THIS CITY VOTES DEMOCRATIC TICKET 10 TO 1

Only Exception Is In Casting Votes In Governor's Contest

Lamb county contributed to that "mighty Democratic tornado" which whipped across the country Tuesday and elected Franklin D. Roosevelt to the presidency of the United States.

Lamb county cast a light vote, but because of the size of the ballot—the largest in the history of Texas—returns were incomplete Wednesday night from many of the boxes.

One example of the light vote is the fact that about half of the voters in the Littlefield box cast their ballots. A light vote was reported from a number of precincts in the county.

Lives There One in These Parts, Queries Carlsbad Man Seeking Matrimony in Texas

Although Mayor T. S. Sales states that he is not conducting a matrimonial bureau, that business seems to be on the increase.

The fact is, however, according to a communication received by the mayor that an ambitious Carlsbad "Romeo" is seeking, rather eagerly, if you please, the hand of some consenting, pliable Texas "Juliet".

Mayor Sales' correspondent, of 44 summers, and who admits in his letter that he "looks much younger", further evidences his utter unconcern as to the type of life-mate he chooses when he advises that he prefers one not below 18 nor above 40.

MOST MEN HAVE A HOBBY WITH SOME IT'S PRETTY WOMEN WITH OTHERS GAME ROOSTERS OR FIGHTING DOGS BUT WITH HERBERT MARTIN IT'S FISH

By M. E. D.
Most men have a hobby. It may be dogs, horses, gardening, pretty women, pet rattlesnakes, or fighting dogs or roosters, or both, but with Herbert Martin, county attorney, it's fish!

most everything but catfish. Herbert has aristocratic fish—tropical fish friends, and 10 pair in assorted colors and breeds. Carrying on an intelligent conversation with Herbert on the subject of fish without having read into fishology with seal in hundreds of times worse than trying to pry a lean out of Clyde Hillman without courtesy.

termining from Herbert's fishology conversation that he possesses egg laying fish, bubble nest builders, and live bearing fish. And, by the way, customers, did you know that Herbert is ultra-efficient in mixing concrete? We went over to the Martine one day to make arrangements for a free meal. Mrs. Martin informed us that it was OK to eat at their house, but that if we hoped to eat again that we had better go out to the garage and hurry Herbert from his labors to the table. Arriving in the garage we found Herbert mixing concrete. We couldn't understand what all this concrete mixing was about and proceeded to make inquiries. Then Herbert launched into fishology; he was building some sort of a special aquarium for those egg laying, live bearing, bubble nest builders.

WHEN YOU HEAR A KINDLY PHRASE, PASS IT ON

If you hear a person complimented, why don't you find an opportunity to tell him about it? This world needs more pleasant reports and fewer bitter criticisms.

If you want to be popular, remember the nice things which one person says of some other, then tell them. It is such a little thing to repeat a compliment. No matter how big and important the man, a genuine compliment gives pleasure. You like to hear pleasant things about yourself. You feel that what you do is "not much," and that you are given little credit. And at the same time you seldom give or repeat compliments.

Life has hard roads aplenty, pain and discouragements not a few. If you can make a sad experience less painful by saying a kind word, why not do it? Desist from repeating the evil things you hear.

ARMISTICE DAY

On November 11th the people of the whole world will celebrate the fourteenth anniversary of the end of the greatest catastrophe in the history of the world. When the order to cease firing was given at 11 o'clock in the morning on the eleventh day of November, 1918, there was hardly a human being on the face of the earth who did not join in the universal rejoicing. For there was no single human being in the world at that time and none who have been born since, whose life and whose future was not affected by the war.

We have called it the greatest catastrophe in the history of the world, and that is not an exaggeration. Who could have believed that the firing of a single shot in an obscure Serbian village eighteen years ago last August could have precipitated a tragedy that would involve the entire human race, and from the effects of which we have not yet recovered? For there is no possible question that the world-wide economic depression, the internal and international maladjustments and financial difficulties from which every nation in the world is suffering today, are all directly traceable to the Great War.

More than 65,000,000 young men, the best of their respective nations, were taken from their homes and occupations and sent into the battlefields to kill each other. More than eight and one-half million of men were killed or died of wounds; another twenty-one million were wounded or incapacitated. At the end of the war the survivors returned, most of them, to almost hopelessly impoverished homelands, burdened with impossible debts and crushed by unbearable taxes.

We cannot destroy millions of lives, billions upon billions of accumulated wealth, without paying for it. That we have made as much progress as has been made toward economic recovery in fourteen years is little less than miraculous.

It seems to us that those are the things to remember on Armistice Day. It seems to us that the eleventh of November should be the occasion for a solemn resolve on the part of every American that we and our nation shall use our commanding position and influence in the world to help the peoples and governments of the whole world to find means for lasting peace and security.

EIGHT YEARS AGO IN LITTLEFIELD

(Excerpts from Lamb Co. Leader)

Littlefield turned out enmasse for the Tech Cornerstone laying at Lubbock Armistice Day.

The town was closed tighter than the lid was ever clamped on by the Volstead Act, and practically every business man joined the big bunch of boosters to the Hub city.

At a recent meeting of the Littlefield school trustees, Mrs. H. W. Wiseman and Mrs. T. Wade Potter were elected teachers.

Mrs. Wiseman is to take charge of the overflow of the primary department, while Mrs. Potter will teach in the fourth grade.

Mrs. Potter was a teacher in the Fort Worth schools before coming to Littlefield, and Mrs. Wiseman has taught in San Antonio, and Waco, also in Littlefield.

Littlefield school and community now has an active Parent-Teachers Association which will shortly be federated with the State and National organizations. Its corps of officers is as follows: Mrs. W. G. Street, president; Mrs. J. W. Kelsey, vice-president; Mrs. F. A. Butler, recording secretary; Mrs. Bessie Baze, corresponding secretary; Mrs. A. P. Duggan, reporter; Mrs. Wm. Hay, treasurer; and R. L. Speight, parliamentarian.

Paul Bontke of Rule has rented the north room of the Fred Hoover butcher shop. He expects to be open for business next week.

Postmaster W. J. Wade advises that the new rural route out of Littlefield will be started in December.

Relieved By Taking Cardui

"I was weak and run-down and suffered quite a bit with pains in my side," writes Mrs. Nick Baranco, of Beaumont, Texas. "I was nervous. I did not rest well at night, and my appetite was poor. My mother had used Cardui with beneficial result, so I decided to take it. I surely am glad I did, for it stopped the pain in my side and built up my general health. I took seven bottles in all." Cardui is sold at all drug stores.

NOW IS THE TIME

The Littlefield Chamber of Commerce band, under the direction of Prof. Clayborne Harvey, made its first appearance on the streets last Saturday afternoon, giving a 40 minute concert in front of the representative business concerns.

Lillie Bell, aged 14 years, the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Edgar, died Monday morning at a Lubbock sanitarium, after an illness of three weeks.

The funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon, Rev. E. E. Robinson officiating, and interment of the remains made in the Lubbock cemetery.

"SMILIN' THROUGH" TO BE SHOWN AT PALACE THEATRE THIS WEEK

A picture that stirs moonlight memories clinging with the awakened romance of a girl's first kiss—mirroring the drama and the mystery of life—she wanted the love he could not give—a story of a great love that survived fifty years of intense hate—such a story is SMILIN' THROUGH, which picture will be run at the Palace Theatre Saturday midnight, and through Sunday and Monday.

This really great picture was directed by Sidney Franklin and stars two of the greatest luminaries of the talking screen, Norma Shearer and Frederic March. The cast also includes Leslie Howard.

The story of a man who loved and a man who hated and a woman who loved them both—yet had to choose between them. Young lovers darkened by the grim shadows of a past tragedy. Here is the soul of romance vibrating with life turbulent with drama.

FIRST LOVIES

by FELIX RIESENBERG

With Installment

Johnny Breen, 16, had spent all of his life playing around New York, making motherless when he sank the boat on which he and the man he called "Daddy" were living. He is the only one left through the dark night. At dawn, amid surprise, he is entirely unknown, his life begins. Unable to read, he is taken to a family, living and doing hand clothing business. From the hour he enters the city he had to fight through against bullies and soon became so professional he attracted the attention of a manager of fighters. He was in many boxing tournaments. It was here that Pug came into young Breen's life. He took Breen under his wing and sent him to night school and to a health farm he owned. The scene shifts to the family of Van Horns of Fifth Avenue. Gilbert Van Horn, who meets Malone and one of the boxing shows. He has a hidden chapter in his life which had to do with his maid, years ago, who left him when about to become a mother. Van Horn has a ward, now Breen's age. . . . He is now interested in John. . . . upon him to let him finance a course in Civil Engineering at Columbia University. . . . John and Josephine meet—become attached to each other, love grows and they become engaged shortly after Breen graduates from college. . . . Josephine has another suitor, a man of the world named Rantoul. . . . Josephine becomes restless as John gives full attention to his job and sails for Paris to select her trousseau. . . . At the last moment Rantoul sails on the same boat. . . . At sea on the return home the great ocean liner crashes into an iceberg and sinks—all passengers taking to the lifeboats. Van Horn perishes, but Rantoul saves himself—with Josephine. Breen learns that Gilbert Van Horn was his father. Josephine breaks the engagement and marries Rantoul. For years John buries himself in work. The U. S. enters the World War. Josephine sees Breen in France, but he remains cool, unimpressed. The Armistice is signed. Rantoul loses his great fortune and Josephine sues and obtains a divorce. Breen, seven years in South America, completes his work and returns to New York. He meets Josephine again, and discovers that love is being rekindled. Josephine, older and wiser, leads John on again.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"Perhaps it isn't so," Hetherington mused. "But I have a statement from Jules, old Jules, the butler, discharged by Miss Lambert, or resigned, I don't know which. He's now proprietor of the Club Daffodil. How about that? You've read it?"

"My dear Mr. Hetherington, it may simply be an attempt to get back at Miss Lambert. Don't believe everything you find out."

"Well, there's a big story there."

"My dear sir, this city is full of big stories, stories so big the novelists can't open their jaws wide enough to bite them."

"Josephine, we might as well face the facts."

"Why, Marvin! Are you about to propose?" She sat on the arm of the great chair and stroked his head.

"Why have you lit up that portrait of Gilbert?"

"Because it reminds me of, well, of him, and John."

"You know all about—the relationship?"

"Right, old guardian. Now what? Must I split?"

"My dear young lady. You don't know John."

"Well, more than half of the estate is my own. You know I've made money. Hanging onto this house has paid. You know the offer. If John Breen expects me to drag him here and give him ether, well, I may have to do it. Of course he knows."

"Yes."

"I thought so. Well, Marvin, I'm getting back into society again, what there is left of it, and Mrs. Van Horn won't sound so bad. He'll have to change his name, that's all."

"I was hoping he would, Josephine. Oh, girl, you are good, and wise."

"I'm going to settle things pretty soon Marvin."

"Good night, my dear. Will you kiss an old man?"

"There! Now be good."

It was getting on into November. Josephine Lambert had many things to think about. What a difficult boy John was. Of course he was different, essentially a gentleman, and she, in a measure, knew why he was so reluctant to pay active court to her. But she knew he was impressionable, romantic, fervent, and she knew he was lost, lost in the interminable maze surrounding them. The whole bulging, swelling body of the town was choking her, it was literally choking her with money and disgust. Two weeks before Osman Snow, alias Sknowvitzky, had paid, in cash, a sum so staggering she hardly believed her eyes. Quite cleverly (she had acted unintentionally) her reluctance to part with the old Van Horn house had resulted in many, many thousands of additional dollars. In another month, however, she would have to move out. Another month.

Two weeks of the last month had gone by. She had not seen John Breen. Judge Kelly arranged to inform her of his whereabouts. The ter the Waldorf. Josephine, on the north side of the street shuddered. Thank heaven he had not entered that place. Of course she would have followed him, but the necessity was thankfully passed.

At Twenty-fifth street he again stopped and read the iron valve top covers. Catskill Water. Then he bought a paper, and, for a moment, seemed interested. He walked across into the park. Josephine also bought a paper. She was getting intensely wrought up in the chase. A picture caught her eye. "Almon Strauss Definitely Abandons Bureau of City Plan." There was not much else. She wondered what John was so upset about. His jaunty step was gone. He had tossed the paper into a can and it was immediately retrieved by a bum. Josephine dropped her paper behind a low rail, on the half-dead grass. "The city is always being abandoned," she remarked thoughtfully. Soon she would abandon it herself. She smiled at the thought.

Josephine was a good stout walker, the air was cool, it was getting a bit dusky. John was on Third Avenue and strolled along. He hardly knew where he was going. So Almon Strauss was quitting. Well, he was quitting too. The London crowd had cabled him was no use talking. He was glad to see her, doubly glad. It was all so sudden and unexpected. Only the day before Judge Kelly had met him at luncheon, and had suggested that he owed her a call, at least. "A fine woman, John, a good woman."

Night was stealing over the city, chill night. The rickety old East Side L rattled away. Strangers were passing. Mean streets are doubly mean in cold weather.

It was six o'clock. They turned west, toward the subway. "I usually leave my car, when I'm down here." She told the plain truth, but not much of it. They were near the Astor Place station. "You must come home with me, John. You look tired. Do."

"Thanks, Josephine, if you will have me. I was about to suggest dinner somewhere."

"We'll dine at home, just you and me. Oh, I am so glad to see you, John."

He changed a coin, they were clapped through the turnstile. A crowd covered the platform. They were wedged together.

"I have been wondering just now what is to become of us—you and me?" She looked up at him, her long lashes dropped. She was young, so very young it seemed.

They were crushed into a train, he tried to shield her, his arm over her shoulder against a column. Her presence was grateful, comforting, as if he had always been with her, as if she was, well, was what a wife should be—safe, reassuring, lovable. At Fourteenth street the greater part of the crush squeezed out, attempting to enter an Express and save two minutes.

Conversation on the train was impossible, a few seats were available. Josephine, who never used the subway, sat very close to John, shoved against him by a man in foul overalls, a man with an evil-smelling paper-hanger's kit between his knees. The East Side tube, carrying the returning denizens of upper Harlem and the Bronx, the black and white, the drab and gray, rocked and shouted, stopped and started with jerks, and pounded on flat wheels and with screaming brakes. A song was reverberating through Josephine. "I've got him at last! I've got him at last!"

They walked across narrow Fifty-ninth street. John thought how significant numbers are in the great city. Fifty-nine. Men at fifty-nine are old. At least, so it seemed to John. They walked up Madison Avenue and turned into the Van Horn home. The Japanese butler opened the door.

"I am not at home, Tashi."

"Yes, madam."

Dinner was served in the dark dining room; John and Josephine hardly talked. She had changed her street gown, in an incredible short time. "You know I have no special maid now, John. Just the cook, Tashi, and a boy. Oh, I have changed." She blushed becomingly. "I dress myself, do my hair. See." She unwound a thick coil, stretched it out at arm's length and wound it back in place. They were in the drawing room, she stood before a mirror. "I hope it's straight." She was in negligee of net with a coat of gold lace and cream. It was a dangerously feminine thing, filmy with ruffles and roses, easily crushed. A breath of vague perfume filled the room; parfum Josephine!

"There she was, before him. There they stood."

old Judge was as excited as a harpooner. Another week went by. Already Josephine was feeling the necessity of packing. Of course it could be done quickly, and many things could simply be left to auctioneers.

"Mr. Breen has left the Engineers' Club. He is going to the Public Library. It was an important call, arranged for her by Judge Kelly. Josephine Lambert motored down Park Avenue, it was sure. She left her car at the Grand Central and walked over to Fifth Avenue. For the longest kind of a time she waited. Would he leave by the side door on Forty-second street? She swore under her breath, rather competently, and she would have liked to light a cigarette, as many men did but the stupid city had yet to advance a few more stages before women could be entirely at home on the streets.

It was mid-afternoon. John had lunched leisurely, and had consulted the files of the papers back in 1909. He used the Times Index, and was rewarded by several references to Almon Strauss. He was piecing together information for his own use. Strauss was immensely wealthy, almost a complete mystery, as to fact, a nebulous theory, as to report. Since the talk with Almon Strauss, John came to realize more and more the utter futility of merely planning. No one can tell the city what to do. It does things, and offers no excuses.

As John walked down from the library, across the broad steps, Josephine saw him at once. He went southward along the avenue, strolling casually, swinging a cane, hardly looking at any one. Josephine crossed over and walked a short distance behind him. She smiled grimly at the business. Several acquaintances saw her, she bowed stiffly and dropped back. It was a deadly business. But John did look rather trim. He walked easily. He had an air about him. For the first time the humor of the situation dawned upon Josephine. She almost laughed, she was so certain of her ability; but he would have to pay her for this, pay her well, and, of course, he would never know what he was making up for.

John crossed Thirty-fourth street, hesitated a moment, as if about to en-only a few days before. All he had to do was say "yes." Five years work at least, in Manchuria. He felt better, even in his loneliness.

At Ninth street, he walked East to St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, and then he was near the site of the old Cafe Boulevard.

"Oh, John!" Josephine called to him. She was running toward him. "I saw you a block away. I was going home. Where in the name of common sense have you been?"

There she was before him. There they stood. The whole neighborhood had changed, since—since—well, it

They say that even a worm will turn and although I know nothing about worms, I can sympathize with it, or them.

People always—no, not always—but nearly always grumble when I put in an appearance.

AND I PROTEST! Years ago electricity was used for lighting. Rates were higher. Today, lighting is the smallest part. You probably have any number of electrical appliances helping you with your housework—appliances that you wouldn't do without. You are using two or three times as much current as you did only a few years ago.

And still I am called the electric light bill. After all, I have a certain pride. When you used electricity for lighting only, that was alright. It is not true today.

Littlefield Area Farmers Are Growing Extra Fine Turnips

Evidence of the wonderful turnip growth in this section was indicated last week when Jim Blessing, living three miles east of town, brought to the Leader office four immense turnips, the largest of which weighed four pounds.

This week Glen Young of six miles southwest of Littlefield brought Dr. T. B. Duke two turnips, both weighing together eight pounds. He also brought some to the Leader, one of which weighed 4 3/4 pounds.

In addition to being large, these turnips are of the highest quality for eating, and beautiful to look at, and should win first prize at any fall fair.

Dressing Plant Is Big Asset To Poultry Raisers

The Littlefield Poultry & Egg Co. opened their turkey dressing plant Saturday last, and a large number of turkeys have been handled by them this week.

According to Barney Wilson, manager, this dressing plant was added to their produce business for the convenience of their customers, so that instead of carrying their turkeys elsewhere to be dressed, they may bring them to Littlefield.

"It also enables us in Littlefield to pay a better price for turkeys," said Mr. Wilson.

Three cars of turkeys were shipped from the Littlefield Poultry & Egg dressing plant for last Thanksgiving market, and this concern during the two weeks market gave employment to 80 people, including 75 turkey pickers.

MEAT DEMONSTRATIONS INCREASE INTEREST IN SUPPLYING HOME NEEDS

MEET DEMONSTRATION
 By ROY W. SNYDER
 Bureau of Animal Industry

The problem of getting food from producer to consumer economically becomes greatly simplified when the producer is also the consumer. Specialization in certain branches of agriculture, such as cotton growing, has tended to change many farmers from producers to purchasers of their own home meat supplies. Yet, in recent years, meat demonstrations sponsored by extension and other specialists have done much to acquaint farm families with the practical possibilities of providing a considerable proportion of their home meat supplies.

A typical example is a program of meat demonstrations begun in Texas in the fall of 1930. The activity was inaugurated by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in cooperation with county agents and home demonstration agents of the various localities. The extension specialists staged demonstrations in killing hogs, cattle, and lambs, and preparing meat products from these animals.

DEMONSTRATION OF KILLING, CUTTING, AND CURING METHODS

Demonstrations in killing hogs, cutting the carcasses, and curing and otherwise preparing the meat were conducted in 13 counties. These meetings were attended largely by the county and home demonstration agents of the counties involved and others near by, together with many local leaders who desired to qualify themselves for conducting or assisting in similar demonstrations in their own localities. Each demonstration usually lasted a day and a half.

On the afternoon of the first day instruction was given in proper killing methods, from one to three hogs being killed for this purpose. On the second day the carcasses were cut up, the meat was put down in the cure, lard was rendered, and all by-products, such as sausage, scrapple, headcheese, liver paste, and mince-meat were prepared by the women present, under the direction of a home-industries specialist.

Such a pork program has become very popular in many counties of the state. Twenty-five county agents conducted pork demonstrations in their own counties after attending and assisting in a district demonstration supervised by the meat specialist.

As a result of the pork program carried on in 12 counties around Lubbock, Texas, a ham and bacon show was sponsored by the South Plains Fair association and the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce. There were 712 entries of cured and canned meat products, including 112 hams, 71 pieces of bacon, 47 shoulders, 11 samples of sausage, 91 containers of lard, and canned products such as roasts, chops, sausage, and scrapple. In connection with this meat show, a 4-H club fat calf and pig show was held. The animals were sold at auction at the close of the show, most of them being purchased locally. This combined show was of outstanding value in increasing interest in farm butchering and meat curing. It was also a means of demonstrating what high quality cured meats really were, as well as how they could be produced. Special killing, cutting and curing demonstrations were held during the show.

BEEF AND LAMB PROGRAMS ALSO CARRIED ON.

As much interest has been shown in the beef and lamb programs as in the pork programs, primarily because of the high production of cattle and sheep in the state. The beef and lamb demonstrations have been conducted in almost the same manner as have the pork demonstrations. A variety of beef products—some to be used fresh, some canned, some cured, and some dried—has been advocated. Lamb demonstrations have become especially popular, primarily because of the general lack of knowledge about handling lamb. Learning how to kill the animal and how to remove the pelt is stimulating lamb consumption, particularly in the important sheep-producing areas of the state.

The interest in the meat work, including beef, lamb, and pork, was evident from the number of people attending the meetings, as many as 125 people assembling to witness the demonstrations in most counties. As a result of these activities Texas farmers and ranch owners are increasing the production of their home meat supply. Agricultural agents report that many farmers who previously kept no hogs on their farms now fatten from one to five or seven for home use. For many families home-canned beef was made available for the first time during the summer of 1931.

MEAT DEMONSTRATIONS HELD IN CITIES.

Interest in the meat programs has not been confined to the farmers and ranchmen of the state. Meat demonstrations have been conducted also in towns and cities. Some were held to acquaint retailers with new cutting methods, others to furnish city housewives with information on selecting and buying both lamb and beef. A survey taken in four large towns in Texas during the spring of 1931 revealed that the consumption of lamb had increased as much as one-third after special lamb demonstrations had been given there.

Through interest in meat demonstrations in cities is noteworthy, the principal aim of the program in Texas has been to encourage a better-balanced meat supply for farm and ranch homes. In many instances pork had been utilized almost exclusively, and oftentimes the supply lasted only a few months. To encourage a more varied and adequate diet throughout the year, the present recommendations include beef and lamb as well as pork, and also other meats such as chicken and fish. The needs of a family of five adults appear to be well supplied by approximately two hogs weighing about 225 pounds each, one beef animal weighing about 550 pounds, and two lambs weighing approximately 85 pounds each.

Abernathy To Have Poultry Show First Week In December

Abernathy's fourth annual poultry show will be held the first week-end in December, according to V. S. Payne, teacher of vocational agriculture in Abernathy public schools. The show will be under the sponsorship of the chamber of commerce and will be under the supervision of Payne and his agriculture students.

As in preceding shows, poultry judging contests will be held for Aggie students. Teams from several neighboring towns will compete, Mr. Payne stated.

New York Yankees' Ace Player Visits Littlefield Friends

Wilcy Moore, an ace of the New York Yankees, was in Littlefield recently, and called on two friends of many years—J. B. Ellis and J. H. Ware.

Mr. Moore, a Hollis Oklahoma boy, was in this section visiting his brother, Newby Moore, who resides west of Sudan, and who has played on numerous occasions with the Littlefield baseball club.

Mr. Ellis, whose home is in Hollis, is a neighbor of the Moore family, and it was he who was instrumental in getting Moore started out on his career in professional baseball. This was accomplished when he obtained a place for Moore on the Fort Worth club in the Texas league.

Followers of the big time sport recognize in Moore the individual player who won the game for the New York Yankees from the Chicago Cubs in the last game of the World Series, making it four straight wins for the Yankees in this year's series.

There is a "dude ranch" within an hour's ride of New York City. The ranch consists of 1,100 acres at 1,000 feet elevation.

"HIGHEST TEST" at the price of ordinary gasoline

When an ad yells in fat black type that "Science says the so-and-so gasoline is the best"...

When testing laboratory reports are published which try to prove that the company paying for the tests has the only quality gasoline...

When charts are printed to convince drivers that they are foolish and wasting money unless they buy some one gasoline and no other...

Then there is only one comment which experienced motorists can make: "OH, YEAH?"

In our opinion, there are a number of good gasolines on the market. The products of the reputable refiners will all give good service. If the claims are just a bit strong and laid on rather heavy, remember that these are days of fierce competition in the gasoline industry.

The hard-boiled driver, the man from Missouri, and his wife who won't believe a word in the ads—we understand and appreciate exactly how they feel.

Their way of getting the truth about a motor fuel is to put it up to the motor. They try the gas. And if performance is improved, if special benefits develop—then they know their own minds and stick to the gasoline that delivers most for their money.

More than 7,400,000 experienced drivers have already switched to Phillips 66... the greater gasoline. And as the days grow colder, there will be at least a million more.

They will want that split-second starting in freezing weather, which loyal Phillips users are so proud of. They will demand all the other high test advantages so generously delivered by this amazing new motor fuel: quick warm-up... added power... smoother running... longer mileage.

Because of the marvelous things they have heard about it from their friends, they will expect something unusual and different in Phillips 66. And they will not be disappointed, because Phillips pioneered the principle of CONTROLLED VOLATILITY, which adjusts the "test" of the gasoline not merely to the season but to your weather, week by week and day by day.

They will not be disappointed, because Phillips 66 is made by the world's largest producer of natural high gravity gasoline. That is why its high test costs you nothing extra.

The colder the day on which you try your first tankful, the more impressed you will be by the tremendous winter advantages of "highest test" Phillips 66 gasoline.

But why take our word for it! Put it up to your motor. It plays no favorites. Fill-up with Phillips 66 tomorrow, at the Orange and Black 66 shield.

been counted late Wednesday afternoon, but totals had not been compiled at that time as to the vote on the constitutional amendments.

Incomplete returns from the Littlefield box showed that this city and immediate district had voted the Democratic ticket considerably more than ten to one, except in the governor's race.

Incomplete returns late Wednesday showed the Littlefield vote as 261 for Mrs. Ferguson and 258 for Bullington.

Incomplete returns from the Littlefield box also show that a number of votes were cast for Socialist party candidates.

There were not any votes cast for candidates in the other columns of the ballot.

Candidates for county and precinct offices, nominated in the primaries, were elected.

Incomplete returns from Olton, where 605 ballots were cast, show substantial majorities for the Democratic nominee for president, and for Mrs. Ferguson.

North and South Sudan also gave substantial majorities for Roosevelt and Mrs. Ferguson.

Incomplete returns show that Amherst gave a big majority for Roosevelt, but favored Bullington by a small majority for governor.

The majority of the precincts of the county are expected to give substantial majorities for Mrs. Ferguson.

Post Office—

The only recourse that Littlefield possesses, in the event that objection is raised to the locking of the local post office lobby at night, is to have a petition signed in protest and placed in the proper hands.

Instructions have been received at the Littlefield post office that in future applications for money orders must be filled out by the party applying for the money order and not by the clerk, as has been the practice in the past. The only exception is in the case of a person who is unable to make out their own application, and in that event the clerk may fill out the application in the presence of a witness.
