Second Perfect Program Marks Ritz 5th Anniversary

Appreciation For Patronage Given By Robb

'Old Home Town' Unit In Widespread R & R Group Is Popular

Fifth anniversary of the R & R Ritz theatre, as popular and beautiful and up-to-the-minute in the service of theatre-goers of a large section of West Texas as ever is to be celebrated this week with the Second Perfect Program.

The Ritz, "the old home town" show of the widespread Robb and Rowley group, under personal management of J. Y. Robb, son of the founder, the late I. J. Robb, has always enjoyed a loyal patronage.

The Perfect Program opening today at the Ritz is featured by "OKAY America," depicting incidents in the life of a New York newspaperman.

Gloria Swanson is still the alluringly beautiful actress that has captivated millions from the movie houses for a number of years. That she retains all of her charm is unmistakably shown by her work in "Tonight Or Never," which will feature the Sunday, Monday and Tuesday bill at the R & R Queen Theatre.

Queen Bills Miss Swanson In New Play

'Tonight Or Never' Based On Belasco's Great Play

Gloria Swanson in "Tonight or Never," based on the fiery and tempestuous Belasco stage success, comes to the Queen Theatre today, Monday and Tuesday. Produced and presented by Samuel Goldwyn, it brings that producer's opulent and lavish hand to a play fashioned by the greatest stage genius of this generation, the late David Belasco, as the last and final effort to his distinguished career.

"Tonight or Never" is a Gloria Swanson return to the emotional tempo of her first talking picture, "The Trespasser," or the earlier silent "Sadie Thompson." It gives her a warm fervent role, rich and strong in mature womanly feeling.

Mervyn LeRoy, that enterprising youthful director who won world-wide acclaim for "Five Star Final" and "Little Caesar," directed "Tonight or Never." The settings, depicting gay, romantic, suspenseful and carnival Venice, were designed by Willy Pogany, distinguished painter.

Small Singing Role Miss Swanson sings in "Tonight or Never," largely, it is said, because Producer Samuel Goldwyn insisted on the right of way for the rapid action of the story. But there are improvised matches of song from Miss Swanson, mostly of a romantic air, and there is quite a little of Budapest's native melody from string and gypsy orchestras. No picture of the Danube capital would be complete without song.

Chanel, Mile Gabrielle Chanel, distinguished Paris designer and fashion authority, whom Samuel Goldwyn brought to Hollywood last Spring to become the style arbiter of his pictures, introduces her first screen fashions for motion pictures in the elaborate wardrobe of Miss Swanson. Evening gowns and wraps, afternoon frocks, street and sport suits, pajamas and costume jewelry are included among the original Chanel creations for "Tonight or Never."

George Raft, Popular Here, Comes To Ritz

'Night After Night' Cast Led By Satellite From 'Scarface'

The scene is Hell's Kitchen, fourteen years ago. In a vacant lot in West 1st Street, Bert Keyes, a retired pugilist, has set up a ring, where he permits the boys of the neighborhood, assembled to watch the professionals, to stage bouts of their own. One of the boys takes the bouts seriously. He has made up his mind he wants to be a boxer. His name is George Raft.

Boxing was George Raft's first profession. He tried several others before he began sparring toward motion picture stardom, as a result of his performances in "Scarface" and "Dancers in the Dark," and now in the leading role of "Night After Night," directed by Archie Mayo, coming to the Ritz Theatre on Thursday only.

Raft was fifteen when he decided to become a boxer. During the next two years he fought in the leading clubs of New York, but success did a good job of avoiding him. In twenty-five bouts, he was knocked out seven times. Finally he quit the game to avoid permanent mutilation.

He decided to try professional baseball, and was signed as an outfielder on the Springfield (Mass.) Eastern League team, but was dropped because his batting average didn't compare favorably with his fielding average.

Removed from Baseball - All the time George had an ace in the hole. He could dance. Every summer when he was a boy, he had worked the outdoor amusement parks and carnivals with his mother and father. His mother had taught him how to dance. So when he was working at the Manhattan Casino as a professional dancer, that was the real beginning of his career. He danced in night clubs and during afternoon teas at Healy's, Rector's, Churchill's and Murray's (at Rector's, he worked with Rudolph Valentino, who became one of his closest friends).

In 1927, he had the "spot" at Texaco's 300 Club. He had the look, dark grace of a panther, a flashing smile which revealed gleaming white teeth and a pair of dancing legs that were quicker than the eye. The girls he knew called him affectionately, "The Old Black Snake."

The work at Guinan's led to musical shows. He danced in "City Chant" (Ray Parer), "Manhattan" and "Ziegfeld's Palm Beach Night," which played the winter at Palm Beach and then opened in New York as "No Foolin'."

A tour of all the world capitals came next. European audiences liked him and he soon became famous as one of the world's fastest dancers.

Wins Royal Favor - In London he met the Prince of Wales and taught him to Charleston. In appreciation, the Prince gave the dancer a cigarette lighter which is still among his most treasured possessions.

Back in America, he was one of the first entertainers to be signed by the newly organized Paramount Public Circuit. He headlined motion picture stage shows throughout the country.

Comparatively recently, Raft went to Hollywood on his own. One night he was sitting in the Brown Derby having a good time with the boys, when Rowland Brown, the director, asked him who he was and if he wanted to go into pictures. Brown was looking for a man with sex appeal. The next day, Raft went to work in his first picture, "Quick Millions."

It was his portrayal of the sinister bodyguard of Paul Muni in "Scarface," which brought him real recognition. A fine performance in "Dancers in the Dark" followed; then "Madame Racketeer" and now "Night After Night."

Raft is 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighs 155 pounds, has black hair, brown eyes and olive skin. His hair is slicked down with vaseline. He's proud of his white teeth and brushes them four or five times a day. He has always been a snappy dresser and has a weakness for color.

Scene From "OKAY America"

The Rev. W. G. Buchschacher is in San Angelo today, where he is preaching in the Lutheran church there.

The first Perfect Program, it will be remembered, featured "ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENSE," a picture admired by all lovers of the dramatic. "OKAY AMERICA" is said to be fully as dramatic, fully as intriguing, with its incidents developing into situations fraught with suspense and surprise and building to a climax which, like

Baxter Leads Brilliant Cast In 'Six Hours To Live'

Warner Baxter, popular screen star is said to have the most powerful character role of his career. In his latest Fox picture, "Six Hours To Live," which opens on Tuesday at the Ritz Theatre, adapted from the original story, "Auf Wiedersehen," by Stephen Merris and Morton Barisau, this picture presents Baxter in the role of a man whose life is a constant struggle for survival. Handling firm in the face of pain and death in defense of his country at a desperate moment.

To the other nations gathered at Geneva, partial disarmament means merely a reduction in taxes for their burdened countries, but to Baxter's tiny republic, it means placing it at the mercy of powerful neighbors, which control its valuable resources. How he successfully combats a conspiracy to wreck his country, although his mind is distracted by a romantic interlude with a beautiful girl forms the central theme of the film.

"Six Hours To Live," directed by William Dieterle, marks the screen debut of Miriam Jordan, beautiful young English girl recently recruited from the Broadway stage. She is said to be generously endowed with that elusive charm which distinguishes the more successful stars, and studio executives are confident that this unusual vehicle will place her within the realm of stardom. John Boles has a featured role and figures very prominently in the denouement of the story.

George Marion, Sr., well remembered for numerous unusual character roles, including his famous "Crime" in "Anna Christie," is prominently cast as Otto Bauer, an eccentric scientist. Halliwell Hobbes is seen and heard as Miss Jordan's father. Edwin Maxwell as a Police Commissioner, John Davidson as Baxter's secretary, and Dewey Robinson as Marion's giant assassin.

player who last year created one of the outstanding personal successes of the season in the Belasco stage production, not only duplicates his stage role on the screen, but has earned for his performance opposite Miss Swanson the acclamation of being a find and a discovery. Critics have hailed him as a new type of romantic lead—"an American type, fair and light, completely in contrast to the former dark and Latin type." Others of the stage cast which Mr. Goldwyn brought to the studios of the filming of the play include Ferdinand Gottschalk, Robert Greig, Warburton Gable, Greta Mayer, Warren Skipworth, the distinguished character actress, is the one recruit. "Tonight or Never" was written as a play by the Baroness Lill Hatvany, brilliant Hungarian noblewoman who authored "The Love Duel," in which Ethel Barrymore was seen two years ago. Frederick and Lanny Hatton adapted it for the Belasco stage production.

which in turn was transcribed for Mr. Goldwyn's screen version by Ernest Vajda.

Its story concerns an impetuous opera star of Budapest and her search for success and happiness. Critics praise her voice, but deny that it has genius. They accuse her of having no soul. To the irritation of that, there is added the attention of an unknown young man who follows her everywhere like a shadow. Nella is told that her ardent pursuer is the kept protegee of a doddering old Marchesa—"a gigolo." Taunted by her critics for her singing and disturbed by the attentions of her admirer, sheer restlessness drives her to his apartment one night. The story then takes up his demand "Tonight or Never," her answer and the strange phenomenon that made a great artist out of a great singer—and a happy woman out of an unhappy girl.

that in "ATTORNEY FOR THE DEFENSE" none can be forecast. In order to maintain the suspense of this climax, no one will be permitted to enter the theatre during its development. Also those seated in the centre may be assured their attention will not be diverted from the screen by persons disturbing them to flag seats.

Law Ayres is the star of "OKAY AMERICA" playing the role of Larry Wayne, a chatter writer on a New York daily who supplements his newspaper work with regular radio broadcasts, revealing intricate details of well-known people and bring consternation to "playboy" Broadwayites. When the daughter of a famous millionaire is kidnapped, he applies himself to the task of finding her. Through his network of channels of information he establishes the identity of the kidnapers and becomes go-between in negotiations for ransom. He delivers the fortune demanded and is double-crossed by the racketeers. Wayne learns the reason for the double cross—a reason which will not be hinted at here. But one night Wayne surprises his listeners with a highly sensational statement—a statement immediately followed by a shot which echoes in a million homes!

Law Ayres is supported by an excellent cast, chosen for type and including Maureen O'Sullivan (Taryn heroine), Louis Calhern, Henry Armetta, Allan Dinehart, Nance O'Brien, Edith Roberts, Margaret Egan and others. The story is an original by William Anderson McGuire. A beautiful technicolor subject "The Indian Today," a comedy entitled, "Who, Me?" and the indispensable Sound News complete the four unit program.

BETTER OR WORSE?

What the American Legion thinks of things as they are in the country today. We of the American Legion have our origin in the past, and in the beginning we were bound together to perpetuate the memories and associations of the world war. But, being good and true Americans who live in the present, we are more deeply concerned than perhaps any body of men with the problems our country faces in the future. We have been proud in the belief that the American Legion represents a cross-section of the most loyal blood in America and we are favoring to help solve some of the problems which we are facing as citizens in these troublous times. It is taking earnest and intelligent thought on the part of the commanders of the various posts in the country on how to help the great tasks which have been undertaken by the patriotic organization may be made successful.

At the termination of July 10 we found that nationally we had been successful in obtaining either full or part time employment for 800,000 wage earners but we cannot stop in a triumphant mode from the corner of the Legion that was captured quickly back and do nothing while our country remains in the perilous condition economically. We find that through inquiries made by our national headquarters that although there is some improvement in conditions that the consensus of opinion is that we are going to be faced again this winter with conditions that are as bad if not worse than last winter and we find that he people will not be in a position to stand the constant demands on them for a shorter week for the past two years. We have also found there is a growing sentiment in favor of the shorter working week in order that one job might afford a livelihood to two and perhaps three men. One Post asks the question, "how can we stand the wage magnates under the present kind of depression is over?" Another says, "urge the construction of public works and improvement of private business does not seem to have the capital." Communities can also have considerable work done in a systematic program of clothing and clothing men and letting them work it out in the cities and counties. Do something to assist the farmer with better prices. In our work in this country we have been faced with all kinds of problems and we believe that we have been successful in caring for those where we believed a stance generally deserved. Of course our first interest is in the ex-servicemen and their family but we have not been selfish in this respect as we have handled numerous other worthy cases. However, we believe there should be a central agency for handling applications for charity and after a thorough investigation the case should be referred to the proper organization for standing. There should be a called meeting of all charitable organizations before our winter months set in and the people should be allowed to attend and organization should be perfected at the earliest possible date.

We find that communist agitators are also working most assiduously among the youth. For that reason we are energetically waging our Americanism program devoting most of our time and attention to the boys and girls of America. We are also carrying on a splendid junior baseball program. We have used the influence of the American Legion in the promotion of the Civilian Control Camps and the R. O. T. C. units. We find the Legion sponsoring Boy Scout and Girl Scout troops and offering scholarships to students in history, civics and other kindred subjects in an effort to give them a better understanding of what America, which fosters and harbors them, has to offer them. We are endeavoring to protect the health of our children through our welfare and rehabilitation work. We are endeavoring to make the lives of our citizens safer by conducting safety programs.

We have been called ex-servicemen. But let us look around in our community and we find that the youths who gave themselves so willingly to protect our country in 1917 and 1918 and still carrying on as the men of today and as long as we live we will continue to serve and be proud that we are citizens of a free and prosperous country. We as members of the American Legion say that our country is only temporarily staggered by the blow of this world wide depression and that we are still fighting for her and that she will again hold up her head in pride as the most wonderful country in the world.

The preamble to the Constitution of the American Legion expresses more forcibly the aims and purposes of this great organization more than any other thing that can be said. "Resolved and covenanted ourselves together for the following purposes: to uphold and defend the constitution of the United States of America, to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred percent Americanism; to preserve the memories and traditions of our association in the great war; to incite a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and goodwill on earth; to support and transmit to posterity the principles of Justice, Freedom and Democracy; to consecrate and enjoy our comradeship by the dedication to mutual helpfulness." C. L. BRYANT, Post Commander, Wm. Franklin Martin Post No. 18, American Legion, Big Spring, Texas.

Repeal Of Tariff Aided In Petition Of 180 Economists

WASHINGTON (UP)—A group of 180 economists, holding that the prediction of two years ago is being fulfilled, tariff had been brought in by the slumps in foreign trade, have petitioned President Hoover to bring about its revision. The economists, representing 63 colleges and universities, were among those who had asked the president to veto the Smoot-Hawley bill on grounds that it would result in retaliatory tariff by other countries and would have a disastrous effect on foreign trade. The new petition reached the White House a few hours after the president had returned from Cleveland, where he had defended Republican protection tariff policy in his campaign speech. James C. Harbord, of Columbia University presented the petition. Harbord is a member of the National Progressive League, which is supporting Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt. However, the said petition signed included many economists who are taking an active part in the present tariff campaign. The president was asked to make use of his powers under the flexible tariff provisions to reduce "the inequalities." He was urged to negotiate with foreign countries toward reducing "the virtual embargo" on foreign trade. "It seems clear to us that recovery from the depression, either in this country or abroad, will be a long, difficult and greatly retarded so long as excessive and arbitrary restrictions are imposed on commerce of the world, opening up a virtual embargo against mutually profitable exchange of goods from one country to another," said the petition. Some of the signers "defy all sound principles of economics" and "with a false promise of improvement in their condition, they impoverish the working people of all nations," the petition said. After referring to shrinkage in our foreign trade, the petition declares that "the American foreign trade has been reduced to a point that has infinitely more to gain from a reduction than from an increase in the levels of our tariff rates."

"The record is conclusive," said the petition, "that the Forney-McCumber Act of 1922 and the Haw-

Negroes Plan Campaign For Mrs. Ferguson

Two Hundred Blacks Meet In Dallas From All Parts Of State

DALLAS (UP)—More than 200 negroes, representing all larger cities and towns in Texas, met here today to perfect an organization to support and work for the election of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, Democratic candidate for governor. The purpose of the meeting was to complete organization and appoint committees to carry on the campaign in the various districts comprising the organization. A resolution ratifying the organization and started at a meeting at Houston several weeks ago was adopted. Spokesmen said efforts would be made to raise funds so that the organization could finance itself. R. D. Evans, Waco, is chairman of the organization and directed the meeting. C. F. Richardson, Houston attorney, and editor of the Houston Defender, is secretary. Much of the active work of organizing was carried on by Carter Wesley, Houston attorney, and T. L. Hunter, of Marshall, a committee member.

Capitol Stenographer Dies Of Self-Poisoning

MEXIA (UPI)—Funeral services were held here for Miss Gloria Wheat, 23, stenographer in one of the state offices in Austin, who was found dying of poisoning at the home of her sister, Mrs. G. W. Hopson, near here Monday. Miss Wheat, who had been employed at the capitol for several years, died of self-poisoning.

Smoot net of 1902 caused foreign nations to enact retaliatory tariff directly aimed at the American producer. Results of the recent Ottawa imperial conference, according to the petitioners, "frustrated living proof that the United States cannot impose embargoes against the products of our best customers without harmful reprisals against American goods." Among the signers of the petition were Nelson Lee Smith, Dartmouth; Willard L. Thorp, Amherst; James M. Matthews, Babson Institute; Earl D. Howard, Northwestern University; James M. Jarrott, Princeton; Eliot Jones, Stanford University; C. S. Romer, University of Michigan; Harry Gunnison Brown, University of Missouri; Arthur W. Marget, University of Minnesota; Selig Perlman, University of Wisconsin.

Elba Wheat, also a capitol employe, and her niece, Georgia Lella Hopson, had come for a week-end visit with relatives. Mrs. Hopson said Miss Wheat remarked she was tired of living and that if anything happened to her she wanted to be buried in blue. No attention was paid to her remark, Mrs. Hopson said. Sunday morning she was found lying, a carbolic acid bottle nearby. No notes were found, but a coroner returned a verdict of suicide.

Pahlequah Bridge Club Has Merry Luncheon

The members of the Pahlequah Bridge Club met at the Settles Hotel Thursday with Mrs. J. L. Rush as hostess for a delightful luncheon followed by bridge on the mezzanine floor. Bliss, A. E. Pistole, R. W. Henry, O. L. Thomas, E. J. Mary and Miss Portia Davis. Mrs. Pistole will be the next hostess.

Big Lake Company Seeking Recovery Of $1,565,878 Taxes

PITTSBURGH (UP)—The Big Lake Oil Company is seeking to recover $1,565,878.44, paid in taxes in 1925 to 1927 inclusive on net income from oil leases in Reagan county, Texas, in federal court. The company contends that inasmuch as the lands on which the leases are located, were set aside for schools by the state, leases on returns from the lands are unconstitutional.

Something New In Heaters Shown At Big Spring Store

Something new in the way of heating stoves was demonstrated Saturday at the Big Spring Hardware Company. This is a heater for homes not piped with gas; it burns distillate or furnace oil at a regulated temperature.

A representative, Mr. Thrash, from the Perfection Oil Co.'s factory, demonstrated the stove. Mr. McDaniel liked it so well that he said he was going to heat his store with a stove of this kind, hereafter. He already has a small one set up.

The heaters come in five sizes according to the amount of heat needed. The smaller sizes are round and the larger sizes are box-like. All the stoves are jacketed and give an even heat throughout the room, provided the right size stove is installed for the amount of space to be heated. All the stoves are in a brown vitreous enamel finish which will not crack, or come off, if proper care is taken. In the larger sizes the finish is grained to represent walnut.

The heat is fed from a storage supply of oil. The desired temperature is set by a regulator and nothing else is necessary. There is no stoking, no coals, no need to worry over the fire going out or getting too hot. There is not even a front door on the stove and you can't tell by looking at it that a fire is inside. One visitor in the store was told by this and tested it with his finger—his finger told him with a decided burn. Mr. McDaniel invites the public to drop by at any time and take a look at this wonderful invention. It is economical to operate, easy to clean and perfectly safe.

E. S. A. Program For Next Time Announced

Miss Helen Crowl entertained the members of the English Sigma Alpha Literary Society Tuesday evening with a very instructive meeting. Next meeting's program will be as follows: "Stoics & Epicurus" by Miss Roberta Gay; "Cynics & Epicurus" by Miss Edith Hatch; "Lucretius" by Mrs. L. C. Dalme; "Descartes, Locke, Spinoza, Newton" by Miss Marie Faubion; "Leibnitz, Kant, Fichte" by Miss Helen Crowl; "Voltaire" by Mrs. Stanley J. Davis; "Rousseau: His Life and Philosophy" by Mrs. Frank Boyle. Mrs. S. J. Davis will be the hostess.

Big Four Social Event To Be Halloween Party

The members of the Lona Star Lodge of the L. A. to B. of R. T. met at the Woodman Hall Friday afternoon for their regular meeting.

Announcements were made concerning the state meeting to be held in Temple on October 28-29. Mrs. J. T. Allen and Miss Mae Dell Henry will attend the lodge. Miss Henry will give a reading on one of the programs.

It was announced that instead of a Big 4 picnic there would be a Halloween party this year at the Fisher building on the evening of Friday, October 28.

Mrs. Gray had charge of the social hour and Mrs. Fox and Mrs. Moore served refreshments. The members attending were: Mrs. J. T. Allen, C. M. Gray, Herbert Fox, L. Y. Moore, J. P. Heard, W. O. Wason, J. P. Hawk, W. E. Clay, T. E. Baker, Frank Powell, C. A. Schull, S. M. Stinson, W. V. Crunk and E. A. Hicks.

Mrs. Benbow Entertains Friday Luncheon Club

Mrs. Paige Benbow was hostess to the members of the Friday Luncheon Club at the Settles Hotel for a lovely autumn luncheon followed by contract bridge on the mezzanine.

Mrs. St. Paragon was the highest scorer. The members attending were: Mrs. V. H. Ewell, Geo. Wilke, J. D. Biles, Geo. Garrette, Seth H. Parsons, C. W. Cunningham, Mrs. G. T. Hall was a guest. Mrs. Wilke will be the next hostess.

Mrs. Merrill Gives Bridge Breakfast Honoring Evelyn

Mrs. E. D. Merrill entertained with a bridge breakfast Friday morning honoring her daughter, Mrs. Tommy Jordan Jr.

After a delightful breakfast the two tables of guests devoted the morning to contract bridge. Miss Huppel made high score and was favored with a wall plaque. Prizes were given for low cut to both tables. These were china what-not ornaments and were won by Misses Eddy and Earley. The favors were Halloween fortunes.

Where Else Would You Expect Such Service?

All day yesterday the child was ailing. It was evident something was wrong, yet you trusted to luck—or perhaps Providence—that it would soon be alright. It had some fever and did not eat its supper. Unusual! About nine o'clock it was very restless and you put it to bed telling it to get a good sleep and it would feel better in the morning.

It is now 2 A. M. Everyone in the household is sound asleep. Only an occasional car passing breaks the silence of the neighborhood. Something awakens you and you lay quietly for a few moments. Suddenly you realize that the little one is calling and you rush to the room to find it sitting up in bed. A chill grips you. You remember it was not well and you fear it is worse and you rush to the telephone and call your physician. And if you fail to get him you call another and urge him to come at once. He answers your call. Think of the service!

Why Should You Expect It?

Nine out of ten night calls for physicians would be unnecessary if they were called when a need for their service was first shown.

You do not know of a single instance—even an emergency—in which you would ask for and expect to receive prompt service in the dead of night. Does your physician answer because of the paltry few dollars he receives? NO! His training of at least a score of years has taught him to go when and where he is needed. His ideals and his interest in humanity typify the very highest class of service.

Do you show your appreciation by paying him when he calls? You do not. At least not often, for your thoughts are on other things. And certainly he does not demand settlement then. But he does expect and has the right to demand that you do pay promptly the first of the following month and you violate every courtesy and principal of good business if you fail to pay or make arrangements to do so.

Treat your physician as you want him to treat you. Be prompt! If you are not, the word may be passed around among other physicians and your reputation for slow pay will eventually cause you to lose the chance for service from the reputable physicians of your community. Pay your doctor promptly.

CALL of the WEST

By R. G. MONTGOMERY

CHAPTER XXVIII
 Dona sat huddled on the stone couch, her jacket pulled around her and her eyes blazing. "Take one step toward me and I'll be angry," she said in an angry torrent.

"Scream?" Stan was smiling now. "I'll do more than that."
 "You might let me have one of the blankets from the bed. There are five on it." Stan stood with his hands on his hips, a wicked light in his gray eyes.

"Help yourself." Suddenly Dona realized that she had been making an unnecessary fuss. Her anger did not abate, however; she had been fooled and that in itself was an insult.

"And there's a trick combination to the bed." Ball went on. He took a step forward and Dona arose. He bent and whisked a blanket from the cot, then opened the others at the top. "You crawl in at this end, if a pine needle from the mattress sticks through you reach carefully down and pluck it out. I have never had more than four bother me in one evening. His eyes were very serious.

Dona refused to join the snoring fest. She kept remembering that she hated the killer and that she wanted to see him suffer.
 Stan took his blanket and wrangled it into a little tent. "I'll put it out," he said as he returned toward the opening of the cave.

Dona refused to move. She was sitting on the bunk, looking deeply at the scrap of Stan's blanket. She felt as if she were being forced to believe that he was honest. She got up and walked to the entrance. Ten steps down the stone corridor showed her what she wanted to know. Her eyes met with his back among the trees. The long legs stretched out across the entrance. He was looking toward the cave in slow, deliberate steps toward the opening of the cave.

Dona watched the man for a full five minutes. Then she crept back to the bunk and lay down. She had to admit that Ball was a complex person. His lean jaw, his steady eyes and his tight mouth spoiled all that she knew him to be but there were times when the tip of his nose and the gray eyes looked deep down the hallway, challenging wariness of his manner was the tell-tale that marked him for what he was. Dona had met Ball's kind before. Her musings led her toward the door and she fell to planning how she could escape. Getting up she examined the supplies. There was enough water for another day and possibly enough food for three meals such as they had eaten that night. Dona made up her mind to play Ball's game and see if he would not slip away on a foraging expedition.

She returned to the bunk and slipped off her boots and jacket. Without hesitation she slid into the bunk and snuggled down. She thought with grim satisfaction that she would spend a much warmer night than her captor. The cave was high up on the rim and the night would be cold to the point of frost.

Out at the entrance of the cave Stan Ball sat and berated himself for taking Dona prisoner. It had been a wild fancy, a decision of a second's consideration. He was always making things and afterward paying for his blunders. All he could blame in this case was to blame the posse to renew his and add more men to the already overgrown woods. He had deliberately brushed his chances of escape.

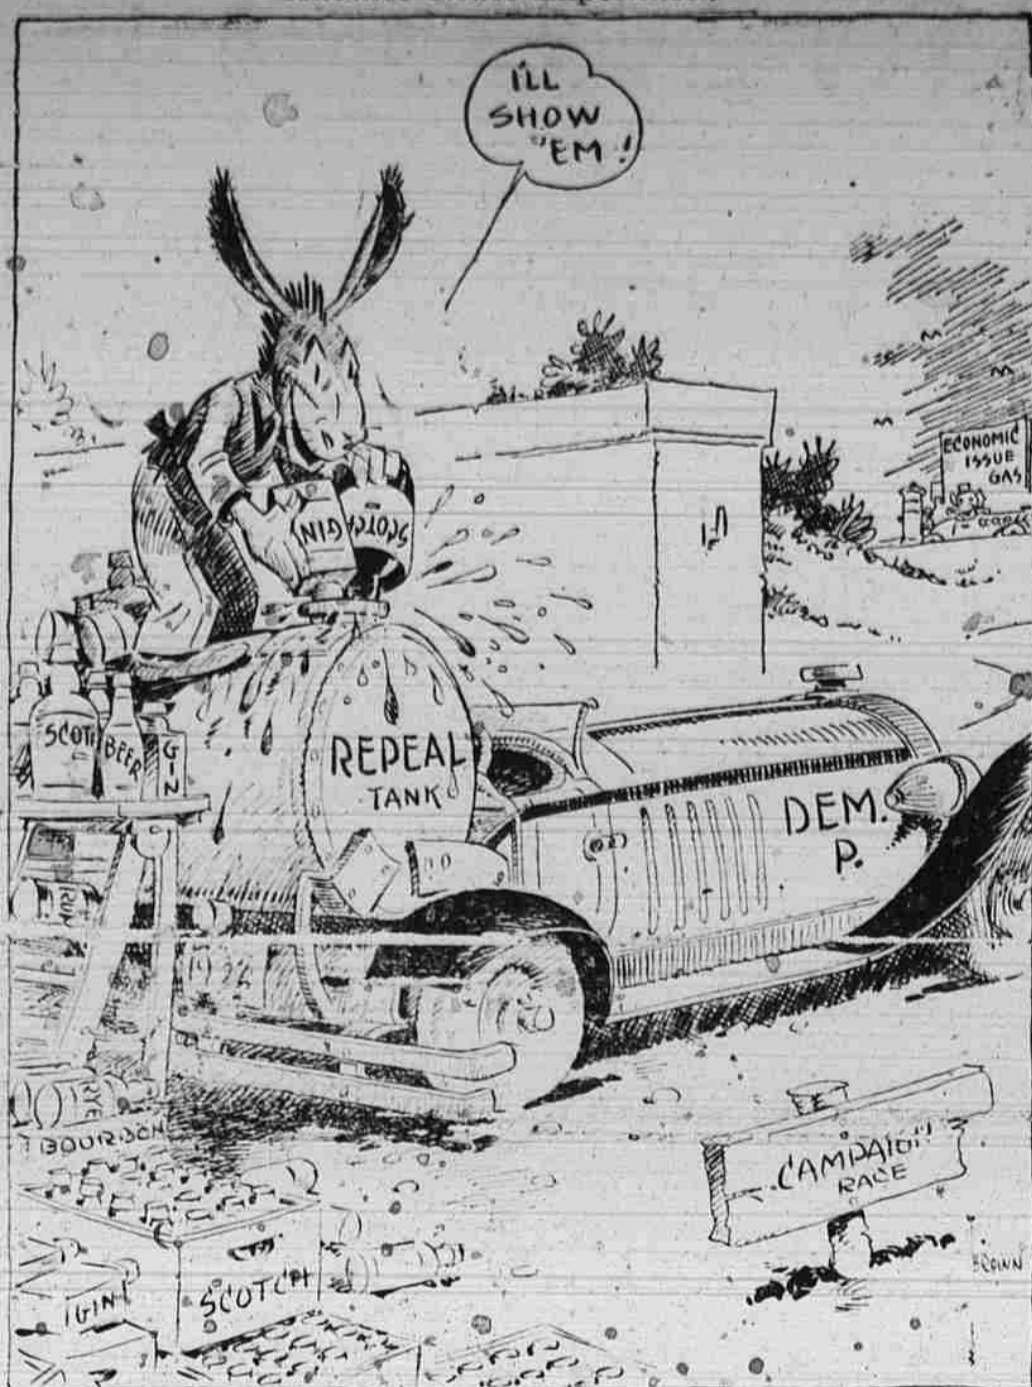

That morning that made him feel most guilty was keeping the girl overnight in the cave. On the way up the mountain he had seemed an excellent way to accuse Dona's husband from his convenience and force him to realize that he should be more attentive to such a wife. Now Stan was not so sure all this would be worth the effort.

He looked at the black blanket that he had taken from the cave. He thought of the girl and the way she had looked at him. He thought of the girl and the way she had looked at him. He thought of the girl and the way she had looked at him.

Dona was still sleeping soundly. Her left shoulder was exposed and it was not long before she was startled. Stan smiled at her and retreated to the bench outside. He was sitting in the sun and she finally made her appearance. "Good morning," he greeted her. "I hope you had a good night and that you're ready to go back to your room."

her. "We'll retire to the breakfast room at once. I've been starving for two hours."

Dona re-entered the cave without a word of protest. She had a plan and she intended to carry it out step by step. She sat down on the slab and watched Ball prepare breakfast. If she had expected him to be sparing of the thin slab of bacon she was disappointed. He cut it all up and spread it in the skillet.

The fire roared pleasantly and the bacon and coffee gave off an aroma that made Dona's mouth water. Stan produced a bit of flour and made four griddle cakes. He browned them to a turn and flipped two of them on Dona's plate. Then he smothered them with strips of crisp bacon. A steaming cup of black coffee completed the fare.

With a satisfied feeling, Dona devoured the cakes and bacon. At this rate they would be out of food with another meal. Nothing was said. Stan had dropped back into a moody silence. He was watchful, listening, and always his hand was near his belt. He was typical of the outlaw, Ball from Blind River.

After breakfast Stan let the dishes stand dirty. There was not enough water left to wash them. He sauntered out into the sunshine and stood watching the blue haze in the canyon below. Dona finally came out and sat on the outside of the entrance.

Noon came with a pleasant heat that was not oppressive but that warmed deeply. Dona had busied herself with a careful check of the country below. She was sure she had spotted the Pass Creek trail and that she could go to it if she escaped. Ball had stayed close enough to her so that any attempt to slip away would have been foolhardy.

He halted in making a turn across the little shelf and stood looking down at her. His eyes were expressionless and his lips formed a straight line.

"I'll make a bargain," he began. "And I won't listen," she cut in. "I have food cached down the trail a half mile. I'll get it and return it to you. You promise to let me go when I return. If you do not care to promise I'll take you rapidly. His eyes searched her face.

Dona met his gaze squarely. Here was a chance. She did not owe him a promise kept. He did not deserve it. She got to her feet slowly. "I'll stay here," she answered. "But I will get you if I can."

"You will be here when I get back?" Stan held her eyes with his level gaze.

"I promise," Dona met his challenging glance fairly.

Without another word he saddled the black mare and rode out through the cleft of rock. Dona ran inside the cave and began to look about for any articles she might need. Her eyes fell on the picture in the rock niche. She pulled it down and stuffed it under her jacket. Suddenly a thought struck her. Suppose Ball was only testing her and would be hiding just off the ledge? Then, too, she had promised him that she would stay.

Her pride and sense of sportsmanship made her hesitate to slip away by breaking a promise. She wanted to capture Ball by her own efforts. If she slipped away he would leave the cave and make his escape, fearing she would lead the posse to it.

Dona walked slowly out into the sunshine. She sat down and thought a long time. Finally a smile curved her lips. She got up and returned to the cave. Shoving the pall containing the remaining water over the still hot coals, she prepared to wash the dishes.

She was busy drying them on a torn cloth when a step warned her that Ball was returning. She faced about and her fingers went limp. The bulky form of Swargin towered against the light from the opening. He held two guns ready.

"So," he snarled between clenched teeth.

An Old-Fashioned Neighbor

Mrs. John Garner Expressed Her Idea Of Women's Social Duties In Washington And Elsewhere

By MAXINE DAVIS

To meet Mrs. John N. Garner is to remember happily the simple pleasures of your youth; popping corn over a coal fire—pasting labels on jelly jars—wearing your taffeta party dress. For simplicity, rare in this sophisticated era, is a cornerstone quality of the wife of the candidate for Vice President of the United States.

Now tradition has it that the Vice President and his wife are the nation's leading dinner guests. Mrs. Garner, born on the south-west border of Texas, and just a generation removed from the pio-ner woman, has an innate dignity which makes her as much at home at the right of an ambassador at dinner as in a neighbor's front porch rocking chair. But she prefers the rocking chair.

As wife, and secretary, of the Speaker of the House during the past busy winter she forewent all social functions save the necessary state occasions. The tasks of the Vice President, however, are not as onerous as those of the Speaker. Mrs. Garner will have opportunity to indulge a naturally friendly temperament, should her husband move to the other wing of the Capitol. It is a good guess, then, that the society she will head will have a homely intimate quality unique in Washington.

"In some pre-war administrations," she remarked, "entertaining was less formal, less restrained. I liked it. I think the neighborhood way is better than the resort manner of the present time. I think it engenders a comfortable, friendly feeling to call up a few women, wives of senators and representatives, and invite them for lunch."

Mrs. Garner's voice had a trace of wistfulness. For a good many of the past thirty years she has put a pot of coffee on the electric plate in the office and sent out for a sandwich, to be consumed between letters and constituents. "Small spontaneous gatherings, without regard for official conventionality, I think are the most satisfactory. If there were more luncheons over improvised omelets and muffins, and fewer scheduled weeks ahead with lobster patties and molded ice, there would be relaxation of attitude in affairs that are, to be possible—and isn't it desirable?—to be an old-fashioned neighborly feeling among the members of the governing body. But, to get close to people, you have to get down off your stilts."

"When I first came to Washington, afternoon teas formed our most important daytime function. Tea parties were always home parties. We have grown extravagant here in Washington, in our idea of what is necessary in our social life. Society is not essential, though sociability is. Constituents do not send representatives to Congress for a gay life; they send them to conduct the affairs of the nation."

"Many women believe their social activities are important to their husband's progress. This is often a commendable wife attitude, but it is ill-advised. I doubt if the social efforts of official wives are ever of material benefit."

Home is the center of the universe to this small, energetic woman. "In the crisis in which the world is suffering today I think the chief duty of women is this," she commented, "to make their homes and their husbands as happy and as peaceful as possible. If you read the lives of women whose husbands met history you will find that most of them stayed home and directed their domestic affairs. Today, if each woman who has a home, who is not obliged to make a financial contribution to it through outside work, would stay in it and attend to it, all this rest- less disquiet would cease."

Rumor Of New Plymouth Six Is Confirmed

New Cars To Appear Within Few Weeks, Says W. R. King

Persistent rumors that a new Plymouth car shortly to be announced would be a six-cylinder automobile of lower price than that of current Plymouth models, were confirmed here today by W. R. King, president of the Chrysler Corp., in a letter to the press.

"Although no definite announcement date was named, Mr. King stated that the new cars would make their appearance here within a few weeks."

"The new Plymouth Six," said Mr. King, "is the product of a new era of automobile manufacture. The recent economic stress has stimulated the progress of automotive design far ahead of the amount of advance usually achieved in any three year period. Machine tool manufacturers have volunteered more new designs recently than usual. Machine tool design has kept pace with the demand for finer but more economical manufacturing methods. Intricate machines that operate to almost unbelievable dimensions are now available. Amplifying gauges that literally split hairs not once but many times are a part of the general production scheme."

"Thus the engineering laboratory model may be reproduced in the commercial product with absolute accuracy. The Plymouth Six is a product of these new conditions. Only these recent developments permit the production of a car of so low a price and the quality of past Plymouths with many new features. The new Plymouth Plymouth plant in Detroit has been completely re-tooled. Millions of dollars have been spent for new machinery."

At the request of factory officials, the new Plymouth Six will be available in a limited quantity for a short period of time. It will be available in a limited quantity for a short period of time. It will be available in a limited quantity for a short period of time.

Winning Fire Prevention Essay

Virginia Fischer, one of the winners of prizes offered by local fire insurance agencies for the best essay on fire prevention written in each class of Big Spring High school won the prize for Sophomores with the following essay:

WHO PAYS THE FIRE LOSS?

No one would think of examining minutely every dollar which comes into his hands. People are too familiar with paper money and its standard value. In fact, it is accepted as readily as gold and silver. It can be safely stated, however, that if a hundred people were stopped on the street and asked about the money in their pockets, they would not be sure whether they were carrying United States notes, treasury notes, or Federal Reserve bank notes. People are as unthoughtful about this as they are answering the question, who pays the fire losses?

Not very long ago there was a fire in our neighborhood. Someone standing near me said "there is no use to worry; the insurance company will take care of all the loss." This is the attitude that most people assume. They think that every time the fire bell rings one or more insurance companies suffer loss. This is partially true, but the loss sustained is only for a temporary period. Insurance companies are but collectors and distributors of the fire loss. They pay the losses as they accrue, thus enabling the re-establishment of business, but collect all such amounts, with the cost of doing business and a little profit in the premium of succeeding years. The rates paid are large or small in proportion to the fire losses. If they are small, it is because there have been few fires.

Manufacturers pay the largest premiums because when their factories burn, it takes more money to replace them than it does our homes. Business men add the cost of the insurance with other items of expense to the cost of their product, and this is all paid for by the final consumer. The bread we eat, the clothes we wear, the books we use, and the machinery we operate all have in their cost a part of the national fire loss.

Therefore, why not learn how we may prevent more fires because we are the ones who have to pay for them?

Parker Fails In Suit To Recover Teapot Dome Cash

WASHINGTON (UP)—H. Leslie Parker, former part owner of an oil lease in Teapot Dome, lost his fight to obtain $1,000,000 from the federal government in a suit to recover the latter's profits from the Teapot Dome lease.

The supreme court denied Parker a review of his suit for an accounting which was dismissed by the District of Columbia court of appeals.

CORRECTION
In the Red & White Stores advertisement appearing in The Daily Herald Friday afternoon an item appeared "Pork chops, per lb.—10c." It should have read "Pork Roast, per lb.—10c." This error was due to the make-up man, and The Herald is glad to make this correction.

DAY ARRESTED
Lloyd Day, under a grand jury indictment for burglary, was arrested here Friday afternoon by Deputy Sheriffs Bob Wolfe and Andrew Merrick and Sheriff Gus White of Dawson county.

Civic Music Plan To Be Inaugurated Here

CIVIC MUSIC ASSOCIATION DALLAS, TEXAS

An audience at a concert of the Dallas Civic Music Association, an organization to which the Mid-West Texas Civic Music Association is similar, is shown in the picture above. Dallas is in her third season of these concerts. Below is Dena E. Harshbarger, now head of the Civic Concert Service, Inc., which acts as parent organization to the civic music organizations throughout the country. He originated this very democratic plan eleven years ago. Campaign to sell memberships in the Mid-West Texas association will be conducted in Big Spring and neighboring communities all this week for the purpose of bringing at least three concerts to the Big Spring municipal auditorium.

Flour And Feed Business Opens In Big Spring

W. M. Jones, who for the past eight months has been manager in Big Spring of the Kimbell Milling Company, has resigned, and has opened a flour and feed business at 60 East 2nd Street, where he will welcome his old friends and customers.

Mr. Jones will handle and stock a complete line of G. B. R. Smith Milling Company's famous flours, meal and feeds.

Mrs. R. A. Elliot of Shreveport, La., arrived here Friday to be with her sister, Miss Verberna Barnes, who will at a local hospital.

Municipal Auditorium Opens Way For Great Music Campaign To Bring Contest Artists Here Opens Monday

With the completion and opening of the Municipal Auditorium in Big Spring, the way has been opened up for the intellectual advancement of the city in the presentation of great music throughout the state have such an opportunity as is presented by reason of such adequate housing facilities and realizing this, a group of civic minded citizens recently investigated and adopted the Civic Music plan as a means to this end.

The Mid-West Texas Civic Opera Association came into existence some weeks ago as a result of a public meeting held at the Municipal Auditorium for the purpose of presenting in Big Spring during the coming season a series of great artist concerts. The plan of operation is very simple.

Commencing Monday and continuing through the week until 10 p. m. on Saturday night, October 23, the entire local and surrounding community will be invited to join this new organization through the various civic, social and musical channels both here and in adjacent communities. As in any other organization, an applicant for membership will pay annual dues, and this secure the benefits to be derived therefrom.

Dues in Civic Music will be $5 for adults and $2.50 for Juniors of 18 years or under, entitling the member to at least three concerts.

The funds thus secured are used to finance the concerts and a local committee will select such attractions as can be purchased with the funds in hand. Should the membership not reach a point where three fine concerts can be given the dues are returned to the applicant and the organization does not then function. Thus there can be no loss or profit. It is self-sustaining and there is no necessity of a guarantee on the part of any individual or group of individuals.

No Single Tickets
Only members may attend for there never are any single tickets sold to Civic Music concerts. Members may bring out-of-town guests only by special arrangement with the secretary. A local member also has the privilege through his membership card of attending any concert in other cities where the plan is operating, without additional cost and a few of the Texas cities now having concerts are, Amarillo, Wichita Falls, Dallas, Ft. Worth, Tyler and San Angelo. Big Spring is a member of the National Civic Music Association.

This very democratic plan was originated eleven years ago by Dena E. Harshbarger of Chicago, now head of the Civic Concert Service, Inc., which acts as a parent organization to the many civic music associations throughout the country. It does away with the old risk of ticket selling and is based upon the idea of building the audience in advance. Its practicability has been proven by its successful operation over the period of years.

Herbert V. Cost of the parent organization will be here to assist the local group during the entire week. Artists will not be announced until after the close of the campaign, when all of the funds are in hand. These funds remain in Big Spring under the supervision of the local officers, the Civic Concert Service, receiving their remuneration entirely in the form of contributions from the artists who are chosen to appear here.

Opens Monday
The campaign will open officially Monday evening with a dinner at the Scotch Hotel at 8 p. m. given to the officers, board of directors and workers. Mr. Cost will be the principal speaker and will outline the week to be during the week. Other local speakers will be heard.

Officers of the Mid-West Texas Music Association are: President, Dr. P. W. Malone; Vice-Presidents, Mrs. G. L. Thomas, R. E. Carlwell, Mrs. Harry Hunt, E. V. Sorenson, Mrs. Bruce Brazier and W. R. Dawes; Treasurer, Carl S. Rhoads; and Secretary, Mrs. B. T. Cardwell. The list of directors includes Loy Acuff, Wendell Benish, Mrs. C. K. Bivings, W. C. Blankenship, W. B. Bachschacher, Calvin A. Boykin, Doug. Greenbow, Zelma Chadd, Lois Cardwell, Arnes Curran, Mrs. Ben Carpenter, J. B. Dyer, Dr. J. R. Dillard, R. E. Day, Dr. C. W. Davis, Mrs. E. O. Ellington, Mrs. L. A. Eubanks, Albert Fisher, Mrs. Joe Fisher, Mrs. V. H. Flewellen, Father Theo. Francis, George Gentry, V. O. Hansen, Mrs. R. W. Henry, A. W. Hayden, Dr. W. E. Hardy, Mrs. E. F. House, Miss Nell Hatch, Miss Jena Jordan, Mrs. J. E. Kuykendall, Mrs. J. S. King, Mrs. J. H. Kirkpatrick, D. R. Lindsey, W. H. Martin, Mrs. W. J. McAdams, E. J. Mary, Mrs. Seth H. Parsons, Miss Clara Pool, E. Pickle, E. W. Pollock, Shirley Fisher, Mrs. E. Bert Parks, Mrs. R. C. Pyatt, D. H. Reed, Dr. Richard Spann, Ray Simmons, Woody W. Smith, E. G. Shotte, Mrs. J. J. Throup, Mrs. Ira Thurman, C. T. Watson, D. P. Watt, Mrs. Cecil Wasson, Amos R. Wood, Melvin J. Wise, Miss Elsie Wiley.

New Ballot Boxes Ordered By County
Getting ready for what local voters will call the "best change" Howard county has ordered 200 new ballot boxes and it has ordered all one for each precinct. The boxes are calculated to last for many years and will be used in the coming year. The boxes are being made by a local printer.
