RIDING ON CREST OF AMBITION LEADER CANDIDATES IN EVERY SECTION EXERT VIGOROUS EFFORT FOR BEAUTIFUL PRIZES

Two More Days and Wide Famed Subscription Campaign Comes to a Dramatic Close.

The dawn of the final day! The last dash to the wire! The beginning of the end!

Two more short days and The Lamb County Leader's widely famed automobile and prize campaign comes to a dramatic close. All Lamb county is watching, waiting, wondering. Who will win the big automobile and other prizes is the question on every lip. The outside districts are seething with a valiant battle for their favorites. Excitement is keyed to the highest pitch.

Riding on the crest of the wave of enthusiasm, ambitious candidates from every section of The Leader's wide territory are exerting vigorous efforts to capture the beautiful prizes that will be awarded in two more days.

On another page of this issue appears the final vote schedule. All the subscriptions turned in during the final week will receive votes according to this scale. The schedule was compiled in accordance with the original announcement of the campaign, which appeared in The Leader January 9th.

It's the last chance, and the one sure way to victory and an automobile. Present indications point to a hairbreadth finish, and it is certain that the prizes will be won by small margins. No one candidate can appear certain of victory, and there is abundant of speculation as to the outcome. These final days will decide it. It is only those who buffet the waves with a stiff upper lip, brushing aside every obstacle that may arise, that have the best chances of winning the automobile.

It is now necessary every candidate to put his own vitality into the work. There are but two days of the campaign during which the final vote scale is effective, (will be the deciding factor in determining the winners.)

The race is so close to bank upon any possibility, and there are too many persons interested in every candidate to insure anyone else of an easy victory. Over confidence loses battles, relaxation at this stage of the campaign is suicidal to success.

Determination to win, coupled with relentless activity in vote gathering will make a winner out of a candidate. There is no time to hesitate. What is intended to be done must be done NOW. To tamperize is to let some candidate forge ahead and claim the prize that would have been yours.

This is your eleventh hour chance to make a whirlwind dash to the finish—your chance to get your share of the $5,000 worth of happiness which The Lamb County Leader will broadcast with a lavish hand in a few days.

Class Final Predicted

The final vote standing published below indicates that so far it is anybody's race. The winners are among those published below. All inactive candidates have been dropped from the list. Neither the campaign manager, nor anyone connected with The Leader has any idea who will win the automobile.

Publishers plan to protest proposed newspaper price rise.

HANSFORD CO. SEAT FIGHT WAS ENDED IN COURT LAST WEEK

With the Amarillo court of civil appeals upholding the action of the Hansford county district court in a suit to contest an election in which Spearman was made county seat of Hansford county, the Panhandle's oldest county seat fight has probably been settled for all time.

At various times, for the past 40 years, the location of the Hansford county seat has been in the courts with numerous elections, injunctions and contests.

Following an election last year in which Spearman received a two-thirds majority over Hansford and Gruver, citizens of Gruver filed a suit contesting the election. When the case was called in Spearman last August, the plaintiffs sought a continuance which was denied and the case dismissed. The action of the district court was the cause of the appeal to the Amarillo court.

Judge H. E. Hoover, dean of Panhandle lawyers, who has been an attorney in every suit involving the location of the Hansford county seat, represented Spearman in this contest. —Amarillo Daily News.

Athletics Win in Three Straight Basketball Games During Week

The Littlefield Athletics, composed of former college and professional basketball players, won three games the past week.

Tuesday night the Athletics journeyed to Dimmitt and defeated the independent club there by a 46 to 14 count.

Wednesday night the Iron Men from Clovis, N. M., came to Littlefield and were administered the worst drubbing of the season. The game started slow, with neither team showing any signs of basketball skill. The Athletics finally cut loose with their dazzling offense and were never to be stopped afterwards. The final score of the game was 45 to 24.

Thursday's game proved to be the hardest of the week. The Dimmitt men came to Littlefield determined to even things up between the two teams. The contest proved to be very interesting from the standpoint of the fans and extremely hard for both teams. At the end of the first half the teams were deadlocked, 23 and 23. The second half was practically a repetition of the first, neither team being more than three points ahead at any time. With but two minutes left to play and Dimmitt leading 42 to 41 the locals let loose an attack that scored them four points and the game resulted in a score of 45 to 42.

Lions Ask Folks to Clean Around Their Dens Next Friday, February 21st

Friday, February 21, has been set as Clean-up day in Littlefield, the movement being sponsored by the local Lions club, assisted by the Boy Scouts and with the co-operation of the City Commission.

Everybody is urged to clean their property, the alleys and adjoining vacant lots, piling the trash in a convenient place where it may be obtained by trucks which will haul it away free of charge.

With the coming of spring it is deemed advisable from the standpoint of health, better sanitation conditions generally and as an index of the civic pride of the citizenship that the town put on a clean dress, and to this end it is urged by members of the Lions club that the widest co-operation and general interest be given the occasion.

The new firm will be known as the "Radio and Music Shop."

BRICK HERE FOR CHURCH

A shipment of 60,000 brick was received here this week for the new Methodist church, and it is stated that other material will be arriving shortly.

Plans of construction are this week being finished by the architect, and it is thought actual work of building will be started by the first of March.

$50,000 City Hall To Be Started Soon; City Accepts New Paving

That work on a City hall for Littlefield will be started in the near future is the statement given by Mayor Otto Jones.

An architect was here this week and presented plans and specifications to the City Commission for their approval.

Bonds in the sum of $50,000 were voted last year for the city hall which is to be located in the city park at the south end of Main street.

City Accepts Paving

At a special meeting of the Commission held Thursday night of last week, and attended by Julius Montgomery, of the engineering firm, Montgomery & Ward, and by representatives of the Dozier Construction Co., the paving recently finished in Littlefield was duly accepted and payment made for same. About $7,000 was held out for repaving of some areas which had frozen and which were not accepted by the Commission. These areas are now being repaved.

ROTARY WILL PUT ON A MINSTREL HERE FEB. 27

The Littlefield Rotary club is making plans to put on a minstrel and playlet entertainment in the High school auditorium, February 27-28.

TAXES ON PETS NOW DUE; DOGS KILLED

Got a dog? Better look out for him or you won't have him (or her) very long.

Dog tax time is here and the City Secretary has the license tags for the coveted canines. Last week Officer Ratliff sent 30 of them to dog heaven by the rifle route. He don't like to do it, he says, for many of them are very desirable animals; but just so long as they persist roaming the streets without a necklace and the prescribed bangle they are subject to quick transport to some other clime.

The tax on male dogs is $1.00 per year; females, $2.00, whether mastiff or poodle or any of the between sizes and breeds.

Better look to your dog tax if you value his life.

GAS SERVICE BY FEB. 22 IS NOW PROBABLE IN LFD.

Monday the South Plains Pipe Line Co., had the gas main laid from Lubbock to within seven miles of Littlefield, and it is thought if the weather does not prevent, the line will be completed into town by Saturday of this week, a gate placed in the line and ready to turn over the West Texas Gas Co.

The West Texas Gas Co. have yet to build their town border station which, when completed, will then be ready to turn gas into the local lines for citizen service, which will probably take another week longer, or by Saturday, the 22nd.

The South Plains Pipe Line Co., after reaching Littlefield will continue their main line on to Amherst, Sudan and Muleshoe.

SHOPPE OF BEAUTY OPENS

Mrs. Daisy Tyler, formerly of Brownwood, Saturday held the opening of her new beauty shop in the rear of Sadler's drug store.

About 170 ladies registered and tickets were drawn by several present entitling them to free work of some kind to be received at the shop.

Miss Sallie Gene Pilkington, also of Brownwood, and a graduate of a school of beauty culture at Dallas, is associated with Mrs. Tyler as an operator. She has had several years experience in this line of business.

The shop is attractively decorated in pink and green, the equipment also carries out the color note and the operators wear uniforms of the chosen color.

The new concern will be known as the "Shoppe of Beauty."

CITIZENS RAISING MONEY FOR A NEW HOTEL TO BE BUILT

Indications are now favorable for the construction of a new and modern hotel in Littlefield, according to Secretary J. W. Hale, of the Chamber of Commerce, who states that about $30,000 has been subscribed by local citizens for that purpose. "The total cost of the proposed structure will range between $60,000 and $70,000" said Mr. Hale.

Plans for erecting a new hotel in Littlefield were begun several months ago when three lots located on Main street opposite the First State Bank and Thaxton Bros. hardware store were secured for that purpose.

A committee was appointed by the Chamber of Commerce for the purpose of raising money locally to be used in connection with a contract it was proposed would be let to outside interests as an inducement for fostering the local enterprise. At that time about $3,500 was raised, according to report. The committee believes now it will be able to raise the entire amount required for such a structure so that it will be built entirely by local capital.

SIMON D. HAY FOR RE-ELECTION AS CO. JUDGE OF LAMB CO.

The Leader is this week authorized to announce the candidacy of Simon D. Hay for re-election to the office of County Judge, subject to the will of the voters as expressed in the coming Democratic primary election.

Judge Hay is probably as widely known throughout Lamb County as any other one citizen, having been a resident of Sudan for the past nine years, where he has property interests and where, during past years, he has also been in business.

For six years he served the county acceptably as Commissioner of Precinct Four, being elected to that important office three different times. Following this he was elected as County Judge.

Mr. Hay states that during his past term of office it has been his constant endeavor to serve his constituents in as conscientious and efficient manner as possible; that he has endeavored at all times to uphold the law in its various applications, to be fair and impartial in all his decisions, and to care for the various financial and judicial interests of the citizens of this county in the most acceptable manner possible. And it is on the basis of his accepted qualifications and faithful service that he seeks re-election.

FOXWORTH-GALBRAITH CO. ENLARGE LUMBER YARD

Foxworth-Galbraith Lumber Co., successors to J. T. Harris Lumber Co., this week began work on considerable improvements in their business site.

The main office building is being remodeled and enlarged. The warehouse is being extended 64 feet, making a total of 130 in length, and an implement house, 50x125 is being constructed across from the lumber yard site on the property purchased by them of Turner & Brewer.

E. J. Seely, manager, states their stocks will be considerably enlarged when the new buildings have been completed.

Recent Era of Speculation Proved a Serious Interruption to Routine Work of the People

By S. W. STRAUS, President American Society for Thrift

One of the ill effects of the recent era of over-speculation in this country rested in the fact that it proved a serious interruption to the routine of work of a very large number of persons.

It is reported that many men and women actually gave up good positions because, due to their temporary success in the market, they felt that their days of work were over. They had discovered the philosopher's stone. They could make an ever increasing amount of money without really working for it.

While the number of persons who actually did this might have been comparatively limited, the excitement due to the speculative activities of the market caused many others to neglect their work. They performed the labors for which they were being paid with only half a mind and perhaps in many instances not quite that. Their thoughts were on the market—on the great profits they were reaping and the great wealth they were going to acquire without the usual processes of hard work and careful saving.

It would not be possible to estimate the value of these losses to the business world during the last year or more. Time is money and when a considerable percentage of our population wastes time day after day to no good purpose, the loss in terms of dollars, if it could be so computed, would be prodigious.

The least that can be said is that during the intensive era of speculation there must have been a very serious let down in individual efficiency upon the part of many.

But we are now facing a new era—an era in which thrift and hard work will be given more attention. It brings us back to the old fundamental fact that only through these practices can permanent, personal progress be realized.

Earliest Use of Candy

The earliest use of candy was to disguise the unpleasant taste of medicine and it was made chiefly by physicians and apothecaries. The great development of the use of candy dates from the beginning of the Nineteenth century, in England. In the United States, there were 20 candy factories in Philadelphia as early as 1810.

Doctors Disagree

When children are irritable and peevish, grind their teeth and sleep restlessly, have digestive pains and disturbances, lack of appetite, and have itching eyes, nose and fingers, doctors will not always agree that they are suffering from worms. Many mothers, too, will not believe that their carefully brought up children can have worms. The fact remains that these symptoms will yield, in a great majority of cases, to a few doses of White's Cream Vermifuge, the sure expellant of round and pin worms. If your child has any of these symptoms, try this harmless, old-fashioned remedy, which you can get at 25c per bottle from Stokes-Alexander Drug Company

The Auction Sale An American Institution Worth Thousands of Dollars to Section Yearly

"Going, once! Going, twice! Going three times and sold!" The auctioneer may be selling an old fashioned coal oil lamp or a modern tractor, threshing this period the auctioneer is one other thing ranging between in size and value—but the bidder takes it and something else is put up for sale.

Every fall time is sale time in Littlefield section. Day after day, and week after week for about three months time, the sales go on. During this period the auctioneer is one of the most popular and in-demand citizens and business men of the county. Many of these auction farm sales are not only good business enterprises but also excellent social events, furnishing an opportunity for neighbors to get better acquainted and the new settlers to learn more about the older ones.

Every year there are numerous farmers who have an accumulation of livestock, grain, seed, farm implements, household goods, etc., that they wish to get rid of, and every year there are numerous other farmers, many of them new settlers, who have need of this very same stuff. Some of it they buy at real bargains and both seller and buyer are satisfied. Some farmers declare the auction sale system is the most profitable manner in which to dispose of many articles unneeded and of much grain and livestock grown on the farm. Occasionally exceptionally high prices are paid for certain commodities.

Occasionally a farmer has an auction sale with the intention of leaving the country for what he thinks a more desirable location; but no one in Lamb county ever worries about that, for where one leaves there are a dozen or more coming in, and real estate dealers always have a big list of prospective land buyers on hand, while the applications for farms to rent runs up into the hundreds above the farms that are rentable.

The man who has a sale in this section because he has gone broke is about as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth—most of these sales being held just as a matter of good business the same as a merchant holds a special sale of his wares and merchandise. It is a great American institution and worth much more to the community than the dollars and cents it represents.

ROTARIANS ENDORSE THE NEW HOTEL PROPOSED HERE

Thirty members of the Rotary club were present at the regular weekly luncheon, Thursday at the Methodist church.

President C. C. Clements presided. W. H. Harris, who was to be in charge of the program was unable to be present, and the meeting was turned into a round table discussion.

Arthur P. Duggan, who has been out of the city for sometime, was present and made a short talk. R. E. McCaskill and J. W. Hale both discussed various phases of civic development.

The local Rotarians heartily endorsed the action of the Chamber of Commerce in promoting a new hotel for Littlefield.

The club congratulated the ladies of the Methodist church on serving the luncheon, which was their first time to serve.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

W. H. Taft, III, Quits as Chief Justice and Hughes Named to Succeed Him.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT, returning to Washington from Asheville a very sick man, sent in his resignation as chief justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. It was at once accepted by President Hoover with expressions of deep respect and of sympathy for Mr. Taft's condition, and Charles Evans Hughes was appointed his successor.

Though the entire matter seemed sudden, it was learned that the President had been informed of Mr. Taft's intention several weeks before and that Mr. Hughes had conferred with Mr. Hoover several times before accepting the appointment.

Mr. Taft's physicians admitted that he was seriously ill, and though toward the close of the week his condition appeared to have improved, they held out little hope for his recovery. They said that for some years he had had very high blood pressure associated with general arteriosclerosis and myocarditis and also had a chronic cystitis. President and Mrs. Hoover called on him the day after his return from the South, and so did several of the Supreme court justices. There was a constant stream of other callers at the Taft residence but of course most of them merely left messages of greeting and cheer. Mr. Taft's retirement closed a public career unparalleled in this country. For nearly fifty years he served the people in offices ranging from an assistant prosecuting attorney to President of the republic and head of its highest tribunal. He was the first civil governor general of the Philippine islands and was secretary of war under President Roosevelt. He was appointed by President Wilson as chief justice in 1921. In accordance with a law passed at the last session of congress, he retires with his full salary of $30,500 a year.

Mr. Hughes presumably will take office when the Supreme court reconvenes on February 24. His appointment is the climax of a record in the public service almost as remarkable as that of his predecessor. He has held some of the highest offices within the reach of an American citizen, having fallen short only of the Presidency, for which he was the unsuccessful Republican candidate in 1916 against Woodrow Wilson. To make that campaign he resigned as associate justice of the Supreme court, to which position he had been appointed by President Roosevelt in 1910. About a year ago he was selected as a judge of the world court and spent last summer sitting at The Hague. From March 4, 1921, to March 4, 1925, he was secretary of state in the Harding and Coolidge cabinets, retiring voluntarily.

As a matter of propriety, Charles E. Hughes, Jr., will now resign as solicitor general of the United States, and it has been suggested that President Hoover may select as his successor Mr. Taft's son, Robert A. Taft, who is now district attorney at Cincinnati.

FRANCISCO ORTIZ RUBIO was inaugurated president of Mexico Wednesday with simple ceremonies, and he is leaving the national academy an attempt was made to assassinate him, which was quite in accordance with Mexican tradition. A young man standing behind a file of soldiers at the gate of honor emptied his revolver into the presidential car. Ortiz Rubio was shot through the cheek, the bullet lodging in the left jaw. His wife and niece and his military aide were slightly wounded, as was the chauffeur who nevertheless stepped on the accelerator and carried his passengers swiftly to a Red Cross hospital. A few hours later the surgeons announced that the president was out of danger.

The assassin was seized by the police and said he was Daniel Flores of San Luis Potosi state and was a follower of Jose Vasconcelos, defeated candidate for the presidency. He refused to say why he had tried to kill Ortiz Rubio, but the authorities were satisfied that it was a plot of the "Vasconcelistas." This was the view, also, of Portes Gil, retiring president, who told newspaper men that Senora de Ortiz had received an unsigned letter a few days ago which said her husband would not live to be inaugurated.

Only a week before the shooting the federal district authorities announced they had frustrated one such Vasconcelista plot with the arrest of nineteen persons who allegedly planned to assassinate both Senor Ortiz Rubio and Senor Portes Gil and seize the government. If that was the plan in this instance, events did not develop as was hoped, for Mexico City, except for an air of anxiety for the president's safety, was quiet with little or no indication that anything unusual had happened.

PRELIMINARY negotiations among the naval conferees in London did not proceed very smoothly. Prime Minister MacDonald announced that Great Britain sought the abolition of submarines, and immediately thereafter Henry L. Stimson, head of the American delegation, made it known that this position was supported by the United States and that he would propose the abolition of underwater warfare at the plenary session set for February 11. The French delegation at once met and examined the question and then declared flatly that they would not consider the proposal. It was understood that Premier Tardieu at the plenary session would meet it with a speech in which he would say that France considers the submarine as most necessary for the defense of the French coast though France does not want it as an offensive weapon and believes that submarine warfare should be "humanized."

Italy is willing to abolish submarines if France will do so, but it insists that Italians must have submarines if her northern neighbors have them. Thus the Italian action will be governed by the French attitude.

The American delegation made public its plan for reduction and limitation, stating that it provided for immediate parity with Great Britain in every class of ship in the navy. Equality in battleships would be secured by abandonment of five by the British and three by the Americans. The cruisers would be so apportioned that the British would have an apparent advantage of 12,000 tons, which the Americans could equalize by including the number of their smaller cruisers. Critics of this plan declared it was a surrender to the demands of the British.

Delegates from the British dominions protested to Mr. MacDonald that the conference was making unnecessary slow progress, and he therefore conferred with the other heads of delegations and they decided to speed things up. The first committee, which includes all the delegates, took up on Thursday the matter of the method of limitation, seeking a solution for the controversy between the global and categorical methods. London correspondents, however, said it was not likely any real progress would be made toward fixing tonnage figures until near the end of the month. This is due to the fact that the Japanese have a general election on February 20, and the Japanese are stalling vigorously on the figures until the present government can get settled in the saddle or a new government formed.

WHEN Maj. Gen. Herbert Crosby, chief of cavalry of the United States army, retires on March 21 next, he will undertake the task of making the city of Washington a model for the rest of the country so far as liquor and crime are concerned. He has been selected by President Hoover to direct the police, fire and traffic departments of the District of Columbia, and Mr. Hoover said the appointment "will be a guaranty to both the official and unofficial residents of the district, and especially to the nation at large, that the Capital shall be free of organized crime."

The police affairs of the District of Columbia have been under fire from members of congress for the last year or so. During that time there have been a wide variety of charges, including lax enforcement of the prohibition laws. General Crosby will succeed Proctor L. Dougherty as commissioner.

REPRESENTATIVE C. L. BEEDY of Maine offered in the house an amendment to the Volstead act which would make possible the padlocking of places of business by public prosecutors in the absence of their owners, and it was generally accepted as an administration measure. Beedy's bill provides that a district, state, county, or city attorney, failing to locate the owner of premises alleged to be a nuisance, may issue a "substitute" or dummy subpoena and, without serving it on the owner, may go into court and have his place padlocked. It also provides that the judge may speed up the case if his docket is congested by referring it to a master for proceedings under equity rules.

ITALY greatly strengthened its position in central Europe last week by the signing of a treaty "of friendship, conciliation and judicial regulation" with Austria. This, as a Rome correspondent says, means that post-war Austria's 7,000,000 inhabitants will be added to the circle of friends Italy has been cultivating in the Danubian states, and which, at present, includes Hungary and Bulgaria, plus the diminutive Adriatic monarchy of Albania. It means likewise that, besides burying the hatchet in South Tyrol Italy extends her range of influence to the border lines of the little entente. Austria, on the other hand, makes a noteworthy advance from her previous status of a political zero through this Italian alliance.

THROUGH Riga, Latvia, the world has learned that recently nearly five hundred former officers of the Russian Imperial navy have been put to death by the cheka or secret police. Because of the crisis in diplomatic relations between Moscow and Berlin and Paris, the Soviet foreign trade monopoly is contemplating a trade boycott of Europe and concentrating its European purchases in the United States, according to the Soviet trade delegate in Riga.

CONGRESS authorized the President to send a commission to Haiti to study conditions there, and Mr. Hoover last week was considering the make-up of that body. The commission, the President said, will be charged with the responsibility of recommending when and how the United States is to withdraw its military forces from the negro republic. It will also recommend the policy which this country should follow during the years that will elapse before American occupation ends.

Early Day Prohibition Enforcement

James Wilkinson

Little Turtle, Miami War-Chief

*Head Quarters
Detroit 18 July 1797*
The intention of the troops may possibly drift to the ruin of drunkenness produced by the uncontrolled sale of liquor which have been permitted, and to the seductive arts of persons in relation to the Government of the United States. To remedy such a state of things, so destructive to the national interests, and so subversive of subordination and discipline, all persons are hereby prohibited from selling liquor of any kind to the troops, except under the written permission of Lieutenant Colonel James Wilkinson. The infraction of this order by whomsoever committed, shall be punished by the General Court attached to the Army.

Head Quarters Fort Mifflin February 11th
Tomorrow being the Anniversary of the Birth of George Washington, the Attendants Resident of the United States. The auspicious day will be distinguished by a display of the flag from the 12 o'clock to a general salute from the Band at 12 o'clock. All Soldiers are to cease from duty and draw an extra gill of Whisky. The Officers of Duty are requested to dine at Head Quarters.

Facsimiles of Manuscripts, Courtesy United States Military Academy, West Point.

later by Gen. James Wilkinson, are preserved in the library of the United States Military Academy at West Point, and in them are some entries which make curious reading in these days of the Eighteenth Amendment. For instance, on July 4, 1792, when headquarters of the expedition were at Pittsburgh, Wayne issued a general order for "a double allowance of spirits to the troops today, being the anniversary of the independence of the United States." On February 21, 1796, at Greenville, General Wilkinson ordered that the soldiers were to be allowed to "draw an extra gill of whisky" with which to celebrate Washington's birthday. The same extra allowance was authorized for the celebration of St. Patrick's day, on March 17, although it was accompanied by a warning that "the brigadier-general will have no riot or drunkenness."

The next year, however, when headquarters were at Detroit, the use of liquor by the soldiers was causing so much trouble that Wilkinson was forced to issue an order prohibiting its sale to them. Within the last year or so the state of Michigan has received widespread publicity because of its famous "life-for-a-pint" liquor law, especially when several women were convicted under that law. And these convictions were another example of "history repeating itself," for the first conviction and punishment of a woman liquor seller was the result of Wilkinson's order of July 12, 1797. The woman was Lydia Connor, described as a "follower of the army," in the report of the court martial at which she and two men were tried. All three were found guilty but only the woman was punished. What her punishment was is recorded thus in the orderly books:

The court finds the prisoner guilty of the charge exhibited against her, and sentences her, under the General Order of the 12th Instant, and the 22d Article of the 13th Section of the rules and articles of war, to be paraded, thence through the streets of the town, thence to and around the front of the Barracks of the soldiers in Fort Lernaut, thence out of the fort to and along the main street, and out of the west or southwest gate of the town not to return therein or within the lines and fortifications of the troops of the United States, a penalty of receiving such punishment as may be inflicted upon her, by sentence of a court martial.

When these sentences were presented to General Wilkinson, he acted upon them thus: "The sentence passed upon Lydia Connor, a notorious offender, is to be carried into execution at six o'clock this afternoon. However highly merited, he remits so much of the sentence passed upon Mitchell as relates to drumming and he flatters himself that this instance of his clemency may not be misapprehended, as no further indulgence must be expected."

In the case of Frazer, the other man, Wilkinson was even more lenient probably because Frazer was very prominent in the little town of Detroit, and by dealing lightly with him the general may have hoped to curry favor with the citizens. On being told that we tried to prevent and had authorized Oratam to arrest Dutchmen who came into their country to peddle brandy," reads the record, "they replied that they were cheated by the Dutch, who said that the general had given his consent, and showed a letter giving permission to sell brandy in their country, also that they had taken away a large quantity of wampum, whereby the savages were entirely impoverished." Again they were told to arrest the white men who brought liquor into their country and this time they were further authorized to bring their captives to New Amsterdam in fetters. As a reward for their enforcement work "We promised that they should have a piece of cloth for a coat beside the brandy which such persons should carry, and he who brought in the first should have two pieces."

A Wet Celebration of Washington's Birthday

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ALTHOUGH we think of prohibition enforcement as a strictly modern American question, yet the fact is that here, as in many other present-day problems, is a curious instance of "history repeating itself." The passing of the Volstead act did not bring into being the first prohibition enforcement officer. That title belongs to an Indian chief and he was given his appointment more than 250 years ago!

In the middle of the Seventeenth century the Dutch in New Netherland were engaged in a series of wars with the neighboring Indian tribes. Finally a permanent treaty of peace was concluded in 1660, the leading signer of which was "Oratamin, sachem of the savages living at Achkinshacky (Hackensack), who declared himself commissioned by the savages of Tappan (Tappan), Rechgawawanc (Manhattan), Kitchawawanc (Kitchawank) and Sintinck (Sintinck)" to act on their behalf. But this treaty did not end the troubles between the two races, for in 1662 Oratamin (whose name is also spelled Oratam, Oratamy, Oratan and Oraton) complained to the Dutch authorities of the illicit sale of brandy to his people.

As the result of this protest there appeared in the official records of New Netherland this entry:

Whereas Oratam, chief of Hackensack, and other savages have complained several times that many selfish people dare not only to sell brandy to the savages in this city, but also to carry whole ankars of it into their country and peddle it out there, from which, if it is not prevented in time, many troubles will arise, therefore, the director general and council of New Netherland, not knowing for the present of a better way to stop it, authorize the said chief together with the Sachem Mattanouch to seize the brandy brought into their country for sale and those offering to sell it, and bring them here that they may be punished as an example to others.

The Chiefs Oratam and Mattano are hereby authorized to seize the brandy brought into their country for sale, together with those who bring it, and conduct them hither.

Done at Fort Amsterdam in New Netherland the thirtieth day of March, 1662.

Evidently the two chiefs were efficient "prohibition enforcement officers" for there is no further mention of trouble for fifteen months. But it is evident, too, that prohibition then, as now, produced bootleggers, for in June, 1663, Oratam and other chiefs again appeared before the authorities, complaining that brandy was still being

KILLS ARMY BUDDY; DOESN'T KNOW WHY

Private Soldier Confesses to Strange Crime.

New York.—"Why did you kill him?"

Louis Galvano, twenty-one, a private in the United States army, stationed at Fort Du Pont, Wilmington, Del., had that question propounded to him time after time by detectives of the Brooklyn homicide squad in the Bath Beach station.

"I told you I don't know why," the prisoner invariably replied. "I just put the gun to the back of his head, and pulled the trigger."

"You mean to say you killed your buddy, and don't know why you did it?" Acting Lieutenant Conan asked. "That's it exactly," answered Galvano. "I blew his brains out, and to save my life I don't know why I did it."

During the long interrogation the young soldier was calm and matter-of-fact. When the detectives paused, he read the sports page of a newspaper. He smoked innumerable cigarettes with the air of a person perfectly at ease and at peace with the world.

No Motive Found.

Finally the detectives had to be satisfied with Galvano's description of how he committed a murder without learning of any motive. He was held without bail as fugitive from justice.

The fugitive charges were made pending the arrival of a formal murder complaint from the police of Wilmington, Del., where the crime was committed. Galvano is accused in Wilmington of killing Arthur Cline, twenty-one, a private in Company E, First Engineers, at Fort Du Pont. The two were known as inseparable friends.

Cline's body, in civilian clothes, but stripped of all valuables and marks of identification, was found Christmas morning by a hunter in a marsh about three miles north of Wilmington. Two bullet wounds were in the back of the head.

Wilmington police found that Galvano, Cline and a third private of Company E, Alonzo Emery, had left the fort Christmas eve in an automobile owned by Emery. Cline, they were told, was going to Amsterdam, N. Y., to spend a short holiday far-lough.

Other Soldier Seized.

Emery was arrested in Wilmington and held without bail. His statements incriminated Galvano. The police here were then requested to apprehend Galvano, also home, he said on holiday leave.

Galvano was nonchalant when the police took him into custody at his parents' home.

"You want me," he said. "All right. I'm ready to go with you right this minute." He lighted a cigarette.

After admitting he killed Cline, the detectives said he related that Cline was going A. W. O. L. in order to be home for Christmas and that Emery consented to drive Cline and Galvano to the railroad station outside of Wilmington.

Galvano told detectives that when they were half way to Wilmington with Emery driving, Cline also in the front seat, and himself in the rear seat, he started fidgeting a small non-service pistol he had in his pocket.

"I remember taking the gun out and putting it close to Cline's head, and then I pulled the trigger. That's all I remember about it," he said.

"But you shot him twice. Why did you do that?" the detectives asked.

"I don't know. My finger just pulled the trigger," replied Galvano.

A few minutes after the shooting, Galvano added, another automobile came down the road. At his direction, the prisoner said, Emery started the car while he held up the limp body of Cline to avoid suspicion.

Later, he continued, he and Emery removed the body from the car to the marsh, took about $20 Cline had, then removed all identification marks.

Galvano denied he was drunk when he shot Cline. "I had a couple of drinks," he said, "but I wasn't stewed."

Returned to Cell After Escaping to See Mother

Washington.—Archie Lyles must return to a prison cell, but his mother, whose illness led him to escape from the Lorton reformatory in northern Virginia, is on the way to health once more.

Lyles, spurred by reports that his mother was dying in a hospital here, escaped from the reformatory. Later he appeared at the hospital, gained admittance and went to the bedside of his mother, Mrs. Cora Fassman. There searchers found him, but not before his visit had accomplished its purpose. His mother is expected to recover.

'Come and Get 'Em,' Says Borrower After 40 Years

Washington.—Your neighbor isn't the only one who borrows books and forgets to return them. Forty years ago the State department loaned the court of claims 130 volumes of records relating to old French and Spanish claims against the United States. Last month the department wrote court officials suggesting 40 years was long enough to keep borrowed books. True to borrower's habits, the court replied the department could have the books if it would send after them.

'American Bull Fighter Steps Up in Standing

Madrid.—Besides doing some sight-seeing, Sidney Franklin, the American "matador de novillos," spent the winter going to various Spanish ranches, practicing his art with the bulls. He will start the 1930 season fighting the three-year-old "novillos," but if he is in as good shape as he was at the end of the 1929 season he probably will be given the "alternative" to fight the four-year-olds. He would then hold the "doctor's degree" of bull fighting, and his title would be "matador de toros."

LIGHTS of NEW YORK

I Wonder The theater business, badly off as it is, enjoys boom days in comparison with the night clubs. These establishments, once the happy hunting grounds for suckers with bank rolls, are now almost deserted. Press agent after press agent has tried to put this or that club over, but with scant success. Can it be that people are tired of drinking?

Something New Something new and decidedly worth while in the night club line has developed. It is a swanky establishment that aims to amuse with playlets, sketches and songs, instead of gaudy floor shows. There was a decided air of class about its premiere. Instead of opening at eleven o'clock or midnight, its discreetly silk-draped doors are unlocked at seven-thirty. Any time between then and nine one can dine—and dance, of course. And the diners do not have to rush through the meal and hurry off to a theater, for the stage entertainment is right there. Sophisticated sketches about marriage and morals, humorous sketches of fifteen minutes' duration and shorter items of the blackout variety are on the program. It is all very European, and maybe it is the new thing that the night club world has been crying for.

It's a System I heard a story the other day about a postmaster in a village near New York who was warned that he must sell $1,000 worth of stamps by January 1, or take a cut in salary. Post offices, it appears, are graded by the business they do, and this one hovered on the brink of becoming fourth class instead of third class. The postmaster communicated his troubles to a New York friend. The city fellow promptly visited the village and bought $1,000 in stamps in one monochal purchase. It looked like a pretty generous thing to do, for it would take even a large business concern sometime to use that much postage. But did the rescuer start mailing letters wholesale? No. He came back to New York and sold his stamps to the general post office here.

A Habit The fascination of an auction room has a magic effect upon gadget buyers. I don't mean the cheap jewelry fake auctions, but the on-the-level disposals of household furnishings. I dropped into a red-flagged establishment the other day to see what price an antique desk that I had admired would bring. I wanted the desk, but was afraid to start bidding on it. I might pay more than I could afford. I sat for a long while watching desks, pianos, chairs and chandeliers go under the hammer. Beside me sat a very well-dressed, excited elderly couple, who bid in item after item. Finally the woman turned to me as if she felt that an apology for her presence were forthcoming.

"I don't know why we waste our time and money here, but we can't tear ourselves away. We don't need these things. And look! Here's what we might be doing this very minute." Opening her bag she showed me two orchestra seats for a matinee of the opera.

Honeymooners

The world doesn't realize how many honeymooners are traveling about until a steamship sinks. Stricken vessels seem to be filled with brides and grooms. A young woman with whom I am acquainted announced her engagement some six months ago. The wedding was scheduled for a few weeks later. But the trousseau took an enormous amount of time, and the wedding was postponed. The second date arrived, and again the ceremony was put off. Finally, after months of wild shopping the bride-to-be felt that she was properly equipped.

The ceremony took place and the newlyweds boarded the Fort Victoria for a honeymoon in Bermuda. Four or five hours later the ship was wrecked in a fog off Ambrose light, and the young couple found themselves in a lifeboat—and in the rain. The trousseau was in Davy Jones' locker. BIG ROCKET POISED FOR SKYWARD TRIP

Inventor Hopes Eventually to Reach Moon.

Ayer, Mass.—The big brother of the sky rocket with which you used to celebrate Fourth of July is poised here for one of the most extraordinary flights in history.

Some time in the not far distant future, if all goes well, this 12-foot steel projectile will rise with incredible speed from a tower at Camp Devens on the outskirts of this quiet little town and nose its way skyward, seeking the secrets of altitudes never reached by a man-made device.

The rocket's noisy zoom into space will mark the latest step in a series of unusual experiments started twenty years ago by Dr. Robert H. Goddard, Clark university scientist.

Popular fancy has drawn a seemingly indelible halo of romance around Professor Goddard's rocket during the years that he has busied himself with his work in the rather prosaic atmosphere of a laboratory.

To Record Air Data.

Even his insistent declarations that he has no lunar aspirations have failed to destroy the general belief that he hopes eventually to send his strange contraption to the moon.

Those who toy most fervently with this fascinating theory like to think that there will be a man inside the huge steel tube as it speeds over the 220,000 or more miles to its fanciful destination. No one appears to have given much thought to the rather knotty problem of how the man would get back to earth, once he had completed his journey.

But Professor Goddard protests that the paramount object of his experimentation at present is to obtain accurate data on meteorological conditions at various altitudes.

His big rocket is equipped with numerous devices for recording such information—devices which are intended to return to earth with the aid of a parachute attachment.

Test Rocket Noisy.

Doctor Goddard has kept secret the exact method by which his projectile is propelled. It is understood, however, that the general idea is for a series of timed explosions to speed the rocket on its way, with a fresh blast expediting its flight as the power begins to wane.

At Auburn, near Worcester, several months ago, Doctor Goddard shot a rocket skyward. The scientist appeared well pleased with the outcome of the test flight but the attendant explosions alarmed residents of the countryside.

It was suggested by the fearful that recording devices carried by the rocket, in returning to earth, might smite a native. Doctor Goddard argued that the object which returned to the ground invariably landed only a short distance from the point from which the rocket had been loosed. Finally he compromised by transferring his experimental station to Camp Devens.

Company Plans to Get Lands for English Lads

Sydney, N. S. W.—A company is being formed to provide a scheme of land settlement for lads coming from England.

It will have the title, Little Brother Farm Settlement Ltd., and the prospectus has been issued. The company will acquire land within a reasonable distance of markets, suitable as a group settlement for intense culture, upon which Little Brothers who have been in the Commonwealth for not less than three years, and are in possession of a banking credit of not less than £200, may be settled under conditions to be determined by the board of management.

The scheme provides for the marketing of vegetables, poultry, pigs, etc. Land acquired by gift or purchase will be divided into suitable farmlets up to 10 acres. No dividends exceeding 6 per cent will be paid.

Seattle Stores Insects on Ice During Winter

Seattle, Wash.—Putting insects away on ice is a new use of the municipal cold storage plant here. To combat grasshoppers, caterpillars, crickets and moths, which annually cause heavy losses to farmers and orchards in the Northwest, names, giant grasshoppers from Interior China, have been imported and are held dormant until spring, when they may be shipped and distributed in infested areas.

The mantids increases in size during its eating period of life until the normal growth of about four inches long is attained. Then it lays eggs and dies.

Police to Use Dictaphone to Block Cruelty Plea

Scenes In Syria

The Grain Market of Antioch, Syria.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

SYRIA, where France, in charge under a mandate, is considering a new constitution for the Republic of Syria, changes little in its life and customs whether it is in control of Turk or Latin. Land in Alexandretta, drive for three or four hours over the hills, and you will find Antioch not greatly different from the Antioch which the Crusaders found 800 years ago. But it is different from the Antioch that Greek kings and Roman soldiers knew more than a millennium before. The present town nestles under the slopes on which its ancient forerunner once stood. "The Crown of the East," as classic Antioch was called, is today a much-battered diadem, traces of a Roman aqueduct and of a city wall, once wide enough for four-horse chariots to drive along the top, alone remaining of her architectural jewels.

Temples and public baths, theater and amphitheater, senate, house and imperial palace—all have followed their architect kings, the Seleucidae, into dusty oblivion. Antioch's living link with the past consists in that there is still a Christian community in the city where members of the new sect were first called Christians. It was here that they first formed themselves into a community outside the synagogue; also, it is the city from which St. Paul started on his missionary travels. But were St. Paul to return to Antioch today he would never recognize in this drowsy Syrian town that gold-and-marble metropolis whose luxurious citizens must have evoked some of his thunder-and-lightning philippics.

Merely to catalogue ancient Antioch's builders, conquerors, rulers, and religious teachers is to suggest its former grandeur. The list includes the kings of Pesh and Armenia, Pompey, Zenobia of Palmyra, Constantine the Great, Julian the Apostate, the Crusaders, and half a dozen Roman emperors who maintained imperial residences there.

The facility with which a westerner may degenerate under the Orient's spell is proverbial. The Romans succumbed to it at Antioch; and the stalwart Crusaders, having captured part of the city, became too demoralized by it to finish the job. At last, thanks to a salutary earthquake—perhaps nothing less would have roused them—they begrim themselves, invested the city, and instituted a massacre.

Antioch Not a "Genuine Antique."

A truly edifying moral attaches to the decadent Antiochenes. Possessing a scurrilous wit and the gift of inventing objectionable nicknames, they tried their pleasantries on Chosroes, the invading Persian. But Chosroes couldn't take a joke and promptly destroyed their beautiful city.

Though it was rebuilt, successive earthquakes did their part, and the Antiochenes did theirs by using the debris of imperial edifices to repair their homes. Today, Antioch, once the objective of armies, is shunned even by the modern army of tourists; for it is not a "genuine antique," being therein like its bazaars, "Roman" thumb rings and bracelets, which are too often the work of Aleppo copyists, who excel the centuries in producing fine verdigris effects.

Aleppo, which is reached after six hours of motor car travel over a fair road through the plain, is Syria's first reminder to the southbound traveler that he is in the land of white-clad Arabs, of the smiling glare of oases by deserts, of oriental civilization uninterrupted since antiquity.

Indeed, there are Aleppines who will gravely assure you that the city's Arabic name of Haleb-al-Shabba (that is, "the dappled cow has been milked") refers to the fact that Abraham opened a free milk station there in Biblical times. Whether or not this gloss would withstand higher criticism, it is hardly less to be chuckled over than Shakespeare's reference to the good ship Tiger sailing for Aleppo, which is something like seventy miles inland.

It is trade centers rather than sumptuous capitals which endure; and Aleppo, known to the ancient Egyptians long before Antioch sprang into existence, has been carrying on her tradition of "business as usual" for certainly four thousand years. A stranger, entering its great bazaar from the street's blinding, sand-colored vistas, can easily lose himself in the cool twilight of those labyrinthine tunnels. It is veritably a walled town within a city, an almost night-black town, when, at high noon, the air holes in the roof are masked against the sun.

In Aleppo's Bazaar.

Place yourself near an unmasked roof hole, though which falls a twenty-foot column of sunlight, cutting the gloom like a plunged sword. For all you can see outside of its area, the bazaar street might be draped in black; but, by ones and twos, figures emerge from the blackness, pass through the shaft of light, and are swallowed up in the blackness beyond. Thus, in cinematic "close ups," glaringly illuminated, they flash past, the types of the East.

Here is a donkey bearing two huge jars and led by a patriarchal figure (it might be the ghost of Abraham dispensing free milk). Two swathed and veiled Moslem women, black, phantoms, who are "window shopping" from booth to booth, appear and vanish.

A diminutive bazaar boy, in flapping skirt, bearing tiny cups on a brass salver, darts through the light shaft with complimentary coffee for his master's new customers. A hunchback beggar, clutching together his vermillion rags, poses in the glaring circle with outstretched palm.

A trio of Aleppine dandies, wearing white, tasseled caftans and long-skirted surcoats striped in yellow and black, swagger past, fingering the pommes of their Damascene knives. A bowed, green-turbaned priest, with snowy beard and benign eyes, paces by, the glare illuminating the string of amber beads which hangs from his toying fingers.

Such a mass of tradition has accumulated around Syria and Palestine that one is apt to expect his trip through those countries to be one of continuous interest. To say that they contain great barren stretches of nothing in particular, interspersed with oases of absorbing charm, would be much nearer to fact.

Thus, in an entire day of 223 miles of railway travel from Aleppo southward, one sees little except treeless, sun-scorched plains containing but two considerable towns, with here and there a Kurdish "beehive" village whose unpartitioned mud huts, set closely together, resemble a cluster of large, brown bowling pins.

Southward on the Railway.

It is a relief to the eye, upon nearing Hama, to find that flat-roofed, mud-walled town lying in a stripe of dark-green verdure between the dust-brown slopes, the Orontes river snaking past some great water wheels, at their ceaseless work of irrigation. Such a friend is the water bearer in Syria that, like desert springs, each of these wheels is dignified by its own name.

Black minarets of basalt lift into view, marking Hama, at which station the train halts, so that everyone can enjoy a fifteen minute smoke; or so one gathers from the presence of various small boys, who run along the platform, carrying lighted calabash pipes and shrieking in Arabic, "Get your nargiles before the train starts!"

Brown fingers beckon from train windows, and pipes are handed aboard to patriarchal Arabs, who thereupon sink back to puff away, their eyes half closed, for a blissful session of that half doze which the Turks call kief.

There follow to the south dreary wastes of sun-burned plain, scattered with jagged rocks—a barred belt which mysteriously sustains the shaggy goats and their savage-faced masters, who squat about isolated black tents—or either hand the curved breasts of the Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon hills.

And now the sunset, flooding the barren land, fuses the Lebanon into mounds of barbaric jewels—yellow, pale green, and violet—hemping the horizon. And now it searches out six Greek columns, brooding over the desert, smiting them into reddish gold. The train is at Baalbek.

Texas Lady's Life Takes New Turn

When I think of how I used to be up in the morning after morning with a headache, I feel like I have started living," says Mrs. Laverne Clooney, popular manager of the Telephone Exchange Cafe in San Antonio.

I did not know what it was to be without a headache, the kind which make you weak and nervous until you tremble all over, until I heard my brother's family talking about how good Nature's remedy (NR Tablets) is. I took my first one and liked it. I have been taking them ever since. Everyone wants to know what I've taken because I am so well now.

Results like that is what makes Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) so popular. More than three million are sold a day. Any druggist will tell you to use them if you suffer from any stomach, biliousness, tight bowels, sick headaches, indigestion or rheumatism. They are 25c per box.

WHAT'S NEW IN MILLINERY? CHIC DRESSES FOR HOUSEWEAR

THE selection of millinery at this time of year depends largely upon "where are you." Women whose good fortune it is to be wintering in sunny southland resorts have become decidedly brim-conscious in that the new hats flaunt brims and brims and brims. They also declare a lavishness of designful handwork, a new program of fascinating colors, most unusual fabrics, also straws supple and dainty as cloth—"shadows" which spring and summer millinery events "cast before."

In the meantime a vast army of faithful stay-at-homes are just now in quest of hats suitable to wear with the new dark printed frocks and with fur coats. The several modes grouped in the picture answer the call for just such hats—available midseason types which breathe of spring yet are tuned to immediate wear.

Becomingness is the goal set for all hats this season, and the models illustrated are no exception to the rule. Via straw, felt or fabric, through the simple grace of a cloche brim or the sophisticated lines of an intricately manipulated brim, no matter how your milliner arrives at becomingness, the point is to arrive. In other words, it is the individual hat, the hat tuned to type which counts this season. Thus a new era for hats begins—an era in which "made-to-order" hats which give evidence of the real milliner touch, have once again come into their own.

A favorite theme with the milliner for spring is straws which drape like cloth. The first model in this group dress—a wealth of gay color and bold patterning! Smart styling details aplenty, too, distinguish this frock. Neatly piped scallops which travel up and down the left side of the skirt and the snug waistline which is such a hobby with contemporary stylists, and the flared pockets, and the widened hemline all reflect the trend toward a more pretentious styling for washable daytime frocks. It's a fact, most of the newer-styled housewives are smart enough to wear almost anywhere.

Following the thought advanced by Dame Fashion for spring and summer, namely: that every dress must have its own wrap this season, here's a suggestion in regard to the dress pictured. Why not make a little jacket of solid-colored pique to wear over it—black pique, for instance, or brown if you are piping the cretonne in that color. There you have it—a smart ensemble to wear "to market," or re-shows how deftly supple straws are being worked, with a view to creating novel brim effects.

Yes, felts are still "in." The one shown to the right at the top spells chic in that it is in the fashionable new bright blue.

Satin with a wee excuse of a turned-up straw brim carries a message of spring in the youthful bonnet centered in the picture.

The final hat is a fancy straw cloche. The revival of cloches is one of fashion's highlighted numbers on the spring program.

Washable Housedresses.
That oft-repeated phrase "just a simple housedress" is not as apropos as it once upon a time was. Home-sewing women seeking latest patterns are finding out that the present style crusade which demands greater elaboration for feminine attire, exempts not even the heretofore humble kitchen or morning washable frock. According to the cunning dress in the lower picture, the theory of stressing style and individuality for the home frock no matter how utilitarian its mission is being put most happily into practice.

Plenty of color in the home—that is the hue and cry of this day and age and here it is, in this gay cretonne moving the jacket, "a perfectly darling" housedress.

As far as cottons and other allied washable materials are concerned, a gay and hectic season lies before us. There is no chance of choosing colors too bizarre or patternings overbold. The program includes such fantastic stuffs as India prints for picturesque house frocks and beach costumes. Japanese cotton crepe is another favorite, and then there are the quaint and vividly colorful French peasant scarfs which make up into intriguing dresses and blouses. If you are loyal to cretonne, regardless of the lure of exotic fabrics which are new in the field, fashion offers every encouragement in the way of entirely new designs and colorings.

Glacier Finally Gives Up Body It Long Held

After 83 years the Gradelz glacier, in East Tyrol, has delivered up one of its dead. The body of the man, a gamekeeper called Mattershorn, was brought to light like that of a dead Rip Van Winkle, in almost the state in which life left it 83 years ago. The upper part of the body was well preserved, the features were recognizable, the sporting rifle of a pattern long obsolete, and the telescope and hunting knife of the dead man were unimpaired. His watch marked the hour at which it is recorded that he fell into a deep crevasse. The body was laid to rest in Kuls, in East Tyrol, after its journey of fourscore years to near the melting point of the glacier, by the dead man's great-grandson, who had for a moment the uncanny experience of looking on the features of his ancestor.

New Toxin Heralded as Last Word in Warfare

Dr. Leonard Hill, who is director of applied physiology, National Institute of Medical Research, Hampstead, England, said there was a toxin that could be employed to kill millions of men, when he was contrasting the power of the scientific laboratory with that of modern war machinery. "If men are as susceptible as guinea-pigs to the toxin, which shall be nameless—there is every reason to think they are—it would appear that one saltspoonful of this dry toxin would suffice to kill 1,000,000 men. The toxin acts if inhaled, or if it falls on the eye in a powder. If such a toxin were prepared and scattered from an airplane, what would be the use of the panoply of war?"

Workers of the World

The national bureau of economic research says that about 39 per cent of the population does the work which supports themselves and the remaining 61 per cent. Last year there were 46,580,000 workers and about 72,726,000 other people dependent upon them.

Neal's Mother Has Right Idea

Within a few months there will be no more feverish, bilious, headachy, constipated, pale and puny children. That prophecy would surely come true if every mother could see for herself how quickly, easily, and harmlessly the bowels of babies and children are cleansed, regulated, given tone and strength by a product which has proved its merit and reliability to do what is claimed for it to millions of mothers in over fifty years of steadily increasing use.

As mothers find out from using it how children respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup by growing stronger, sturdier and more active daily they simply have to tell other mothers about it. That's one of the reasons for its overwhelming sales of over four million bottles a year.

A Western mother, Mrs. Neal M. Todd, 3701 West 27th St., Oklahoma City, Okla., says: "When my son, Neal, was three years old he began having constipation. I decided to give him California Fig Syrup and in a few days he was all right and looked fine again. This pleased me so much that I have used Fig Syrup ever since for all his colds or little upset spells. It always stops his trouble quick, strengthens him, makes him eat."

Always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name and see that the carton bears the word "California." Then you'll get the genuine.

Dairy School Will Start Friday Night

Is your cow a loser, a boarder, or a money-maker? According to the U. S. Department of Agriculture report for 1929, there were 33,685,000 dairy cows in the United States. Records prove that over one-third of the milk cows on the average farm were fed and milked at a loss to the owner. One-third just paid for their feed, and the remaining one-third made all the profits. That means that more than 10,000,000 low producers in the United States are eating up the profits of the money-makers.

To which group do your cows belong?

Beginning Friday night, Feb. 14, an evening school in Dairying will be taught by R. A. Box, Vocational Agriculture teacher at Littlefield. Problems of the farmer who is milking a few cows will be studied, round-table discussions held, and talks on special subjects will be given by specialists.

If you are not getting as much from your herd of cows as you feel you should be, you are invited to attend this school. The first meeting will be held at 7:30 P. M. at the High School building.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS

IN SPITE of numerous signs warning the automobilist of danger, and other devices used for the purpose of preventing accidents, a large number occur daily, many of which seem unnecessary and could have been prevented. A study of the cause of these accidents will doubtless assign, as the chief reason—modern speed. It goes without saying that an automobile driven at fifty miles an hour hazards more risks than one driven at thirty-five miles an hour. The interesting fact, however, is that, in a majority of cases, speed alone is not the most important factor involved. It may be that, but other more serious causes are responsible—among them one's refusal to consider the other person's privilege or his point of view. If one could always know exactly what the person coming in the opposite direction was going to do, many of the accidents would be averted. Disregarding the other man's rights; or, the sheer determination to beat him at a turn; or some similar attitude of mind place life at serious hazards.

L. A. Barrett.

This fact holds true not only in automobiling, but is one of the basic principles, which if enthusiastically followed, will save many of the fallacies and misunderstandings in life. What is the other man's point of view? How does he interpret the situation involved? Every salesman knows, all too well, that the first requisite in making a sale is a correct understanding of his customer's point of view. When he has succeeded in securing that, it is comparatively easy to transact business. Two persons cannot do business together any more than they can live happily together if each speaks a different language. "Shall two walk together except they have agreed?" Two persons may have exactly the same idea but when each misunderstands the other in the interpretation of the idea, strife may supplant friendship. It is one thing to do a good act; it is quite another thing to know just how to do it. The latter is possible only when we understand the heart and mind of the other person. It is not so much what you say as the way you say it that gets your message across.

Study your problem from the point of view of the other person. Put yourself in his place, and you will discover not only that a mutual understanding is more easily obtained but also that your problem has already been at least two-thirds solved. (© 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

HOW FORD METHODS CUT COST OF DISTRIBUTION

Lower profits in selling save you at least $50 to $75 in addition to the many savings in manufacturing

TWENTY-SEVEN years ago the Ford Motor Company was formed to provide reliable, economical transportation for all the people. That original purpose has never changed. The constant effort in every activity is to find ways to give you greater and greater value without extra cost—frequently at lowered cost. This applies to distribution and similar important factors, as well as manufacture.

For the Ford Motor Company believes that its full duty is not only to make a good automobile at the lowest possible price, but to see that there is no waste, extravagance, or undue profit in any transaction from the time the car leaves the factory until it is delivered to your home. It is obvious that hard-won savings in production will be of little value if they are sacrificed later through excessive selling costs.

EVERY purchaser of a motor car has the right to know how much of the money he pays is for the car itself and how much is taken up by dealer charges. If these charges are too high, one of two things must happen. Either the price of the car must be raised or the quality lowered. There is no other way. The money must come from somewhere.

In the case of the Ford, the low charges for distribution, selling, financing and accessories mean a direct saving of at least $50 to $75 to every purchaser in addition to the still greater savings made possible by economies in manufacturing. Ford charges are not marked up or increased to cover a high trade-in allowance on a used car.

The profit margin on the Ford car has always been fair to both the dealer and the public. Within the past three months, it has been possible to effect still further economies. Today, the discount or commission of the Ford dealer is the lowest of any automobile dealer. The difference, ranging from 25% to nearly 50%, comes right off the price you pay for the car.

THE business of the Ford dealer is good because he makes a small profit on a large number of sales instead of a large profit on fewer sales. He knows, too, that the extra dollar-for-dollar value of the car makes it easier to sell and more certain to give satisfactory service after purchase.

Consider also that the Ford car is delivered to the purchaser equipped with a Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, an extra steel-spoke wheel, and bright, enduring Rustless Steel for many exterior metal parts, in addition to four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers and fully enclosed four-wheel brakes.

If for any reason you wish to buy certain small accessories, you will find that these, too, are sold at the usual Ford low prices. Replacement parts are also available at low prices through Ford dealers in every section of the country.

THESE are important points to remember in considering the purchase of a motor car. They show why it is possible to put so much extra quality into the new Ford and still maintain the low price. They are also the reasons why more than 35% of all cars sold today are Model A Fords.

A TIMELY CAUTION

During the holiday season a Vermont woman baked a fruit cake. In reaching into a cupboard for a bottle of flavoring she got hold of a poisonous insecticide, and the family ate the cake with fatal results.

It was an unusual case, yet the same thing could happen right here in Littlefield at any time.

Poisons for use on flowers or garden plants are almost a household necessity, and there are few homes in the community without some kind on hand. The very frequency with which they are used tends to make people careless as to where they are kept. The only safe way is to keep them locked up, or carefully stored beyond the reach of children, and they should always be kept away from food.

There is no more cause for being careless with poisons than there is in being careless with kerosene and gasoline, and the Vermont case should be enough to convince us of that without waiting for more evidence.

A republic is a country in which the people make their own laws but can't make their own liquor.

PAYING TAXES

No man retards the progress of his own community any more than the fellow who slacks in the payment of his taxes. He knows that it takes revenue to run his county, and that the chief source of that revenue is through taxation. And yet he endangers the prompt and successful operation of county affairs by either becoming delinquent altogether or withholding until the last second the tax money he knows he must eventually pay.

For some reason, none of us enjoy paying taxes. Yet we ought to

SOME SNAP SHOTS

The world owes every man a living, and there are a lot of folks who are getting it a dollar down and a dollar a week.

Maybe after all static in a radio is just its protest against the jazz that is inflicted on it.

We've also noticed there are as many broken resolutions a month after New Year as there are broken toys a week after Christmas.

The world was better back in the days when we had more happier marriages and fewer rich divorce lawyers.

Think what old Solomon escaped by living in an age when a wife couldn't open a charge account at the neighborhood store.

If the world is getting better why does the preacher always take the money out of the collection box and have it locked up in a bank?

Statistics show there are more autos than bath tubs in this country. But you can't get a good trade-in on a bath tub.

Let Texas folks live for Texas!

know that we wouldn't have much of a county if we didn't pay them. Whether it is pleasant or not we should, as good citizens, set an example by meeting this obligation the moment it is due.

There are as few chronic "tax dodgers" around Littlefield as anywhere else in the country, and yet there are many who could be far more prompt than they are, and thus speed up the conduct of our county and city business.

Think it over, and we feel sure you will agree that it's a good business rule, as well as an example of good citizenship.

The return of long skirts means that once again it will be possible for knock-knees to be heard and not seen.

SPECIAL DAY MONTH

The man who makes our holidays must have felt pretty good with the arrival of February since he saw fit to cram it with special days even though it is the shortest month. With the groundhog strutting himself on Feb. 2; with two days for honoring two great statesmen, Lincoln on Feb. 12 and Washington on Feb. 22, and with sweethearts claiming Feb 14, Valentine day, as their own, most everybody ought to be suited in the matter of holidays. And yet, as far as celebrating is concerned, the bankers are the only ones who get a chance to loaf, and as a rule they are the last ones to need it. It keeps the balance of us working, holiday or no holiday, to get something to put in the banks.

LITTLE LEADERS

Many a Littlefield husband is ready to admit that it's surprising what a woman can get out of a tin can.

We've had self-starters on cars for a long time, but what the average Littlefield car-owner needs is one that's self-supporting.

The Littlefield boy who broke off with his best girl just before Christmas is using the telephone now to re-establish relations.

We heard a Littlefield man say yesterday that, personally, he favors the new long skirts if they're short enough.

There's nothing a Littlefield man enjoys more than sitting down to a good meal—nor a woman either when somebody else gets it.

The hardest job a Littlefield girl who runs after a man has is holding him after she gets him.

They're called "common" colds but we notice some of the best people around Littlefield have them.

Sometimes after reading a daily newspaper we can't help but feel that there isn't anything straight in Chicago but the shooting.

Mother's Cook Book

Sidney Smith used to say, "That if it was his lot to crawl, he would, contentedly, if to fly, he would fly with alacrity." Nothing is so impracticable as gaiety and courage, and there are always a thousand reasons for being courageous.—Lucy Keeler.

HINTS FOR THE MOTHER

INEFFICIENCY in woman is as great a danger to the state as quackery in medicine. Quacks are few in number compared to poor home makers. It goes without saying that the mother who would train her daughters to become wise home makers, must first be one herself.

The lack of system in the average home is a great cause for wastefulness in money as well as in strength and time.

The woman who waits until the half hour before dinner to plan the meal is not in position to give her family a fair deal, from any standpoint. In these days of labor-saving devices, more autos, greater opportunities for leisure, the housewife must choose more carefully how she spends her time. Some one has said "tell me how you spend your leisure and I will tell you what kind of a person you are."

Our schools are doing all that is possible to supplement the inefficiency in our poorer homes by the proper teaching and training of the girls and boys. Where bread and the preservation of life is the first consideration and children often go hungry the training of the children is bringing results. It is a very ignorant woman today who does not know what the principal food principles are and what is needed for a substantial meal.

Boys as well as girls are being taught the simple rules of preparing a good meal, how to sew on a button, or turn a screw, and that it does not make a boy less manly to be able to make a good cup of coffee or tea, prepare a crisp piece of toast, and cook an egg properly.

In our country schools much of this teaching is done during the noon hour where the children cook some part of their luncheon. In the home where the mother has all the work to do it is a necessity that even the little people learn to help. Infinite patience and repetition is the price of success for it is far easier to do it one's self than to allow the small hands to bungle and often ruin things. But such is the way of learning, and the wise mother commends the child and encourages better work. Our boys learn very early that they must be home makers and earners. So, too, our girls should be taught that it is fully as necessary for them to learn how to spend wisely the money given them for the expenses of the home. When the proper training is given in youth, domestic difficulties will be reduced greatly, to the betterment of the whole nation.

Oddities of Gulf Stream

When the navy men head south for the winter their first concern is to get into the Gulf stream, which is the first indication of warm weather. The junction of this stream with ordinary sea water may be plainly recognized; in moderate weather the edges of the stream are marked by ripples; in cool regions the evaporation from the surface, due to difference between air and water, is apparent to the eye. The stream is a beautiful deep indigo blue in color and carries with it a quantity of weed known as gulf weed, which is familiar to all who have navigated its waters.

SAWS

By Viola Brothers Shore

FOR THE GOOSE—

ONE way to know if you're livin' right, is if life tastes pretty good to you, and still you wouldn't want to go back and do any of it over again.

What the average woman calls being in love, is findin' somebody that seems as if he might fit the permanent vacancy in her dreams.

Every woman feels she has a certain amount of stock in any man that's asked her to marry him.

FOR THE GANDER—

Strong men excuse their own faults; weak men brag about them.

Agreein' to do a favor in a disagreeable way makes you more disliked than refusin' to do it in an agreeable way.

Fumblin' your alibi don't look half as suspicious as bein' too glib with it.

Reproduction of motor car advertisement that appeared in leading newspapers of the country in 1910.

Is the gasoline you use as advanced as the car you drive?

No matter what price you pay for a car today, you get a car that climaxes all past achievements of the maker—a car built to new high standards of beauty and performance. But remember this. Unless the gasoline you use is as advanced as the car you drive, your car can give only a fraction of the performance the maker built into it. Gasoline, too, can be "out-of-date."

One gasoline—Phillips 66—has kept pace with the striking progress in motor car manufacture. It is perfectly geared to the requirements of the modern high-speed, high-compression motor.

Its volatility is scientifically controlled to fit season and climate. Results? Quick starting, regardless of weather! Flashy pick-up. Able-bodied performance. Long mileage. Year 'round sweet performance. Fill up with Phillips 66, or Phillips 66 Ethyl.

THE GASOLINE OF CONTROLLED VOLATILITY

WHEN THE THERMOMETER GOES DOWN THE VOLATILITY GOES UP. Gasoline must vaporize before it can be fired in the cylinders of your motor. Volatility refers to the ability of gasoline to vaporize. With volatility controlled, Phillips 66 vaporizes as quickly in cold as in warm weather.

The Heart of the Nation In a Bower of Ice

This remarkable night photograph of the Capitol shows the majestic dome framed in the sheet-covered branches of the trees in the Capitol Park after a recent heavy storm in Washington.

Explaining of Red Cross
The Red Cross gained public recognition as the nation's agent for taking care of people in disasters and emergencies at the time of the hurricane Corpus Christi, Texas, in 1919, when the office and organizations generally sent the funds collected for relief to the Red Cross for distribution and administration.

Banish the Cork
If the cork has fallen into a bottle you wish to keep for future use, pour enough household ammonia into the bottle to float the cork. Let it stand a few days and the cork will break into fine pieces, allowing it to slide out of the mouth of the bottle with ease.

Explaining Odd Names
When the founder of Tombstone, Ariz., was starting out on his prospecting tour, he was assured that he would "find his tombstone." Thus the town was named. Flagstaff was named from a pole set by a party of emigrants who camped near and celebrated the Fourth of July.

What makes the average oldster mad is that the impertency of youth is frequently so darned pertinent.

A Great Discovery
When Pasteur discovered, in 1861, that the infection of wounds was caused by malignant bacteria, he performed a service of incalculable value to mankind. Since then medical science has been producing better and better antiseptics, to kill those germs that may enter the smallest cut and give us diseases such as typhoid, tuberculosis and lockjaw. Now, all you have to do to be sure that these dreadful germs will not infect a wound, is to wash that wound, however small, thoroughly with Liquid Borozone, the modern antiseptic. You can get Liquid Borozone, in a size to fit your needs and purse, from Stokes-Alexander Drug Company.

PINEAPPLE HERALDRY

LIONS and fleur-de-lis we usually think of as belonging by right on coats-of-arms, but how many realize that roses and apples and pinecones, and trees and pineapples, are also represented?

It was only after the Crusades in the eleventh century that coats-of-arms began to be formally granted by the sovereign as a reward for valor. Naturally enough, the object chosen for the shields varied. Often it was a pun on the name of the hero. The Brakespeare family chose a broken spear. Festina lente was the motto of the Onslows.

Peculiar Language

Ideas were colored by French views, and Norman-French of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries became the language used in heraldry. With time, different meanings and spellings were given the words, until now the layman reading a description of a coat-of-arms is totally bewildered. For instance, at a glance one would not realize that "Argent, three pineapples vert stalked or," meant that there were three green pineapples with gold stalks on a silver background. Or that "Gules, three pineapples or," is another way of saying three golden pineapples on a red background. The first of these coats-of-arms belongs to the Appleton family of England. The second is used by the Marquises de Pins of France and by Argensula of Spain.

Pineapples are more abundant in Spanish and French heraldry than in English, as is natural. For it was the Spaniards who brought back pineapple slips from South America in the sixteenth century. In Spain, the pineapple was cultivated as a hot-house plant, for royalty only. Then the culture spread to France and England. Perhaps, it was due as much to its delicate taste as to its exclusiveness that so many noble families included this fruit in their coat-of-arms, for, in those days, the nobles were the epicures.

The Exclusive Symbol

It was during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, especially, that new coats-of-arms with the pineapple motif were selected. A member of the Chambers family who became prominent in Jamaica was, in 1771, granted a coat-of-arms which, on a silver background, showed a negro cutting down sugar cane with a bill. The top of the shield, which was blue, bore two gold pineapples with gold colored crowns.

Two French brothers named Dionis who were ennobled in the seventeenth and the eighteenth centuries, one of them by Louis XIV, chose pineapples. At the top of both shields is a cross on a red background; below, on a gold field, are natural colored pineapples with green leaves. The cross is not just alike on the two shields.

A black pineapple forms the crest of the Apperly family of England; the Willaumes, also of England, use a gold pineapple with green stalk and crown on a green hill.

A broken main deprived New Orleans of its gas suppl. Think of the result if that should happen in the City of Washington, D. C.

The packing house industry is the largest in the United States. It seems to have no difficulty in making both ends meet.
