages are standardized by federal decree or union contract . . .

As incentive payments to our most efficient administrators are siphoned off in disproportionate taxes . . .

We tend to discourage industriousness, while the Russians are learning to reward it. We tend to prop up the common man, while Russia encourages and rewards the uncommon ones.

If the worldwide ideological clash is indeed between communism and capitalism, they have surrendered!

Man alive, let us now abandon the ism that won the war!

(Copr. T-M, 1967 Gen. Fes. Corp.)

She notes that only the young of the animal world romp, strut, or kick off the traces. Many humans are not this wise.

Even in deep middle age they are still struggling desperately to appear as the kitten or the puppy and to act as the yearling or the young cock. They rebel against maturity as the colt rebels against the halter.

She sifts the dry and powdery land through her fingers. There has been no moisture for many moons and planting time will soon be drawing near.

When humans suffer, the physician is called for; when animals suffer, the veterinarian is called for; but when the land suffers, only waiting is called for. Some curse. Some drink. Some take a trip. Some pray. Some irrigate. But all are waiting.

CAPITOL COMMENTS

'La Huelga' Differs

By Larry Fuhrmann

Our State Capitol Correspondent

though it might not change at all until migrants get so hungry they will trudge back to the fields to work. Caravans bringing food, money and clothing have been made from major Texas cities in an effort to take care of the workers.

Fr. Sherrill Smith, a Roman Catholic priest from San Antonio, compares the Texas strike to the California strike in pointing out that California Mexicans appear to be more "sophisticated" and organized as a community.

One of the objects the unions have had in South Texas has been the creation of a sense of unity among the South Texas Mexicans. Efforts of organizers in California resulted in a credit union, a cafeteria, a hospital and other community services for the Mexican workers. This led to a "sense of coordination," Fr. Smith said, before the strike ever came. This sense of community coordination is not now present in South Texas.

In California, where the strike was aimed at very large growers, products could be boycotted because brand names were displayed in grocery stores. This is not possible in Texas: "La Casita" lettuce looks the same as any other brand when it is displayed in the grocery. Another difference is that leaders of the Texas group are more loosely knit than leaders in California.

The basic problem, as Fr. Smith sees it, is paternalism of the white over the Latin American.

In justifying his active participation in strike as a priest, Fr. Smith claims that it is time for the American church "to get its skirts dirty." It is not a group of poor people who make up the Roman Catholic Church in America. Quite the contrary, he says, labelling his church as "fat and middle-class."

People used to refer to a certain group of poor immigrants as Irish Americans. But now that these people have entered into the ranks of the middle classes, they prefer to call all citizens Americans. "We are all Americans" is their slogan, Fr. Smith says. These people are afraid to see the poorer classes that now exist among the Negro-Americans and Mexican-Americans. "This is a system that we are going to have to crack open and split apart," the priest believes, pointing up the need to elevate these minority groups within the ranks of American society.

"We have plenty of understanding—but not enough feeling for the anguish and pain of these people," he says. "But we have to remember that they are poor in mind." "We are going to have to come out from the books and rub elbows with these people. If we don't become citizens of the world, we will all become sterile." He was pointing his comments to members of the white middle class in general.

So much for the moral issue centered around the strike in the valley. The practical issue—whether the migrant labor is going to get its bargaining right—is not about to be settled. The situation could result in stagnation unless some kind of positive action is taken by either side.

Migrant agricultural workers on strike in Rio Grande City are not asking for a minimum wage, but rather are simply trying to gain the right to bargain collectively with their employers. This is the strike as seen by Ernie Cortez, a young man who dropped out of college in order to promote "La Huelga" in South Texas.

Protestors sitting in front of the Capitol in Austin, however, were calling a different tune. What they were asking was an across-the-board minimum wage of $1.25 an hour for every work—agriculture or otherwise—in the state. The "sit-in" on the steps of the Capitol grew out of the march the strikers made from the valley to Austin last summer.

How the causes got separated is anybody's guess; Cortez claims the strikers were never asking for the $1.25 an hour minimum wage. But this difference is really immaterial here—except in pointing out that perhaps some of the leadership in the movement has gotten itself crossed up.

The position of "La Huelga" in South Texas is really not known to anybody; it would be pure academics to say it is on its last feet or still going strong.

But to say whether it is effective or not is another question; hopefully, to many, the strikers will in the long run win out and begin bargaining with their employers concerning their rates of pay. Until that time, however, the crops will still continue to be planted, cultivated and harvested.

Migrant labor in the valley isn't scarce; the Rio Grande City strike causes a slight inconvenience to agriculturalists, but it looks as though that is all. Buses are run into nearby towns to pick up additional labor when Rio Grande City can't produce the needed workers.

Tony Orendine, a figure of determination and hard work, associates his efforts in behalf of the valley strike with some bitterness and much disappointment. He is an underdog in South Texas, and he knows it.

"Before all this, I was a 'good Mexican worker' making only 90 cents an hour," Tony recalls. The ninety cents didn't go far in providing his family with the necessities of life. "But now that I am asking for more, I am an agitator and a communist," he says, reflecting the apparent opinions of him displayed by hostile elements in the Rio Grande Valley. Tony is an officer in United Farm Workers, the organization attempting to bring all migrant labor out of the fields to join in the strike.

But the Mexican workers cannot afford to strike. Although their pay is low, it is better than nothing.

Employers claim that union officials are harassing their migrant laborers; and union officials in turn charge that employers are threatening migrant laborers to not have anything to do with La Huelga or else face immediate dismissal.

The migrant is like a schoolboy in the principal's office—all the "right" persons, those with any influence at all, seem to be on the other guy's side. Migrants don't have anybody to fight for them.

The Rio Grande Valley picture doesn't appear to be changing very fast. It appears as

BUT OFFICER. I ONLY HAD ONE LOUSY DRINK

THE ABUNDANT LIFE

Look For The Good

BY BOB WEAR

Last Friday was a busy day for me, but a good day. In three different cities, I had appointments and dealings with three different men. All of these are successful, well above average, in their businesses and professions. Their behavior was such that I was reminded again that there are many wonderful people still around, a fact many of us don't seem to keep uppermost in our minds. This day was not special in that it was different from my daily rounds. Although my experiences are not all pleasant, it is a fact that I meet each day more desirable people than undesirable ones, and I see more good than evil.

I am not trying to pretend that the world of people is ideal, because realism and honesty prevent such pretension. It is my purpose, however, to set forth the fact that there is much good left in our world. The evil, the unlawful, the immoral and the miserable aspects of human society are presented to us through all news media and sometimes made very dramatic to make it interesting. Now, all of us know the truth and all of us are concerned. We would have general conditions otherwise, because none of us find it possible to ignore these moral, economic, social and other distressing problems which literally push their way into our lives to some extent.

The mistake that many of us make is in our failure to see the good, appreciate it and accord it the proper importance. There is still much good in people and in their ways. In our failure to see and appreciate it, we nullify much of it and make it as if it did not exist. This is such a loss — a loss to us — a loss to those who make it possible and a loss to the common good.

Many times, in our talking to each other and in groups, we talk about all that is wrong and thus make the burden even heavier. Of course, we can't close our eyes to any realities, but we must do our very best to see the whole picture. What about the good? Why not encourage it by including it in our attitudes, our conversations and in our evaluations? We make the bad worse so far as we are concerned by letting it predominate our thinking and our talking. We minimize and lessen the effects of the good by ignoring it in our thoughts and conversations.

In this context, the uplifting injunction of inspiration seems insignificant. "Whatever is true, whatever is honorable, whatever is just, whatever is pure, whatever is lovely, whatever is gracious, if there be any excellence, if there be anything worthy of praise THINK ABOUT THESE THINGS." Even if we have to put forth some special effort to find and emphasize the good, we will be much better off doing so.

We cannot afford to live in a make-believe world of pretending that there is no evil or anything else to cause justified concern. Nor can we live, with any meaningful satisfaction, in a world in which we fail to see and appreciate all of the good.

Lamb County Easter Seal Appeal Reported Doing Well

Joe Montgomery, Lamb County's Easter Seal Representative reported today that the 1967 Easter Seal Appeal for the Easter Seal Society for Crippled

Children and Adults of Texas is going well. Montgomery serves as Easter Seal Appeal treasurer for Lamb County.

The 1967 Easter Seal Appeal will help finance the Easter Seal Society's rehabilitation program for children and adults in Texas. Last year the Society helped 16,031 disabled persons through its program of assistance in finding and making effective use of services for the disabled and their families.

The Easter Seal Society helps support 23 treatment facilities in Texas where children and adults are treated regardless of ability to pay. These centers offer physical therapy, medical diagnosis, speech and hearing programs and related services to help the disabled build happier and more useful lives.

As Easter Seal Representative for Lamb County, Montgomery is the person to contact for services from the Easter Seal Society. He can be contacted at the Security State Bank, Littlefield.

Investigates 7 Accidents Meeting Slated

The rural accident summary for this county during the first two months of 1967 shows a total of 11 accidents resulting in no persons killed, five persons injured, and an estimated property damage of $7,795.00.

Only one month remains for approximately 2,000,000 vehicles registered in Texas to secure the 1967 Safety Inspection Sticker. The period set by law for securing the 1967 sticker ends at midnight, April 15, 1967, and there can be no extension of that deadline. The Sergeant said, "Any motorist whose vehicle bearing Texas license plates that does not display the 1967 inspection sticker after April 15 is subject to arrest by any Sheriff, Deputy Sheriff, City Policeman or any officer of the Department of Public Safety and upon conviction will be subject to a fine not to exceed $200."

Journey To The Past

BY EVALYN PARROTT SCOTT

JOURNEY TO THE PAST
OLTON, CRADLE OF LAMB COUNTY, FIRST COUNTY SEAT

Among the pioneer families of Olton, "the cradle of Lamb County" were the Schreier and Cowart families. It seems however the first actual settlement in the area was at the Old Burro College, or schoolhouse, seven or eight miles north and a little west of the present day Olton, where the family of T.F. Brown had a general store and post office. Possibly the first families to settle in the area in 1899 were the E.N. Burrus' and H.L. Baughns.

In the years 1907-1908 families began to organize and wanted to move the community closer to the center of those who were moving into the area. At that time a family by the name of Powell ran the old store northwest of the present Olton and had a son by the name of Olton. Thus the origin of the town's name, Olton's first baby, Olton "Shorty" Dickinson was named for the town.

A meeting was held in the Henry Miller home and the townsite was laid off by Jeff Williams of Hale Center. So the store and home of the Browns were moved into Olton. There were tribulations and tribulations in moving the building as it was in the winter and took several weeks to get it moved to the new location. It was pulled on logs by horses and stayed in a lake bed for several days before it could be pulled free of the mire. The building was placed on the now northeast corner of the square. The post office was housed in the building, too. Thus was the beginning of Olton. Among those whose names appeared on the list for the organizing of the town were Jim and Ed Kiser, W.D. Dickinson, H.K. Baughn, Beckner, Henry Miller, J.T. McGill, Fred Schreier, J.H. Cowart, Ed Burrus, and Galloway. As the histories of Olton pioneers are printed the history of the town will also be continued.

MR. AND MRS. L.B. COWART
(Written by Mrs. Stella Schreier Cowart)

Loyd B. Cowart and I, (Stella Schreier) was married in Olton in 1919. Loyd died April 13, 1964. We both were from pioneer families, Loyd coming here with his parents from Lockney in 1901. I came with my parents from Kansas City, Missouri in 1906.

We did not actually feel as though we were pioneers -- just children of pioneer families. It was our parents who helped "blaze the way" in our community.

Loyd was a World War I Veteran and spent most of his life farming and as a supplement to this he did carpenter work and paper hanging.

Loyd remembered, while he was still a small boy, some young men in the neighborhood coming to their home and borrowing his father's sheep shears to cut their own hair. Barbers were non-existent at that time and a new hair cut of any kind was something to be proud of.

A story of early day I (Stella) vividly remember -- One day when I was about fifteen years old, I went to the pasture in the sand hills to get my saddle horse. I climbed up on a hill to see if I could locate the horses. I saw them about one-fourth mile away. In getting to them I had to walk through a small valley. I had gotten well into the valley when I looked down into the bushes and wild shrubs and under at least eight out of ten of these bushes were snakes. Some two or three snakes under each bush in places. There were rattlesnakes, chicken snakes, hog snakes, and about every kind you could think of. Was I scared? I was just frantic and wondered if I'd get out of there without getting bit.

It was a very hot afternoon and the snakes were lying in the shade, practically dormant. The sand was too hot for them to crawl on. It was then I really discovered what my long legs were good for. My brothers had often teased me about being a "long legged bean pole." I had to jump my way out, over the bushes. Never again in all my rides and rambles in those sand hills did I ever see such hordes of snakes.

I (Stella) never attended any school except at Olton. Loyd and I liked to talk of our early school days here. About the awfully cold winters we had to encounter in going to school in buggies or on horseback, and how nearly frozen we would be by the time we got there. The teachers would often have to rub our hands with snow to help thaw them out, or send us out in the cold for a while so we would not get warm too quickly.

Loyd attended the first school located in the community, a little school located about five miles northwest of present day Olton. The school was named Burro College, because a burro died beside it. After Lamb County was organized in 1908 he attended the first school that was built in Olton.

I was the daughter of the late

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schreier who were farmers and stockmen.

The Schreiers moved to Lamb County in 1906 before the county was organized. My father was a native of Germany coming to the United States at the age of 19.

Both our parents were instrumental in the organization of Lamb County in the promotion of our school. My husband's father, J.H. Cowart took the first school census in the county; was office of the day when the county was organized.

My father, Fred Schreier, was the first county treasurer. I was born in 1900 in St. Louis, Missouri and after our arrival in the Olton area I did not get to start school until I was nine years old and quit school just before I finished the 10th grade, to make preparations for my wedding.

Our four children were all born at Olton. They are: Helen, now Mrs. R.L. Hipp; Thelma, now Mrs. Fred Long; James (married Clair Ruth Light); and Hazel, married Afton Price and lives in Richmond, Calif.

Census Bureau Survey Starts March 19

Questions aimed at providing new national information about households and families will be asked in this area as part of the Census Bureau's monthly current population survey the week of March 19, Director Francis H. Wilmer of the Bureau's regional office in Denver announced today.

The special March inquiry will ask about the number of children in a family, the quarter of the year of individual births, whether the household remained in the same house or county during the previous year, and family income. Answers to these questions will supplement the regular Decennial Census of Population, which is updated each year through surveys of a sample of the population.

The identity of those questioned is kept completely confidential and the facts obtained are used only for statistical purposes. These questions will be asked of all households in the survey throughout the United States, Director Wilmer said.

Census Bureau interviewer who will visit households here during the March survey is Mrs. Rosemary McNeese of Amherst.
