Cultural Values

"Art is the shorthand of a nation's soul."

That definition, recently made by John Hay Whitney, president of New York's Museum of Modern Art, is worth thinking about, for today it is becoming more and more important for us to discover what really makes up the soul of this nation.

When we use the word 'American' to describe a way of life, it is difficult to give a clear-cut definition of just what we mean. But if we study our country's literature, its painting, and its music, we learn what 'American' means without the necessity of a dictionary-type definition.

Ever since this country was discovered artists have been putting the spirit of Americanism on canvas. For 200 years we have been building museums to preserve these picture definitions of Americanism.

During these days of world shaking action, a museum is apt to be regarded as a hideaway for scholars—a musty, lifeless institution to visit on tiptoe on a rainy afternoon. But when we view the war as a war that will make vast changes in civilization as we know it today, our lifeless appearing museums, our unexciting history-books, and our homey folk-songs become a raft in a storm-tossed sea—something definite that we can cling to and know that here is the thing that expresses the spirit of America—the thing we are preparing to defend.

We mustn't let the intangible soul of our nation be lost sight of in our concern over building the instruments necessary to preserve it.

Cosmetics and War

The common reference to cosmetics as "war paint" seems to apply more than those who coined the term ever suspected. For practically all of the cosmetics commonly used by women these days contain materials which are vital to defense production.

Lipsticks are housed in brass tubes which will be turned into cartridge shells; the color in lipstick is obtained by the use of chemicals which are needed for the manufacture of gas; permanent wave solutions use chemicals that are necessary for gunpowder—and so on right down the line on the cosmetic counter.

Scarcity of these items is not expected for some time, but, if the war continues for long, the products which women have so long associated with glamour and gaiety may be transformed into instruments of death.

In recent years many women have considered cosmetics a necessity. When a luxury tax on cosmetics was debated in congress a few years ago, women from all over the country protested that they are no longer a luxury—they are a necessity to modern women.

But it would be foolish for any woman to stock up on cosmetics which she considers important to her appearance. For use of cosmetics, to a large extent, is dictated by style—and if cosmetics become scarce style leaders will undoubtedly decree that "war paint" is out and plainness is fashionable.

To many men such a return to the past would offer an interesting opportunity to discover what some of their female companions really look like.

Morton Farmer Dies Suddenly

Last rites were conducted at Morton high school auditorium Thursday afternoon for 52-year-old C. A. Perry, farmer of near Morton who died Tuesday following a heart attack.

Perry was riding a tractor and listing land when he was stricken. He had just turned his machine around at a turn row and had failed to let down his plows when he toppled backward from the tractor catching one foot so that he was dragged 150 yards before the tractor engine was "killed".

He and his family moved to Cochran county the last day of 1934.

He is survived by his widow, a daughter, Mrs. Leslie Wood of Morton and two other daughters.

These Three Loves

by Louis Arthur Cunningham

CHAPTER V

Synopsis
 A lovely red-headed Gillian Meade with her uncle, Colonel An Meade, at Rydal House in Canada. Realizing that family fortunes are dwindling, she determines to accept Jonathan Hillyer, wealthy friend of her father, while she is his guest at a party on his luxurious estate. She meets Simon Killigrew, friend of Jaffry Clay, the young poet to whom Gillian was engaged. Killigrew accuses Gillian of having been responsible for Clay's death. This discovery, and at the very instant Jon Hillyer is proposing, she herself wavering in her resolution to marry him.

"There's one thing I must tell you, Gillian," said Jon at last, "the clasp of his arm: I thought this all out too. I've been cold and calculating in wanting to marry you. Oh, don't misunderstand me—I think you are splendid. There is no man I honor or admire more than you, except Anse. But I feel I'm less than honest if I didn't tell you the truth—that there's something in me—nothing of what the world calls love."

"But there can be," in spite of his wisdom, his vaunted sophistication, he was oddly disappointed. "What had he deluded himself with? He was more than twice as old as Gillian was not yet twenty."

anything in the world to help you. "I'm still thinking of love, Jon. Still wondering if one can really die for love. Oh, Jon, forgive me for talking this way! Forgive me and love me. I'm not afraid of your love, Jon."
 "You need never be afraid for it." With him the let-down feeling persisted. This moment had been nothing such as he had pictured.
 "We won't announce it tonight," he said. "Perhaps we won't announce it at all. We'll just go off one of these days soon, and be married."

der what it's all about."
 She had forgotten her make. It was her turn to be laughed at. She laughed too. She said, "Mr. Killigrew must have found us pretty dull. He left for his room with the plea that he had some novel manuscripts to read. Can you conceive of anything duller—even us?"
 "Oh, yes," Morton Ilsey, Gillian's partner, knew all about books and publishers.
 "Quite a coming man, Killigrew. He's published a few things that did quite well and I hear he's going right into it. Well, it's nice work, giving genius to the world. Genius has a hard time."

When Simon arrived, he joined Gillian and Moira.

"I'd like it to be that way." Her clasp tightened on Jon's arm. He smiled down at her. She said, "I don't think I've made you very happy, Jon. I'm sorry. I want you happy. I'd like it better than anything else in the world."
 But was it so? Wasn't it her own well-being, her own security, that mattered most? If she wanted to make him happy was she going the right way about it by marrying him when she did not love him?
 Simon Killigrew was not with the crowd in the living room. Some of them were playing bridge, some just talking. He was nowhere about. It came to Gillian with a query shock that his dark head was what she had looked for first. Not finding it she felt something that she hated to admit was disappointment. The room seemed empty somehow. She joined in a game of bridge, but had to fight to keep track of the cards.

"Genius," said the Hon. Moira, "always gives me the idea that what it needs is a kick in the pants."
 Morton looked shocked. He bid three no-trumps offhand and knew he had overdone it.
 Moira doubled him promptly. Smug little caterpillar. A lot he knew of geniuses. Ask Gillian Meade—she could give you the real low-down on the tribe. Hadn't she been wild about the crazy-eyed, gin-swaggering poet, Jaffry Clay, who had gone to Valhalla, or wherever poets go, leaving behind a romantic impression that he had deliberately done himself in love for Gillian, because Gillian would have nothing to do with him? And she thought, well it was only after she turned him down that he started to drink it all up. Maybe there is something in the yarn. Saner men than Clay might have a bust-up over that face and figure. I hope she is good to Jon. If she isn't, I'll break her neck. Oh—oh, here comes the dark and brooding one out of seclusion—
 "Oh, Mr. Killigrew! She was watching Gillian as she called and saw sudden twitching of red lips, an uneasy movement of slender golden shoulders. Simon Killigrew came and stood between her and Moira. To Moira's question, "Were the novels too dull?" he answered, "Dull enough."
 "More fun out here, I should think." Moira smiled up at him and across at Gillian. "Tell Gillian Meade how to play her cards. She has Morton all upset."
 "Miss Meade?" Simon's voice had an edge. "Oh, I couldn't advise. I know little about bridge. Anyway I should think she knows how to play her cards."
 Gillian's eyes darkened. She stiffened in her chair, but did not look at him.
 Moira was not too pleased with her handiwork. There was no great malice in her. "Well, if you can't be any help that way," she said, "tell us something of the great books you're going to publish. Morton Ilsey here tells us you're playing big brother to genius."
 "Only when it needs a big brother, Miss Canavan. And I can't always be on hand to play the part. Genius is so much the small boy you've likened it to—trusting quick to give its loyalty and its love, gullible. But it's not tough, and when it is first petted, then kicked aside because, perhaps, it's poor—"

She saw two of the players exchange sly, knowing glances when she forgot it was her turn to bid and had to be reminded. They thought she was looking for Jon. Expectantly, when she and Jon returned from the lake all of these curious eyes had gazed at them.
 "You're not with us, Gillian—at least, not in spirit," said Moira Canavan sweetly—the Hon. Moira who had the best seat on a horse of any woman in Quebec Province, who had wanted Jon Hillyer herself and wanted him very much. For himself, too—since she had a great fortune of her own. "Well, I for one can't blame you."

The game went on. Moira, she was dummy, had leisure to speculate on Gillian, on what made her forget the game. One by one she eliminated the men in the room: Pender and Sutton and Royce were middle-aged and married—and had their wives with them; Saravin played a cello and Morton Ilsey was the worst bore in the Province; Sir Gates Eyston might do, only for the fact that he'd been trying to flirt with her since she came in and she hadn't even seen him.

Simon Killigrew! Moira, when it flashed on her, almost dropped her cards. She whistled noiselessly. She had it now! Simon and she had been talking before Jon and Gillian returned, and he, too, had been watching for someone, looking every now and then at the door and into his eyes would come a stormy, brooding look. Certainly, mused Moira, it isn't love on his part—if I'm any judge. I wonder what it's all about."

 She had forgotten her make. It was her turn to be laughed at. She laughed too. She said, "Mr. Killigrew must have found us pretty dull. He left for his room with the plea that he had some novel manuscripts to read. Can you conceive of anything duller—even us?"

Gillian's cards dropped from her hand and fluttered to the table, to the floor. She half rose from her chair. Her cheeks were chalky white. She saw Jon, who had come in from the billiard room, stop and stare at her. Moira took her arm and forced her to sit down. Ilsey and Sutton, the other man, busied themselves with picking up the cards.
 "I think we've had enough bridge," said Moira. "Let's call it a day." She whispered to Gillian. "Are you all right, my dear?"
 The blue eyes were wide and angry. "Mach you care if I am! You called him here to—to—he stood up abruptly and hurried out on to the porch, grateful for the coolness, the stillness, the kindness of the night.

 Jon Hillyer came presently and stood beside her. She knew he was troubled. She had seen the amazed look the bewilderment in his eyes when she was getting up from the card table.
 "Gillian!" Jon put his hand on her shoulder and gently made her turn to him. "Tell me what's the matter. Something that happened in there has upset you terribly. Wasn't there something at the card game about Jaffry Clay—some allusion to genius. Didn't Killigrew tell them some stuff and wasn't it that which upset you?"
 "Yes," Gillian's voice was quite remote. "If you must know, it was that."
 "Perhaps I can keep him from talking that way. I most certainly can."
 She shook her head. "You couldn't—couldn't make him stop thinking like that. He—Simon Killigrew is down on me because he blames me for what happened to Jaffry. He believes what everyone else believes, and Jaffry was his friend. But it hurts me."
 "And does it matter so much what he says? Or thinks? Or does?"
 She knew it did, that it mattered more. "I won't talk about it any more. He knows what he is about. He'll let things take their course."
 The next day, Sunday, was one of Autumn's loveliest. Gillian went riding with Jon. They rode down green, leafy tunnels where the maples were turning scarlet and the willows gold and the water in the lakes and ponds they passed had the still and dormant look that belongs to the Fall. She felt happy now, all doubt thrust aside.
 Jon smiled at her as they walked up the steps to the lodge. It had been a good day for him too. He felt sure of life, sure of love.
 He thought of the ring he would buy for her—a great emerald he had seen a few days before. Its green fire would go with her hair—flashing green and deep gold. He thought of the lovely things for which she was starved and his heart was warm at the knowledge that he could give her all of them. Then he saw young Killigrew sitting alone in a corner of the piazza, a sheaf of manuscript on his knee, a straight-stemmed briar in his mouth, and all the unpleasantness of last night came back to him. He saw Gillian look too and then turn away, and some of the sunshine had gone from her eyes.
 "Let us forget those old things," he said, stopping her on the threshold. "Let's put them away, Gillian, forever."

She said:
 "I have forgotten much of the bitterness. So many of the old, dark things forgot."
 And she smiled up at him, but even then remembered that the lines she had quoted were written by Jaffry Clay.
 Most of the company stayed over on Monday to go to the fair at St. Cloud, which had begun to attract thousands of visitors from the country round about. Simon Killigrew said he would visit the fair for an hour or so to see Jon's horses shown, but that he must leave then for Montreal.
 Gillian saw Simon Killigrew watching the merry-go-round, perhaps thinking of other fairs, of a young girl beside him. She felt an ache, a wistful yearning in her heart. He looked so lonely there, and so young and so lost—and still so stubborn.

 "Don't forget," said Jon, "you're to show that bay, Hero, for me. What-ho! Here's Landry looking for me."

DAILEY BROS. CIRCUS COMES TO LITTLEFIELD THURSDAY, MAY 1

After a lapse of several years, Littlefield is to be entertained by a great circus. Dailey Bros. circus has the title of the attraction, the date is Thursday, May 1, and the sponsors will be the American Legion.

Dailey Bros. circus is modest and does not boast of its magnitude, but it does that its performance which is put on afternoon and night in two rings is exceptionally high class and very different from the ordinary circus. Their motto is "quality rather than quantity." A second motto of the circus is "never before so good for so little."

On account of the wars in Europe, practically all of the arena of that continent has fled to America. Then the reduced number of shows in this country has led a lot of the very best talent to be at liberty. The Dailey Bros. circus signed the cream of the circus world on a salary basis which enables the show to produce an extraordinary performance for popular prices within the reach of all.

The circus is the one amusement enterprise that appeals to all ages of people, all sorts and conditions of folks rub elbows under the big top. As long as the circus business is controlled by managers as Dailey Bros., and in a high class, meritorious program is offered to the public, the circus will still be popular and a joy for the public.

The Dailey Bros. circus does not parade. It puts on its exhibition in two rings and on the rodeo track. The program consists of an unusual variety of novelties and sensations than is found with the average show, including many feature acts never seen in Texas before.

"Build-Up" Relief Explained to Women

A simple method has saved many women a lot of suffering! It is based on the fact that headaches, nervousness, cramp-like pain and other often symptoms of functional menorrhoea due to malnutrition. Help for this condition so often follows the use of CARDUI, because it usually increases the appetite and the flow of gastric juices; it aids digestion and helps build up physical resistance. Usual result is periodic distress.

Many who take CARDUI a few days before and during "the time" have found this helps ease periodic discomfort. Women have used CARDUI for more than 50 years!

Sugar Beet Allotment Is Asked Near Anton

C. C. Morgan, a well-known irrigation farmer; of near Anton, has made application to the state sugar beet committee of the AAA for five acres for sugar beet plantings.

Last year there were a number of farmers who planted beets. Among them was R. O. Mayes, who later was forced because of illness to give up most of his irrigation work. Several other farmers who had planned to plant beets decided to plant Irish potatoes instead.

There are approximately 100 wells in the Anton section. Most of the wells irrigate from five to ten acres of alfalfa.

Three acres of Irish potatoes for seed have been shipped to Anton. More may be ordered. The seed potatoes so far are for early planting. An additional late planting acreage will be planted in mid-summer, about July, for harvesting in the early fall.

Leader Offers Enlarged Service To Advertisers

More Circulation Increases Pulling Strength of Ads

Leader Plans Enlarged Program In Interests of Readers, Advertisers

With such a large number of new subscriptions to place on the Leader's mailing list, and with so many renewal subscriptions to bring up to date, the amount of work involved is immense. The new subscriptions are being placed on the mailing lists as rapidly as possible and all dispatch is being exercised to have the renewal subscriptions entered on the lists at the earliest possible date. We apologize for any delay that may occur and assure old and new subscribers that they will receive the Leader for the full time for which they subscribed.

Contests Awards Announced

The Leader deeply appreciates the zeal and enthusiasm with which the contestants entered into the campaign, and in behalf of the contestants, the management and personnel of this newspaper, we wish to thank all who gave subscriptions, or who in any way assisted in making the entire campaign such an outstanding success.

Mrs. G. W. Falls, Littlefield, with a total of 42,561,000 votes carried away the grand prize of $500 in cash.

Mrs. H. W. Wiseman, Littlefield, was in second place with 29,084,000 votes, and was awarded $250 in cash.

Mrs. Dock King, Littlefield, obtained 26,232,000 votes, and was awarded a cash prize of $100.

Fourth prize went to Miss Valeria Jungman of Pep, who entered the contest after it had been in progress for several weeks, but who received 8,099,000 votes. She received a cash award of $50.

The other contestants in the campaign also made outstanding showing and pleasing showings, and the Lamb County Leader is deeply grateful for the splendid service they rendered.

The contestants and the Lamb County Leader also wish to thank the judges who audited the votes received. The judges were Rev. Roy Shahan, pastor of the First Baptist church, Littlefield; Rev. J. H. Sharp, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Littlefield, and J. C. Elms, Littlefield banker.

Enlarged Service For Advertisers

One of the special features of the campaign was the fact that, with few exceptions, the new and renewal subscriptions were received from residents of Lamb county and the Littlefield trade territory. When we say "desirable" we are not unappreciative of the friendship for the Leader which has been so frequently expressed in numerous ways by non-residents of this section, some of whom have never lived among us, but are much interested in everything that takes place in this favored section of the Great South Plains.

The Lamb County Leader has always enjoyed the leading position in Lamb county and the Littlefield trade territory in service to the readers and advertisers. The additional circulation, as a result of the campaign which has just closed, is a further guarantee to advertisers that no other newspaper can render as effective service in bringing their messages to the personal attention of the residents of this section of our state.

THE LAMB COUNTY LEADER IS MOVING FORWARD INTO AN ENLARGED PROGRAM OF INCREASINGLY EFFECTIVE SERVICE TO OUR READERS AND ADVERTISERS.

Come And See Us—

Mr. Carter, we're sincerely hoping you'll accept Superintendent Hemphill's invitation. We know you have visited Lubbock many times, and Lubbock is "the Hub of the Plains," but, please, remember, Littlefield is the "Pulse of the Plains," and you haven't seen West Texas until you visit this section.

In this county you'll see some of those purebred whiteface herds that help to make the Fat Stock Show a success every year in your own home town.

We'll admit that Fort Worth is "Where the West Begins", but Littlefield might be called the center of the West... for the handclasp is just a little firmer, and the friendships a little stronger in Lamb county.

"The Pulse of the Plains" means that Littlefield is in the center of one of the best agricultural districts in Texas.

We know you will like it here!

Soil conservation work could be continued in this area, if the local camp is located in the Cochran county town, he said.

The site selected at Morton for a camp is located not far from the Morton ball park, one block east of the Morton-Muleshoe highway.

The camp at Floydada will be located in the northwest part of the town.

Rumors that an Army camp will be located in Littlefield are still unconfirmed, and a check-up of all sources of information fail to disclose that any official announcement has been made that the government contemplates a camp for Littlefield or Lamb County.

"The Devil and Miss Jones" To Be Shown At Ritz Theatre

"The Devil and Miss Jones" will be presented at the Ritz Theatre Saturday midnight, continuing through Sunday and Monday.

This show plots itself around the efforts of the world's richest man (Charles Coburn) to learn the identity of humble shoe clerks who have hanged him in effigy in front of his own department store. Toward this end he goes to work as a shoe clerk, becomes a member of the store's labor union and a sympathizer with the plight of the regimented workers. A bachelor, he even finds romance with one of his lowly employees. Jean Arthur is cast as a pretty clerk who befriends him and finally marries Robert Cummings, hot headed labor organizer of the store.

"The Flame of New Orleans" To Come Here This Week End

"The Flame of New Orleans" Brings Marlene Dietrich to the screen at the Palace Theatre Saturday midnight, Sunday and Monday, as a continental adventuress, who impersonates a European nobleman, which brings about complications, when she tries to inveigle a wealthy bachelor into marrying her, when she falls in love with another man. Many laughs are in it with an ending that is a scream. Others in the cast are Bruce Cabot, Roland Young, Mischa Auer, Andy Devine, and Laura Hope Crews.

Lamb county peanut farmers will vote on Saturday, April 26, in a referendum to determine whether they will market their 1941 crop under marketing quotas, according to W. E. Bentley, chairman of the county AAA committee for peanuts.

Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard, proclaimed marketing quotas for peanuts this week after Congress had provided for such action in a recent amendment to the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938. If approved by two-thirds of the farmers voting in the county referendum, quotas will be in effect for three years.

The national marketing quota is the amount of peanuts which will be harvested from the national acreage allotment, set by law at 1,610,000 acres. This is the same as the 1940 peanut allotment under the agricultural conservation program, which will be continued in 1941. Under the quota, a farmer who plants within his peanut acreage allotment may market all he produces without penalty. Peanuts marketed in excess of the farm marketing quota are subject to a penalty of three cents per lb. However, payment of the penalty is not required if the excess peanuts are delivered to an agency designated for handling excess peanuts. In this case, the farmer receives for his excess peanuts the price for oil, which usually is considerably lower than the market price for edible peanuts.

Only those peanuts which are picked and threshed by mechanical means are subject to marketing quotas. This means that peanuts hocked off or dug for hay do not come under quotas. Also, quotas do not apply to farms on which the measured peanut acreage is one acre or less.

The Act requires that if quotas are not approved in the referendum, no peanut loan or diversion program can be offered on the 1941 crop. If quotas are approved in the referendum, farmers are assured of a loan or diversion program, or both, as a means of protecting peanut prices. The loan rate would be between 50 and 75 percent of parity.

A preliminary report gives the 1940 peanut acreage picked and threshed by mechanical means as 1,907,000 acres, from which the production was 1,611,634,000 lbs. In 1935 this acreage was 1,473,000 and the production was 1,147,225,000 pounds.

Tenant Farmers Can Purchase Farms Through FSA Program

Applications are again open to all those tenant farmers and farm laborers who wish to apply for farms under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenancy Act. Fred L. Nix, county RR supervisor for the Farm Security Administration, announced this week.

The Farm Tenancy program provides for the purchase of family-sized farms under a forty-year payment plan with interest at 4 percent. Anyone is eligible to apply if he has formerly or is now deriving his living from farming. No landowners are eligible to make application.

For further details, persons interested in this program should call at the Farm Security office in the City Hall at Littlefield.

Judge G. E. Christian Dies At Austin

Judge George E. Christian, 53-year-old commissioner of the state Court of Criminal Appeals, died Tuesday night, April 15 in a hospital at Austin, where he had been taken after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage during a court conference that morning.

No Clothespin on this Car's Nose!

Buick SPECIAL 6-passenger Sedanet, $1006. White sidewall tires extra*

WOULDN'T a sprinter or a long-distance runner look silly trying to race with a clothespin firmly clamped on his nose!

Yet, in a sense, something fairly close to that happens in nearly every car that lacks Buick's sensational Compound Carburetion.†

For your engine has to breathe in huge quantities of air to be mixed with gasoline before it is burned in the cylinders. But single-carburetor fuel supply systems can handle only a given volume of air.

To that extent, then, an ordinary engine has a clothespin on its nose — a limitation on air supply for big power operation.

†Optional equipment on the Buick SPECIAL, standard on all other models.

We remove that clothespin very simply — by having two carburetors; one that handles all casual driving smoothly and efficiently, another to jump in with more air and more fuel when you call for extra power by stepping on the gas treadle!

Simple? Very simple indeed.

And simply marvellous in the extra FIREBALL wallop it gives you and in the gas savings you get — as much as 10% to 15% over previous Buicks with the same-size engines.

Maybe you'd better go see your Buick dealer now.

Local Theatre To Present Girl Graduates On Screen

High school girl graduates from schools in Lamb county and surrounding territory are having their pictures made in motion picture which will portray them in their beautiful evening gowns they have chosen for their festive evening occasions of graduation.

The pictures are being made by W. J. Chesher of the Palace and Ritz Theatres, and plans are that the films will be shown on the screen at the Palace at an early date.

Ware's Department store have made arrangements for the pictures to be taken of the schools, the various classes, the faculty, the football team, and other details of school life.

Mr. Chesher announced this week that the two nights the films will be shown on the screen, the girls from the schools will appear on the stage in person.

This is the first time this endeavor has ever been planned by the local theatre and Ware's for the many schools in this section, and without a doubt, the showing of this film will attract large crowds who go to see their daughters, relatives and friends "in the movies".

Makes $913.56 From 156 Ewes

Some few months ago L. C. Grissom bought 156 ewes that lambed after he purchased them. The total cost of these ewes was $1123.20. He sheared the 156 ewes and they produced 1248 lbs. of wool which brought a net $411.84. He has 150 lambs that have an average weight of 45 lbs. each. The market value of these 150 lambs is $675.00. The wool clip of the ewes and the market value of the lambs totals: $1064.84. Deducting feed cost to date of $150.00 gives Mr. Grissom $936.84 from products of the 156 ewes. Deducting this amount from the original cost of the ewes, $1123.20, makes the actual out-of-pocket cost of the 156 ewes to Mr. Grissom $186.44. Now let us assume the market value of the original 156 ewes to be worth now $1100.00. This gives Mr. Grissom $913.56 profit over feed cost of this deal, assuming that he did sell the 156 ewes at the present market prices. However, Mr. Grissom intends to keep the ewes for future wool and lamb production, and keep the present 150 lambs and market them when they average a weight of 75 lbs. This will gross him $1,125 instead of $675 for the lambs. Taint bad income for full time, let alone at being a sideline!

Schools In Texas Officially Adopt 12-Year Program

Supt. F. A. Hemphill received an official notice from L. A. Woods, state school superintendent, Monday that schools in Texas will definitely adopt the 12-year program.

The notice is as follows: "To County and Local School Superintendents:

"Since a recent survey by the State Department of Education shows that the schools of this state are changing to the twelve-grade system in ever increasing numbers; and

"Since at a state-wide meeting of superintendents in the City of Temple on April 10, the twelve-grade system was endorsed by an overwhelming majority; and

"Since we believe that this type of organization is for the best interest of the school children of Texas; and

"Since we can no longer operate efficiently and effectively a system of schools in which there exists two distinct types of organization; and

"Since the State Board of Education has officially recognized the Twelve-Grade System by adopting textbooks for that type of organization.

"I hereby officially announce that the recognized pattern for Texas public schools is an elementary school of eight grades, followed by the standard four-year high school. May I ask you to work with your school boards in putting this plan into execution in your respective districts as soon as possible?

"This pattern may be changed to a six-grade elementary school, a three-year junior high school, and a three-year senior high school for those who desire the junior high school unit.

"Suggestive plans of procedure are attached hereto.

"Signed, L. A. WOODS."

As a result of an automobile accident on the highway between Post and Claremont about 7:30 o'clock Friday night, Mrs. Mattie Sewell suffered severe bruises and lacerations on her head, and several broken ribs, and is being treated in the Littlefield hospital.

Mrs. Lloyd Sewell, driver of the car, and son, Walter, and Mrs. D. H. Montgomery and son and daughter, Barbara and Emilee, suffered minor cuts and bruises.

The accident is said to have been caused by the steering gear locking, with the result that Mrs. Sewell lost control of the car. The light sedan was demolished after turning over three times.

The AMA's committee on medical preparedness will aid in selecting the volunteers and pass on their qualifications. The division of medical sciences of the National Research council has established a special subcommittee on medical personnel for Britain.

Arrest Man In Alabama On Attempt Murder Charge

Sheriff and Mrs. Sam Hutson Sid Hopping, deputy sheriff, at Florence, Ala., last week arrested James Lee Harben, who is charged with assault and attempt murder.

Harben is alleged to have attacked Jim Hutto of Lubbock, at the home of a local garage last fall. A $1,500 bond was set at 11:00 a.m. Saturday morning in Justice Court by J. Farquhar, local Justice of Peace.

Harben is still being held in the district jail in lieu of bond, and a trial will be held in district court in August.

Olton 4-H Club Makes Nice Profit On Calves

The records kept by Herman of the Olton 4-H Club shows he made a rather nice profit of $83.80 on one of the calves he sold this past winter. The calf was fed strictly on dry lot and no cow was used as is the usual practice when this quality calves are raised. The calf dressed out 2 percent of its live weight, which is an excellent yield for any calf. It was the first time in the county that a dry lot calf has won the Grand Champion of the Rock Pat Stock Show.

It might be encouraging to other producers to note that the total expense on the calf, including the purchase price, was only $78.35.

Lamb County Boys Ship Cattle Friday

Lamb County 4-H Club boys are practicing the art of commercial feeding as well as how to handle cattle for show purposes, says Duke, assistant county agent.

Several 4-H Club boys shipped calves to Kansas City last Saturday after the Plainview show. The calves showing at this show are dry lot calves and fed for commercial purposes only. The calves sold on the open market Saturday and brought a highly satisfactory price to the young feeders.

Some of the boys chartered a bus to follow their calves to market to learn more of the details of marketing livestock and to find out just what the packers want and pay the best price for.

The value this enterprise very much from an educational standpoint, said Mr. Duke, "because it is nothing artificial or subsidiary about this method of producing and selling livestock as may be seen by the fact that the calves are sold through the auction ring at the shows."

Robison's Furniture Moves To Tremain Building Tuesday

Robison's New and Used Furniture Store moved Tuesday from the Chesher building on Phelps Avenue to the Tremain building, across from the Hewitt Chevrolet Company, the former location of Watson's Bowling Alley.

This business is operated by O. N. and Earl Robison.

In an interview with Mr. Robison, Sr., Tuesday, he stated that they make the change in order to avail themselves of much more space in which to display their new and used furniture, and the Montgomery Ward refrigerator for which they are dealers. He also said they hoped to add a much larger line of Montgomery Ward products, including tires and furniture.

IN APPRECIATION

For the many lovely courtesies and the interest which was manifested in my behalf in the recent contest, I wish to express my sincere appreciation.

It has been a real pleasure to contact again old friends and to make new ones. . . not only did local friends aid in my success, but many nice responses came from friends who were former residents of Littlefield. Subscriptions for the Lamb County Leader were sent to me from many localities in our own state and from some of the other states, as, New Mexico, Kansas, Pennsylvania, and California, and to each and all of you I wish to extend my grateful thanks.

The biggest business in the world, is that of making friends, and no investment in the state, pays greater dividends.

For life is more than stocks and bonds, and love is more than dollars and cents, and he who gives a scorn or smile Shall reap as he has sown.

—Anne Louise Wiseman.

Olton Upsets Muleshoe And Amarillo To Win Region One Track Title At Conyon

Olton's Mustangs, who had yielded first place honors in the district to Muleshoe recently at Lubbock, won the Region 1 track and field championship Saturday at Canyon, upsetting the Muleshoe team and the highly favored Amarillo Sandies.

The plucky Mustangs went to the last event tied with Muleshoe, 19 points each, and a point and a half behind Amarillo, needing just a third place to win the meet. They weren't conceded a chance to get that needed third place, because in district competition they had placed no higher than that.

But the Mustangs went through to win the third, just behind Booker and Floydada, and capture the meet by a half-point margin, 21 points to 20 1-2 for Amarillo and 19 for Muleshoe.

Willard Hedges, star weight and field man for the Mustangs, captured high point honors with 14.

The Lubbock district won every place in the 120-yard high hurdles, with Milner Thorne of Lubbock first, Chowning of Floydada second, Standifer of Muleshoe third and Blythe of Olton fourth.

Come And See Us, Amon G.!

Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and illustrious member of the Fourth Estate you are enthusiastically, cordially and spontaneously invited to visit Littlefield.

The above paragraph is in the nature of seconding the invitation of Superintendent F. A. Hemphill to Mr. Carter to address the graduating class of the Littlefield high school.

When Mr. Hemphill started thinking about inviting someone to address this year's graduating class he remembered the story told about a man from West Texas who sat in Mr. Carter's office recently and asked the prominent publisher why he didn't visit West Texas.

As far as we know, Mr. Hemphill is the first to invite Mr. Carter to visit Littlefield.

Littlefield Will Lose CCC Project Within 60 Days

Local Camp Likely To Be Moved To Morton; Floyd Co. To Get One

Morton and Floydada have been selected as the sites for CCC camps by officials of the war department, and camps at Littlefield and Lamesa will be moved to those towns sometime before the end of the fiscal year, or June 30, Capt. Fred A. Cooley, of Lubbock, sub-district commander, reported Wednesday.

Definite plans have not been made, according to Capt. Cooley, as to whether the Littlefield camp will be moved to Morton or Floydada, but it will be moved to one of these towns.

Littlefield and Lamesa are losing these camps because citizens in this section failed to vote for soil conservation districts in 1939, it is reported.

Cochran and Floyd counties voted districts last year.

That the camp would be moved from Littlefield has been rumored for some time.

Local Camp To Morton

Capt. Cooley stated that in all probability the local camp will be moved to Morton, because of the short distance necessitated for the (Continued On Back Page) curity office in Littlefield. Any applications filed during 1939 or 1940, although not chosen to purchase farms, will not be considered. It is necessary to place a new application each year under the provisions governing this program.
