TODAY and TOMORROW
By WALTER LIPPMANN
Governor Roosevelt on the Bonus and the Budget

It can be said of Mr. Roosevelt's statement on the bonus what Mr. Hoover said the other night about the depression as a whole: "Let no man say it could not be worse." Mr. Roosevelt might have said nothing and that would have been much worse. Or he might have come forward with a scheme to cash the bonus for needy veterans, thus setting them up as a specially privileged class. Both of these alternatives have been strongly urged upon him in no secret, and it is reassuring that he has rejected them.

What he said was that "as a matter of practical sense" a government running a deficit could not consider anticipating the bonus payment until it has converted the deficit into a surplus. He did not say that he would approve cashing the bonus if there were a surplus. He did not say he would not. This leaves the door open a little without leaving it open enough to cause him any practical trouble. For the time is far distant when the government can again hope to have a surplus. Even when current receipts and expenditures are again brought into balance—which will be a huge undertaking—there will remain the accumulated deficit to be worked off and that is not likely to be accomplished during the whole four years of his administration. A true surplus in his words can come only after a revival of business has brought several years of prosperity. Therefore, it may be said that the Roosevelt formula positively commits him to oppose and to veto a bonus bill during the whole period of depression and revival. In so far as the bonus is a threat to recovery and it is he who has effectively ranged himself against it.

But if his statement could have been worse, it could also have been better. What he has not done is to deal boldly and honestly with the moral issue. He has not said, as the President and the Secretary of the Treasury have said, that the demand for the payment of the bonus is a demand for an outright gift over and above the actual debt of the government to the veterans. He has not said that the agitation is based on the premise that ex-soldiers are a privilege class entitled to make special demands upon the whole body of taxpayers.

A greater man, a Wilson or a Cleveland, would have risen to the occasion. Instead of limiting himself to a formula which merely blocks the bonus agitation he would have made a statement which would have rallied the nation against the injustice of the agitation. It is a pity to have missed such an opportunity and it leaves Mr. Roosevelt for the time being in the same category as the other post-war statesmen who for a decade have allowed political expediency to be allied with prohibition and the veterans and the war debts and the cost of government and almost every other question that is momentous but politically inconvenient.

One and all they have hedged and postponed the difficult decisions and have stood up to fight only when it was demonstrably more dangerous to retreat than to advance. Among this lesser breed he has placed himself. The belief that he is practically committed against a measure which would cause untold hardship will thus be tempered by the reflection that so far as courage, candor and clarity in statesmanship are concerned there is no evidence here of a new deal.

Mr. Roosevelt's formula is the same old dreary inflexibility which the world has suffered, throughout the post-war generation.

The rest of his speech dealing with the budget was good enough as a testimonial to his good intentions. But it suffered, as have all the speeches in this same field by the President and the Secretary of Treasury, from a lack of frankness about the future of the budget. All these oracles are fervent in their protestations about the desirability and the necessity of balancing the budget through retrenchment. But no one of them has yet dared to point out where those retrenchments would be made. The reason for their silence is that the possible area of important retrenchment is the area of the subsidies to special groups and of payments to veterans injured in the war. Every student of the budget knows that it is there and there alone that large savings can be made.

Yet the Administration spokesmen tell us day in and day out how

Steers Off To McCamey Expecting To Gain First Conference Victory In Contest Friday With Badgers

The Big Spring High Steers were expecting their first victory in the District 3 percentage column as 30 members of the squad, along with Coaches Bristow and Brown, left at noon today for their initial invasion of McCamey territory, and for their third meeting in as many years with the Badger team.

Despite the fact that three regulars, Co-Captain W. H. Coos, Paul Roberts and Livan Harris, were not included in the starting lineup at the Bovievs were optimistic over their chances for victory in their second conference start of the year. Sweetwater opened the local District 3 schedule by defeating the Steers 13 to 0 here last Friday.

Rookies predominated in the tentative starting lineup issued by Coach Bristow here Friday morning, with six non-lettermen due to take the field along with such veterans as Fred Martin, Clifton Smith, Elmer Dyer, Howard Schwarzenbach, Henry Riehbourg and Don To Stain.

Jack Dean, who played a stellar game against the Mustangs, will be depended upon to handle Coats' wing berth, and Charlie Vives will be given the call as his running mate over Ole Copell. Dean's play in the last two weeks has stamped him with a logical first place in his class.

It is expected that only one week's supplementary practice to get down under punts faster in the McCamey contest he may find himself a sure starter throughout the season.

At the tackles Woodrow Armstrong and Cecil Reid, two squadmen from last year, are nominated over Red Sanders and Herbert Fletcher-Sanders was a letterman last year who was injured in his first year of competition.

Fred Martin, Clifton Smith, and Elmer Dyer are to handle the three pivot positions with Bob Flowers due to see action at one of the places or both.

Harris Still Out
With Harris still sacking from injured ankles the same backfield that has started in the majority of the games this year will make the field as in the Badgers. Schwarzenbach will be at quarter, Moran and Koberg at halfbacks, and Co-Captain Riehbourg at full.

Realizing that it would be no easy task to take their third straight victory from the McCamey club in as many years the Steers were drilled this week in pass defense. The Badgers' most effective weapon is a short pass with the Smalley to Barnett combination particularly troublesome. Every touchdown the McCamey team has scored this year has been via the overhead route, and passes are depended upon to score extra points as well.

The local running attack faces stern opposition in the Badger forward wall, who will make Harry Bennett, who plays a roving, unorthodox game, stand out. Word, center, is another stumbling block for running plays.

Tentative starting lineup:
Big Spring McCamey
Dean Reese
Left End
Armstrong L. Barnett
Left Tackle
Smith Ray
Dyer Left Guard Word
Martin Center Byrd
Reese Right Guard Davis
Vines H. Barnett (c)
Schwarzenbach Smalley
Moffan Quittback Flowers
Moffan Left Half Johns
Koberg Right Half Perry
Riehbourg Fullback

Public Liability Insurance On Cars Hiked 22 Per Cent

AUSTIN (UP)—A rapidly increasing number of automobile accidents was blamed here for announcement of an increase of 10 per cent in public liability insurance rates on commercial cars and 22.6 per cent on private cars. At the same time the property damage insurance rates on private cars was cut 6.9 per cent and, on commercial cars, 5.3 per cent.

The new rates are based on experience tables prepared by Fred B. Harris, manager of the Texas Automobile Insurance service office.

These figures show the average damage done by a private automobile is $11.02 a year. The new rate will meet such a loss. The average for a commercial car is $14.88 and the new commercial car rate will still leave the insurers a loss unless accident rates decrease.

AUSTIN (UP)—Increased insurance rates on dwellings and on stocks of goods, and lowered rates on fireproofed and sprinkler equipped risks, seemed to be favored at a hearing on insurance rates held Friday before the state fire insurance commission.

Forty-five specific rates have been scheduled for consideration at the hearing, which is an open one with large attendance.

New rates, based on hearing, likely will be issued by the state commission within a few weeks.

Unavoidable Accidents

FOR ALL practical purposes there is no such thing as an unavoidable accident. Particularly is this true as to a collision between two automobiles or between two trains, for someone is at fault.

That is the dictum of W. P. Borland, safety director of the department of commerce.

While accidents on railroads and accidents have been decreasing for years, there has been a constant increase in the number on the highways, Mr. Borland added.

Some accidents are unavoidable, but only because a set of circumstances made them so. Break them down by analysis, and you discover that they were avoidable. Perhaps one accident is caused by a car owner's failure to replace worn-out tires. The weak tire falls at a critical moment and the machine crashes into a car across the street. Certainly the accident was unavoidable in the sense that it might have happened somewhere else than at that exact point. It might have happened on a smooth stretch of open road without serious consequence. But the point is it would have happened anywhere, if the driver had been faultless in the mechanical equipment of his car.

The number of avoidable accidents are many, the number of unavoidable very few. Most of the unavoidable ones are due to hidden mechanical faults, or unexpected conjunction of unforeseen factors in a given situation. Eliminating mechanical faults and preventing the rise of emergency factors would head off many an accident.

Mrs. Eubanks Made District Officer At Church Meet

SAN ANGELO (UP)—The district convention of the Galveston Churches named the Rev. W. A. Kindred, president, recommended that the state convention meet here in 1934 and urged that the 15th amendment be retained intact; and more hearty endorsement and enforcement carried into effect. The day convention at the First Christian church concluded Wednesday night.

Officers elected included C. C. Klingman of Colorado as vice-president; Mrs. L. A. Eubanks of Big Spring as secretary and Dr. J. W. Stephens, retiring president as a member of the state board. Selection of the time and next place of meeting was left to the executive committee.

Other recommendations suggested a definite program of missionary education; increased membership; increased stewardship; development of spiritual life; sending of pastors, their wives, superintendents and at least three key workers to the coaching conference at Erie Bible College January 2 to 6 at Fort Worth; making available graded missionary materials; and setting up of standards for selecting delegates to the Center Point conference for young people; and conducting of leadership training courses for the church workers.

About seventy persons were at the banquet at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening, at which time young people who had attended the Center Point conference told of its value, and Marion Ross and D. R. Lindley, instructors there, stressed the character of youth attending.

Patrick Henry, state mission secretary, told of the reduced budget, which is meeting the need only because ministers and workers everywhere are cooperating. He also appealed for sacrificial support of Christian schools whose incomes are limited as compared to the reported schools of the state.

Seven churches were represented at the convention. Members of the coordinating committee included Dr. D. H. Lindley of Big Spring, Mrs. W. W. Colson and the Rev. W. H. Kindred of San Angelo. The resolutions committee included A. Fleming of McCamey, C. M. R. Fort Worth and Mrs. L. M. Brooks of Big Spring. The time and place committee consisted of Mrs. R. H. Compton, Mrs. Bertie McMeisters of Fort Worth and J. C. Carver of El Paso.

'Can Priest Forgive Sins' To Be Subject Of Lecture This Evening At St. Thomas' Catholic Church

"Can Catholic Priests Forgive Sins?" will be the subject of the lecture this evening at 7:30 at St. Thomas' Church, 508 North Main Street, by the Rev. Thomas J. McGrath, S. J., of Shreveport, La., who is conducting an eight day dogmatic mission that will end Sunday night. The Rev. Theo. Francis, O. M. I., cordially invites the general public, irrespective of religious belief or church affiliation.

In a more restricted sense, and in the sense in which I use the word in this lecture, authority means "a right to command and to bind in conscience." Authority is necessary and essential for the well being, nay for the very being of any society of men. And it would be very strange indeed if Christ, who was so wise and so prudent, had not left authority in the church that He established.

New York Central Would Ask For Loan

WASHINGTON (UP)—The New York Central railroad asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to borrow $2,500,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to repair and restore equipment.

The road estimated 1,500 men could be put to work for seven to eight months in repairing 10,000 steel box cars and 3,000 auto box cars at its shops at East Buffalo, N. Y., and Indianapolis.

Both Sides Rest In Trial At Donna

RIO GRANDE CITY (UP)—Both state and defense rested suddenly just before noon in a trial of five de-fendants in the so-called Doggs ar-district murder plot.

The end of testimony came after George Ruthven, one of three de-fendants who signed statements admitting complicity, had testified for the state and after Judge Hood Boone had sustained a defense mo-tion for an instructed verdict of not guilty for Water Van Allen.

Red And White Stores End Year's Successful Business

Are you "dated-up" for Halloween? If you aren't already, you will be in more than one meaning of the word, when you find out how delicious the new All-Saint's recipes. These recipes have dates inside them and they will get you dates of the engagement variety for the big night when wishes woo and owls whoo. For guests take to them like hounds take to hoo!

Naturally for your Halloween party or dinner you will have some of the traditional foods. Some people think the spooks would sure fail to appear if cider and gingerbread and maybe pumpkin pie were omitted. But you needn't serve them "plain" or in the prosaic forms employed by hostesses not so clever as you.

Deny it though you may, you must admit you enjoy having your refreshments complimented. To cap these sweet praises, bring out something everybody likes, everybody can eat for their health's sake and something that's new enough to be smart. The recipes given here have been chosen with both eyes on all these points and according to the editor are ideal for the purpose. Date-up yourself, then date-up your recipes and let yourself in for a high old time.

And—economy tip—many grocers feature Halloween specials at this time; look for them when you go to market.

Hob-Goblin Gingerbread
Make a gingerbread with your usual recipe, and bake in a sheet. While it is baking, make your hoo-bie filling as follows: Mash 2 packages cream cheese (6 oz.) and to it add 1 package hopped nut-dates (sliced), 1 cup chopped nut-meats and 1-2 teaspoon salt. Add enough cream so mixture will spread. When gingerbread is done split, spread with this filling and replace top layer. Serve warm. Delicious! If you prefer, add the 1-2 package of dates right to your gingerbread batter and bake as usual. Then frost with orange frosting.

Witches' Brew
1 can grapefruit • 2 cup water
1/2 cup sugar
Pack grapefruit in equal parts of ice and salt or in the freezing compartment of the mechanical refrigerator for 3 to 4 hours. Make a syrup of the sugar and water. Cool. Open the can of grapefruit by cutting just under the top rim so that the contents may be removed in a mold. Place in a punch bowl, or serving container. Pour over the cooled syrup and the cider. Serve in tin cups with a spoon.

Orange-Cider Gelatine
1 pkg. lemon- 1/3 pkg. pasteurized flavored gelatine sized dates
3/4 cup boiling 1/2 cup nutmeats, figs, and citron
1 cup sweet cider (mixed)
Dissolve gelatine in the boiling water. Add the cider. Cool until mixture begins to thicken. Add fruit and nuts which have been cut in small pieces. Pour into wet molds until firm. Unmold. Serve with whipped cream. Six servings.

Halloween Dates
Stuff pasteurized dates with Orange Fondant, leaving some of the fondant exposed. Press a nutmeat into fondant if you like, then roll in granulated sugar by shaking in a bag with the sugar. Add a little cinnamon or cocoa to sugar for the dates if desired.

Orange Fondant
Stir a cup of confectioners' sugar into a beaten egg yolk, adding enough orange juice to make stiff stiff. Add grated orange rind to fondant if you wish to prefer.

Quality First Consideration Of Red & White

The dominant characteristic of the more than 500 items sold under the three brands of Red & White, Blue & White and Green & White is quality. Each brand is truly representative of the best there is in its grade.

Every manufacturer of Red & White foods realizes that each item must pass the tests and analysis of the Red & White organization. He knows that his goods must also pass the tests of the Good Housekeeping Bureau of Foods, Sanitation and Health.

In the buying offices the quality of Red & White foods is tested by comparison with the recognized highest standards. It is also proved by expert laboratory analysis and by practical kitchen tests.

The manufacture or packing of goods is supervised on a constant basis by firms that are both financially and morally responsible and who can furnish the best of references. They must have the equipment and facilities to produce and ship promptly.

Every manufacturer must agree to these five fundamentals:

1. Ship Red & White Supply houses quality merchandise and rigidly maintain its quality.
2. Reflect every economy in prices to these supply houses.
3. Improve their service which includes sound selling plans and suggestions as well as efficient transportation to our supply houses.
4. Offer us and improvements in packages and in new selling or distributive ideas which they may originate in the down brands in ample time so that we may adopt them for our brands should we so desire.
5. At all times bill every Red & White supply house on our brands of merchandise at prices at least as low as the lowest price quoted by any manufacturer on any other brand of equivalent quality under like conditions.

Each manufacturer must furnish type samples of the products which are inspected and kept for comparison with the products delivered to the Red & White supply houses. These samples are also used for comparison with competitive brands.

From time to time the Buffalo headquarters receive from the supply houses samples of merchandise delivered by manufacturers. By testing these samples, a perpetual record of quality is secured.

The immense volume of Red & White is very attractive to the type of food manufacturers and packers. This volume also secures the most advantageous terms.

Red & White always recognizes the fact that the manufacturer is entitled to a legitimate profit. No endeavor is ever made to hammer prices down to the extent that the manufacturer may be tempted to compromise quality in order to meet prices.

Through the selection of the best type of manufacturers and the constant checking of quality by the buying offices, supply houses and retailers, the quality of Red & White merchandise is positively assured.

This again proves the soundness of a co-operative group in which the manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer all contribute their best to win the success of the entire organization.

Sixty-two different items of Red & White foods and household commodities, such as yellow and additional orange juice and color with orange food coloring.

modities have been tested and approved by the Bureau of Foods, Sanitation and Health of Good Housekeeping Magazine up to April, 1932. Other items are constantly in the process of being tested and analyzed.

Dr. Walter H. Eddy, head of this bureau, makes the following statement which reveals the care taken in analyzing and testing food products:

"Every food product advertised in Good Housekeeping, has been tested and approved by Good Housekeeping's Bureau of Foods, Sanitation and Health. The bureau approval is given only to foods that the tests show are satisfactory in quality, pure and free from preservatives, properly packed, truthfully labeled. Foods that fail to meet the bureau's standards cannot be advertised in Good Housekeeping."

"This is the reason why Good Housekeeping can put its own guaranty on every food it advertises."

"A food has to be good to meet Good Housekeeping's standards. A can of food may look good, smell good or taste good but that is not enough for Good Housekeeping's Bureau of Foods, Sanitation and Health for the food chemists and bacteriologists of the bureau staff demand that a canned food tell many things about itself before they will certify that it is good."

"When a canned food arrives at the bureau for test, a record is made of the statements on the label for the contents of the can must live up to those statements, or it cannot obtain the bureau approval."

"Next, the canned food goes to the bureau chemists for analysis. First, they weigh the contents to make sure they check with the weight stated on the label."

"The inside of the can is then examined for traces of chemical action. If these are present, it naturally shows that the can was not properly sealed and that the contents have commenced to deteriorate."

"Finally, chemical and bacterial tests are made to find out whether or not the product is satisfactory in quality, and free from putrefactive organisms and artificial preservatives."

"You would think by this time that Good Housekeeping had found out everything about the 'canned food. But a final test, and an important one remains."

"The product has proved to be pure and of good quality. We know it has the food value claimed for it. But what will the cook say when she uses it in preparing a meal? What will the family say when it is put on the table before them? Good Housekeeping wants to know this too."

"So the canned food goes to the domestic science departments of Good Housekeeping Institute. They cook it and serve it in various ways. They eat it before trained tasters who judge whether or not its flavor and palatability are acceptable."

"Naturally, these tests will vary for different kinds of foods but the procedure outlined above gives some idea of the pains Good Housekeeping takes to make sure that only good products that are pure, wholesome and satisfactory in quality are offered to its readers through its advertising pages."

"It is not necessary that a food be advertised in Good Housekeeping in order to have it tested for approval; a fact that adds much to the value of the test."

District Has 14 Retailers Under Banner

Wisdom Of Plan Reflected In Growing Patronage Here

One year ago Red & White stores began operations in Howard and neighboring counties, with the H. O. Wooten Grocer company as distributor.

At that time there were ten stores in the district served by the Big Spring offices and warehouse of the Wooten company. Today there are fourteen.

This is an indication of the satisfaction the Red and White plan has earned for retailers and consumers alike. Unlike other plans whereby grocery dealers sell under a similar name or plan and handle goods coming principally from one wholesaler, the Red and White plan calls for no royalty for use of the name, and each store is individually, that is locally, owned.

Hayes Stripling, manager for the Wooten company here and, in that capacity, director of distribution of merchandise for Red & White Stores, voiced gratification at the end of the first year of local operations over success of the individual stores and the growing patronage enjoyed by them.

The Red and White stores of this district are: Big Spring; Allen Grocery, A. H. Bugg, W. T. Roberts, Bugg and Scott, Maupin and Smith, John Whitmire, M. Worlick; Fred Sellers; For-san; N. W. Madison; Stanton; R. L. Henson, A. C. Straub; Ackerly; A. D. Brown; Lamasa; Hull Brothers.

Mrs. G. R. Porter has returned from a two weeks trip spent at her home in Waxahachie and in Dallas attending the Fair. Mr. Porter met her in Fort Worth and accompanied her home.

Customers Are Thinking

Consumers are now doing a lot of thinking in the matter of buying the every-day necessities of life. People are beginning to realize that a great portion of the supplies of the country are drifting into the control of a few gigantic corporations. And the consumer is wondering whether this is the best thing for a country like the United States which has always held its opportunities open to the efforts, ingenuity and genius of the individual.

The Red & White organization has no fight on any system of merchandising but it knows that in order to give the consumers the best values there must be an amalgamation of the independent interests. The Red & White group of independent retailers now represents an organization with purchasing power as great as any other food organization in the world and is able to pass on to the consumers, values which are unsurpassed by any other form of merchandising. People are always glad to buy their supplies from a home-owned store where the proprietor is a resident of the community and contributes to its civic and social up-keep. Red & White stores are that kind.

IN APPRECIATION

TO OUR FRIENDS AND PATRONS:

Upon this first Anniversary of Red & White Stores in West Texas, our first thought is to extend our most sincere thanks for the patronage which you have so generously given us since we started in September of last year.

Your favors and your patronage have been greatly appreciated, we assure you.

Like many other home-owned independent stores we have had our problems, but by your kindness and patronage you have assisted us wonderfully in helping to solve them.

Co-operating with thousands of other retail merchants in the Red & White organization we will, of course, be able to serve you even more economically and more satisfactorily in the future than we have in the past.

Everything we can do will be done to supply you with the highest grade food products at the most reasonable prices, and we promise courteous treatment at all times.

We hope to make our service so valuable that we may not only merit your continued patronage but that you may also recommend us to your friends.

Again, we thank you!!!

Sincerely,

How To Cut The Family Grocery Bill

Regular customers at Red & White stores realize the splendid saving made in the family grocery bill. They are not obliged to depend upon Saturday special sales for reduced prices because Red & White stores have reduced prices every day in the week and it is this splendid saving, a little bit on each item purchased, which cuts down the grocery bill. Very true Red & White stores also feature special week-end sales and consumers are offered Extra Special values but it is the everyday saving which they make that is the thing that counts. This is all made possible by the increased purchasing power which the Red & White store has as a result of combining its purchases with thousands of other independently owned retail grocers throughout the United States and Canada.

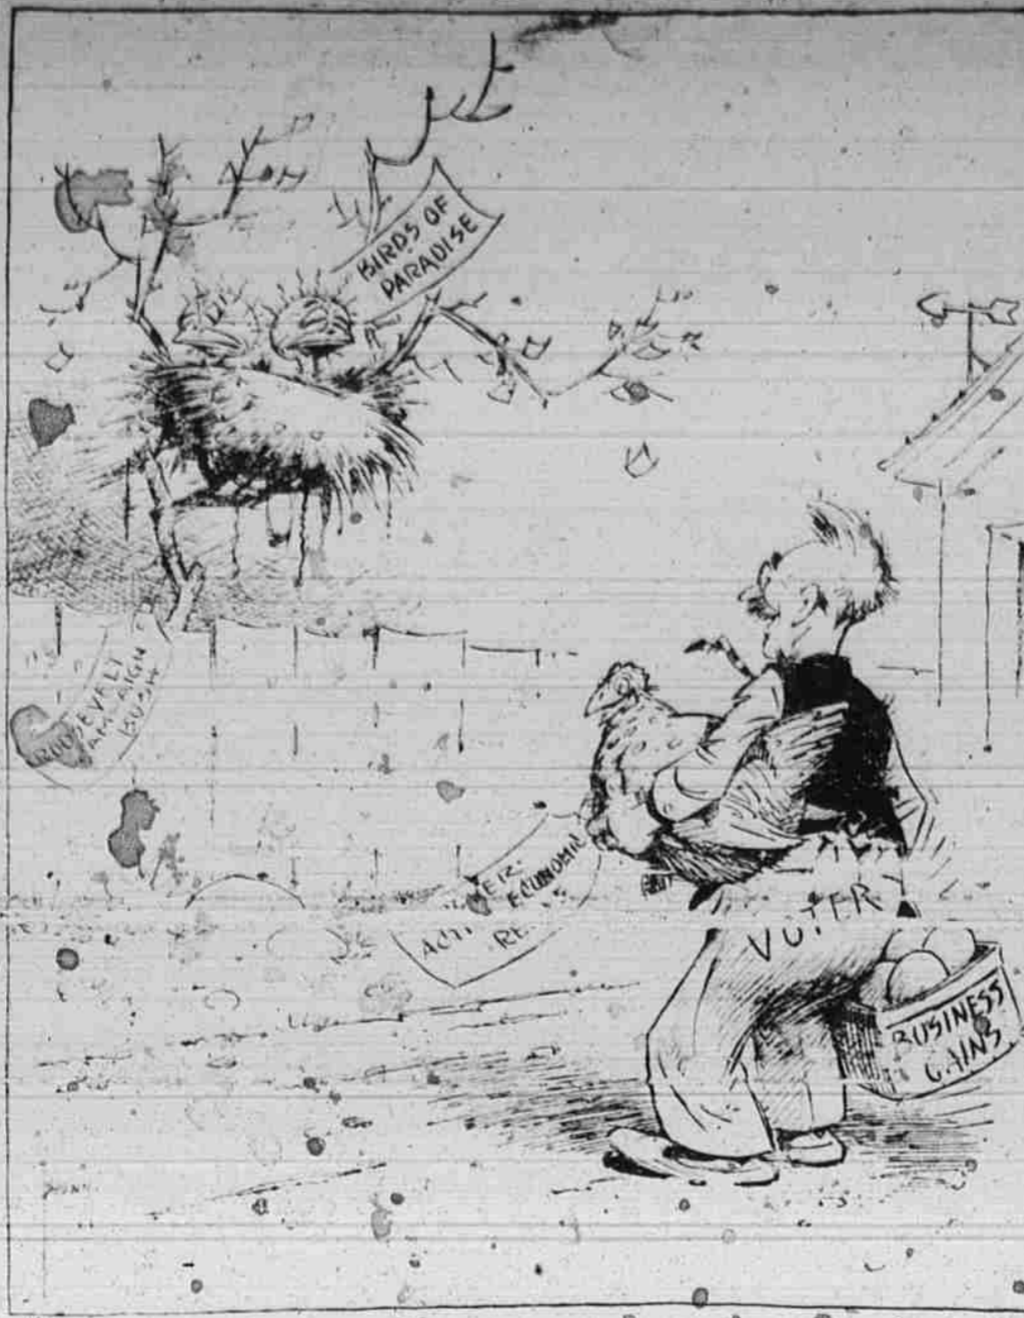

CALL OF THE WEST

Stan Ball seated himself on the grass facing his prisoner. Better sit down and rest a few minutes, he said.

Dona sat down and propped her chin in her hands to steady herself. She could not look Ball in the face. She did not regret for a moment saving him from the mob but she did have to throw up some of her own ideas. Her eyes were hot as the first hour passed. She made her determination to kill Stan more inhumanly than ever. She knew this would be impossible if she looked at him as his old man, but she did not.

A few minutes passed. Then Dona said in a low voice: "I am really rowdy." She got up and went to the black car. She got in and she closed the door. She was trying to get away. She was trying to get away. She was trying to get away.

Barnum was right!

Airplanes in the United States consumed approximately 900 per cent more gasoline in 1931 than in 1926, according to the research department of the Sinclair Refining Company. Nearly 21,000,000 gallons of gasoline were required for flying operations during 1931 as against slightly more than 2,250,000 gallons used by planes in 1926. Aviation lubricating oil showed a corresponding increase and rose from 164,482 gallons consumed in 1926 to 1,175,099 gallons in 1931.

As an indication of the progress made in the United States in the development of air transportation, it was stated that in 1926 there were only 78 regular scheduled services as against 126 today. These scheduled services cover the United States with a network of airways and include destinations to points outside of the country as well. While approximately 47,000,000 miles were flown by scheduled services in 1931, this was only about half the mileage covered by so-called miscellaneous flying, which includes charter flying, instruction, testing, crop dusting, aerial surveying, photography and many other minor operations.

Superior motors and improved ship designs account in a large measure for the better mileage results obtained. Resulting in better gasoline and lubricating oils have played an important part in the advancement of aviation.

Gasoline consumption by established airways increased from 863,617 gallons in 1926 to 19,157,382 gallons, while the mileage decreased from 3 miles to 2.72 miles per gallon and lubricating oils and miscellaneous flying, of which accommodate more than 50 passengers. On the other hand miscellaneous flying showed a mileage increase per gallon of from 7.34 gallons in 1926 to more than 8 miles in 1931 and consumed 11,836,000 gallons of gasoline in 1931 as against 2,426,428 gallons in 1926.

PASTOR ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

The Rev. S. Althea Berrie, 52-year-old minister, went to trial in Muskogee, Okla., charged with murdering his first wife, who died last spring allegedly from poison. The pastor was arrested several weeks after he married Ida Bess Bright, young Sunday school teacher in his church. He is shown (left) with a detective en route to court. (Associated Press Photo)

Moody-Clark Argument Leads To Writing Of Book By Missourian

KANSAS CITY, Mo., (UP)—Four years ago at the democratic national convention in Houston, Gov. Dan Moody of Texas and Bennett C. Clark, son of the famed speaker of the house, had an argument.

Both were on the convention platform committees, which had before them the liquor bill. A committee man took the stand that anyone who talked modification or repeal was guilty of nullification and the encouragement of law violation.

Moody and Clark argued the question. Clark suggested Moody investigate the record of John Quincy Adams' fight for the right of petition.

Instead, Clark himself did. So thoroughly did he investigate, that he decided to write a book.

"The Biography of John Quincy Adams," by Bennett C. Clark, candidate for the United States senate from Missouri, was reviewed last night by Dr. Burris Jenkins at the Community Church Session.

News Briefs

QUINTON, Ok.—Three Oklahoma triplets have been christened "Roosevelt, Garner and Murray" by their full-blooded Choctaw Indian parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Hod. The largest boy, an eight-pounder, was called "Roosevelt." The "Garner" name was applied to the seven-pounder. Gov. W. H. Murray was honored with the smallest lad, a five-pounder.

LINCOLN, Neb.—The depression is hard on co-eds at the University of Nebraska. Librarians report that men students are spending their leisure hours in reading instead of spending money on the girls.

DALLAS—Zoo-keeper L. E. Bloncin has solved the problem presented by a shortage of fish. He is giving three parts of cod liver oil every day to birds and animals used to eating seafood.

CHICAGO—Hunting is pretty good in Chicago this fall, said A. G. Kollman and O. A. Hillger today. The pair shot a black fox on the bank of the drainage canal on the south side. They said several had been seen in the vicinity.

Policeman Frank Murray of the anti-accident squad reported an accident today. He had wrecked one of the squad's accident prevention cars when he crashed into a lamp post to avoid a collision.

HOME TOWN

Highway 9 south of town can be awarded before January 1, let us hope. If we don't get some contracts awarded before that time Howard county may lose entirely any opportunity of benefiting from highway funds all because slightly more than 50 per cent of voters of the state were at most everything on general principles.

Heard a speaker say yesterday that "a politician is one who seeks to make a living off the state, and a statesman is one who sincerely wishes to do something for the state."

Let us all do our part toward exterminating the politicians and propagating the statesmen. Trouble is most of us are natural-born suckers who grab bits thrown out by men who see in elections only a chance to make a living off the people. And, while we're grabbing

Four adult classes of the First Methodist Church To Hold Joint Session

Four adult classes of the First Methodist church Sunday school will hold a joint meeting at 9:45 a. m. Sunday in the church auditorium.

The class teachers will each give a 10-minute talk on the lesson. A musical number will be given by each class. Classes to participate are those taught by Misses C. T. Watson, Fox Stirling and Charles Morris and the Men's Bible class.

Raymond Lyons and C. W. Mitchell left Thursday morning for New York City and Chicago. They will be gone indefinitely.
