Good Turnout Expected For Saturday's Election

Voters of Littlefield Independent School District will go to the polls Saturday to decide on three candidates running for two positions on the district's board of trustees.

Seeking re-election on the board are Pat Downs, board president, and Jack Barton. Pete Trevino is the third candidate in the at-large election.

Site of the election will be the Littlefield Junior High School library, and polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Mrs. Otha Smith will be election judge, and clerks will be Mrs. Bill Jeffries and Mrs. Harold Clement.

Voting also will take place at the same location for the Running for Precinct 3 position is H. L. Woody of Little-field, while Albert Lockwood of Littlefield is running for an at-large seat on the county board. Interest in the local school

In filing for re-election, Barton said:

"I justify my filing for another term because I think it takes at least two or three years to get acquainted with the problems of the school district. I feel that I would be of better service now than I have been in the past."

"Of course, the board hasn't solved all its problems, and we don't have a perfect school system. But we certainly have worked in that direction," he

Barton has lived in Little field the past eight years.

How Much Smoking Goes On In County?

What changes have Lamb County residents made in their smoking habits since the government ordered cigarette manufacturers to put warning labels on each package?

Practically none, according to the latest statistics on cigarette smoking in the area. The warning, which reads: "Caution: cigarette smoking may be hazardous to your hea-lth," has been almost completely ignored. Many people, in fact, have never noticed that there is such a statement on their cigarette packages.

Mrs. Aten then called upon Mrs. Joyce Oliver, school nurse, to give a report on the health and welfare committee which helped with the visual screening of the first grade students. Volunteers were acquired by the chairmen, Mrs. W.T. Mackey and Mrs. Billy Tom Grant. These volunteers did a fine job screening the students, reported Mrs. Oliver. The president then appointed a committee of three as an auditing committee. They were H.C. Hoover, chairman, Mrs. Edwin Coffman and Mrs. Pat Donnelly.

The nominating committee chairman, Mrs. Bobby Rogers, presented the names in nomination for next years of-ficers. The president then asked for nominations from the floor. When there were no other names nominated the group voted upon the officers suggested by the committee. Officers elected for the next year are, Mrs. Troy Traugott, vice president; Mrs. Rhea Bradley, secretary; and Mrs. Buddy Bruton as treasu-rer. These officers will be installed during the may meeting.

It was then announced that school would be dismissed Wednesday at 3 p.m. in all grades for the spring vacation. Classes re-

Is there a difference in milk? You bet there is!

The best milk is the one that's best for your family. It's the one that will taste best to your children and give them the best possible

Every milk has to meet certain standards. So, how do you tell which milk is best?

The surest way is to buy milk that has built a reputation for consistently good quality through more careful, more expensive handling and

This is exactly what The Borden Company has been doing for over a hundred years. Borden's Milk is always better than it has to be!

Quality controls for Borden's Milk begin with the dairy farm and continue until the milk reaches you. In all, 23 separate tests are made for freshness, purity and flavor.

Government standards? Borden's exceeds them by putting almost 2 full cups of cream in every half-gallon carton to give your family a bonus in good taste and nourishment.

There are differences in milk just like a lot of other products . . . some less expensive . . . some without the rigid, high standards of quality which Borden's has.

Milk is too important for any kind of economy with your family. We think you'll agree that your children deserve the best.

Gold Mine

By Amy Turner

AFTER A QUICK look around my yard this week, I have come to the conclusion that we are really missing the boat on tourist and industry possibilities.

We have certainly overlooked a gold mine right in our own back yard....front yard, too, for that matter...and, if there's one thing we can really grow around here it's dandelions.

A few summers ago, The Publisher and I decided to get away for a weekend and run up to the mountains and I will never forget a lovely mountain ranch we visited while

One of the most impressive things was the front yard of the main ranch house ..... a solid sea of gold blossoms.

On closer inspection, I discovered that they were none other than my old adversary, the dandelion. Now this was quite a shock to me since I've been doing battle with them for years and I've never been quite the same after this discovery.

IT SEEMS like the sensible thing to do is quite fighting the beasts...you can't win, anyway ... and encourage them, instead.

Of course, the really nice thing is that it wouldn't take much encouragement since these little bits of gold form their ownfertile seeds and don't even need to be pollinated.

So, it just figures, that with very little effort, we could become the dandelion capital of the world. People would probably drive from miles around to see our solid floral yards. Littlefield might even become a flat San Francisco and all the businessmen could wear dandelions in their lapels.

And if we wanted to go in for the "biggest or grandest" idea, well, I've got a few right here in my yard that would give some good

WE NEEDEN'T stop there, however, be-cause this little jewel fosters all sorts of interesting ideas.

I have heard that people eat them and that's not a bad idea considering my grocery bill last week.

I figure my family of five could exist for a month on the present crop alone and when you consider how fast they multiply.....

Then there are the commercial possibilities. All the local restaurants could specialize in home-grown dandelion salads or, the real feature of the house, dandelions with Littlefield sauce.....from a secret recipe, of

I've heard, too, that wine can be made from the flowers and you can see where this might lead.....a little Italy with people all over the world clamoring for Littlefield wine, French chefs refusing to cook without it.

THE MORE I think about it, I believe I'll go out and have another look around the yard, because I surely wouldn't want anyone to make off with any of mine.

If there's going to be any big business around, I certainly don't want to miss out and, besides, I'm a firm believer in promot-

Actually, it's probably my duty as a citizen to protect what might be a future industry. So, the next time you look over at your neighbor's yard and start to complain about all those little gold blossoms, just remember: He's only being civic-minded, after all.

Avoid False Identity

One of the greatest deterents to effective, satisfactory living is in our false identifications, our failures to see things for what they really are, failures to recognize and appreciate our blessings. If we don't know when we are well off, we will let the good days go by without knowing the joy and happiness that we could have. False identity can distort the whole of one's life, but such a fate is not inevitable. It is caused by accepting faulty and inferior standards, but none of us need accept

Everything we know teaches us that in order to give the most to life, and receive the most from life, it is essential that we learn to make true identifications. This should be one of our most important concerns in our living experience. There is so much to gain by seeing everything in the true light, and so much to lose by false identifications. If we don't learn to form the true perspective, we will make serious mistakes in our evaluations and our sense of values.

We often hear people admit that their diffi-culties are the result of false identities made on the basis of false standards. This is failure to see things as they actually are. Most of us, to some extent, make this mistake. This is, therefore, one area in which all of us must be diligent to keep mistakes to a minimum. Since all of us are fallible, all of us will make some errors in deciding what is important and what should be discarded. We can, however, learn, we can make improve-ments, and we can establish a sound and meaningful life. Our problem is often made more difficult because many things appear to be something they are not, but we can learn to make the necessary differentiations. Many happenings in our world are designed to deceive us, to affect us so we cannot see things as they really are. Even so, we can learn to properly identify everything with which we are concerned. We can learn to separate the good from the bad, the right from the wrong, the true from the false.

If we permit ourselves to see good things as bad things, or to see bad things as good things, we are going to suffer many critical losses. Some people go so far as to give good-sounding names to that which is essentially bad, and bad-sounding names to that which is admittedly good. This practice makes the problem of proper identification difficult, but certainly not impossible. Diligent effort by us will be very well rewarded.

We can see all around us the unhappy and undesirable results of false identities. There is confusion, frustration, skepticism and discouragement. Inspiration gives us the follow-Woe to those who call evil good and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter." Nothing but human loss and suffering can come from such actions. Therefore, we must seek and maintain the most desirable standards of conduct so we can avoid this horrible distortion of life.

Life, made up of false identifications, will be false in both its present and its ultimate situations; but true evalutations will make life

CAPITOL COMMENTS

One Man, One Vote By Larry Fuhrmann

Our State Capitol Correspondent

Reapportionment according to a hypotheses of "one man, one vote," though it rubs many a lawmaker the wrong way, is in agreement with principles of equal apportionment assumed by the framers of the United States constitution; this is the opinion of the United States solicitor general Thurgood Marshall, who told University of Texas law students, "For myself I think it clear that the cases (of reapportionment in the several states) were rightly decided and I hope you do, too."
The solicitor general's address came coincidentally with increased agitation in the Texas Capitol concerning the reapportionment issue. Another reapportionment of the state is "impossible" as far as getting the job done in this legislature is concerned. Court edicts have proven to be in disagreement with the most recent job done by the legislators.

'The legislature should be 'in miniature' an exact portrait of the people at large,"
Marshall told the students. "Equal interests among the people should have equal interest in the legislature... increasing and decreasing with the number of inhabitants, 'It seems to me no one can deny that a legislature in which a vast minority of the population can elect a majority is contrary to our fundamental beliefs."

The Supreme Court is definitely the proper agency in determining reapportionment cases; as an institution it must always try to bring the law into congruity with the con-stituent assumptions of our society.

Marshall believes that Supreme Court re-apportionment decisions will bring about a resurgence in effective state government. The same would hold true for municipal governments, he said, if the Supreme Court held them to the same principles.

And intertwined within this problem of reapportionment is the ever-present problem of social integration; not merely legal integration, but also actually social barrier breakthroughs in bringing races closer together.

Representative Curtis Graves of Houston, one of Texas' first lawmakers since Reconstruction days, claims that "The Supreme Court has given Texas (government) me by redistricting." He says his election does not represent progress in integration within the

His election in Houston, where his district has a high percentage of Negro residents, was due to his knowing the voters personally and not because he had money to campaign, he "There is no integration in Texas. We're being snowed by the establishment. I don't think we've moved off dead center. The fact that I'm here doesn't mean we've come far.

"It's a lonely feeling when people sendyou up here, and you can't do anything." Perhaps Graves is doing more than he thinks -- he has been a co-sponsor of the minimum wage bill, and several smaller bills. He bluntly states that "the people's legislature hasn't been elected yet."

The outlook of this man - one of three Negroes elected to the Texas legislature this year -- is not as bitter as it may at first appear. Graves has also stated that he thinks "good things are instorefor the Negro in Texas," saying that "we are just at the brink of things here in this state,"

Losses due to Verticillium wilt, a devastator to cotton production, can be reduced by rotating cotton with one or more grain crops.

Several years of testing at the South Plains Research and Extension Center here have resulted in this finding, says Dr. E. B. Minton, U.S.D.A. patho-

Rotating cotton with corn on a yearly basis reduced Verticillium wilt infestation by almost 50 per cent.

Furthermore, the rotation of cotton with corn and grain sorghum reduced the disease infestation from 96 to 20 per cent.

The all-important area of lint yield per acre showed substantial gains with these rotations, the pathologist pointed out. With the cotton-corn rotation, lint yield increased from 630 to 950 pounds per acre. About the same increase resulted from the cotton-grain sorghum ro-

Not only did this system of rotation reduce the wilt infestation, said Minton, but it also delayed any infestation that did take place. Wilt that developed later in the season did not have such a drastic effect on the yield, fiber and seed quality.

Other measures which can be taken to reduce losses from Verticillium wilt, as outlined by Minton, include the follow-

3. Alternate-row irrigating These three practices will increase soil temperature, an important factor in warding-off

Verticillium wilt. 4. Planting tolerant varieties 5. Balancing fertility and irrigation practices. A void a high moisture-high nitrogen com-

6. Maintaining a high population, or four to six plants per row foot,

7. Avoiding root pruning, or deep cultivation.

By following the above practices, infestation by Verticillium wilt will be delayed and plant susceptibility to the disease will be reduced.

High quality cotton seed properly treated with a protective fungicide will get the cotton producer off to a head start

In addition, the application of in-furrow soil fungicides at planting time will boost production, Fungicides which provide adequate seed protection include Ceresan M or L, Panogen 15 and Thiram. Research has found that no significant benefits are merited by overcoating with PCNB or Demosan during times when no severe disease problem exists.

Protective fungicides perform the following functions: I. Promote better seed germination.

2. Reduce seed decay, which results in better emergence and improved stands.

3. Insure an adequate stand at first planting, thus providing an earlier stand and earlier maturity.

4. Conserve soil moisture by eliminating replanting.
5. Eliminate cost of replant-

In-furrow soil fungicides ap-plied at planting time protect the seedling from soil-brown organisms which may attack the young plant either before or after it emerges from the soil.

Furthermore, these fungi-cides control pre- and postemergence damping-off and root rot and help maintain a uniform stand.

Among those soil fungicides providing effective protection are Lanston plus TCNB, Terraclor plus Super X, Demosan and Panterra. Tests at the South Plains Research and Extension Center, Lubbock, with in-furrow soil fungicides have shown increases in yield and stand about 60 per cent of the time.

In these tests, 20 to 25 pounds of seed were planted per acre and returns averaged seven dollars for each dollar invested in the cost of fungicides.

Soil fungicides are recommended where there is evidence of seedling diseases.

Cotton producers who have saved their own seed should have it checked for germination percentage. This should be done prior to treating the seed with fungicide.

eral Trade Commission, the Tobacco Tax Council and others indicate how ineffective it has been. They show that cigarette sales in the United States rose 2.9 percent in the past year despite all efforts to induce people to stop smoking.

In Lamb County, most people are smoking more than they did five or ten years ago, the reports show. Estimates place the total amount of cigarettes consumed in the local area in 1966 at 2,493,000 packs.

This was at the rate of 170 packs per capita for the local population over age 18.

By way of comparison, smoking was at the rate of 215 packs per person nationally, based on the over-18 population, and 176 per person in the West South Central States. And people are going to smoke more and more, despite all the health warnings, until we take a new approach to the problem, says a University of Michigan professor, Ross J. Wilhelm. "It is time," he declares, "that the government stop wasting our money and personnel on ineffective measures designed to reduce smoking.

"It is time that it use some of the huge amounts of money going into research toward finding out what, if any, are the harmful ingredients in cigarettes and how to remove them effectively, while still retaining the flavor of the cigarette. How much does the average Lamb County smoker spend for cigarettes? Approximately $58 per year, it is estimated. The total bill, for the community as a whole, was close to $858,000 in 1966.

It's like an endless merrygo-round, this stock show business. Seems that these 4-Hers and FFA boys can't finish up one animal project without starting on another almost at the same time.

That's the way it was this week after the sale climaxing the annual Littlefield Area Junior Livestock Show, which incidentally was a smashing success. As soon as the sale was over afternoon, Lamb County Agent Buddy Logsdon and his assistant, Sam Kuykendall, started Monday looking for more animals for their 4-Hers.

Those 4-H boys and girls can not to mention their parents.

Buddy's and Sam's work with the 4-H clubs in the area has been nothing short of outstanding, as was shown in the participation of 4-H members in the area show. There were 197 entries in the show, and 59 of them were 4-H Clubbers. But the heaviest concentration of 4-H competition was in the steer division, where 21 of the 28 entries were from 4-H clubs.

The stock show board of directors should be mighty proud of the way donars and buyers helped make this show one of the biggest in the area in the way of sales. When the final animal was sold $16,764 was rattling in the till.

That should do a lot to create interest among the youngsters in the way of animal projects as a worthwhile investment in agricultural education.

One of the reasons for the Roundup Gin rally around the Littlefield area show sale could be the catastrophe which occured the Wednesday before at the South Plains Junior Livestock Show sale in Lubbock. It seems that a lot of folks on the South Plains brought their animals there to show and sell, but didn't get the prices they deserved.

The poor sale caused a lot of ill feelings, and I'm sure many folks here didn't want the same thing to happen in Littlefield.

about nine per cent greater than 1966, says the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

The increases are in wheat, sorghums, corn, sugar beets, soybeans and hay. But decreases are expected in cotton, oats, rye, barley, flax, sweet potatand Irish potatoes. Rice and peanut acreage is expected to remain the same as last

Cotton acreage for 1967 is uncertain as farmers had until March 17 to decide on acreage diversion for participation in the cotton program.

The March 1 intentions to plant indicates 4,150,000 acres of cotton, which is about three per cent less than the 4,265,000 acres planted in 1966.

intentions to plant all sorgh-ums point to 7,517,000 acres in which is an 18 per cent increase from last year. There is no payment for diverting ac- ed reage over 20 per cent of bases was the case last year.

The service says that soybean acreage is expecting a 60 per cent increase to 210,000 acres in 1966. Soybean production in the entire United States this year is estimated at 40,-602,000 acres, compared to 37,-388,000 acres last year.

From Plains Cotton Growers Inc.

what PCG wanted for its members, and while our efforts to prevent them were not totally successful, we do feel that dis-counts would have been increased considerably more without those efforts."

Those are the words of Donald A. Johnson, Executive Vice President of Plains Cotton Growers, inc., in a recent re-port to the 23-county cotton producer organization's Board of Directors.

He referred to arbitrary increases in such discounts, which amounts to a decrease in the cotton's loan value, ostensibly made by the Secretary of Agriculture to encourage producers to grow the longer staple, better quality cottons and to help move more of the shorter staples into the market.

Traditionally, all premiums and discounts in the loan schedule have been based on a ninemonth average of the 15 spot market quotations.

positive control

On that basis, Johnson said, the discount for Strict Low Middling 15/16 inch cotton, below

"The announced increases in the base 20.25 cents per pound discounts for shorter staple and lower quality cottons is not at all 1967 have figured to about 320 points or 3,2 cents per pound.

> He compared that to the 400 point, 4.0 cent per pound dis-count announced for that quality, which is an 80 point increase, reducing the value of a 500pound bale by an additional $4.

Some influential non-producer groups had recommended a discount for Strict Low Middling 15/16 of around 500 points or more. And it is on this basis that Johnson feels the extensive data presented to the Department of Agriculture on the subject by PCG may well have reduced the arbitrary discount increases by as much as 50 per cent.

for example, discou for all qualities below one inch staple average out to 50 points less by reason of PCG action," Johnson reasoned, "that's $2.50 per bale and means High Plains producers will probably get some $2.5 million more for their 1967 crop."

He pointed out that without any manipulation by the Department of Agriculture, the 320 point discount on SLM inch cotton would have be 40 point increase over "And we believe that incre coupled with a 75 point & the loan rate in 1967 to cents, would have give producers more quality in tive than they will be all put to use under current cumstances."

Johnson also reported .S.D.A. announcement i ded increases in the micro discounts for 1967. For cottend ed "Wasty," or that miking and below, there was m creased discount of 35 pa from 300 to 335. The 30 hm points, from 90 to 105.

The desirable mit range will get a premium! loan in 1967 of 30 points, pared to 20 in 1966.
