CHAPTER VI

Synopsis

Attractive, red-headed Gillian Meade lives with her bachelor Uncle Anselm at Rydal House in Eastern Canada. Realizing that the family fortune is almost exhausted, Gillian accepts wealthy Jon Hillyer at a house party in his luxurious home at Lac St. Cloud. Here she meets Simon Killigrew, best friend of the late Jaffry Clay, the young poet to whom Gillian had been engaged. Killigrew blames Gillian for Clay's untimely death and Gillian suddenly realizes that what Simon thinks matters a great deal to her. She tries to conquer her growing love for Simon.

Jon's trainer wanted him at the boxes. "I'll be only a few minutes, Gillian. I'll find you with our party."

"Right!" She waved him away, but when she turned from watching his tall, spare figure disappear in the crowd, she saw the last of the house party, Sir Bates Eyston, shepherding the rest into the Chamber of Mysteries. Only Simon Killigrew was left. She forced herself to look up at him calmly and smile an impersonal smile and say, "We seem to be two strays from the flock. Jon left me to go see about one of his horses that's gone lame and the rest have vanished into the Chamber of Mysteries."

"Would you like to go there too?"

The dark eyes were searching her face, studying her, trying, it seemed, to look into her soul. She gave him, at last, look for look and for a moment, barriers down, they saw each other. He said then, his voice a bit unsteady, "I can see why a man would—"

Her look stopped him, the kindling darkness in her eyes. "We won't quarrel again, you and I," she said.

"I don't like to be hated. Not by you. I don't like to think that all I'll ever have to remember of you is that you despised me. I'm going now to find Jon."

She turned from him before he could speak, and walked as quickly as she could through the crowd. She met Jon coming from the horse stalls. He said, "It's almost time for you to ride Hero, Gil. Do you feel up to it? You look tired."

"Oh, I'm all right. Sure I'll ride him."

She would be glad to ride Hero. It would give her something to do. Something to think about.

"He's a bit nervous in front of a crowd," Jon cautioned her. "Good luck, Gil."

The bay was a splendid animal, big-boned, rangy, built for staying power as well as speed. Gillian sat him well. She knew that Jon meant to give her Hero for her own when they were married. She whispered, "We'll have good times together, Hero, you and I. We'll be great friends, eh?"

Hero stepped proudly into the ring before the judge's stand. He wasn't hard to manage. He seemed to enjoy the spotlight.

She put him through his paces. She had almost forgotten about Simon Killigrew. She saw him standing by the rail, gazing up at her, thinking bitterly, no doubt, how well she looked on Jon Hillyer's fine horse, thinking that she was happy because she was getting what she wanted. Then, like a squall, a great hubbub swept up and around her—screams of men and women shouting and the trampling of feet. Hero reared high, his neck arched, his eyes rolling wildly. She caught a glimpse of a great black dog, an Aisatian, with red eyes and slaving jaws. She fought wildly to quiet Hero who began to buck. She heard the dog snapping, snarling at his heels. He lashed out and began to rear wildly.

Then she was off. She hit the ground, lay face down, shielding her arms, eyes closed tightly, the horror of those flailing hooves, of those foam-crusting jaws, looming all about her. She felt the clasp of strong hands. She was snatched up lightly, easily, as if she were a tot. She was held in a powerful, comforting embrace. "Gillian," she heard. "Darling Gillian!"

She did not open her eyes. She thought it would be nice to keep them closed forever, to hear forever in her heart the urgent tenderness of that voice. Darling—

She knew he had carried her through a break in the rail. She opened her eyes slowly and looked up into his, loving the concern in them, the fear in their clear brown depths. "Are you all right?" he asked. "You're not hurt?"

She shook her head. Not hurt, thank you. I can make out all right if you'll just set me down."

She stood, resting a hand on his shoulder. Jon came hurrying from the crowd. She said, "Is Hero all right?"

"Be hanged with Hero! How are you? The brute might have trampled you to death."

"But he didn't." She looked from Jon's anxious eyes to Simon Killigrew's thin brown visage, expressionless now.

"Splendid the way you dashed in there, Killigrew, and pulled Gillian out from under," said Jon. "It's a great debt I owe you. If anything had happened to her—"

"And I must thank you for saving my life." Gillian's eyes were mischievous. "I too am in your debt for always."

He looked briefly at both of them, then looked away. "You owe me nothing," he said stiffly. "I'm glad you weren't hurt, Miss Meade."

"Good-bye." She gave him her hand. He held it briefly, then hurried away.

"Queer egg," Jon said. "I never saw anyone move so fast as he did when Hero threw you under his hooves."

"He'd have done the same for anyone else," said Gillian, but she thought with wild triumph in her heart, he would never have said to anyone else what he said to me—"Darling Gillian!"

The rest of the party had come straggling from the Chamber of Mysteries, looking rather more bored than mystified. Jon told them all about Gillian's fall. The dog had not been made, just a little touched with the sun. He had been captured and locked up.

Sunset deep red above the black hills, making it a magic road through the woods. Gillian sat wedged between Moira and Morton Ilsey in the rear of the station wagon. Jon sat across from her and his eyes rarely left her face. Kindly Jon. Was it treason to him to feel the way she did?

Jon drove her back to Rydal House the following morning.

"I don't like the Autumn," Jon was bent over the wheel, eyes straining into the grayness. Wet and sodden leaves drifted down and one stuck to a corner of the windshield, faded an yellow. "I like the Spring, Gillian. Why can't it always be Spring?"

"No Autumn; no Spring. There you have it! Why, Jon, I love the Autumn. It makes me think, and I can feel things better and—and maybe understand myself more than at other times."

"You're happy?"

"Yes." She felt a little guilty, knowing the real, deep-seated source of her happiness. "I really am happy, Jon."

"I'm so glad you feel like that, Gil," he said, "I'll make you happy, my dear. I'll give you everything you may have ever hoped for. Let's make it as soon as ever you can."

"We'll make it soon. Don't be afraid, Jon. I won't melt or run away."

"I love you so. And the days with you will go by so quickly."

Anselm Meade was not at Rydal House when they arrived. He had gone to Bishopsgate with Deborah, Hawtry said, and would return that evening. Jon stayed only a little calmly, in master-of-fact words, rather than in blank verse? It's done, Anse. It's going to be." Her mouth set stubbornly.

Anse looked at her sideways, slyly. "Set your jaw and charge right in. Let 'em have it. Boys of the old brigade—no, darn it, girls of the new brigade!" He scowled blackly.

"Not enough spanking when you were small—that's my fault and my deep reproach. Well, it's too late now. Tell me what else happened."

"I fell off a horse. I was showing Hero for Jon and a dog ran amok and got between his legs. It was pretty awful. I hit the ground hard and I'd have been trampled badly if—if someone hadn't dashed in and picked me up"—and said, Darling! Darling, Gillian! she thought, and held me close and felt pain that I should be in danger.

"Plucky!" said Anse. "Well done. Chap deserves a medal. Who was he?"

"He was one of the guests—Simon Killigrew. He—he was a great friend of Jaffry Clay's." With an effort she kept her voice steady, casual. "He published Jaffry's book and now, with Jon's help, he's going to publish some more. He has a place of his own, Jon told me, Simon's Printery, in Beaver Hall Square. He was swimming in Rydal Water last Saturday. I met him then and—"

"Well!" Anse drew the word out to three times its length. "You do seem to know all about him." There was a twinkle in the blue eyes. "Young, tall and handsome?"

She nodded shortly. "A bit grim and—stern, young, godlike. Anse. But nice—definitely."

"Nice as they come," said Anse. "I knew his father, Pat Killigrew. Killed at Amiens. If your Simon anything like him, I'll wager you that calloused little heart of yours did a flutter."

Pruning Roses
 Miss McCurdy
 D. AGENT, LAMB COUNTY

Most people get in a rush to prune roses when there is no real reason for hurrying into it. The roses should be pruned about the time the last freeze is over if there is any way of determining the time. If they are pruned earlier, new growth may be forced so that the plants will suffer, and possibly, with cold. Since pruning is done for various reasons, the amount and type will differ according to the nature of the pruning, and to the effect desired. The pruner wants shabby plants with blossoms without regard to the size of the blooms, then diseased wood and the oldest canes might be cut out and no pruning done. If fewer canes, larger in size, and bloom over a longer period of time are the effect desired, then a more thorough pruning is needed. Pruning shears or a sharp knife, maybe both, and long leather gloves are the best equipment. In course, each bush is an individual and needs its own treatment with the moderate growing roses like the radiance there are generally about two operations. First, thin out from the base of the plant any diseased or decayed wood or any wood that is old enough to be very woody. The commonest error made by amateurs is that of leaving too many shoots when thinning. Take out all the weak growth. Two or three strong canes are better than any number of smaller ones. Never allow a plant to carry more than six or seven branches from the crown. If properly thinned, these canes that are left should be as nearly as possible equidistant from one another and should present a well balanced appearance from both sides. All weak canes or undesirable parts should be cut out as near the base as possible.

Second operation: Cut back the three to five remaining canes, the vigorous ones to four or five eyes, which will leave about six to ten inches of the cane. The weaker ones should have only two or three eyes left. In selecting canes to leave and in cutting back canes, arrange for an open type of bush by leaving shoots that are not crowded to the center and by always cutting above an eye pointing in the outward direction. One should be careful to cut about one-fourth to one-half inch above the eyes. A closer cut might injure the bud while cutting further away would leave an unsightly stub. The cutting should be done as smoothly as possible, and at an angle of about 45 degrees so that water does not collect and start decay. Abruised bud, a ragged cut, or a stub left is evidence of careless pruning. Few rose bushes were ever killed by over pruning, but many plants are ordinary or even ugly because pruning is neglected. The quality of bloom depends on the vigor of its stem and the fine stem is the one that is nearest to the base of the plant.

Make It of Gingham

Pattern 881—Glance at the little diagram drawing, which shows your pattern all cut out and ready to assemble, and you'll see at once how easy it is to make. Why, you can finish design No. 8881 in just a few hours—it's all long, straight seams, and the only detailing required is the making of long darts at the waistline and more darts on the shoulders!

And what an excellent line those darts give you—slim-waisted, long and smooth, with just enough fullness over the bust and not a bit too much! Even the pockets are decorative as well as useful! And the beltless waist, the flaring hem-line make this dress supremely comfortable for active days at home. Make it of printed percale, gingham or calico; it's the most attractive in crisp, starched cottons.

Pattern No. 8881 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20; 40, 42. Size 16 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35-inch material without nap. Even this simple pattern includes detailed sew chart.

When Acid Indigestion, Gas on Stomach or Heartburn make you feel uncomfortable or embarrass you, try Alka-Seltzer, which contains alkalinizing buffers and so helps counteract the associated Excess Stomach Acidity.

But the relief of these minor stomach upsets is only a small part of what you can expect Alka-Seltzer to do for you. You will find it effective for Pain Relief in Headache, Neuralgia, Colds and Muscular Aches and Pains. It contains an analgesic, (sodium acetyl salicylate), made more prompt and effective in its pain-relieving action by alkaline buffer salts.

When hard work or strenuous exercise make you feel tired and dragged out, enjoy the refreshing effect of a glass of sparkling, tangy Alka-Seltzer.

Additional Taxes To Provide Funds For Defense Now Immediate Problem Before Congress

Washington—(Special to the Leader)—The hottest of the hot potatoes which congress has had to handle in the past few months—that defense taxes—has now been added into its lap.

The treasury department has estimated that present taxes will bring in approximately $9,000,000,000 during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Many suggestions for increased taxes already have been made, which include: a 33 per cent increase on all present taxes; an increase on the present lowest tax rate from 4 to 8 per cent and working out a higher scale for other tax brackets; raising additional revenue by a general sales tax; lowering present exemptions; increasing present taxes on liquor, tobacco and gasoline; wiping out the 10 per cent credit now allowed for "earned income"; curbs on present deductions; and combinations of all of these plans.

It is the opinion of some congressmen that taxes should be increased enough to bring in more than two thirds of the treasury's expected obligations in order to put defense on a pay-as-you-go basis, but it is not expected that congress will finally vote any more taxes than are specifically requested by the treasury department.

DRAFT AMENDMENTS

Amendments to the selective service act are predicted for the near future which will include all or any of these three changes: (1) reducing the minimum age from 21 to 18, which would make about 3,500,000 more men eligible; (2) decreasing the maximum age limit, since so many men over 30 have physical defects; (3) continuing the training of present draftees for longer than the present one-year limit.

President Roosevelt has hinted his approval of reducing the minimum age limit to 18 and the maximum limit to 25, but no changes will be made until further study has been conducted of the 400,000 draftees now in camp and the 4,000,000 which already have been classified.

A plan for drafting leading business executives for jobs in the defense program has been proposed by Representative Johnson of Texas in order to assure the government of the nation's best managerial brains.

America Is West of the Hudson

John Erskine, noted writer, will probably have a hard time living down his discovery, but in the current Rotarian magazine he publicly admits he, born and bred in New York, has discovered that America lies west of the Hudson and south of Staten Island—and that New York is perhaps merely a convenient stopping place!

Roughly, writes Dr. Erskine, the New Yorker thinks of the West and Southwest as peopled by raw-mannered men who prefer the outdoors because there is no room for fire-arms indoors; in the Southwest they live on horseback, always riding at a gallop. The Deep South is peopled by courteous, energy-lacking men and charming women who talk a good deal. In the Middle West the citizens lean on the barbed-wire fence and curse the drought, stopping only to sprint for cyclone cellars. The folk of the Northern border sometimes confused with Alaska, wear furs and go about on snowshoes.

But Dr. Erskine has made a voyage of discovery—one he began years ago. In Iowa and the Middle West, he writes, "the agelong gulf between the artist and natural people is broken down. . . For the most part they seem too sensible to withdraw utterly from life and then do nothing but write. It is life they wish to write about, and they get their material from daily tasks."

In South Dakota he discovered the "Friends of the Middle Border. . . Making the region aware of its indigenous creativeness, past, present, future." Kansas and Missouri, he found "have their own art movements, parallel to Iowa's and somewhat in rivalry with it, as though the States were backing their favorite ball teams." Everywhere he found art museums and musical bodies—and, most important, public acceptance and appreciation of them.

A little abashed for his townsmen, perhaps, New Yorker Erskine sees the "new directions of American culture," as he terms them, shaping up not in New York, but "West of the Hudson."

Myrtle Rochelle, who pens "the Scrapbook" in the Lynn County News down Tahoka way, wrote the following last week . . .

"This said that one reason Walter Winchell is so popular as a columnist is not so much his findout ability as his knack for coining new words, which he calls slangage.

"So, while Hattie prays for a man, the farmer prays for rain, and the doctors pray for a good epidemic, yours truly prays for some cute little ideas to bowl 'em over!"

"Imagine our amazement when through our thick skull there penetrated a pun which we personally (without bragging) think is fitting. Of course, like Helen Keller, we may have read it somewhere and forgotten—perhaps from Mr. Winchell in person—but we're taking credit for this little firm name for the Dictators Incorporated: 'Hit' Er, Muscle-In, Nip'Em and Stalling.' And that's our bid for fame."

Well—Myrtle, here's hoping your puns will receive bigger and better recognition than mine. (Perhaps mine have been no good)—But I have several girl friends who have threatened my life if they hear or read any more of my puns!

As a result—my disposition fell as low as my arches . . . but I have recovered!

Suggested head for this story . . . "Wind Erosion Is Good Samaritan." Shifting sands this spring uncovered a month's room and board in the Texas Tech dormitory for Rex Creitz of Adrian, Sophomore student at the college in Lubbock.

Last June, while plowing a field on his father's farm, Creitz lost a billfold containing $28, a driver's license and other valuable papers. Last week, Lorin Creitz, an older brother, saw the weathered billfold lying in front of his tractor. The dirt had blown away from the object buried by Rex's plow almost a year ago.

a "junior" until a few years ago, when she started to put her mother's name on a life insurance policy as a beneficiary.

She signed her mother's name, Lillian Irene Cameron and the agent politely informed her she could not be her own beneficiary. After consulting the family attorney, they learned that by law, she was a junior.

Miss Cameron is junior clerk typist at the local Farm Security office and she hails from Lamesa.

Incidentally . . . her mother and Mrs. E. L. Winston are lifetime friends.

Thinking about the 12-year program that will be adopted by Texas schools next year reminds us that this year's seniors are the first students who started to school when they were six years old, under the program adopted in 1930.

Be pleasant to the folks you meet on the way up—You're liable to meet them again on the way coming down!

That's all for tonight. MARGIE.

Land Use Planning Committee Meets

Twenty-four members of the Lamb County Land Use Planning Committee met in regular session at Amherst last Thursday morning, April 24th, for the purpose of discussing the part that a food and feeds program will contribute toward the National Defense Program. Miss Lida Cooper, district agent and Mr. J. F. Rosborough, of the extension service of A. & M. college were present.

The selective Service Boards have found that a large percent of the young men called for military service have been rejected because of physical handicaps, many of them due to improper diets and an undernourished condition. The National Defense Program not only calls for all the implements of warfare, but for a well fed, a well nourished people, vigorous in health and high in morale.

The farm people of Lamb county can contribute their part toward the program of National Defense by giving more attention to our home food supply.

A sub-committee of this group has been appointed to make a further study of what the farm family can contribute toward the National Defense program and their recommendations will be given within a short time.

S. P. Bates—

Mr. Bates had been a resident of Lamb county since January, 1926, coming here from Winters. He settled in Texas 45 years ago, moving here from Arkansas.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emma Bates of Littlefield, and seven daughters, Mrs. A. S. Bolton and Mrs. Max J. Wilson of Littlefield, Mrs. Levi Coble, Mrs. A. N. Coble, Mrs. R. D. Webb and Mrs. A. A. Givens, all of Anton, and Mrs. Ollie Brady of Los Angeles, Calif.; and three sons, Jessie Bates of Salina, New Mexico, Charlie Bates of Silver Valley, Tex. and W. L. Bates of Rockwood; and 52 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

All of the sons and daughters and their families attended the funeral services except Mr. and Mrs. Giles, and Mr. Porter, and Mrs. Brady, who could not be located in Los Angeles, Calif.

Mrs. Emma Bates and Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Bolton and two children, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson and daughter returned to Littlefield Monday night.

Bond Sales Plan—

will go on sale at the local post office with the opening of the windows this morning. The First National Bank will offer the series F and the Series G bonds when the local institution opens for business this morning. The same program will be carried out at other post offices and banks throughout the county and nation.

Bonds For All Purposes

The new securities, planned to help meet part of the huge preparedness bill, were tailored purposely to fit the purses of every American. They include 10 cent stamps for children, baby bonds for the average man, and larger bonds, up to $10,000 denominations, for wealthier persons, trust funds and businesses.

President Roosevelt, Secretary Morgenthau and Postmaster General Walker gave the defense savings drive an official sendoff in a special radio program Wednesday night.

Local Organizations

Local organizations to push the sale of bonds in a variety of sales stimulating events are being formed throughout Lamb county and the nation. Two appointments have been proposed for the local committee and other suggestions for the personnel of the Littlefield group will follow. The two proposed appointments to the committee are E. A. Bills and Pat Boone.

Outstanding interest in the sale of the defense bonds has been manifest in Littlefield and throughout this section, and it is anticipated that purchases will be numerous and liberal.

Cemetery Improvement—

complete the beautification program and have the cemetery grounds ready for inspection before May 30, Memorial Day.

Mrs. Street stated that it was the hope of the Committee to improve the cemetery, and later employ a caretaker to keep the grounds in good condition.

Saturday, May 10, has been set for the planting of the trees, shrubs or flowers, and it is hoped that all those who can will contribute generously to this cause.

Mrs. Street stated that since the nice rains which have fallen recently, there will be no shortage of water, and hence a good opportunity to get the work done.

Among other things, it was also suggested by the Auxiliary that local residents, who have friends buried in the cemetery, but whose relatives have moved away, give a helping and towards improving their plots.

Mrs. J. T. Kendrick left Sunday for a week's visit with Mrs. Roy Curry at Floydada.

Editor's Column—

And here's how it all happened: Bill New, who owns a bakery and a farm, told us that he could feed more cattle if he had the cattle. We told Bill that we could take up the slack if he wanted to feed out on the gain.

We looked around a little, didn't find anything that we could buy for anything less than what we considered was 25 per cent over the right value, and a few days slipped by before we had the opportunity to report back to the News.

"Why," commented Mrs. New, smiling and laughing, "Bill thought you were kidding him . . . you are always kidding about something. Bill has already bought all the cattle he can handle."

MORAL—We kidded ourselves out of the cattle business before we got in.

BUT, GOSH DING IT ALL, WE JUST AIN'T GOING TO GIVE AWAY OUR BOOTS!

P. S. Perhaps we can hook up with Lon Campbell in the horse trading business.

HERE'S A GOOD DEED TO CHALK UP TO THE CREDIT OF THE OLTON LIONS CLUB—

The Olton club has purchased 35 pairs of glasses for underprivileged children in the schools at Spring Lake, Hart Camp, Fieldton and Olton.

BIG DOINGS AT OLTON IN SEPTEMBER—

There will be big doings in Olton in September!

The next meeting of the County Federation of Women's clubs will be held in the county seat in September, and the date of the gathering is being arranged to coincide with the annual Flower show sponsored by the Olton Garden club, of which Mrs. Guy Willis is chairman.

The Flower show is held in the school auditorium, and has been a colorful, spectacular and pleasing annual event for several years. Visitors come from great distances to see the beautiful exhibits and to learn more about the art of floriculture.

Grouped with the Flower show is a yard contest in which awards are made for improvement and appearance.

Olton folks are proud of the neat, attractive appearance of their yards and gardens.

We do not know of anything more inspiring than a flower show . . . and surely there is no more important contribution to civic pride than neat and colorful yards and gardens.

Our congratulations and best wishes to the Olton Garden club.

AND HERE'S ANOTHER THOUGHT (CITIZENS OF LITTLEFIELD, AMHERST, SUDAN READ CAREFULLY)—

If the folks this side of the sand can't rake up enough votes to move the court house 20 to 30 miles south, then let us all be thankful that the distance between Littlefield and Olton, or Olton and Littlefield has been reduced from 90 miles to 30 miles. The said 60 miles has been lopped off by pavement replacing ruts. And under the new highway speed laws it's 30 minutes to Olton for Littlefield residents and 30 minutes from Olton to Littlefield for Olton folks.

AND IF SOMEBODY EVER GETS AROUND TO COMPLETING THE PAVEMENT BETWEEN LITTLEFIELD AND LEVELLAND, THE PUBLISHER OF THE LEADER WILL RUN DOWN TO THE HOCKLEY COUNTY SEAT AND HAVE LUNCH AT THE EXPENSE OF FORREST WEIMHOLD, PUBLISHER OF THE HOCKLEY COUNTY HERALD.

Booster Group From Canyon To Be Here

A booster group from the West Texas State college, Canyon, and a group of business men and other citizens of Canyon, will be in Littlefield next Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Amon G. Carter Can't Come To Littlefield

Supt. F. A. Hemphill received a letter Tuesday from the secretary to Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, advising him that Mr. Carter will go to Greenway, Va., in May, where his daughter will graduate from the Madeira school.

Mr. Carter had been invited to deliver the commencement address to the graduating class of the Littlefield high school when the exercises are held Friday night, May 23.

Mr. Carter was out of town when the invitation from Mr. Hemphill reached his desk.

Defense To Be Theme Of 23rd Annual Meeting

Convention Manager Is Now In Host City Directing Plans

The 23rd annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce is actively in the making. Division of the big show dates: Thursday-Friday, May 15-16—henceforth will be from Mineral Wells, a city, with arrival here of Max Hanes, WTCC activities and convention manager, and his assistant Clara Lively.

General convention chairman, elected by the steering committee, is Monte C. Taylor, cafe operator. He is one of Mineral Wells' most aggressive civic workers, active in senior and junior chambers of commerce and one of the promoters of the stock show and rodeo held each year. The local steering committee is composed of Dr. H. Zappe, Fred Brown, W. W. Birdwell, John W. Birdwell and Paul Birdwell is the WTCC director here, Ord Manager of the chamber of commerce.

Business, National Defense

a taxpayers' assembly devoted to discussion of legislative accomplishments and needs, the West Texas chamber of commerce good government program, the place of freight rates in Southwestern development, and kindred subjects.

Second assembly, 2:30 p. m. Friday the 16th, is styled, "West Texas in the National Defense." Governor W. Lee O'Daniel is being asked to preside at this important session and to speak on Texas industry in

The convention work committee will be in almost continuous session beginning Thursday afternoon, opening day of the big show. This group prepares and presents to the directors the resolutions on which the organization's policies and work program for the coming year are based. The directors will have their first session Thursday night, a dinner. Friday morning they will meet at breakfast for more business and for election of district directors and Friday noon will be hosts at the annual convention luncheon for newspapermen and chamber of commerce residents and managers. At this affair the WTCC's officers for 1941-42 will be elected and following beginning at 1:30 p. m., the directors will start their balloting on the 1942 convention city.

Friday afternoon, following close of the national defense assembly, will bring entertainment features, such as street and lobby entertainment and a parade by military units from West Texas camps and posts with bands. 'To-Hell-With-Hitler'

The convention will come to the climax Friday evening the 16th with a great banquet. "To-Hell-With-Hitler" is its theme, coupled with which the Westex hosts will pay their admiring and affectionate tribute to a great Texan. That was Senator Morris Sheppard, chairman of the senate military affairs committee, who, if he had lived, would have been on this program. Sheppard's colleague, Con. Ewing Thomason of El Paso, who is chairman of the house military affairs committee, will be one to pay tribute to the late senior senator, and there will be others.

Amon Carter, Fort Worth, will be master of ceremonies at the concluding banquet.

SALE OF U. S. BONDS FOR NATION'S DEFENSE PROGRAM IS LAUNCHED

Post Offices And Banks Will Sell Defense Bonds

Securities Are Tailored To Fit All Purses; Local Groups To Aid Sales

County post offices and banks today join the nation in the intensive selling campaign in the peacetime history of the United States, as the Treasury Department has its dime-to-thousands defense drive. It is expected to and perhaps surpass the now Liberty bond campaign of World War days.

The new securities, of which the county hopes to sell at least $3,000,000 in the next 18 months.

Editor Buys Defense Bond At Post Office

There are times in the lives of us when we want to be especially when it is something into which we can enter heart and soul.

We are strong for President Roosevelt's National Defense Program . . . and we are enthusiastically in accord with the plan to sell United States Savings Bonds to obtain funds for national defense.

It is, therefore, to be expected we would want to be the first to buy a defense bond at the Littlefield post office. "We bought the first bond sold at the local office, and the number is 311E."

SPEAKING OF THE CATTLE BUSINESS AND COWBOY BOOTS, WE GOT A "BEEF" TO PUT . . . AND THERE'S NO TIME . . . THE PRESENT TO 'GET IT' . . . OUR LITTLE CHEST . . .

Buying boots by this editor has contested because he doesn't own any cattle . . . not even one calf.

the boots haven't really got going to do with the "beef" that is dragging forth.

Music Hath Its Charms

By Margaret Bandy

Eugene Latimer doesn't make a habit of "trick photography", but when a cat starts "slipping up" toward music in the manner shown here . . . it's too good not to snap

And His Name's "Tiger"

Mr. Latimer made the picture when the cat "rared up" while Buford Ray, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Latimer was playing a phonograph on the cat's favorite divan. Buford Ray calls the cat "Bite 'Ems", but his sister, Eunice, calls him "Tiger," and since the cat belongs to Eunice, he naturally answers to the name "Tiger."

Mrs. Mattie Sewell gave Eunice "Tiger" when he was a small kitten, and he is only about eight months old now. He is half Persian, she said.

Denominations Of Defense Bonds Are Numerous

Stamps Also Will Be Sold To Facilitate The Purchase of Securities

The new United States Savings Bonds, frequently referred to as defense bonds, have been tailored to fit the purse of every American. The Series E bonds, largely made up of issues of smaller value are purchasable through post offices, while bonds mostly of larger denomination, are available through banks.

Published herewith is general information relative to the various issues:

DEFENSE SAVINGS BOND
The Defense Savings Bond will be offered for 75 per cent of its maturity value, with maturity of 10 years. Thus, a Defense Savings Bond bought in May, 1941, for $18.75 will be redeemable in May, 1951, for $25.00. This is an increase of 33 1-3 per cent, equal to an interest return of 2.9 per cent per annum, compounded semi-annually. This bond is not transferable, will not fluctuate in value and may be redeemed at any time before maturity at values printed on its face. Intended chiefly for people of small income, ownership is restricted to individuals in their own right, with a limit upon holdings of $5,000 maturity value of bonds issued in any one calendar year. Denominations are $25, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000.
