

Softball Season Gets Underway--Mayor Pitches First Ball

Everything clicked with the Littlefield Softball League Monday night, as the season opened with a large crowd filling the grandstand, and many seated spectators, saw Mayor Homer Hall pitch the first ball to start the "pitching" for what promises to be one of the best leagues in recent years.

Four teams met in play Monday night, and the Junior Chamber of Commerce team, or Jaycees, scored the first victory over Grady's Wreckers, 15-8; and the Phillips 66 team blasted an 8-7 score over the CCC camp.

Joe Wells presented one of the winning teams with a new softball, and the Madden Drug Store presented the other winner with a new ball. The public is kindly requested to cooperate with the softball officials in the following manner:

That no one drive his car beyond the ditch, as no cars will be permitted on the playing field; Those who expect to sit in the grandstand, are requested to park their cars outside the fence to give others an opportunity to watch the games.

All managers are requested to see that no player wears baseball spikes longer than 3-8 of an inch. This ruling of the directors is intended to prevent injuries to players. Those not actively engaged in playing, or expected to play the second game, should kindly remain outside the enclosure. Parents please keep your boys back so they will not be injured. The drinks concession was granted to T. J. Watson by the directors last week.

Reward for Return—Or Whereabouts

Mrs. A. C. Tremain, the former Nora Belle Grizzle, has lost her pet Chow pup, and knowing the Leader's weakness for dogs, petitioned this newspaper Tuesday to help her find him. It was with almost tears in her eyes that she explained her four months old dog had been missing since Saturday afternoon; that he was a tan and brown color with four white feet, and dressed in green harness when he left home. Mrs. Tremain is offering a reward for the return of her pet, or information leading to the whereabouts of him. Now everybody—young and old—let's keep on the lookout for a pup answering the above description—find this young woman's pet, thereby making her happy again—and also win the reward advertised.

TEXAS SOIL CONSERVATION WEEK WILL BE OBSERVED

AMARILLO, Texas, May 31. — Farmers and ranchers of the Texas Panhandle, already vitally interested in soil and water conservation, will observe "Texas Soil Conservation Week," beginning May 28, in many instances, by making plans for the formation of soil conservation districts in their communities.

Machinery for the formation of districts, made possible by a law recently enacted by the state legislature, already has been set in motion with the selection of precinct representatives throughout the state who in turn will name officials to administer the statewide project.

In proclaiming Conservation week, Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel stated: "For many years the rich topsoil of Texas farms and ranches has been washing and blowing away, depleting the fertility and making agriculture less profitable. This enormous loss of wealth now can be stopped by all interested Texans taking full advantage of this soil conservation bill and cooperating in putting it into operation."

Erosion on the wind-swept Plains of the Panhandle already has been recognized as more than the problem of the individual landowner for farmers have learned that blowing soil respects no property lines, says H. H. Fennell, regional conservator of the Soil Conservation Service. More than two years ago, wind erosion control districts were formed in nine north Panhandle counties, and have been receiving the cooperation of the service in carrying out erosion control practices.

Projects on which erosion control and better land use practices are being demonstrated are located at Dalhart, Vega, Hereford and Stratford. Civilian Conservation Corps camps engaged in soil conservation demonstration work are located at Perryton, Lamesa, Littlefield and Memphis.

Hundreds of farmers outside these demonstration areas have observed the practices and now are applying conservation methods to their own land, Fennell says. This spread of conservation practices has served to create interest in the formation of districts under the new state law, it is pointed out.

"The Soil Conservation Service is ready to furnish technical assistance and any other possible aid to conservation districts when requested," Fennell stated.

There are several important steps in the formation of a district, it is pointed out. First, 50, or a majority, of the landowners in a proposed district must file a petition with the state board asking that the district be formed. District areas are limited to 3,000 square miles by the Texas law.

The state board then holds a public hearing in the area to determine the desirability and necessity for a district. If the proposal is approved, a referendum is called and the district may be formed if two-thirds of the landowners vote favorably.

The state board then appoints two supervisors for the district and the landowners elect three additional supervisors to form a five-member governing body.

The district, through its board of supervisors, has authority to plan and carry out soil and water conservation practices on land in the district with the consent and agreement of the landowners.

The board may ask and receive financial aid, technical assistance or materials from any local, state or federal agency in position to pro-

Book Bright Strawberry The Future

By OLETA COLE

When it comes to praising the strawberry, cooks can be as voluminous as the poets. Soft, balmy breezes, flowers, and other inedible things of the month may inspire sonnets. But it's stuff like delicious, scarlet strawberries—now— that memorable are made of.

History books count time, it's but recently that everyone has a taste-acquaintance with berries. In the early 1800's, real-planners listed "strawberry dinner." The only strawberry wild in out-of-the-way. The season for them was the supply was scant.

This unsatisfactory state of plant breeders took it upon lives to do something. Evidence of their success are the car and truck-loads of strawberries at now come to market each successful as the strawberry have been, they are not. They are still in search of and better berries. In test the country over they are experimenting with seedlings, developing suitable to different soil and climatic conditions.

Since 1920, strawberry breeding work has been part of the regular research program of the bureau of plant industry of the U. S. department of agriculture. One of the developments of this bureau is the Blakemore, considered the best preserving strawberry in the United States. Another is Redheart, grown extensively in the Northwest for canning and freezing. Two good berries, developed for eating fresh, are the Fairfax and the more tart Dorsett.

At present, one aim of the strawberry breeding program of the department is to develop big berries—40 or less to a quart. Another is to get into them the rare fragrance that early settlers found in the wild meadow berries along the Atlantic coast.

According to George Darrow, strawberry breeding specialist, aroma is one of the most elusive of all qualities to breed into a berry. When he samples his experimental berries with his nose as well as his tongue he finds that many of his promising hybrids do not have aroma. And some that are fragrant on the vine, lose their aroma after they're picked.

Some of the other characteristics that breeders the country over are trying to get in strawberries are—an even better flavor and finer color—uniformity of size—resistance to disease. And they are working on special characteristics that will make berries more satisfactory for different purposes—for canning, freezing, preserving, or eating raw.

With these well-directed efforts toward perfection, the strawberry of the future should be something worth waiting for. However, for those to whom one strawberry in the mouth is worth a crateful 10 years hence there is also good news—about the strawberry of the present.

Shortcake season this year, though it got off to a late start, has so far been a good one—from the viewpoint of the strawberry eater. Supplies have been more plentiful than last year's, and prices have been low.

Strawberries on the market rate highest when they have solid red color and a bright, clean, fresh appearance, with caps and stems of fresh green. Berries are marked down in grade if they show decay or mold, or if they are shrunken. If they have been picked before they are mature they may have white spots on them—especially on the tips.

Overripe or mashed berries usually give the buyer fair warning—by staining the container. It is well to examine the strawberries in the bottom of the box. This may be done by simply tipping the box so that the lower layers can be seen.

Wash strawberries shortly before they are to be used. Rinse them gently by handfuls in a bowlful of water instead of letting the stream from the faucet fall on them. Remove caps after the berries are thoroughly washed. Do not let them stand in water, or they'll lose color and flavor.

Strawberries should be a favorite with busy cooks. Most persons consider any fancy treatment of them superfluous. Favorites are the simplest dishes—strawberries and cream, strawberry shortcake, strawberries au naturel dipped in powdered sugar. And they make colorful garnishes for desserts and salads.

Today Lamb county farmers may grow these delicious berries in their own back yard. The much talked about frame garden is an excellent place for strawberries, says Miss Cole. A few plants in a frame garden will furnish a family with berries practically the year around. Of course you know strawberries are a very rich source of vitamin C, the ricket preventive and calcium, the bone and teeth builder. Why not put forth a small amount of effort and let the family enjoy fresh strawberries several times a week this year.

Growers of Wheat Collect $44,817.57 In Crop Insurance

College Station, May 30.—It's not a matter of counting chickens before they hatch, but at least 143 wheat growers in Texas this year have harvested wheat before harvest.

Even more odd is the fact that these growers all had crop failures. Reason for this novel state of affairs is federal wheat crop insurance, which has been on the proving ground only since last summer and which already has proved itself worth the money in 22 counties.

Famous Surgeon Dies as Result Lobar Pneumonia

Dr. Charles Mayo, 76, of noted clinic in Rochester, Minn., passed away late Friday at the Mercy hospital, Chicago, as a result of lobar pneumonia, following an eight day illness.

Dr. William J. Mayo, 77, who worked with Dr. Charles in building the renowned "Mayo Brothers" institution was at his home in Rochester at the time recovering from a recent operation.

Dr. Charles and Dr. William transformed a single, small town infirmary into a huge establishment embracing six large hospitals and skyscraper office buildings and laboratories. The pilgrimage of patients in 1936 alone was estimated at 80,000. They made millions but devoted the bulk of their fortune in perpetuating their institution and training scientists to take over their task. They earned honors at home and abroad. But Charles once stated:

"My one great ambition is to relieve all the physical suffering possible during my life."

He performed thousands of operations. He removed 700 cataracts from eyes. He was recognized generally as the originator of modern goitre surgery. He was a pioneer in surgical treatment of the nervous system.

Dr. Charles first tried his hand at the medical arts when he was 12. An aide of his father, Dr. William Worrall Mayo, fainted while administering an anesthetic. The boy mounted a box and took over the job.

Charles, who was born in Rochester July 19, 1865, was graduated by the Chicago Medical college in Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for functional kidney disorders and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove wastes that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be warning of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging back-ache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

CHURCHES

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH Roy Shahan, pastor.

Sunday, June 4, is Anniversary Sunday. The pastor has been working with you for one year. These months have been very pleasant and the time has gone by hurriedly. I can hardly realize one year has passed.

May we enter the second year with a greater determination to fill our place in the church, in the home, and in the community in a greater way for the Glory of God.

Sermon subjects for Sunday will be, "Our Unpossessed Possessions," for the morning hour. Evening subject, "A Man With a Lost Title."

Find your place in the services Sunday. We appreciate the words of encouragement and deeds of kindness shown us since we have been in Littlefield.

LUTHERAN CHURCH NEWS W. J. Luecke, pastor.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eye—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passage may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. The Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer B. Campbell are among the many Lamb county farmers who make at least 75 per cent of their living at home, Miss Oleta Cole, home supervisor for the Farm Security reported last week.

Located two miles south of Olton, their farm contains 160 acres of land that is well-cultivated, and the atmosphere about the place proves why Mr. and Mrs. Campbell were rated among the highest ranking families in this county last year.

Mrs. Campbell is proud of her two farm gardens that she has been feeding her family from during the past few months. The tiling in the garden is made of quart oil cans, and Miss Cole supervised the building of the gardens. Mrs. Campbell specializes in varieties of vegetables that are especially adapted to this section of the plains, and in the frame gardens and a regular garden, she is growing rhubarb, swiss chards, tender greens and asparagus, besides potatoes, tomatoes, onions, carrots and beets.

Last year Mrs. Campbell canned more than 900 cans of vegetables and meat for her family of five.

With 250 baby chicks, the Campbells plan to can enough chicken for next year. They have several head of work stock, five cows, five heifer calves, and two brood sows with pigs. Their home has been made attractive with a lawn of bermuda grass, small trees and flowers growing around the place.

Swimming Pool Opened Last Week for Summer

The Rainbow Swimming Pool, owned and operated by Mrs. Annie Correl, opened last week, and will be a mecca for the many people of this territory who enjoy swimming, through the long summer days.

Mrs. Correl announces this week that she will have season tickets for those who wish to take advantage of the lower rates. She recently put several electric lights around the pool from the REA line.

Mrs. Correl invites her many patrons from former years, and new customers to visit the pool, and arrange swimming parties. It is located one mile northwest of Littlefield, across the railroad track from highway 7.

TO IMPOSE THREE CENTS PER POUND TAX ON COTTON SOLD IN EXCESS OF QUOTAS

Anticipating fully 92 per cent compliance with 1939 cotton acreage allotments, AAA workers at state headquarters at College Station do not expect much Texas cotton to be penalized through the application of cotton marketing quotas in this year's crop.

Arrangements nevertheless were made there this month to single out the comparatively few growers expected to exceed cotton acreage allotments and to place a 3-cent a pound tax on cotton they sell in excess of their marketing quotas.

E. N. Holmgren, state AAA administrator, explained that the tax, which is a cent larger than it was last year, will be collected by the buyer at the time of the sale.

A farm's marketing quota consists of either the nominal or the actual production, whichever ever is the greater, of the farm's 1939 cotton acreage allotment—plus any carryover cotton which would have been subject to a penalty had it been marketed in 1938.

Producers who have no carryover penalty cotton and who plant within their 1939 cotton acreage allotments will receive white marketing cards and may sell all their cotton in 1939 without a penalty. The producer who overplants his allotment gets a red card. If he also has carryover penalty cotton on hand, he gets a blue card to go with the red one. If it happens that the producer with a blue and a white card actually produces less than his 1939 marketing quota, he may sell carryover penalty cotton, together with the 1939 crop, up to the amount of the 1939 quota without penalty; but any carryover cotton sold in excess of the 1939 quota will be subject to 2-cent penalty which pre-ailed in 1938.

Four-fifths of the Texas cotton growers who voted in a referendum last fall voted in favor of cotton marketing quotas for the 1939 crop.

SWEET AND FEMINE

Fashion's most important command this spring is "Look pretty, please, in a sweet, very feminine way." And here's a charming new design (8457) that practically guarantees to make your figure look softly curved and beautifully slim.

Pattern 8364 — With the brisk, tailored precision of a shirtwaist dress, this culotte design (8364) is extremely smart, and will prove to be your most useful sport tog, a fashion that you must include in summer play plans.

Slightly bloused, with pleated sleeves and a trim, notched collar, it gives you plenty of leeway for action.

Make it of sports silks, gingham, linen or sharkskin, and enjoy having the most outstanding casual style of this and the coming summer season.

SIXTEENTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS

When the wealthy foster parents Marjorie Wetherill both die she writes a letter telling that she has a sister, that she was adopted by her own parents couldn't afford to support both of them and her real name is Dorothy Gay. In the world, but with a fortune of her own, she considers looking up her own family whom she never seen. A neighbor, Evan Reaver, tries to argue her out of it and tells her he loves her and asks her to marry him. She promises to think over but decides first to see her family. She goes to their address and finds that they are destitute and gradually persuades them to do things they need. When the doctor calls to see her mother she notices that he seems particularly interested in her sister. Marjorie goes to church in Brentwood, where her father used to live, and becomes much interested in the young minister there. While at Brentwood she sees the home her family formerly owned, buys it back for them and gives the deed to it to her father on Christmas morning. The family is very joyful. Then, through Marjorie's efforts, her father gets a good job. Meanwhile, Marjorie plans to visit Chicago and on Reaver, the young minister, to go part way on the train with her.

his overcoat, seize his hat and suitcase, grasp her hand for a quick instant, and hurry to get off at Harrisburg.

He waved to her from the platform an instant, and then the train moved on and she was alone. A great desolation came over her. Would she ever see him again?

It was strange the next morning to waken and find herself almost back in Chicago, to dress hurriedly just in time to get out and to find her own chauffeur waiting at the station with her car according to orders.

The house was immaculate, the servants all there in their places, welcoming her, thanking her for their holiday, apparently ready to go on with life as she had left it.

After breakfast she went from room to room and tried to take up the thread of life. For this one week at least she was committed to do nothing definite about leaving her home. But that did not include Evan Brower. In the afternoon she wrote a note to him.

"Dear Evan:
This is just to tell you that I got home today and shall be glad to see you whenever you feel like calling.
Sincerely,
Marjorie."

The time passed very quickly and in the afternoon she went to see her lawyer and check up on business matters. Then just after dinner Evan Brower came.

Evan told her of the news since she had been gone, and at last he got out the little velvet box again.

"Marjorie," he said in a calm voice, "I want you to put my ring on now and wear it."

Then Marjorie looked calmly at Evan Brower and answered in a clear voice:

"Evan, I do appreciate your kindness and your thought for me, and I feel sorry that I had to be so uncertain in the past when you talked to me about these things. But now that I am home again I have thought it all over and made my decision. Evan, I am not going to marry you, either now or at any other time. I am quite sure that I do not love you as a woman ought to love a man she marries."

Evan Brower looked at her steadily, calmly, and slowly put the ring back in its box and the box away in his pocket.

"Very well," he said quietly, determinedly, "if you haven't come to your senses yet I can wait, of course, till you do."

So presently he took his leave.

Finally there came a letter from Gideon and her heart leaped up to welcome it singing a little song even before she opened it. It wasn't a long letter. It was mostly about his work and the questions she had asked, and some books he was sending. But it did say how much they missed her.

The next day Gideon sent flowers.

would be ready. He's crazy to come!"

They were hard at work packing, and there was a large van drawn up before the door taking away furniture, some that was to be sent to the auction rooms for sale, and some that was to be given to the mission, when Evan Brower arrived.

Evan Brower glared at Ted, with scarcely an inclination of his head, and then he said savagely to Marjorie:

"Can I see you alone somewhere?"

Marjorie gave him an absent-minded smile.

What she said behind that closed door Marjorie never told him, but it must have been decisive for the caller presently came out walking as if he were following to the grave after a dead hope.

The last truck was filled, and started on its way; the cook had wept a farewell and had been taken to her train en route for her sister's in the far west; the house was lock-

Brentwood and meet the trucks which had just arrived, and with Betty direct where things should go. It was great!

There was Betty in the parlor with Keith Sheridan to help, taking off the covers from the upholstered furniture. And there was Gideon going quietly about doing things without having to ask what to do next, just as if he were a son of the house and had always lived with this furniture and these rooms.

"You want this here, don't you Marjorie?" he would say, and proceed to put it there.

And once in the back hall, toward dusk, those two came hastily upon each other, Marjorie from the way of the kitchen, and Gideon from the big pleasant library where he had just deposited an armful of books that had been misplaced by the now departed movers, and they ran right into each other. Gideon put out his arms and enfolded her, perhaps to save her from falling, but it became more than that of itself as suddenly they were close to one another, and Gideon stooped and placed a tender kiss on her lips.

Then, just as suddenly, while they were still under the spell of the wonder of each other's lips, and did not know anyone else was in the world for the moment, there stood Betty and Keith hand in hand.

"Might a mere brother-in-law offer congratulations?" saluted Keith joyously, "because we're in a position ourselves to understand."

He grinned and bowed low with his hand upon his heart. That is, one hand. The other Betty had.

Then he looked up at the embarrassed two who had been taken un-awares and grinned.

"It's a little soon, I suppose, to spring all this on the assembling multitudes," he offered.

Marjorie with glowing cheeks and dancing eyes was laughing now.

"We didn't know anything about this ourselves till a minute ago!" she announced shyly.

"I believe you!" said Betty solemnly. "That's the way it came to me, all suddenly."

"Well, I'm not ashamed of it, though I didn't think I dared announce my intentions so soon. But I'm glad!" said Gideon solemnly.

"Yes!" said Marjorie. "Aren't we?"

But the rest were scurrying to the front door to welcome the family.

The mother walked into her house and stood and looked around with eyes full of wonder.

"Oh, it's too good to have all these things at once!" she said. "My girl come home to Brentwood, and all my children here!"

"Yes, Mother, dear," chirped Betty from the doorway, her hand again in Keith's who winked across at Marjorie and Gideon, "even more children than you had bargained for!"

EVINS TAILORS

There was real joy in Betty's face.

They were crimson roses, deep and dark. She buried her face in their sweetness and closed her eyes as she carried them upstairs to her own private sanctum. She did not want them out of her sight.

And then the week was up.

Marjorie arose with a feeling that great things might happen today. Would her mother write at once, or wasn't the week long enough for them to decide? She had decided. She was only waiting for their word. Would the morning mail bring her answer?

But it came sooner than that. Thelma brought it up to her before she was dressed. A telegram.

"We have kept our contract. The time is up. We want you with all our hearts. We feel that this is your place if you still want to come to us. But not unless you would rather come. Letter follows."

It was signed with all their names.

Marjorie wasn't long in answering that. She caught up her telephone and dictated a telegram.

"Was coming anyway, whether you wanted me or not. Could not stand it without you. Brentwood for me! Love to you all. Glory hallelujah!
Marjorie!"

Next morning Ted appeared on the scene. A very properly-clad Ted, looking handsome and capable.

"Mother said I was to come and help pack," he said simply. "She said you oughtn't to be alone. Dad would have come but he couldn't leave his new job, of course."

And then when his sister fell upon his neck and embraced him, crying for very joy, he remarked quite casually though in a jubilant tone:

"Gideon Reaver said he was coming over on Monday to drive us back home. He said you said you were bringing your car, and I haven't any driver's license yet. He said I was to wire him when we ed and the key handed over to the lawyer's representative for the new owner; and they were all comfortably seated in the big luxurious car ready to start.

"It's a beautiful house," remarked Gideon. "I'm so glad to have seen where you were brought up," and he smiled at Marjorie. "Yes, it's a lovely home. But you're going to one just as pleasant, I think!"

"Sure thing!" said Ted fervently. "Though this one's all right," he added as if he feared Marjorie's feelings might be hurt.

Then they wound down along the lake shore, into the city and out on the highway for home.

And such a drive as they had!

But oh, that homecoming. How precious it was! to be folded in her mother's arms and to know that she was at home! To watch the love-light in her father's face as he said: "Welcome home, my daughter!" To feel the children's eager sticky kisses and hear their screams of welcome. To see real joy in Betty's face, real welcome! Ah! That was better than all the other world had to offer her.

And then to drive hastily over to week. Must Live Within Towns. Rules of the league require that all players live within the towns territory and none of the teams will be allowed to pay any player for playing baseball. A $25 fine forfeit fee is to be put up by each member team when the players' list is turned in to the secretary on June 12. Each team will be allowed 20 men on this list. No changes in the personnel of this roster will be permitted after June 12, unless approved by the directors.

Standings of the team will be figured on a percentage basis and the two high teams at the end of the season will have a play off. Time, place and number of games in this series will be decided on by the directors.

Each team will be permitted to keep their home game gate receipts. Admission to league games cannot exceed 25 cents, it was decided. However, if the home teams desire to charge less, they may do so. All league games will begin promptly at 8:30 in the afternoon.

"Purpose of organizing this league is to promote baseball in the smaller towns of the South Plains and give the young boys of these communities an opportunity to develop their baseball ability," is what Forrest Weimhold told the representatives of the different teams at the Monday meeting. "At the same time we can give the fans an opportunity of seeing good, highly competitive baseball with home town boys furnishing the show," he added.

Standings of the different teams will be published in all of the papers in the area each week. These releases will be furnished by the officers of the league.

Much interest has already been aroused in the league not only in Sudan where the plan was started by W. V. Terry, Forrest Weimhold, Bev Straw and Loyd Robinson, but also in the seven other towns who are cooperating 100 per cent in the organization of the league.

Renner Presides
K. M. Renner, head professor of dairy manufacturers at the college, is chairman of the agricultural livestock committee of the state manufacturers association, and presided at the conference.

The purpose of the conference was to bring about a better understanding of the farmer and the manufacturer of the common problems that face them.

Dr. Coulter Main Speaker
Dr. John Lee Coulter, agricultural economist of Washington, D. C., was the main speaker.

About 600 were in attendance, including between 200 and 300 farmers.

Clubs Cancel Luncheons
Lubbock civic clubs cancelled their weekly luncheons in order to attend the barbecue, which was given at noon in the gymnasium as part of the conference program.

Registration was conducted at 9:30 o'clock in the livestock judging pavilion, and was followed by an inspection tour of the textile plant and livestock and agricultural departments.

Rev. H. G. Gantz, pastor of the First Christian church, presented the invocation at the barbecue. James A. Gallaher, who preceded Renner as chairman of the agricultural livestock committee, of San Antonio, discussed the purpose of the conference.

Clifford B. Jones, Tech president, introduced Dr. Coulter, who discussed the cotton situation and allied subjects.

A round table discussion on agricultural topics was held at 2 o'clock and was led by J. Handy Wright of New York, agricultural secretary of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Dr. Coulter came to Lubbock from Lincoln, Neb., and is considered a leading authority on "tariff and agriculture."
