MORE CO-OPERATION

Donald Nelson, chief of the War Production board, and who probably knows more about what is going on on the war production front than does any other man in America today, says that the co-operation we have been seeking between the many conflicting forces in our country is really getting places.

As the daily news comes in from all parts of the country we continue to hear of labor disturbances, excessive profits being earned by some war industries and bitter denunciations of various groups. But we will admit that these reports have decreased considerably since Pearl Harbor and we are encouraged by Mr. Nelson's statement in which he says:

"We are beginning to get in America today one of the most encouraging things any American could hope to see—a genuine, whole-hearted spirit of co-operation between big business, little business, labor and government. Labor unions have voluntarily given up privileges and rights which they fought years to win; business has voluntarily given up chances for high profits which it might legitimately have taken; both sides, to an increasing degree, are showing a desire to forget their own interests and work with each other and with the government in order to win this war. It is an immensely encouraging development."

Mr. Nelson certainly isn't saying that just to hear himself talk. He knows the problems of labor, of business and of government and he has worked day and night to try to bring such co-operation. If he thinks he is achieving success in this difficult undertaking, there is no doubt he has plenty of evidence to support that contention.

As a people we will naturally continue to criticize when we see grounds for it, but perhaps we should also be a little more free with our praise. If we object when labor makes demands which we consider out of line, let us be even more quick to give a genuine pat on the back to a labor group which agrees to make sacrifices. If we criticize an industry for making big war profits, let us be just as outspoken in lauding those industries which agree to work for little or no profit during the war period.

SEEK SUGAR SUBSTITUTE

Successful substitution of saccharine and inulin for granulated sugar is being tested by advanced students in foods and nutrition in Texas Tech's division of home economics at Lubbock. Laboratory experiments with rats are being made to test the results of these two little-used substitutes on the daily diet. Inulin is a cellulose product found in tubers of dahlias, chicory and the Jerusalem artichoke. Saccharine is a coal-tar crystalline substance several hundred times sweeter than cane sugar. These experiments could prove highly profitable to housewives of the South Plains area.

TEXAS FARMERS LEAD NATION IN CROP INSURANCE

Texas cotton farmers lead all other cotton farmers in the nation in Federal all-risk crop insurance. With approximately 1,488,690 acres insured against all unavoidable hazards, 54,252 units in Texas have a guaranteed production of about 338,306 bales. Incomplete reports in 18 cotton states indicate 171,235 cotton units insured 2,790,223 acres for an estimated production of 853,638 bales. A True Texan Drives All The Way From Oregon To Register In His Home State

N. W. Whitney, formerly of Sudan, but who has been living at Sweet Home, Ore., and operating a real estate and brokerage business there for the past several years, drove all the way from Oregon to register on April 27 in Sudan.

Mr. Whitney arrived in Sudan Monday of last week just a few minutes before the registration doors closed, due to being delayed by an accident enroute here. Coming through the Rocky Mountains near Salida, Colo., an avalanche of rocks descended on his vehicle, and he barely escaped with his life. Consequently he was forced to drive all Sunday night previous in order to get to Sudan before closing hour for the registration office.

Mr. Whitney is a native Texan, and he is proud to be back to his favorite section. He stated that he knew he could have registered in Sweet Home, but he said he just wanted to come to this section of the country anyway, that he liked it here, and would probably stay here, and start up an office in the work that he liked—the real estate and brokerage business.

Mr. Whitney was a subscriber when he lived in Sudan several years ago, and also the last time he was in Lamb County he called and paid for and had this newspaper sent to him at Sweet Home; and Friday the Leader was proud to welcome Mr.

CHAPTER II SYNOPSIS

A man identified as Joseph Slinn is found drowned in the Hudson river near Albany, N. Y. Slinn was insured by the Protective Life Insurance company, and his beneficiary is a man named B. B. Twombly who lives in Troy. The company's Albany agent, Carlin, identifies the body, and the insurance money is paid to Twombly. But Jerry Glidden is not satisfied. He believes there is something wrong and suspects that Slinn was murdered. Convinced that he is right, Jerry tells his boss that he'll prove it, or he won't come back.

Jerry plunged from his chief's office—and almost collided with Leila outside it.

Steinhardt was retreating rather hurriedly across what artists call the middle distance, and Leila Taylor looked ashamed.

Of course, there are a hundred reasons why a secretary should wait close to her employer's door; but this door was notoriously not soundproof.

"Jerry, I was just—" He recalled a reluctance on her part, a general cooling process. Besides, Sam had lately strained faith in the theory of coincidence by turning up too often at the expensive eat-a-bit-and-dance-a-night restaurants to which she dragged a fiancé who didn't care for them.

"Just getting the dope, dear?" Jerry demanded. "In the company's interests, of course. Never mind me, I'm leaving."

Her selfish little mouth formed a circle of unconvincing protest. "Oh, I didn't mean—" "And I haven't got a better job; in fact, I haven't got any job."

The Hudson River local coughed its way northward. Farther and farther behind it, on the loom of the sky, the lights of New York wore more and more faintly their red nocturnal rug. Jerry, in the smoking car, took stock. He had a few hundred dollars, a determination to make good, a sense of injury—and a hunch.

The first pair of these possessions could be helpful assets in any endeavor. He began to wonder if the latter pair might not often be a liability.

His hunch, particularly. It had been justifiable enough—as a hunch. But then Steinhardt's sneers had hardened it into a less justifiable belief. And finally, the threats of Lightner had metamorphosed it into a certainty. Was this logical? Or was it just youthful bullheadedness?

Jerry put up at a poor hotel in Linnithgo. Early next morning, he inquired for the coroner.

"What you want him for?" asked the hotel clerk. "Thought you was a live one. Well, there ain't none."

"No what?" "Coroner, of course. Not here. He lives up at Hudson. All we've got's a deputy, Elwood Norbeck. You'll best find him at the corner drugstore any time after nine."

Mr. Norbeck turned out to be one of several gentlemen who all looked alike and sat, daylong, with their backs to the soda counter. Elwood, however, answered to his name, creaked the rusted hinges of waist and knees and condescended to come to the sidewalk.

"What can I do for you?" He was small, thin, narrow chested, but quite aware of his official dignity.

That famous booklet, "Room at the Top," declares: "Respect for superiors never kept an inferior down."

After all, there might be something in it. Jerry bowed. "I want to consult you in your public capacity."

Sunken eyes brightened. "Got a corpse?"

"Not exactly; but you had one the other day. I'm from the P.L.I. Co.—that Slinn case."

Another success guide gone wrong! Jerry's mention of the great corporation was enough to rouse the "deputy's" wrath. Elwood applied the whip of scorn.

"The P.L.I. outfit's a bunch of fools, an' you can tell 'em I said so. That Slinn case is closed. I closed it. Then your P.L.I. ordered a couple of snoopers down from Albany, who had the nerve to check up the whole thing, but was forced to agree with me an' apologize. An' now, as if that wasn't enough, your gang sends you here. Are they busted? Can't they pay up?"

"The claim's been satisfied." "Then why isn't the company, No, sir, Columbia county won't reopen this case for anybody."

Jerry explained that he had wanted merely to look over the records. A reason, however, it was hard to supply.

He suspected that records didn't exist—was told that they had been promptly, and properly, forwarded to the county seat—guess that they were the barest report, containing nothing with which he wasn't already acquainted.

No use, then, to add insult to injury by inquiring the name and address of the official physician; these were easily acquired elsewhere, and that red-whiskered personage was sought at his office without Mr. Norbeck forewarning him to uphold Columbia county's honor.

"Just getting the dope, dear?" Jerry demanded.

Well, warning would have been superfluous. The advent of that medical colleague from the State capital had hurt Dr. Gibbons' professional pride:

"And all his autopsy showed was exactly what mine did—death by drowning."

"Sure. I only wanted to know if there were any signs of a struggle."

"Not a tear—not a rip. Besides, his letter turned out to corroborate us."

"And that's at Hudson with the report?"

"Certainly not. Not being found till afterwards, it was brought here by your folks and then handed back to the executor."

"Who was he?" "Slinn's store clerk, under a will just executed. He'd been with Slinn since the grocery opened—been good to him, too, I figure, and there weren't any kin, and his pay was in arrears."

Little here. Nothing at the county seat. And yet Glidden's hunch persisted. It had to, and he had to prove it correct. Of course, he'd stooped off on his way toward Albany only so as not to overlook any bet.

Yet there must be something. If a crime had been committed, every criminological system was disproved unless there had been some slip made by the criminal at this end of the case.

In the seclusion of the Hudson taxi which bore him to the station, Jerry beat his brains black and blue. His lips tight, he pressed his frowning forehead between his fists and stared sightlessly out of the cab window.

What was it the Linnithgo doctor had said? "In the clothes not a tear—not a rip." Jerry's instinct declared there was a flaw somewhere, but his reason refused to find any.

Puzzling when he boarded the train, he was still puzzling when he reached Albany.

For that matter, he found only one new fact there where his activities assumed four phases:

1.—Carlin had left for a vacation at Casco Bay. No great loss, Jerry reflected, since the local agent's mind would be colored by Sam Steinhardt's correspondence with him.

2.—The tailor had no fresh light to cast on the subject. None had been seriously expected of him.

3.—Ditto the company's Albany physician. Yes, he had gone to Linnithgo and made a separate autopsy. No, there wasn't the slightest sign of a struggle. Jerry could discover no detail in which there had been either negligence or error.

4.—The clerk executor— But this proved rather a large process.

When Jerry arrived at the grocery store—a small store to swallow $50,000—Howard Weaver, the executor, was engaged, lone-handed, in closing up for the night. He struck you at once as a fellow who would be lunched as long as any other hand cost money.

Twenty he was; forty he might have been; and his gaze showed knowledge of the world. His mouth was small, like Leila's. His nose was long and thin.

He led Jerry mistrustfully through the door surmounted by a huge canvas sign:

"OUT OF BUSINESS! EXECUTOR'S SALE!"

Decidedly, here was a gentleman with an eye to the main chance. Jerry realized that he would lose nothing by getting down at once to brass tacks.

"Why d' you want to know?" asked Mr. Weaver. "He paid his premiums all right, didn't he?"

"Sure. Your inheritance is safe." The heir and executor sniffed. "If I can clear two hundred and fifty by my 'sacrifice' ads I'll be doin' fine. Slinn owed the jobbers for near every bit of the stock on hand."

"Oh, you'll be all right. We just wanted another look at the letter and make a comparison of it with some of Slinn's other writing."

"Carlin done that." Carlin might be influenced by Steinhardt's prejudices—doubtless was. "Well, we wanted to do it again."

"He give me a ten-spot for the chance."

"Here's another." Influenced or not, Carlin had reason to endorse that letter as authentic. A pitiable confession of despair. Jerry did not profess to be an expert in these matters, but he would reluctantly have had to swear it was written by the same hand that kept the doleful books; and this wasn't at all, he took ostentatious care to prove, Howard Weaver's.

Jerry walked out. Only after he had reached the sidewalk did he feel an apparently thoughtless question or two over his shoulder: "It's a hot evening. Any swimming in the river here?"

"Some." "Come along?" "Ain't got the time."

"Didn't Slinn use to do it?" "Him? Never. He was afraid as death of the river, and I guess that's how he naturally thought of it to kill himself in. He couldn't swim a stroke."

Some hours later, Jerry took a third train. He possessed the valuable ability to mock his failures without shaking his purpose.

Nearly everything substantiated the original reports, and the only newly found fact was overbalanced by them: Slinn couldn't swim and drowning is an ideal means for a nonswimmer's murder—but it is equally desirable in case he wants to commit suicide. Then there was that letter and the lack of any token of violence. The dead man had indeed few friends in Albany; he seemed to have been something of a recluse.

But Jerry wouldn't give up. The hunch held. Besides if he could prove Lightner and Steinhardt wrong, they would have to keep his job for him; whereas, if he couldn't—

Troy and Twombly—B. B. Twombly? Not yet. Glidden's thoughts returned to the office records. "Place of birth, Doncaster, Pa." He went there. Lightner's motto: "Do It Now."

It took the rest of the night, which was followed by a disappointing day. Birth registration post-dated Joseph Slinn's appearance on this planet, and, were baptismal books to be consulted—well, this city boasted thirty-seven churches.

"Slinn's a funny name yet," said the Pennsylvania Dutch prothonotary's clerk, "an' I sink I heard it some're, but you can see fer yourself it ain't in the city directory."

"How about the country around here?" "The only sing's the 'phone book."

And there, at last, was a little luck. It was one of those telephone books in which the far rural subscribers are listed not under the different exchanges that serve them, but under their own names. Jerry was about to surrender the volume when his eye lighted on this entry:

WALKER, Rose. Gen'l store, p.o., Pub. Pay Sta. (Slinn, Angela), Ironburg . . . Mt. Joy 61.

Receives Wire From Son At Australia

Mr. and Mrs. John Cary received a wire from their son, Burl, from Australia Friday afternoon, which bears no date or the place from which it is sent.

They received a wire two weeks ago from Burl, and a month previous to that his telegram from Australia notified his parents that he was there. Thinking his friends will be interested, we are quoting the message as received by his parents Friday as follows:

"Safe in Australia. Am fine. Mail is slow. Don't worry. Love, Burl."

Previous to leaving the United States Burl was stationed at Washington several months, where he was an orderly in the officers headquarters.

LAMB COUNTY BOY WRITES TO PARENTS FROM MELBOURNE

The letter was written March 27 at Melbourne and was received Friday, April 24.

Billy is 18 years of age, and is a former student of the Amherst High School. He enlisted one year ago this month.

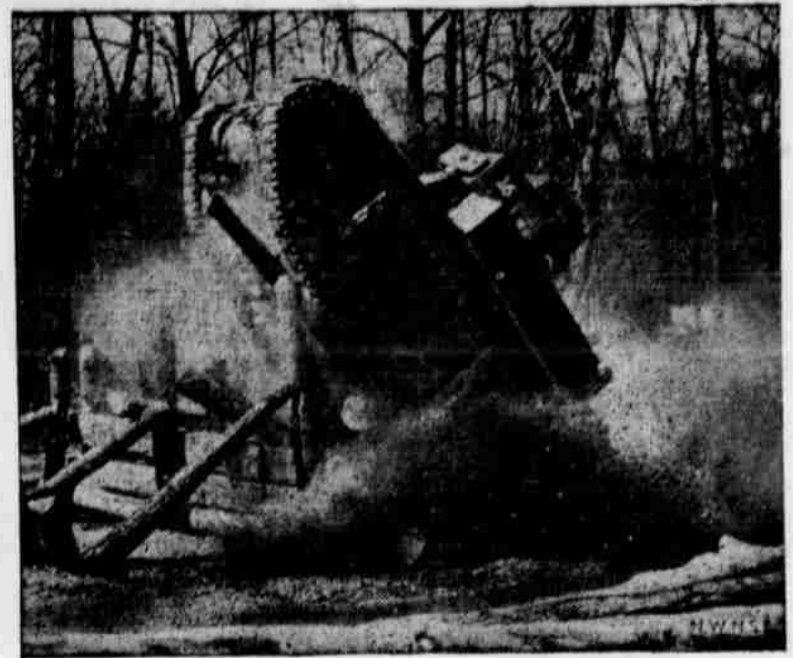

In the letter to his parents, the young man reported that he was in good health, and liked Australia fine.

PASSES PEANUT GOAL

Texas farmers will plant even more peanuts than the 1,056,000 acres they were asked to plant, USDA war board reports from the counties indicate.

Reports from 231 counties with a total goal of 1,048,535 acres indicate that 1,125,724 acres either already have been planted or the seed for planting has been purchased, the Texas USDA War Board announced. This acreage exceeds the goal for these counties by 77,189 acres.

One Way to Stop a Tank

U. S. army engineers devised this tank stopper, which is effective against light tanks, and it takes only 90 minutes to set the trap. The barricade is made of logs, placed in a certain position. When the tank mounts the barricade it loses traction and is stuck, like this one at an army proving ground.

YOUTHS MAY TRAIN FOR NAVAL OFFICERS

Twenty-one colleges in Texas are now actively participating in the Navy's Great V-1 Officer Training Program, where youths may begin training to become deck or flying officers in the U. S. Navy.

Young men between the ages of 17 and 19 may enlist in Class V-1 upon entering college and then continue their education along certain specified lines.

At the end of two years of college those who aspire to become Naval Aviators, will be taken into Class V-5, if they have satisfactory records in their class work. If successful in their aviation training they will be commissioned as ensigns in the Naval Reserve.

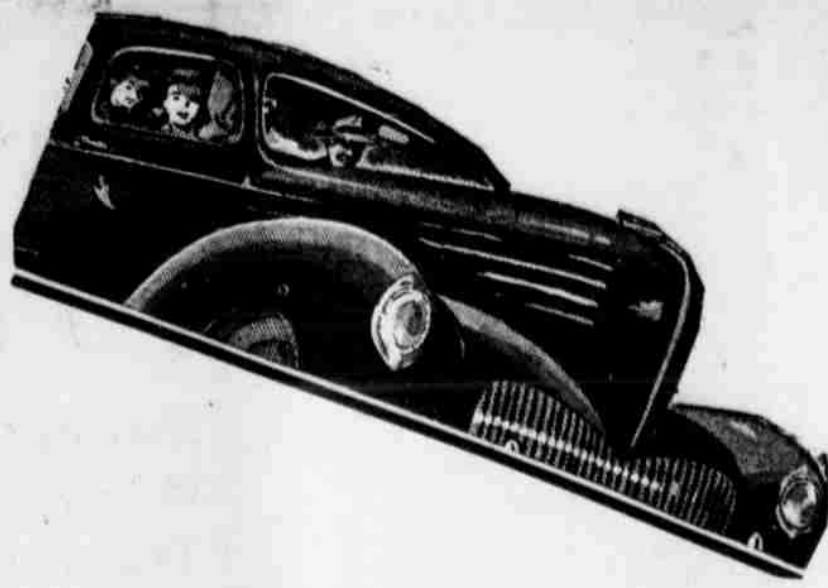

Those who are candidates for deck or engineer training will, if their grades are satisfactory, be continued in college until graduation, then be put in the Class V-7 and trained as deck and engineering officers.

Secretary of the Navy Knox has described the V-1 training program as "democracy's intelligent and practical way of meeting America's urgent needs for thousands of young college-trained officers without breaking down our educational standards or forgetting future needs for trained men for civilian life after the war.

J. L. BOWEN INJURED
IN FALL AT BORGER

J. L. Bowen, son of Mr. and Mrs.
J. H. Bowen of Littlefield, was seriously injured April 28 when he fell 35 feet onto a concrete floor. Both feet were broken from the ankles down and his spine was also somewhat injured.

He was employed by the Marley
Construction Company of Kansas
City and was working at the Phillips "66" plant near Borger. When he walked out on a scaffold the board on which he was standing broke and he fell. He was taken to the McBride Clinic in Oklahoma City, which specializes in bone treatment, and doctors there say it will be several days before any treatment can be given to his feet.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowen went to Oklahoma City Saturday and Mrs.
Bowen will remain with her son until he improves.

J. L. Bowen had been in Borger only two weeks, having gone there from California. He lived in Littlefield until 1938.

Reward Is Offered

Mrs. John Cary was unfortunate enough Monday to lose the address of her son, Burt, who is now in Australia, and says she cannot write him until she either locates the letter and several telegrams attached together by a rubber band, which she lost in the Littlefield Postoffice, or secures his address from the War Department. Mrs. Cary went to the postoffice Monday morning about 10:30 o'clock to mail her son a package, and took with her a letter just received from him, in the envelope of which was a card, a telegram and a kodak picture. Attached to this envelope was another telegram received from Burt. This, according to Mrs. Cary, is her complete correspondence from her son. When she returned to the postoffice in the afternoon, Postmaster Storey and the office force kindly cooperated, and a search was made of the waste paper baskets, etc., but no trace of the missing letters was found.

Mrs. Cary is offering a reward for the return to her of this correspondence. Finder may either get in touch with her or leave at Postoffice, and receive reward.

Pledge Campaign Wonderful Success

Pat Boone, county chairman of the War Bond Committee, announced Wednesday that workers covered the business section Monday in the campaign for pledges to buy War Bonds in the Nation's biggest "selling campaign," and that this drive was a wonderful success. Business men showed no hesitancy to pledge to buy bonds in the value of 10 per cent of their income, or 10 per cent of their salary, according to Mr. Boone.

Mr. Boone asks that any business man who was missed Monday go to either the bank, Hall's Grocery or the Chamber of Commerce office in the City Hall, and sign his pledge, because "the President and his corps of officers have asked that each income earner in our nation do so."

Salute to American Mothers

MOTHER'S DAY SUNDAY, MAY 10

We rejoice at another opportunity to pay tribute to the Mothers of our land... the Mothers of America... our Mothers... who have upheld our ideals of freedom down through the years of our independence. They have taught the little children and the growing boys and girls that faith in their fellowmen, and the freedom of the country in which they are privileged to live, were the two greatest principles in which they could believe. These children have grown up and gone out to help make their land even better. Not every one of them have become president, nor even senators, but they have made fine, God-fearing, freedom-loving men and women, for the Mothers of the land have raised ministers, teachers, salesmen, farmers, and the good, hard-working individuals who make up the cities and towns all over the land. Without the faith of the Mothers, America would never have been what she is today.

This year it is more fitting than ever that we pause to honor Mother on Her Day, May 10, for she has willingly seen her sons become the finest, hardest-fighting men of any armed force in the world. She is the one who has kept their morale up and given them something to believe in. She has taken a fighting America to her heart, and in her busy life she has somehow found time to knit and sew for the Red Cross, to cheer the life of some refugee child by taking him into her fold, and still finds time to do her daily tasks with a smile.

This year let us make Mother's Day happier for her... for she is doing more for us than ever before. We salute the American Mothers... we salute America... for America is the handiwork of the Mothers of you and me.

Cottonseed Delinting Plant,

Gentlemen:

This is in reply to your letter of February 16th, requesting some comments on acid delinted cottonseed. In most years seed that were Kemgas treated or acid delinted by other means have given good germination with little or no seedling disease. About the only treatment that surpasses acid delinting is acid delinting plus dust treatment with organic mercury dust such as new improved Ceresan (5%) at the rate of one ounce per bushel. There is usually more than a 50 per cent increase in germination where seed are delinted as compared to seed receiving no treatment. Seedling disease infection is usually from 20 to 30 times more on seedlings from untreated seed than on seedlings from acid delinted seed, especially where the acid delinted seed are further treated with Ceresan to afford extra protection. Acid delinted seed may readily be planted with a corn planter or hill dropped at spaces of from 12 to 24 inches or more. By planting in this manner the seed required per acre may be reduced by more than half. It has also been found that where the rate of planting seed is reduced cotton root rot is also reduced and yields usually increased. It is somewhat easier to chop or hoe cotton where it is planted in such manner. There is thus a saving in seed required and a probable increase in yield and somewhat of a reduction in labor required to cultivate the crop. Delinted seed usually germinate quicker than fuzzy seed, but should not be planted quite as deep as fuzzy seed. Seedlings are usually more vigorous or larger than seedlings from untreated seed, thus allowing closer and more intensive cultivation. This is especially valuable following periods of wet weather where grass has started growing in such crops.

If there is any other information we can supply, kindly write.

Yours very truly,
C. H. ROGERS,
Plant Pathologist

EXTENSIONS ---

250 FT.

It has always been the policy of this company to extend its Electric Lines any reasonable number of feet to serve its customers, but due to the shortage of copper and other critical materials, the War Production Board has amended the regulations, effective March 26, 1942, to the extent that it is only possible for us to make extensions up to 250 feet in length without special permission from the War Production Board. In view of this condition, if you are planning to build a home where an extension of our Electric Lines will be required for you to have Electric Service, may we suggest you contact our Local Office so that you may be sure electricity can be supplied to you.

EXPERT LUBRICATION and WASHING

Lubrication of your car is a job that should be done by experts. We have the proper guns, filled with the correct lubricants to reach ALL of those out-of-the-way, hard-to-get spots that mean the difference between ordinary and GOOD trouble-free lubrication. Oils and greases should be changed to meet the needs of the season, so change today to summer lubricants.

Cars need to be washed often to keep them looking like new longer, and to protect and preserve the finish. When dirt is left on, it grinds into the car, loosening and shortening the life of the paint. Drive your car in for a wash job that will make it look like new.
