A. Perkins, both Littlefield men, collided, causing slight injury to the occupants, and rendering complete wrecks of both the car and truck.

Walters was enroute to Lubbock, and Perkins was driving west on Highway 7, when the accident happened.

Walters, who was knocked unconscious, and Perkins were picked up by two Lubbock men, Robert E. Maxey and Jimmie Wilser, and brought to the Littlefield Hospital where they were rendered medical aid, following which they were able to return home.

OVER MILLION DOLLARS RURAL AID APPROVED

The rural aid bill was passed Tuesday, approving an appropriation of $1,080,000 to supplement previous allotments for rural schools for the current biennium.

A delegation from Lamb county left for Austin Sunday in the interest of this legislation, returning Tuesday night. Those making the trip were: Supt. A. B. Sanders and County Supt. F. O. Boles, of Littlefield; Supt. W. D. Biggers of Sudan; Supt. Jack Wester of Spade; and Supt. W. L. Edelman of Spring Lake.

Supt. Sanders reports that Lamb county schools will benefit under this rural aid bill to the extent of from twelve to fifteen thousand dollars in transportation aid, and Littlefield about $2500.

He stated this was a deficiency appropriation; that last year the local school only received 87 per cent of their allotment and it looked as though they would only receive about 70 per cent this year, but that with the passing of this rural aid bill, the state will be in a position to pay the local schools 100 per cent this year.

The above figure was a compromise between the $560,000 recommended by a sub-committee of the house appropriations committee and the $1,700,000 requested by members who said the department

Ellen gets Her Man

NINTH INSTALLMENT
SYNOPSIS: Ellen Mackay, on her way from school at Winniepe, to join her father at Fort Edson, misses the boat by which she was to travel. Hearing that another boat is to start north in the morning, Ellen goes to the owner, John Benham, and begs him to give her a passage. To her surprise he flatly refuses.
 Angry and puzzled, Ellen tells Pat McClatchey, a kindly old storekeeper of her difficulty, and Pat with the help of one of Benham's crew, succeeds in getting Ellen on board as a stowaway.
 When the vessel is well under way Ellen emerges from her hiding place and faces John Benham, who now cannot help taking her with him.
 During the voyage Ellen begins to be strongly attracted by John. But when she reaches Fort Edson she finds her father broken, ill and disgraced, and learns that his troubles are due to one man—John Benham.
 Instantly Ellen resolves that she will fight for her father. She will reinstate him with the Hudson Bay Company, his employers, and will show up John Benham for what he really is.

From Bernard Deteroux, an employe of the company, who professes friendship for her father, Ellen hears that Benham supplies whiskey to the Indians. She sets out on a long and tedious journey to obtain proof of this, returns think-Deteroux.

 A desperate battle between Benham and Deteroux ends with the latter's defeat and capture by Trooper Whitlow. Deteroux escapes.

Her gaze was drawn again to the terrible drama before her. Unconsciously she started forward. Whitlow's hand locked on her arm and Moosac's desperate lunge carried him through to his goal.

dragged her back. "Wait!" he rasped. "Wait!"
 Benham's hands, locked about Deteroux's wrists until the backs of them were bloodless and ridged like steel, seemed to be dragging some of that awful pressure from his tortured eyes. He seemed to be gathering himself for super-human effort.
 Abruptly one knee drove upwards into Deteroux's body. A grasp broke from the bigger man. He cringed slightly, and Benham tore himself free.
 Benham's eyes were swollen, almost shut. For a split second both men seemed to pause and gather themselves. Then Deteroux charged again, snarling like a wolf to the kill.
 With one lithe, twisting movement Benham bent sparily at the waist and hurled himself forward, his right arm shooting out, a hard driven, muscle-ridge piston.

 Just below the arch of Deteroux's lower ribs the blow landed, and the "thock" of it was awesome. A hoarse, blubbery cry of pain erupted from Deteroux, his knees wobbled, and his head dropped forward. He retched violently, and blood-stained saliva seeped through his lips.
 "He's got him—the boy's got him now," was Whitlow's jubilant cry. Swiftly alive to his advantage, Benham tore at his opponent, a merciless, implacable machine. Setting himself, he ripped sledge-hammer blows into Deteroux's sagging chin. Slowly, ponderously, the big man seemed to crumple. His eyes were rolling and glassy, his mouth open and his lips peeled back in a grimace of fading consciousness.
 Like an executioner before the block, Benham cut Deteroux down. Bit by bit he bent him lower until Deteroux's body was bent in a crouch and his nerveless arms swung helpless at his sides.
 There was something almost magnificent in the manner that Deteroux called upon his great strength and vitality to stave off defeat. Out on his feet he refused to fall, his muscles subconsciously holding his body from utter collapse.
 Abruptly Benham stopped his attack. His bloody, tight-locked fists fell to his sides. With a shrugging gesture he turned away, and without a look to right or left pushed through the crowd and was gone.

And in that moment of magnanimity John Benham was also unconsciously magnificent.
 By all rules of conflict he was entitled to go on with his triumph until human resistance could no longer exist, and Deteroux should lie supine at his feet. But he, too, could appreciate sheer, dogged courage, even in a man like Deteroux, who had not hesitated to take unfair advantage.
 In that refusal to batter further a helpless man John Benham left behind him a white glow of sportsmanship which seemed to dissipate the blood-red haze of conflict.
 Ellen saw Whitlow step forward, grip Deteroux by the arm and force him to the ground. The milling crowd of Indians closed about them, and Ellen found herself alone.

Former Littlefield Boy Plans On Riding Bike Through Europe

Learning of the many interesting traits and ambitions of a young boy, aged 14, William Alston Duggan, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Duggan, pioneers of this section, and believing him to be what might be termed a "model boy," the Leader is passing it on, thinking it of much interest to friends and acquaintances of the Duggan family, as well as other boys of young Duggan's age.

William Alston, a freshman in Sunset high school, Dallas, living within the city limits, is very energetic, ambitious, and talented in so many ways. He carves, moulds, paints pictures, plays in the high school band, and was selected from a great number to play in the all-Dallas school band last summer during the Centennial; he is an expert at tennis, and plays football and baseball. He says he is going to be a minister, and has been invited by his pastor to preach a sermon upon two occasions, and made a big hit with the entire congregation. He is given an allowance by his parents, and has his own bank account; has a flock of chickens, each one of which he has named, and keeps books on them. He has many of his chickens trained to do stunts. He milks the family cow and keeps records of cost and production. He sets his alarm clock for 6:30 each morning, at which time he gets up, attends to cow and chickens and all outside chores.

If a student in Sunset school gets on the honor roll during his high school terms, he is given a scholarship to college, and this is what Alton is working for at present.

Another ambition he has at this time is to go on a bicycling trip through Europe, and he is saving towards such a fund. He explains all about the trip in a letter written to his dad here recently, which believing will be of interest, especially to other boys of William Alston's age, the Leader is quoting a portion of his letter as follows:

"It has rained since you left and everything is green and very pretty. The red bud trees in our yard as well as fruit trees are beautiful. The baby chicks are doing fine, although I have lost about nine out of 80 hatched off. The buff hen hatched 8 chicks and I bought others totaling 25 chicks for her. She is doing fine. Have worked awfully hard getting things ready for her. Have cleaned out the wood-pile lot. Had to take down the fence to get the big box of kindling wood out, put the fence back up and made it chicken proof. Made a large, roomy house for her and babies. It is windy today.

"I suppose that you heard of the terrible tragedy at New London, Texas. The new, beautiful high school was completely demolished in an explosion that killed most of its 700 students and teachers.

"Bobby (the milk cow) has been dehorned and looks fine.

"We had a freeze here for 1-2 to 2 days. It may prove fatal to the fruit. I hope not.

"My grades were as follows: History 98, algebra 97, English 97, Latin 88, orchestra 88. My average is 95.

"Jack failed in obedience, as usual. Mary Ann did OK.

"In my last American Boy it gives a story of bicycling through Europe. It shows the expenses and all about it. I would like to try it. It costs $150 for everything and then $1 for each day in Europe. Europe is very cheap. A night's lodging at a Youth's Hotel is 25 cents, a good breakfast at a Youth's Hotel is 50 pkenings or 12 cents, a good dinner is 70 pkenings or about 20 cents. Supper is also cheap. A new bicycle in Europe costs $10. Passport costs $10. Passage on a freighter or tramp-steamer is about $120 round trip. I may go if I can get a good job at the Exposition this year. I have already been asked to try for the big pageant and am taking tests for it now. $200 would easily cover everything, living expenses included.

"I plan to take the trip to Europe in 1939, or the summer before my senior year in high school. I will have saved up enough money by then. I hope they hold off fighting until then. However, at the present, it looks like they may all kill each other before I get there. I hope they don't."

ON TOUR OR IN TRAFFIC BE MERRY WITH YOUR ENGINE OIL-PLATED

You can laugh off your old doubts about warm-weather engine oiling, because Oil-Plating is so terribly hard to rub off, scrape off or burn off. Here's one form of lubrication which is not a mere shifting temporary oil-film. For in addition to the normal moving type of film, vastly strengthened, Conoco Germ Processed oil forms a stationary Oil-Plating.

The explanation is that patented Germ Processing makes this oil really plant itself on bearings, shafts, and upright surfaces too, such as cylinder walls. Not even the good old Law of Gravity can make Oil-Plating drain down. It's always up there all the while your car is parked, or showing its heels in the open. None of that much-mentioned starting risk for you... No anxious eye on the heat indicator... "That Girl From Paris" To Be Featured At The Palace Theatre

In her debut film, "I Dream Too Much," which will be featured at the Palace theatre Saturday midnight, Sunday and Monday, Lily Pons played leap frog in a public park, fed fish to a trained seal and sang while riding on a merry-go-round.

In her present song-and-laugh musical comedy, "That Girl from Paris," co-starring Gene Raymond and Jack Oakie, her experiences surpass even these in oddity.

Departing from the reserve of an opera diva, (1) la Pons helps Gene Raymond change an automobile tire; (2) is suspended from Jack Oakie's belt out a tenth story window and is hauled right back through that window like a bag of salt; (3) dances through an entire afternoon with four partners, Raymond, Oakie, Mischa Auer and Frank Jenks, each of the dancers introducing his own particular variety of "hot-cha" steps, while she trudges with her tiny feet in a size 1-2 shoe!

Miss Pons is also wondering where the movies will have her singing next. Until she entered the films, the petite French star performed on the opera and concert stages, or before radio microphones. In "I Dream Too Much," she sang while whirling on a merry-go-round, in a Paris cafe and on a musical comedy stage.

"That Girl from Paris" provides equally novel backgrounds for her vocal artistry. She sings in an inn courtyard, in a New Jersey roadhouse, from an opera house stage, and reaches a climax that rivals the merry-go-round experience by trilling merrily while piloting an automobile at reckless speed.

Slaughter Well Flows 115 Barrels In Fifty Minutes

Drilling several feet Sunday, to approximately 5,025 feet in hard lime, the Texas company No. 1 Bob Slaughter, Hockley county pool opener, flowed 115 barrels of oil in 50 minutes Sunday in a head. It was then shut down and drilling resumed.

Progress is slow, the drillers desiring to avoid anything that would damage the test. Previous bottom was reported as 5,022 feet.

Two-inch tubing probably will be run and a further test made. No definite indication of whether the well will be shot or avidized has been reported.

Oil company men indicate privately that the well may be good for between 2,000 and 3,000 barrels. No statement for publication is being made, however.

Oil storage was available Sunday, four 500 barrel tanks having been set up. The best pay oil is believed to be coming from 5,014-17 feet. Gravity is reported 31.9 Baumé. Brown lime was topped at 4,205 feet. Elevation is 3,560 feet. The well is on the Bob Slaughter tract, labor 83, league 38, Zavalla county school land.

of the lake, she found him. He was crouched low, and beside him was the same ancient squaw, gently sponging his battered face and body with the icy lake water. Timidly Ellen approached the pair. The old squaw looked at her in frank hostility. Then she turned again to her ministrations, crouching with pagan gentleness. Finally Benham looked up. His eyes were terribly bloodshot and swollen. Ellen grasped with pity and her hands fluttered to her throat. It was Benham who spoke.

"Yes?" he queried, his voice slightly thick. He was still panting from his exertions.

Many words trembled on Ellen's lips, strange, hot, thrilling words—but somehow she could not utter them.

Yearning swayed her, yearning to crouch at his side, to take his battered head in her arms and spread the healing balm of love on every bruise and cut. But there was a certain hardness in Benham's expression which fended her off.

Now he laughed, harshly. "You may have him," he muttered. "He's paid to me, the dog."

"I may have him?" stammered Ellen. "I don't know what you mean."

"You should," was Benham's curt reply. "When the fight was coming my way you cried for me to stop. I did, and it gave him a chance to get the upper hand for a time." He pointed to his eyes. "He did his best to blind me—and nearly succeeded. But I beat him with these," and he lifted his two hard fists. "It was a satisfaction long, over-due, but it was worth the waiting. Yes—I'm through with him. And he's yours."

Ellen's thoughts were chaotic. What madness was this? True, she had cried out when Benham was winning, but she had not meant it to save Deteroux from punishment. It was just the eternal woman in her voicing an overwhelming repugnance to the utter brutality of it all. And—and Benham thought she had cried out to have Deteroux.

Again Benham looked at her. "Was there anything else?" he asked curtly. "Despite your scorn and pride you have not hesitated to accept favours from a—a half-breed. Remember that all your life, will you? That even a half-breed can be generous."

"You—you don't know what you are saying," Ellen sobbed.

"I ought to." He laughed grimly. "I'm giving you back your own words."

He stood erect now, his splendid chest and shoulders gleaming wetly. "Come, mother," he said to the old squaw. And the two of them walked away.

When Ellen Mackay finally went back to the scene of the fight she was again weary and apathetic. Her face was pale, and her eyes were lack-lustre and subdued. She moved slowly.

Deteroux was sitting with his back to a tree. His hands were clasped between his knees, and Ellen could see the gleam of polished metal encircling his wrists.

He flashed a quick glance at her, and then his gaze bent to the ground again. His face was sullen and defiant. Old Moosac was crouched near him, his beady eyes inscrutable.

Ellen looked around for Whitlow, and discovered the trooper in animated conversation with several sullen, frightened Indians. His pencil and notebook were at work again.

Whitlow, spied her, put his notebook away, and came hurrying up. His face was glowing with satisfaction. "My lucky day," he announced triumphantly. "I've got Deteroux where I want him now, and no mistake. Where is Benham?"

"In one of the tepees, I imagine," she answered dispiritedly. "When can we leave for Edson?"

"In an hour or two. I want to get Benham's evidence also to make my case against Deteroux unshakable."

Whitlow went away on his search, and Ellen moved down to the canoe and crouched in it, her back to the camp, her brooding eyes sweeping across the shimmering waters of the lake.

A great bitterness gnawed at her—a tremendous disappointment. She was not angry at John Benham. She knew no shame over the fact that he had virtually dismissed her.

She had gone to him in all honesty, intending to apologize fully for the wrong she had done him, and he, in equal honesty, had repulsed her. The blame was hers. She knew it, and admitted it fully.

In some ways, triumph also was hers. Her father's future and reputation were assured. The facts were clear in that respect. She had the satisfaction of knowing that her efforts had indirectly moved to this culmination.

That those same efforts had moved to render her the possessor of unrequited love, merely proved the irony of life. And there lay the great hurt.

Ellen went back in memory to her first meeting with Benham. How arrogant and sure of herself she had been in approaching the free-trader with her request to be taken along on the trip north. And how hurt and humiliated she felt when Benham curtly refused. It was hurt pride as much as anything that had caused her to seek old Pat McClatchey's help in stowing away on the Benham boats. Ellen, for whose favor men had vied with one another in jumping to her bidding, now had to plead for the favor of this man and was compelled to force herself upon his care when the favor was refused.

She remembered her tremulous fear when they had passed the cascades and she had brazenly revealed herself, certain in the knowledge that Benham could not return her to Athabasca Landing without serious delay and loss to himself.

Benham had been very kind and a gentleman when he discovered how she had thwarted him through the help of Pat McClatchey and Pierre Buschard. He had said no words of blame and had not scolded or raged at her as many others would have done. She had offered to pay for her transportation and he had abruptly refused. She remembered now that certain glint of triumph that shone in his eyes as he told her, "My payment is assured. I'll exact my pound of flesh."

Ellen had not understood then but she did now. Benham's pound of flesh had been paid by the flare of anger and the deep humiliation of her father when the old factor learned of his indebtedness to the man he hated most in all the world—John Benham, the free-trader. That had been the payment Benham expected, his revenge for her impertinence in stowing away on his boats, but the payment had been far heavier than that since she had discovered in her heart the deep regard she held for him. It was love—love almost at first sight, she now realized.

Benham had leaped ashore to secure birch boughs and fashion a small enclosure on the boat to give her shelter and privacy. She had been touched by his consideration and thoughtfulness then, and again when they had stopped for the night and she had carelessly gone for a walk in the wild, uncharted wood and Benham, fearful of her safety, had waited for her return in spite of the fatigue from the heavy day's work.

"A GOOD NAME"

A "name" is the property of every person whether it be good or bad. At being very expensive and priceless we gain it by the way we act, by doing kind deeds, and favors to the liking of other people as well as ourselves.
 Some of the ways to build a good and honorable name are:
 How we slam the door.
 Way we put paper in waste basket.
 Way we eat pie.
 Way we act toward a boy friend.
 Way we control our temper.

That's what counts in lubricating in a quart of oil, or greasing the whole thing. The right lubricant at the right spot, at the right it.

THE CHOKES ON YOU
 —it drains your gas tank
 5 to 15 times faster than normal

Watch out for this pickpocket!
 The choke is guilty, say automotive scientists, of stealing your mileage and your money.
 In laboratory and road tests, they have actually measured your loss and proved that every time you pull out the choke, the gasoline consumption of your motor is increased five to fifteen times.
 This explains why Phillips 66 Poly Gas gives such amazing economy. Being higher test, it requires the least possible choke. And it is higher test without higher price, because Phillips is the world's large-est producer of natural high test gasoline.
 Cool days, warm days, snowy or rainy days; in any weather you get remarkable economy with this 100% custom-tailored gasoline. Besides, every gallon has the extra energy units supplied by the patented POLYmerization process.
 So if you want more pep and power, want faster response to the throttle, extra speed and added mileage—the gasoline you want is Phillips 66 Poly Gas.
 It costs nothing extra and it's easy to get. Just keep an eye out for the Orange and Black 66 Shield. Stop ... fill up ... and your very first trial tankful will prove there is a difference.

CHANGE YOUR OIL ... NOW!
 Drain and refill with Phillips 66 Motor Oil ... for summer lubrication. Because it is the finest lubricant refined by Phillips, we recommend it as "the world's finest oil for your motor."

PREDICT 1937 AND 1938 PEAK YEARS

General Charles Gates Dawes surveyed the stock market Friday and predicted 1937 and 1938 will probably cover the peak years in this present period of prosperity.
 The Chicago banker and former vice president of the United States advised an audience of financiers to seek a more conservative invest-

IDEAL GAS SYSTEMS DESIGNED FOR FARM HOMES OFFERED FOR SALE

Ideal-Gas Systems, embodying all that the name implies, are being manufactured and offered for sale by Armstrong's of Lubbock.

Designed for farm homes to which natural gas facilities are not available, this complete gas service offers modern conveniences for cooking, lighting, heating and refrigeration at a surprisingly economical cost, both for installation and operation.

The entire unit is buried at a safe distance from the house, with as many outlets provided as may be desired in any home, and an abundant and dependable flow of fuel always on hand.

The consumption of Ideal-Gas leaves no odor, smoke nor soot. The gas itself is butane, a product being manufactured by all large refineries. One gallon of commercial butane will operate a range burner for about 30 hours. The cost to an average home ranges from $1.50 to $7.50 per month, dependent on the number of appliances used. The caloric heat value of butane is much higher than that of natural gas. Since only the burners on stoves now in use must be changed to use this new fuel, often it is unnecessary for a consumer to purchase any new heaters. Where it is necessary, a wide choice of heaters and cookers is on the market.

All the modern conveniences of a city home may be enjoyed with the use of an Ideal-Gas System. For complete details write to Armstrong's, 1109 Main street, Lubbock, Texas.

WORK UNDERWAY TUESDAY ON NEW BASEBALL PARK

Volunteer Workers Are Asked To Assist In Building Park

Work got underway Tuesday morning in the grading and breaking of the ground for the new baseball park, with Bill Yeary in charge of the grader.

With $950 cash in the bank, the material and equipment have been purchased, and plans are going ahead to build one of the finest baseball fields on the South Plains.

In an interview with Dr. Ira E. Woods President of the Association Dr. Woods requested the Leader to ask for volunteer workers to assist in the building of this park. He urges all those who can bring their hammers and saws to the park Monday morning, and contribute some time to this work.

Dr. Woods stated that the materials and equipment necessary, and which has been purchased, is costing about $1200; and that there will be no funds to employ labor on this work, and, therefore, asks that all those interested, who can spare any time at all, to assist with the work.

He also urges those not having any tools to put in an appearance also, as there would be plenty for them to do towards getting the field in condition.

In explanation for the materials costing around the above figure, Dr. Woods pointed out that the grandstand planned will be larger, built of heavier material, and better constructed than any other park in this immediate district, and all posts for fence and grandstand will be set in concrete.

In discussing the labor situation, Dr. Woods said: "If we can get 20 to 30 volunteer workers on the field, we can get it completed in a short time."
