PARTIAL VICTORY FOR BACKERS OF ROAD PROGRAM

Action Against Highway Department Dissolved By Civil Appeals Court

Partial victory has been scored by supporters of Texas' present highway construction. A third court of civil appeals at Tuesday ordered dissolved a restraining order given by E. Ferguson and others by a county district court to enjoin the Texas highway commission awarding any more construction contracts at this time.

The dissolving of the injunction by the Texas highway commission to proceed with its construction program.

Speer, attorney for the plaintiffs, indicated, following announcement of the decision of the civil appeals court, that an appeal would be taken to the supreme court. Fifteen cases are allowed in which to perpetuate appeal.

Lamb county is particularly interested at this time in all matters affecting the highway department because of the steps underway to pave additional portions of Highways No. 28 and No. 29.

Ferguson and others had obtained an injunction on allegations that the highway department planned to contract in excess of the highway fund's ability to pay during the current fiscal year which ends next August 31.

It also was contended that the special session of the legislature impliedly repealed the appropriations voted by the regular session of the highway department and that it was contemplated to let was provided for in specific appropriations.

Another contention was that the commission planned to award exclusive contracts as a part of a scheme to embarrass the administration of Governor-elect Mrs. Miriam Ferguson, wife of James E. Ferguson, the principal plaintiff in the injunction case.

The law question was presented to the appeals court last Saturday, and attorneys of James V. Allred, attorney general, who prosecuted the case for the highway commission, were upheld in virtually every particular.

When the court handed down its decision, Allred and Speer were engaged in Travis county district court, where the case originated, in a controversy over a setting for a trial of the case on its merits.

Otto Jones Gets Letter Thanks From Demo. Committee Chairman

Otto Jones, local precinct chairman, has received the following letter from James A. Farley, New York, chairman of the Democratic National Campaign Committee:

Dear Mr. Jones—
Ours is a glorious victory, and it can be truthfully said that it was brought about by the united efforts of hundreds of thousands of Democrats in every section of this country.

I do not think that there has ever been a time in the history of our party when there was such a spirit of co-operation between the leaders of the party and the rank and file. The three living former candidates for the Presidency and the party leaders right down to our precinct and committee workers, worked zealously and unselfishly to elect our candidates. These combined efforts, supplemented by the assistance of thousands of Republican and Independent voters brought about success heretofore unknown to any political party and we all, individually, have every reason to feel proud.

In closing, I want to thank you from my heart for the support accorded me during the entire campaign, and I want you to know that I am deeply grateful to you.

Faithfully yours,
James A. Farley,
Chairman.

SERVICE CLUBS CAN AID RECOVERY

The hour has come when service clubs can play an increasing role in creating the state of mind among business men necessary for economic recovery, suggests Clinton P. Anderson of Albuquerque, New Mexico, president of Rotary International.

First of all, he proposes that there should be a study made by individual service clubs. "Such a study, cooperatively pursued in thousands of communities", he says in an article in the December Rotarian, "should enable us to see more clearly how we get into our present difficulties—which is the first step toward finding how to get out.

"Surely it is not idealistic", believes Mr. Anderson, "to hope that out of the discussions of hundreds of thousands of thinking men there might come a ray of light which we could all perceive and be willing to follow. Such a plan would not be born of wishing. It would be based on a conscientiously-willed attention to facts as they are. It would be sobered by experiences of representative men in the thousand avenues of activity. It would of necessity, be broad in its application and in its benefits.

"We would then be ready to throw the vast man-power of service clubs into the solution of the problem, not as isolated individuals but as cohesive units. The fact that greater business men can so clearly predict and chart business cycles presents only a greater challenge to bring them under control."

AUTO DEATH RATE DECLINES

The best news we have heard in a long time is the report that fewer people have been killed in automobile accidents this year than last. At first glance it might seem that that is merely because not so many people are driving cars, but the Travelers Insurance Company, which keeps close track of the figures of automobile accidents, since it is in the business of writing accident insurance, says that while fewer cars are registered and less gasoline is being bought the decrease in fatal accidents is even more marked than those facts will account for.

In seventeen states there has been a falling off of 20 percent in the number of automobile deaths. Only three states show an increase in the number of fatalities. For the country as a whole the number of automobile deaths for the first ten months of this year shows a decline of 15 percent. At the present rate fewer than thirty thousand people will have been killed in or by automobiles in 1932.

Could Your Car Pass a "Cold Test" like this?

Through deep snow drifts that blanketed Wolf Creek Pass, 10,800 feet above sea level in Colorado's Rockies, a great V-type snow plow doggedly pushed its way. A whirring rotary plow spouted clouds of snow, clearing the roadway. And soon, despite temperatures daily below zero, workers of Liberty Truck & Parts Co., of Denver, had opened the 15-mile road.

"We used Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil and Conoco Gasoline exclusively in our Cletrac Tractors with wonderful results," wrote a Liberty official. "We had no difficulty starting our motors in the mornings."

There's a "cold test" to guide you in buying motor oil!

Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil is thoroughly dewaxed and circulates freely below zero. It makes Winter-starting easier. More important still, it saves your motor from terrific punishment during the starting period, when half of all motor SINOPSIS: Pauline, sentimental, sincere and loving love, being engaged and marries Dennis in the belief that their blissfulness will continue unchanged all the years. On her wedding morning she awakens with a premonition that maybe love change, a thought buried in her by a letter from her closest friend, Barbara, the night before. She adored Barbara who had married, was the mother of a child which died, but now divorced and living a life which some of her friends could not understand. Barbara and Dennis is a semi-estranged personal dislike by both, months after Pauline's wedding, Barbara comes for a short stay. During this visit Barbara confesses to Pauline that there is a man she really loves, but she refuses to tell his name.

HOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"Oh, yes, at the Club."
"Because I'd love to get you something to eat if you're hungry." She said as if she hoped he would say yes.
"No, thank you, dear!"
The last little word was spoken unobtrusively, but it warmed her heart. She perched herself on his knee and her arms around his neck.
"Have you missed me?"
"You baby! What do you want me to say?"
"That you love me."
"Is it necessary? Of course I love you."
He put his arms round her little waist and drew her closer to him.
"What have you been doing all day?"
"Talking to Barbara and working."
"Does Barbara ever do anything besides talk?"
Pauline laughed. "Not often. I wish I could talk the way she does—she's so clever."
"Clever! Rubbish! She talks like a soap-novelle."
"Dennis!"
"So she does. All this stuff about love and marriage and twin souls."
"She doesn't mean half she says," Pauline declared.
"Let's hope she doesn't," Dennis answered dryly. He set Pauline on her feet, his arm still around her.

"Run up to bed, you'll take cold. I—" He broke off, as there was a slight sound in the doorway, and looking up he saw Barbara there.
"So sorry," said Barbara, looking directly at him. "I came down for a book. I had no idea you were in. So sorry!" she added again, a little smile curving her lips. "Good night!" and she went away. Dennis looked angry. "Good night," said Pauline.
"She knew good and well we were here," he said. "Damn the woman!" he added under his breath.
"I told you I knew Barbara wasn't happy," Pauline informed him later on when she was lying cozily in bed. "I wouldn't tell anyone but you, Dennis, darling, but she does love someone—frightfully!"
"Half a dozen of 'em, I should think!"
"No—seriously, one!" Pauline insisted. "There was quite a different look about her when she told me."

go back home."
"Go back! You haven't been here a week."
"I'll come back—never fear! Your spare-room bed is too comfortable to forget," said Barbara.
Barbara was stirring her coffee with an irritating little tinkle of silver against the china cup. "I wonder if I may ring up for a taxi presently," she said.
"Dennis will drive you down," Pauline said quickly. "He has to go down to Albany on business this morning—you told me so last night," she added faintly, meeting her husband's annoyed eyes.
"I said I might have to," he answered.
"Well—you could take Barbara, couldn't you?" Pauline asked.
"Delighted."
"Do you hate many people as much as you hate me?" Barbara asked Dennis later on, when they were

"I lay awake thinking of you," she said in her charming voice.

She lay still watching him with adoring eyes. Presently she said shyly, "Dennis?"
"Um?"
"You love me best in all the world, don't you?"
"What would you do if I said the answer was in the negative?" he asked, teasingly.
"Die," Pauline whispered.
"Then you may safely live," he assured her.
Pauline sighed and closed her eyes. It was no use; she realized that nothing on earth would ever make Dennis romantic.
It was at breakfast the next morning that Barbara announced she must go home that day, "home" meaning the queerly furnished flat in Greenwich where she kept the clothes she was not wearing, and slept when she was not staying in other people's houses. Barbara did not often come down to breakfast, but this morning she was standing looking out of the window when Dennis came into the room whistling.
When he saw her he broke off in dismay.
"Hullo! Couldn't you sleep?" he asked, with a poor attempt at humor. Barbara met his eyes calmly.
"I lay awake thinking of you," she said in her charming voice.
Dennis flushed; not because he thought for a moment she meant it, but because everything she said and did for some reason or another irritated and annoyed him.
"Indigestion," he said briefly.
Barbara laughed—she was very difficult to offend.
"No, we had a very good dinner," she answered seriously. "Spoiled by your vacant chair, of course, but otherwise perfect."
Dennis scowled and took up the paper. Barbara might be in love, he told himself, remembering Pauline's words last night, but that any man could possibly fall in love with her...
Pauline came into the room at that moment.
"Why—Barbara?" she said, amazed.
"Yes—myself in the flesh," Barbara said calmly. "I had a wire this morning on urgent business. I must driving away in the little two-seater car.

"People who hate well generally love well," Dennis said surlily.
"Yes," Barbara's queer eyes looked straight ahead down the road. "I should think you would make quite a good lover," she agreed.
Dennis jerked the wheel.
"I dare say Pauline could give you any information you require," he said.
"A lover and a husband—two different things," Barbara said, sweetly.
"Aren't we talking a lot of rubbish?" Dennis said with exasperation.
Barbara folded her hands in her lap with mock resignation.
"Very well—from now until our journey's end I am dumb," she said mockingly.
Dennis quickened speed. The journey could not be at an end too quickly for him. They turned onto one of the new broad arterial roads, and he let the engine out to its fullest extent. He never dared do such a thing when Pauline was with him. Presently he stole a sidelong glance at her. She was sitting very still, perfectly controlled and unmoved. She was a strange woman, he thought, and almost angrily he wished he understood her.
Barbara suddenly touched his arm. "There is a crossroad just ahead," she said in her calm voice. "I am not at all afraid, but you are driving rather recklessly, you know, and there is Pauline to consider, so..."
Afterward he wondered stupidly what she had been going to say, but her words were lost in a chaos of shouting and confusion and the grinding of brakes—and then—struggling back to consciousness he heard her voice still, agonized, broken with tears—unlike the cool, indifferent tones to which he had grown so irritatingly accustomed.
"Oh, my dear—Dennis—Dennis speak to me—Dennis!"
It was a dream—opening his eyes he was conscious of a confusion of sky and clouds from which Barbara's face wet with tears and white with dread bent over him.
So she could feel, after all! Pauline had been right, and she had a heart hidden away beneath all her artificialities.

Pauline had said something else about her, too. What was it? Oh, yes, with difficulty he sorted the words from the confusion in his brain "She does love someone—frightfully!"
And then his own question: "Who is the poor devil, then?"
Who was the poor devil? In the midst of all his pain O'Hara was conscious of a meddlesome desire to know the name of the man.
Well, he would ask her! Surely to ask a simple question like that would not be wrong?
Barbara, whom he had never liked—whom he pretended to despise—this woman with the tears on her white face, bending over him, bending so low that surely her lips touched his, cool and fragrant?
Dennis O'Hara closed his eyes. He was in pain, in great pain—there was a heavy weight across the lower part of his body, crushing him. He wondered what Pauline would say when she heard—poor little Pauline! He tried to recall her face to his fading consciousness, but somehow he could only see Barbara's eyes and the tears on her white cheeks—only feel the cool fragrance of her lips on his, only realize through the sea of pain in which he was drowning that at last he knew the name of the man she loved.

Pauline was busy arranging fresh flowers in the drawing room when the news was brought to her. She was not feeling very happy. Barbara's sudden departure had hurt her and left her puzzled.
Pauline longed to be a perfect hostess as well as a perfect wife. Her anxious mind explored every nook and cranny of her household to find in what particular detail she had failed in hospitality, and reluctantly she decided it must have been her husband.
Dennis was never nice to Barbara. It was impossible to disguise the fact that he did not like her. This morning at breakfast time, for instance, he had shown only too plainly that he objected to taking Barbara in the car. It was too bad of him.
Pauline carefully arranged the red roses in a silver bowl—a wedding present. Only six months ago since she had unpacked it, together with a host of other lovely things.
Only six months! It seemed a long time, and yet she knew people who had been married for sixteen years—twenty years, thirty years and even longer.
"I expect the time will go more quickly when we're really settled down and used to being married," Pauline told herself with a little feeling of satisfaction. A sharp thorn from one of the roses gave Pauline a nasty prick, and it was while she was busily wiping away the tiny bead of blood from her finger that the door bell rang.
"The Postman!" Pauline thought as she went to the front door, but figure.

the little letter box was empty and through the glass panels she could see the burly outline of a man's waiting. Pauline opened the door, then she caught her breath sharply, for the man wore an officer's uniform.
He looked at Pauline with kindly eyes.
"Mrs. O'Hara," he queried doubtfully.
"Yes," Pauline was panicky. Did she owe one of the tradesmen anything? She had always been so careful about not getting into debt. She was a thousand miles from the truth when the man reluctantly broke the news to her. "I am sorry to say there has been a bit of an accident. Gentleman by the name O'Hara—"

Pauline thought she would have died on the spot.
Dennis hurt! Killed! "Oh, my God!" she whispered, white-lipped.

 - For the price of a stick of gum you can make six cups of coffee?
 - For the price of a cake of soap electricity will do two week's washing?
 - Aren't these comparisons astonishing, even to you who know electricity gives a lot for your money?
- The idea that electricity is expensive is a mistaken one. Especially is this true when it is considered how small a part of the family income it consumes and how large a part it plays in the daily operation of the home.

TELEPHONES . . . and distance

The dream of telephoned conversation between all parts of the world has almost come true. There are now 168,000 miles of international telephone circuits which connect with almost all the land line telephones in the world, so that telephone conversation between the remotest part of South America and Northern Europe, between South Africa and Chicago, or any other point in North America, between San Francisco and Manila or Japan across the Pacific, in fact, between almost any two parts of the world, is not in only practical but is in almost daily use.

This telephone is one of those incredible marvels which we accept as commonplace because we have got used to the idea of talking with people at a distance. I can well remember the very first telephone and the skepticism with which Professor Bell's announcement that he could talk over a wire was received. Nobody believed that it could ever be true, no more than they believed that some of the other things which I have seen come true were possible, such as the electric light, the phonograph, the motion picture, and especially the airplane.

I'd like to come back in a hundred years and see the new miracles that our grandchildren will then be regarding as commonplace.

BIRTH a certificate

I had occasion the other day to apply for a passport to enable me to leave the United States and make a trip to Europe. But my first attempt was blocked when the passport bureau demanded proof that I was born in the United States. I was born long before any of the States required the registration of births.

I finally succeeded, by means of an affidavit from my sister and the presentation of an old family Bible in which my birth had been recorded, to convince the U. S. Department of State that I was a native citizen.

They told me at the passport office that only twenty-six states make registration of births compulsory, so that there is still a large proportion of native born citizens who have no means of proving, except by the testimony of relatives, that they were actually born here.

In Europe every citizen is required to carry his birth certificate and all other documents to prove his identity, nationality and occupation, whenever he travels even from one town to another or moves into a different house. That sort of supervision of the individual can easily be carried too far, but it seems to me that we don't carry it far enough in America.

MOVIES and Moe Mark

An old friend of mine named Moe Mark died the other day at the age of sixty. When I first knew Moe he was running a little nickleodeon in Buffalo, the kind of a show where you could put your eye up against a peep hole and see Mr. Edison's first attempt at motion pictures.

Pretty soon Moe Mark had a theatre showing the early primitive motion picture plays. Before long he had a number of theatres in different Up State New York towns. They weren't theatres really, they were merely stores with chairs in them.

Moe Mark got the idea that a real theatre built especially to run motion pictures would be profitable. He found it difficult to make anyone else believe it, but he finally raised money to build the very first theatre in the world for the movies. It is called the Strand and is on Broadway in New York.

Moe Mark was one of the real pioneers of the motion picture industry, and if anybody ever asks you who built the first movie theatre, of which there are some thirty thousand now, just remember his name.

Colossal Texas Cavern Is Opened

Deep down in the depths of the earth water fashioned a great cave at Burnet, Texas. It has been explored by Dr. Frank E. Nicholson, famous as the explorer of Carlsbad. Longhorn Cavern State Park was opened Thanksgiving day. Here are some excellent cave photos. Lower left is Dr. Nicholson and his wife, Peggy, sitting on the shores of a crystal clear underground lake. In the center Dr. Nicholson hangs on the ledge-like wall in an immense room. Three girls from Burnet and Marble Falls are shown in the cave at the right, while above is "Sam Bass' Footprint," a peculiar formation ten feet from toe to heel. This unusual photo was taken with a camera pointing straight up. A big four-day celebration, November 24 to 27, opened the cave, which is 50 miles northwest of Austin.

Farmers In Capitol City To Seek Federal Aid

More than 200 overalled dirt farmers rallied their forces at Washington Wednesday to seek aid from a congress in which Democratic leaders were preparing to launch President-Elect Roosevelt's farm relief principles.

Brought mostly in their own automobiles and sleeping in a tourist camp, the representatives of those who participated in the Iowa farmers' "strike" set as the goal of their farmers national relief conference a moratorium on agricultural debts and a cost-of-production price for crops.

How One Woman Lost 10 Lbs. in a Week

Mrs. Betty Luedke of Dayton writes: "I am using Kruschen to reduce weight—I lost 10 pounds in one week and cannot say too much to recommend it."

To take off fat easily, SAFELY and HARMLESSLY—take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast go lighter on fatty meats, potatoes, butter, cream and pastries—it is the safe way to lose unsightly fat and one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle. Get it at any drugstore in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the safest way to lose fat—money back.

But be sure and get Kruschen Salts—imitations are numerous and you must safeguard your health.

WILL ROGERS TO BE SEEN IN "DOWN TO EARTH" AT PALACE THEATRE HERE SATURDAY MIDNIGHT, SUNDAY, MONDAY

Will Roger's newest comedy, "Down to Earth," comes to the Palace Theatre Saturday Midnight, running through Sunday and Monday. It is said to focus all the brilliance that has made him the keenest and most quoted observer in the country today. While in a sense the picture is a continuation of Rogers' first talkie, "They Had To See Paris," its theme and locale are completely different.

The story opens with Rogers as Pike Peters, the Oklahoma millionaire, back home again with his family after their Paris jaunt. The stock market is shot to pieces, and Peters is greatly worried, but his wife has an insatiable desire for social honors and his son aids her in extravagant spending. The failure of a bank forces Peters to apply for a local loan, and, that failing as a result of Mrs. Peters' love of elegance and display, he goes to Chicago with the same result. How he gets his family down to earth again forms the basis of the situation.

"Down to Earth" is called the most important picture of Rogers' career. It was written by the author of "They Had to See Paris," Homer Croy, specially to fit the star's talents.

Irene Rich, who appeared as Rogers' wife in his first two talking pictures, again portrays the socially ambitious spouse who brings about most of his hilarious troubles. Matty Kemp, whose work on the first few days of the production won him a long-term contract, enacts the role of the irresponsible son, and Dorothy Jordan that of the boy's childhood sweetheart who steps aside in favor of her wealthy rival.

Theodore Lodi, the Grand Duke "Mike" of the earlier picture, recreates the role in this new film and Mary Carlisle plays the part of the spoiled "deb" who sets her cap for young Kemp. Clarence Wilson, Brandon Hurst, Louise Mackintosh and other noted character players are in the supporting cast. Edwin Burke wrote the screen play and dialogue from Croy's original story. David Butler directed the production for Fox Films.

In the first football game there were 25 men on a side. Six goals constituted a game. The ball had to be kicked—throwing or carrying was prohibited.

The play is a catchy, active comedy with dramatic climaxes at the end of each act. Judy is a little clodhopper from the poorhouse—a merry, trusting, innocent, mischievous little vamp. Her father deserted her years before, but is now a rich man in Texas. He writes to the scheming Mrs. Chiggerson Boggs, who was a family matron of the poorhouse, and asks her to locate Judy. Mrs. Boggs, knowing that Judy is an heiress determines to marry her to her son, George, a city dude.

The club girls will be assisted in presenting the play by three boys from the Senior class. The following is the cast for the play:

The shoulder fantasia in frocks worn at evening is the most pronounced feature of evening fashions seen at smart events during the first weeks of the new season. There was a white velvet frock with slashed skirt which had bands of white ermine, completed by tiny tails, framing the shoulder straps. Another was a ruby red velvet with strands of fabric forming shoulder straps and loose decorations.

The illustrated style in evening frock shown above is correct in all detail. It is a velvet frock and can be worn in black or in as gay color as desired. The shoulder bands with their overhanging bows attain the shoulder fantasia so much to be desired. The back drapes is correct, although some high ones are being worn. When high, the back is slit.

HEALTH IS AT YOUR OPEN WINDOW

Oxygen is necessary to breathing. Oxygen is taken from the air by a gas flame just the same as by any other kind of flame. Fresh air supplies oxygen.

So, for your health's sake, let a little fresh air in.

If you must have a fire to dress by, have it in another room. If you live in a small apartment and sleep in your living room, turn out the fire and raise the windows when you go to bed.

Water Heaters Without Flue Pipes Are A Menace

Many gas appliances, including some well-constructed room heaters, are safe to use without flue connection in WELL-VENTILATED rooms. However, it is advisable that all appliances using gas in considerable quantities should be connected with flues, for even the most efficient types may produce poisonous gas when the flame is first lighted.

If your water heater—or any other kind of a heater—is in the bath room, turn it out when you are ready for your bath. It requires approximately 10 cubic feet of air to supply sufficient oxygen to burn one cubic foot of gas—and there usually is little or no fresh air coming into the average bathroom.

Natural gas, when properly used, not only is efficient and economical, but it also is safe.

West Texas Gas Company places a higher value on the health, safety and good will of consumers than upon any revenue it might derive from gas that is not properly used.

Dahlia and Cannas Roots Should be Dug Up, Properly Stored

By Gen. W. Woodbury, Assoc. Prof. of Horticulture, Texas Technological College

When the first killing frosts have destroyed the tops of dahlias and cannas, the roots or fleshy underground parts should be dug and properly stored. This applies also to gladioli which have been out of bloom for some time, and the tops of which have died.

In general, all of this material requires a storage condition which is cool and relatively dry. If storage is too warm, evaporation takes place rapidly and the roots or bulbs will be damaged. The material, if kept too moist, will be damaged by rot organisms. A temperature of about 40 degrees F. is recommended. A dry cool cellar will serve the purpose, or an attic which is not too warm.

Dahlia roots should be dug carefully to avoid breaking the crowns. After the soil on them has dried sufficiently, it may be easily shaken off, and the roots are ready for storage. Some growers prefer to store them in dry sand boxes or barrels. This method reduces drying-out to a minimum, and will sometimes prevent growth while in storage. If one has a few choice roots, the following method may be used. The roots, after having been washed free of soil, are dipped in a pail about two-thirds full of water, over which is a layer of melted paraffin. The temperature of the water and the paraffin should be from 160 to 170 degrees F. Paraffin of a high melting point should be used. Immersion should be done quickly, or injury is likely to result. If the wax is too cool, too thick a layer will be formed, and the paraffin will crack off. A second dipping of the roots may be made if complete covering is not accomplished at first. This method may be used with equal success on cannas.

While some gardeners prefer to leave dahlias and cannas as well as gladioli in the ground over winter, this practice is not recommended. In the case of the dahlia, too early growth results the following season, bringing the plants into bloom at the hottest season of the year. It also results in too much growth from the undivided crown of the previous year. With the gladioli, there is danger of losing the mother bulb as well as the small bulbs which form at the base. The soil cannot be properly worked if the bulbs are to be left in the ground. Cannas soon spread out, become crowded and produce unsatisfactory growth if not dug up and the crowns divided.

4-H CLUB news

Karl and His Calf

Karl H. Kainz, a 14-year old farm boy, got a start in 4-H club work with a $16 Holstein calf which recently landed him the title of Iowa champion dairy calf club member. Now he is 20 years old and his 4-H training has raised him to the rank of one of the most capable young farmers and citizens in his community.

The story of Karl's experience should make any farm boy ashamed of himself who thinks he has no chance in the world. Karl had no more than a fair start in life. His grandparents gave him that. It was to take over the running of an 80-acre farm, or mortgage the farm and use the proceeds to get an education. Karl figured how he could save the money and also get the education he needed. That was by going in for a heavy 4-H program. It was the way he got the $16 calf.

The boy went in for all dairy projects he could—raising and fitting a calf, showing it, maturing it as a milk cow, and so on. In six years of persevering work he knew more about dairying and farming than it might have taken him a lifetime otherwise. And he had a barrel of fun with it, to say nothing of all the interesting experiences of going to the shows and camps and all that.

Today Karl has a herd of seven milk cows and the young stock which he has not sold. He proudly exhibits some 40 prizes he has won on the herd, including two championships. He also won the trophy offered for having the best Holstein heifer in Clayton county, his home. He was champion county showman.

He has held the leading offices of his local and county 4-H clubs, and helped to organize them. He is a director in the county Holstein breeders association and a member of the county farm bureau. He keeps accurate records on his cows, both feeding and yield, and some day the neighbors say he will be a great man in agriculture. And all from a $16 calf and plenty of pluck.

New Farm Contest Is Being Staged

Known as the Balanced Farm Contest, and replacing the master dairy farmer and pork production contests of recent years, the Amarillo News-Globe announces new competition for farmers in the Panhandle territory. The farm will be scored as a whole, but each contestant will select either dairy cows or hogs or beef cattle as his major operation. Every contestant must have other livestock, aside from his major project, to maintain the general farm balance. The contest began November 1 and closes August 31, 1933, with awards to be announced and $875 in cash and medals presented at the 1933 Tri-State Fair at Amarillo.

The Extension Service is cooperating through county agents and staff specialists. Seth Holman, farm editor of the News-Globe is in charge, and cooperating in a financial way are the Pinkney Packing Company, Amarillo; the Panhandle Hereford Breeders association; the Panhandle Swine Breeders association; and the Agricultural Department of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce.

The contest is open to farmers in the following counties: Dallam, Sherman, Hansford, Ochiltree, Lipscomb, Hartley, Moore, Hutchinson, Hemphill, Oldham, Potter, Gray, Wheeler, Deaf Smith, Armstrong, Donley, Colwell, Farmer, Swisher, Castro, Borden, dress, Hale and Floyd.

"Where Cleaning Is An Art"

There's "Up-and-At-Em" Action in every drop of Phillips 66

"HIGHEST TEST"
at the price of ordinary gasoline

No waiting! No delay! You get the fastest cold-weather starting you have ever had from your motor when you Phill-up with Phillips 66... the greater gasoline.

This super-volatile motor fuel snaps your engine into action the instant your toe touches the starter. That does away with the nuisance and damage of slow, hard starting in Winter. That saves your time, your temper, your battery, and your money.

High test is what does the trick. And Phillips 66 gravity right now ranges from

65.6° to 72.4°

Ask yourself if you have ever seen any other gasoline advertisement, except Phillips', which has definitely and unequivocally printed its gravity figures. Ask any gasoline expert you know if the Phillips figures are not exceptional. Ask any friend who uses Phillips 66 if he has not noticed amazing improvement in all round performance.

The answer to every one of these questions points to the outstanding superiority of Phillips 66. The obvious fact is that low gravity gasoline is lazy gasoline, and lazy gasoline is especially sluggish on days of freezing cold.

Phillips 66 is not only "highest test." It is the gasoline of CONTROLLED VOLATILITY. Every gallon you buy is always scientifically adjusted to your climate at the time you buy it. At every place, at any time, it is honest high test without a penny of higher price.

Why wait until your motor balks one of those stormy, snow-swept days? Get the truth about the starting speed of gasolines now. Discover for yourself the difference which high test actually makes in your motor.

Make this trial with your mind utterly unprejudiced. Forget all about our claims. Forget all about the claims made for any other gasoline. Then switch, for just one week, from your present motor fuel to Phillips 66.

If you aren't amazed and delighted with the improvement in motor performance, if you aren't astonished at the increase in cold-weather starting speed, if you are not pleased beyond words with this higher test gasoline that costs not a penny of higher price—then you are an out-and-out exception among 7,400,000 satisfied users of Phillips 66 gasoline.

Begin making this test tomorrow. Get your first trial tankful at the nearest Orange and Black 66 shield.
