ANNUAL POULTRY SHOW SCHEDULED HERE DEC. 8-9

BACKS ALLRED
IN APPEAL FROM COURT ORDER

Hearing on Attorney General's Appeal is Set For 9 A. M. Saturday

The third court of civil appeals has set for hearing on next Saturday at 9 a. m., an appeal filed by James V. Allred, state attorney general, from a district court order restraining the Texas highway commission from awarding further construction contracts.

The court granted a motion of Allred's that the case be advanced for early consideration and speedy determination. An early setting was agreed to by attorneys on both sides of the litigation, in a conference with members of the court. Allred, James E. Ferguson, husband of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, governor-elect who instigated the suit, and Ocie Speer, Ferguson's attorney, and others were present.

The original restraining order was obtained last Friday, on the eve of an advertised letting of a heavy construction program, by Ferguson, joined by John M. Chamberlain and Bailey W. Hardy.

It enjoined the highway commission from awarding contracts or receiving bids for highway construction or from "in any wise creating or attempting to create any liability against the state of Texas or the state highway fund for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1933."

George H. Sheppard, state comptroller was enjoined from "issuing any warrant or voucher whatsoever"

Great numbers of Littlefield and county citizens and numerous agents of other counties of the Plains attended the initial auction Wednesday morning, in connection with the sale of the remaining 600 acres of College Heights Addition, located in the southeast section of Littlefield and adjoining that portion of the city.

Many who attended made purchases, others made known their intentions to buy. Interest in the sale is immense; in fact, that has been true since it was first known that the College Heights Addition would be sold at auction, and indications are that the sale will be of short duration.

One of the important features of the sale, and one of many services being performed for Littlefield through the carrying out of the sale, is the fact that a number of the purchasers were non-residents of Littlefield.

GOOD RESULTS BEING

An active program is underway this week to complete the Chamber of Commerce membership drive, which was launched recently.

Several members of the chamber are making a canvass of the business section of the city, and good results are being obtained in gaining new members for the organization, according to Dr. Ira E. Woods, president.

The Littlefield Chamber of Commerce has been performing valuable services to Littlefield and district in many ways, and through the obtaining of new members it is planned to expand the services of the organization.

Littlefield has an active Chamber of Commerce, but there is a vast amount of work to be accomplished and additional members are needed to carry on the program in the interests of the city and section.

A progressive Chamber of Commerce, with a large membership and 100 per cent team work, can make wonderful progress in the building and developing of a city.

Miss Nora Belle Grizzle returned Monday after spending Thanksgiving and the holidays with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Grizzle.

YOU EAT A GIANT'S MEAL

If you were served at a single meal all the average person eats in a lifetime, you would sit down to a beef-steak weighing as much as six dressed steers, confront a giant potato too big for a two-ton truck to haul, cut slices from a loaf of bread higher than your head and pour milk from a bottle as tall as a bungalow.

In the fifty-six years that the average American lives, recent statistics compiled by the United States Department of Commerce shows he consumes 106,400 pounds of food—enough to load to capacity several freight cars, says Popular Science Monthly.

On other dishes at this colossal feast there would be a half-ton block of butter and a 224 pound block of cheese. The sugar bowl would be six feet high and the salt shaker would weigh 800 pounds. There would be an egg 12,000 times the normal size, an apple seven feet in diameter, an orange weighing 1,110 pounds. Around your table would be placed 1,120 tins of canned fruit, 124 cans of salmon, 600 tins of sardines, 336 lbs. of dried fruit, 888 cartons of breakfast food and more surprising still, 280 pounds of rice. To top off your meal you would find a 672-pound box of candy and nearly 6,000 blocks of chewing gum, not to mention, fifty-six pounds of walnuts and 1,176 lbs. of grapes.—Crosbyton Review.

EIGHT YEARS AGO IN LITTLEFIELD

(Excerpts from Lamb Co. Leader)

Work is this week beginning on the new lumber yard in Littlefield, which is being put up by the Cicero Smith Lumber company.

Last Friday the new $80,000 high school building in Littlefield was completed and formally accepted by the board of trustees. It is a magnificent structure, worthy to adorn the campus of a city of 100,000 population.

Owing to the increase of business with the Yellow House Land company, Arthur P. Duggan, former manager of the local townsite interests, has been forced to turn the sale of lots over to his brother, C. J. Duggan, who in the future will have charge of all lots sales. Mr. Duggan reports the sale of 42 lots this week.

Last Tuesday evening the Sixth grade spent a social hour at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. K. Yantis in honor of their teacher, Miss Christine Holland, who is this week taking up work in the High School department.

Dr. C. C. Clements, formerly of Lockney, has moved to Littlefield and opened a dental office in Stokes & Alexander Drug store.

W. H. Rutledge of Boston, Mass., who has purchased land a mile and a half north of town, has recently been discharged from the United States Navy, and is now making improvements on his property.

Work has begun this week on two more brick buildings being erected by Messrs Arthur P. Duggan and Clyde E. Willis. Each of the buildings will be 25x80 feet long and will be pushed to completion as early as possible. Mr. Willis is this week moving his barber shop and pressing establishment to the rear of his business lot to make room for the new structure.

Pauline, sentimental, sincere and loving, engaged and married. Barbara in the belief that happiness will condescend through all the morning with a strange presence that maybe love does not thought buried in her letter from her closest friend, Barbara who had married, was the mother of which died, but now she was living a life which some friends could not understand. Between Dennis and Barbara a seeming wall of personal by both. Six months after wedding, Barbara comes short stay—NOW GO ON THE STORY.

"Dennis isn't coming home till late," she said. Barbara Stark blew a cloud of cigarette smoket into the air, turned a page of the magazine she was reading, then glanced up. "Oh! Business?" she asked casually. "He didn't say." There was a little silence. Pauline went back to her chair and took up the work she had been engaged upon so happily a moment ago. "I should give that up if I were you," Barbara said in her lazy, musical voice. "How long have you been at it?" "Ever since I was engaged," Pauline spread the cloth across her knee and regarded it critically. "Time flies, doesn't it? You've been married—how long?—Six months?" asked Barbara, musingly. "Nearly," Pauline's blue eyes sought her friend's face rather somberly. "It seems longer—sometimes," she admitted.

Barbara immensely, and yet nobody had ever called Barbara beautiful. "Striking looking," had been Dennis O'Hara's reluctant admission. "The sort of woman a man looks at because he's not quite sure what she is." It was a true if not very lucid description. Barbara was tall and slim, but she rather affected a droop and she had queer nondescript eyes that of a real leaf brown. She wore clothes that were like nobody else's. "God knows where she gets 'em," Dennis grumbled. She seemed to be a perpetual source of grievance to him. "She gets them at quite ordinary shops," Pauline said, ever on the defensive for her friend. "But you see she designs them herself, and she's so original."

"I know you don't but all the same you are admirably suited to him. You're both sentimental, whereas Dennis—" She stopped, but Pauline caught her up quickly. "What about Dennis?" "Nothing, except that temperamentally he's your exact opposite." "Then we must have been made for each other," Pauline insisted. "Like attracts unlike," they say, don't they?" "Attracts, yes," and then, as if regretting the word, Barbara laughed. "Why do you lead me on to talk such nonsense? Oughtn't we to dress? Peterkin will be here directly." When she was upstairs in her room Pauline made no attempt to dress. She sat down on the side of the bed and stared at the rose-patterned carpet with eyes that suddenly seemed to see a great deal. She had been married six months—happy months, yes, decidedly happy months, and yet— "Temperamentally Dennis is your exact opposite." Barbara's words came back to her with insistent truth. Dennis was not in the least sentimental—he hated what he called "slosh." Now Pauline came to think of it, he hardly ever used any terms of endearment when he spoke to her. Pauline sighed. It was the little things of life that were so disappointing, she decided. Only last night dining alone? "No, Barbara is here." His eyes brightened. "Is she? I like that woman—she's a fascinating devil. I wonder she hasn't got married again." "I wish she would. There is—" Pauline broke off, realizing she had been about to break a confidence by speaking of the man whom Barbara had admitted loving, and the next moment Barbara was in the room. They had quite a cheery dinner in spite of Dennis's empty chair, before which Pauline insisted on placing a vase of roses and a glass of wine, "for luck." "Still so romantic!" Barbara teased her. "And always will be, I hope," Pauline answered. She was rather quiet during dinner—afterward when she was in bed and lying awake listening for Dennis, she realized there had not been much necessity for her to talk. Then she heard Dennis' step up the little garden and the sound of his key in the door. She flew out of bed and down the stairs, barefooted as she was, and when he opened the door she flung herself into his arms. "How late you are! It's been so lonely. Are you all right? I'm always so afraid you'll get run over or something when you're out so late."

O'Hara laughed and kissed her flushed cheek. "Do you think I want a nurse or a keeper?" he asked. He put her gently from him. "You'll take cold—no slippers or dressing gown." "I'm quite warm." She hung round him as he took off his coat, and she followed him into the dining room, talking all the time. "Have you had dinner?"

Barbara laughed. "Not very complimentary to Dennis." "Dennis is a darling," Pauline gathered up the elaborate cloth. "He's a perfect darling," she said, with enthusiasm. Barbara stifled another yawn and turned another page of the magazine. "And they lived happily ever after," she quoted rather cynically. Pauline leaned forward, her chin resting in the cup of her hand. "I want to ask you something," she said, suddenly. "May I?" "My lamb, why not?" Barbara's dark brows lifted in mild amazement. "What is it? I promise to answer to the best of my limited eloquence." Pauline slipped to her knees beside her friend. "I think I'm just beginning to understand that life isn't the simple thing I thought it was," she said slowly.

Barbara certainly looked "original" enough now, as she stood with one hand on her hip looking down at Pauline with an indulgent smile. She wore a frock of the brightest jade green girdled with a band of dull orange, and her long drooping earrings were jade, and her cigarette holder was jade also. "Why should he disapprove of you?" Pauline asked, realizing why, even as she asked the question. Dennis liked "womanly women"—the description was his own. "Barbara looks like a cross between an Egyptian queen and a film vamp," he had protested only last night. "Why on earth can't she war frocks like this?" and he had pinched a soft fold of his wife's between a finger and thumb. Pauline had flushed with pleasure. "Now if Barbara wore what I call 'fluffy' clothes," he went on, floundering amidst explanations, "something blue—with some lace—" "She'd look frightful!" Pauline told him.

Pauline submitted herself to a stiff cross-examination. Perhaps she had been unwise. It was a mistake to show you were too fond of a man—Barbara had always said that—Barbara who was so cynically worldly wise. But, even Barbara admitted to being in love! Pauline wondered who the man could be, and decided that it was probably the married man with whom she had lately been going about. A bell pinged through the house, and she changed hurriedly and went downstairs; Peterkin was alone in the drawing room—Barbara had not yet appeared—and Pauline went up to him with an unconscious little sigh of relief. "It's so nice to see you, Peterkin."

"Glad to see me?" he asked jerkily. He looked down at her, but he kept his hands firmly clasped behind his back. Pauline nodded. "You're a bit of my old life, and you're so safe," she said comfortably. He laughed rather grimly. "Is that a compliment—and where's Dennis?" "Out on business." "Already?" There was an unkind little note in the question, and Pauline drew away from him offendedly. "And you're still quite happy?" She met his eyes serenely. "Perfectly." He let her go at that. And you've never loved anyone since, Barbara?" asked Pauline for instance, he had come home earlier than usual from the City and had gone straight down to the garage and had tinkered about with the car. When they were first married his first thought would have been for her—or—wouldn't it? Pauline submitted herself to a stiff cross-examination. Perhaps she had been unwise. It was a mistake to show you were too fond of a man—Barbara had always said that—Barbara who was so cynically worldly wise. But, even Barbara admitted to being in love! Pauline wondered who the man could be, and decided that it was probably the married man with whom she had lately been going about. A bell pinged through the house, and she changed hurriedly and went downstairs; Peterkin was alone in the drawing room—Barbara had not yet appeared—and Pauline went up to him with an unconscious little sigh of relief. "It's so nice to see you, Peterkin."

"Perfectly." He let her go at that. "Well—are we condition of constipation. It builds them up, and is nothing like the strong cathartics that sap their strength and energy. ## LITTLEFIELD FAST BECOMING PRODUCE SHIPPING POINT; 42,000 LBS TURKEYS SHIPPED THANKSGIVING

Littlefield is fast becoming a center for produce of all kinds. The poultry dressing plant in this city is handling the turkeys in Littlefield, and the poultry from this section was shipped to Lubbock for Thanksgiving.

brought the farmers of this section around $4500. Turkeys are brought to the Littlefield dressing plant from Olton, Mulshoe, Levelland, Morton, Sudan, Earth, and various other towns and communities in this territory. This concern employs local labor, which keeps the money paid for labor in Littlefield. The pay roll, according to the manager of the local dressing plant, for three days during the Thanksgiving market amounted to $600.00, which clearly indicates the value of such an enterprise to the city.

Besides other produce, a large quantity of cream is shipped from Littlefield, one concern alone shipped in September 321 cans, which is equivalent to about 10,000 pounds of butter; in October 150 cans, and in November 200 cans. Another concern in September 184 cans; in October 154, and in November 130 cans of cream.

Wins Noble Prize

Dr. Irving Langmuir, 51 years old, Schenectady, N. Y., has been awarded the 1932 Nobel Prize in chemistry, an honor bestowed for unusual achievement. He is director of an electric company's laboratory.

To save money the Bronx Zoo in New York proposed to serve whale meat to the animals instead of beef. The animals said nothing doing. They refused to eat the stuff.

Texas Grows 35 Per Cent of Cotton Grown in U. S. A.

The 1932 Texas cotton crop of 4,063,000 bales now in prospect will be 35 percent of the total U. S. crop of 11,425,000 bales, according to an analysis of the recent government report as made by Dr. J. O. Ellsworth, head of the department of agricultural economics of Texas Technological College. Thirty-eight percent of the 36 million acres in the United States devoted to cotton are in Texas.

Texas yields of cotton for the past ten years average 126 pounds per acre compared to 151 pounds for the entire nation. Florida with an average yield of 124 pounds per acre is the only state with a lower yield than Texas, while California, Arizona, and New Mexico have an average yield of more than 300 pounds per acre. The 1932 yield prospects for Texas is 140 pounds compared to 149 for the entire cotton belt.

Texas is one of the 18 states whose crop yields for 1932 are above their ten year average, based on a period including 33 crops. The yields of all crops in Texas for 1932 are 101.7 per cent of the ten year average. Thirty states show a decrease in yield, some as much as 21 per cent.

Texas will produce in 1932 57 per cent of the grain sorghums grown in the United States. The total crop will be about 16 million bushels of which the Texas crop will account for about 67 million bushels.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE HYDE TELLS OF RESEARCH RESULTS IN HIS ANNUAL REPORT TO PRESIDENT HOOVER

(Special to The Leader) Washington, D. C., Dec. 1.

Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde in his annual report to the President, which was made public today, analyzes the expenditures of the Department of Agriculture and shows what the taxpayers get in return. He says that more than four-fifths of the outlay in the fiscal year 1932 went to the general public rather than primarily to agriculture. Out of every dollar, only 10 cents was spent on the department's ordinary research and service activities. More than two-thirds of the total was allocated to the States. Federal-aid road construction absorbed $212,000,000. Nearly $11,000,000 was for emergency relief loans. Emergency appropriations for road work to relieve unemployment, and for agricultural relief carried the total expenditure to $306,000,000. In the 8 years prior to 1931, the department's annual expenditures, including road funds, ranged from $125,000,000 to $180,000,000.

Emphasizing the practical value of agricultural research, the Secretary gives several hundred examples of recent scientific achievement in the department, and indicates their commercial application. Plant breeding experiments developed a sugar beet resistant to the curly-top disease; strains of tobacco resistant to black root rot; early maturing rice varieties; rust resistant wheats; and oats resistant to oat smut. Plant disease studies showed how to combat celery mosaic; cabbage yellows; downy mildew on hops; bacterial wilt of corn; and seed-borne diseases of diseases of beans. Animal industry investigations developed improved means of dealing with poultry parasites; proved that ticks transmit an infectious disease of cattle called anaplasmosis; and traced certain ailments of hogs to a species of roundworm. Biologists in the department developed a new method of producing asparagin, a rare and expensive acid useful in manufacturing tuberculin. Entomologists discovered that endemic typhus fever is transmitted by a mite that attacks rats; and that a mite causes pink eye, or conjunctivitis.

Chemists developed two new insecticides, deguelin, and tephrosin, which may be used on vegetation without injuring it. They determined the chemical structure of a valuable insecticide called rotenone, and opened the way to its preparation synthetically. An outstanding chemical discovery showed that the development of rancidity in oil-bearing foods may be prevented by excluding certain light rays. Chemists also found that storing some fruits and vegetables in atmosphere relatively high in carbon dioxide holds rot organisms in check. The treatment may be substituted for pre-cooling.

In studies to develop new uses for farm products, the department developed a process for making high grade cellulose from bagasse, the waste from sugar cane after the sugar has been extracted. High grade cellulose is the basic material for rayon. The department devised a method for producing high quality starch from cull sweet potatoes; a low cost process for producing calcium gluconate, a medicinally valuable compound, by the action of a mold on corn sugar; and a new and cheap process for producing extremely pure inulin, a product valuable in the treatment of diabetes. This process uses chicory and may make the chicory crop much more important. Chemical investigations also developed a new fruit product, frozen fruit pulp, which promises to afford a profitable outlet for fruit heretofore graded and sold at a low price.

Secretary Hyde describes some successful plant introductions by the department. These are developing non-competitive crops in the United States. One promising recent introduction is an early ripening strain of the Satsuma orange. Tung oil trees imported from China are growing well in Florida and the Gulf Coast region. Cotton of Egyptian variety, grown in Arizona, is meeting increasing demand by the manufacturers of automobile and truck tire casings. In recent years the department has introduced date varieties which promise to be suitable for southern Texas and for home gardens. The Secretary reports also numerous results bearing on the improvement of quality in farm products, particularly meats and dairy products. New high quality lettuce varieties introduced into California have also, says the Secretary, exceptional disease resistant characteristics.

Agricultural research, the Secretary declares, is more necessary to farmers in bad times than in good, because it helps them to reduce their costs. He brands as a fallacy the notion that agricultural research is not required at present because it tends to aggravate the surplus problem. Discarding science, he says, would mean letting pests and diseases take the crops. This would reduce production and might raise prices; but it would raise costs so much more that the farmers would not benefit. When farmers need to reduce their production, the report says, they should economize on land and labor, not in the use of improved practices. Far from aggravating the surplus problem, scientific methods point the way to its solution by making production more dependable and therefore more easily controlled, the Secretary says.

Reporting the current year's results in agriculture, the Secretary describes the upturn in farm commodity prices during the summer as encouraging, but predicts that farm incomes this year will be lower than they were in 1931. Agriculture has suffered exceptionally during the depression, he notes, from its customary inability to readjust its production quickly to changing demand. Farm production in the United States in 1931 was about the same as it was in 1928, whereas the production of non-agricultural commodities was about 50 per cent less. This year the component yield of all field crops is about 6 per cent less than it was in 1931, and livestock production about the same as last year.

"The agricultural reaction to the depression," the report says, "was very different from the industrial reaction. This is not said in criticism of farmers. Farm production cannot be adjusted quickly to changes in demand. This fact is a disadvantage to the individual farmer. But it makes agriculture the great shock absorber and stabilizing influence in hard times. Sustained farm production, though it helps to favor prices down, makes life easier for wage earners with reduced incomes, and lessens the burden of unemployment relief. It is necessary, of course, and not philanthropy, that obliges agriculture to fill this role. Nevertheless, agriculture does so, to the substantial benefit of the community. This should be remembered when farmers ask public support for agriculture relief measures."

Secretary Hyde says the projects undertaken by the committees appointed a year ago following a national conference on land utilization, "gives promise that we shall realize this country's traditional policy of planless agricultural development with a comprehensive and thoroughly integrated program of land utilization. This program envisages better economic utilization of land resources, control of erosion, far sighted provision for future timber and public recreation needs, preservation of wild life, the gradual diversion to other purposes of land submarginal for farming, guidance of proper enterprises in land settlement, and adjustments in local taxation and expenditures. The task will be long and tedious, but a beginning has been made. Already a number of States are developing State land use programs and are co-ordinating them with the national program."

$100,000 IN ARIZONA FOR NATIONAL 4-H WINNERS; 1000 FARM BOYS AND GIRLS IN NATIONAL COMPETITION

BY ROBERT FULLER

Chicago, Nov. 30.—Among the many fine medals, trophies and other prizes to be awarded 4-H winners in the contests at the National Club Congress in Chicago, Nov. 25-Dec. 3, there are two which are going to give the boy and girl who win them the biggest thrill of their lives. They are the trophies given by the President of the United States to the national champions in the achievement contest. They are beautifully designed silver pieces standing two feet high, and are the permanent property of the winner.

To fittingly celebrate the record achievements of 4-H members and their leaders the past year and a new enrollment mark of about 950,000, this year's club congress is to be the greatest ever held. More than $100,000 is represented by the cash and other prizes offered in the contests and other competitive events by supporters of the movement all over the nation.

Huge Theatre Party A new feature is a national 4-H theater for the 1,000 delegates and the 200 leaders accompanying them from 44 states. The party will be staged in the magnificent Auditorium theater, which is being restored to its original beauty of 40 years ago when it was built and conceded the most beautiful theater in America.

Some of its mural decorations are in pure gold leaf. The 4-H program will consist of a play, music, folk dances and a practical demonstration introduction of national champions, and other features.

The 4-H girl's style revue, at which champions are chosen in four types of outfits and a sweepstakes champion over all, will be staged in one of the city's most brilliant banquet halls to the music of a nationally known 4-H band. The four winners will receive an educational tour of national shrines of American history.

A major event for boys is the show of baby beehives at which a national champion will be chosen by a judge of wide renown, after which the champion is auctioned off before buyers for leading provision houses of the country.

Educational Tour A visit to the Century of Progress Exposition is included in the educational sightseeing program which includes entertainment by leading institutions of the city, among them the International Live Stock Exposition, the Wilson, Swift and Armour meat packing plants, the world's greatest stock yard, Chicago Coliseum Poultry Show, International Harvester works, Montgomery Ward,

Sears Roebuck and Chicago Mail Order merchandising establishments, Field Museum, Shedd Aquarium, and Adler Planetarium. These and other interests of the city extend these favors and opportunities to the 4-H host recognizing in it the leadership of a movement which is moulding the thought and action of American rural life.

Call for President

Montana club folks are out to show the world they can produce as good baby beef as can be produced anywhere. The popular impression is that without feeding plenty of corn it is not possible to make prime beef. Corn does not mature as far north as Montana, but the Montanas hold that with their small grains, such as barley, wheat, oats and speltz, and their fine alfalfa and other green and cured forage they can grow as good beef as anyone.

The Montana club folks have won very favorable reports on the quality of their baby beef. They sent the grand champion of the baby beef show at the recent Montana state fair to President Hoover. This calf was inspected at the Armour coolers in Chicago, where it was prepared for shipment to Washington. Head cattle buyer Wilkerson and staff pronounced it a fine carcass.

This calf was sent to Chicago with a carload of calves shown at the Montana exhibit. They were sold in the regular calf auction and the price paid compared very well with those from corn-fed states. The 26 Montana calves brought an average of $8.22, with a range of $6.75 to $9.25, per cwt. This average was only 37 cents under the corn-feds. Top on the corn-feds was $10.50.

T. A. Marlow, state club agent of Montana, is well pleased with the Chicago evaluation of their club calves. The Montana baby beeves, said Marlow, are grown the first few months of their lives on their mother's milk and grass. Ground small grains are introduced into their ration as soon as they will eat them. Like most western cattle they never get a bite of corn. Montana farm and club leaders see an increased return to the agriculture of the state if beef calves which it produces can be fattened to sell as choice animals. The calves will make a better market for the home grown grains and sell for more, due to a higher price and greater weight. In years past Montana calves have been shipped to the cornbelt to fatten.

Paddy, famous trained flet who performed before thousands on West Forty-second Street, is dead and the street mourns.

"Red Dust" At Palace Theatre, Staring Saturday Midnight

One of the most anticipated productions of the new movie season comes to the Palace Theatre starting Saturday midnight, and running through Sunday and Monday, with the co-starring appearance of Clark Gable and Jean Harlow in "Red Dust," filmization of the Wilson Collier play.

Gable, who still retains his title as the screen's most popular male star, and Miss Harlow of the sensational platinum tresses, first appeared together in the racketeer melodrama, "The Secret Six," the story of which was laid in a large American city.

Picturesque Locals
 In "Red Dust," the locale is the picturesque region of Cochise, China, with Gable playing a hardened plantation foreman who has forced himself to become completely brutalized in an effort to remain superior to his environment of deadly fever, tropical heat and treacherous natives.

To Miss Harlow falls the role of Vantine, born to the tropics, hard-boiled, perfectly at home on the plantation and equal in strength and animal pugnacity to the men. It is when the beautiful wife of an engineer comes to the plantation and is involved in a love affair with Gable that the jealous and fiery nature of this savage-like creature asserts itself and brings the action of the plot to a dramatically compromising situation.

Both Perfectly Cast
 Much of the advance praise of "Red Dust" emphasizes the perfect casting of this picture, Gable being perfectly fitted as the frugal rubber plantation overseer who is constantly engaged in vicious fights with his subordinates and thinks nothing of giving the coquettish Miss Harlow a slap across the face. Miss Harlow, likewise, is said to have a role which is even more made-to-order than her recent effective portrayal in "Red Headed Woman."

The "other woman" of the dramatic triangle is played by Mary Astor. Gene Raymond is seen as Gable's rival and the remainder of the cast is made up of Donald Crisp, Tully Marshall, Forrester Harvey and

Terraced Land Makes Best Crop

College Station.—Texas farmers think county agents too conservative in the values they place on terraces. At least that is the conclusion drawn from a summary of farmer estimates from all over the State which averages $7.92 per acre, for the value of terraced land compared to $5 per acre estimated by M. R. Bentley, farm engineer in the A. and M. College Extension Service. The latter figure is commonly accepted by the Service and cooperating organizations. Using farmer estimates, terracing up to 1932 has been worth $44,000,000 to Texas.

The range of farmer estimates is great, but seldom has one been lower than $5 per acre. A West Texan says: "I have seen years when terraces meant the difference between a crop or no crop at all." An East Texan states: "I had rather work terraced land with no fertilizer than unterraced land with 200 pounds of fertilizer per acre." Most of them express the worth of terraces in terms of increased yields which they estimate all the way from $1 per acre per year up to a one-third increase. In several cases men who terraced 10 or 15 years ago, and have therefore had a chance to observe the effect of terraces on market values, declare terraces make the land worth from $10 to $25 more per acre.

A county agent says that a portion of the crop increases should be credited to the better management that is usually practiced by those who terrace. "A man who thinks enough of his farm to terrace it will ordinarily use a crop rotation including legumes, till the land better, and sow better seed."
 "This is the view of the Extension Service," says Mr. Bentley. "Terracing is the first step in building soil to profitable levels. Terracing saves the foundation, prevents further losses of fertility and makes the most of rainfall. This gives a good farmer something on which to build a paying farm."

The Lamb County Council of P. T. A. will hold its regular quarterly meeting at Spring Lake Saturday, December 3rd, at 2:30 o'clock.

At the last meeting of the Council it was decided to keep an accurate count of the number present from each organization at each council meeting and at the last meeting of the year present the P. T. ## SPADE

The patrons of Spade District were highly entertained on Thanksgiving Day by an all day celebration.

The people of Spade District, in keeping with a two year-old custom, assembled at Spade School building Thanksgiving Day to again celebrate that day and offer thanks for the blessings they have received in the erection of their school building and maintenance of their school. The morning program consisted of numbers rendered by the teachers, pupils and patrons, arranged and sponsored by the P. T. A., in addition to an act by Dr. Boone, a noted magician of Lubbock. At noon everyone participated in the devouring of very appetizing basket dinner prepared by the ladies of the district. There was an estimate of about nine hundred people fed.

The evening's entertainment fell wholly to the basketball teams and "pep squad". Spade Longhorns met the Cotton Center Elks in two fast games which tried the spirit of both teams. The brave fighting spirit of the Spade boys was overcome by the Cotton Center boys, ending with a score of twenty-eight and thirty-one. The Spade girls defeated their opponents with a score of twenty-two and forty-two.

One of the most exciting games of the season was played Saturday night between the Spade boys and Shallowater boys. Every play that the Spade boys made the "pep squad" was right behind them with their songs and their cheers. When the whistle blew for the end of the game the score was a tie of twenty and an extra five minutes was played ending with the score being a tie of twenty-three and another extra five minutes was played ending with a score of twenty-six and then an extra three minutes was played with a score of thirty and twenty seven with the Spade Longhorns as winners. To our sorrow the Spade girls were defeated by their opponents with a score of thirteen and thirty-three.

The school is progressing nicely, but we are hoping for better attendance soon. We have two new pupils that enrolled in high school Monday. Thelma and Olene Thompson.

field, who plan to make this city their home.

Attractive Property

College Heights Addition is one of the best properties in and adjacent to this city, and with the development of the property with homes, Littlefield will have another section of which any city should be proud.

The property is very attractive, and has been considerably improved with the grading of streets and the carrying out of other work.

A prominent authority on real estate has said that nine tenths of the property of the United States can be bought at the owner's price. But in the auctioning of College Heights Addition the opportunity to buy this realty at their own price.

Clause 6 of the contract between the owners of College Heights Addition and the Louisville Real Estate & Development Co., who are conducting the Auction, reads as follows:

"It is understood and agreed by parties hereto that the within described property is to be sold at public auction as herein provided and that the highest price obtainable on sale day will be confirmed by the owner, regardless of what that price may be."

The auction method is regarded as one of the highest class means of selling real estate, and is growing in favor and popularity, both with the owners of large holdings and buyers. Sale by auction is regarded as a most equitable method of bringing buyer and seller together.

Bright Future For Littlefield

Sale by auction of the remaining 600 acres of College Heights Addition got underway Wednesday morning with a talk by D. C. Clarke, president of the Louisville Real Estate & Development Co., who gave complete information as to the general program which will be carried out in conducting the auction.

Following Mr. Clarke's talk the gathering was addressed by M. B. Beyer, who is connected with the Louisville Real Estate & Development Co. Mr. Beyer reviewed the history of Littlefield, pointed out some of the features of the remarkable growth of this city, gave some of the facts relative to the economic upturn, which is underway throughout the country, and concluded with the statement that Littlefield is on the threshold of an additional and remarkable growth.

The first auction was held at 10 a. m. Wednesday on the property and auctions will be held at the same hour daily until the entire 600 acres has been sold.

Battered Gray Fedoras—Still In The Ring

President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt tossed his hat into the presidential ring several moons ago. It was kicked about quite a lot but it came through battered a bit 'tis true. Now it rests secure in a safe at Albany, waiting jaunt to Washington. . . . The President-elect is mighty particular about that hat . . . a gray fedora which came to be known throughout the land. One of his first acts on November 9th, was to place it away.

was a member of the Dawes Commission, but was called in by the League of Nations to straighten out the finances of several European countries, and is a member of the Finance Committee of the League. At present he is the principal representative of the United States in trying to negotiate a disarmament treaty and is in charge of arrangements on behalf of this country for the forthcoming International Economic Conference.

Norman Davis knows foreign affairs more intimately than any other American and would be an excellent successor to Secretary Stimson, in our opinion.

LADIES . . . new faces
One result of the election will be a decided change after March 4th in the feminine aspects of political Washington. Alice Roosevelt Longworth and Mrs. Dolly Gann will disappear from the picture. Alice's first cousin, Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, has said that she does not intend to devote much of her time to Washington, but will continue her school teaching, her furniture factory, and her editorial magazine work. No doubt she will fill her obligations as first lady of the land in a highly satisfactory manner, however.

There are always interesting women in the political background at Washington, and I look to see Eleanor Patterson, editor of the Washington Herald, brilliant, wealthy in her own right and occupying a position of commanding influence through her newspaper connection, as perhaps the most influential figure in the social-political life of the Administration. She and her warmly supported President Roosevelt and she has not lost an opportunity in years to stick a pin in Roosevelt Longworth.

The more I learn and reflect on the part which the sun plays in life on earth, the easier it is for me to understand the Parnes, Oriental religious sect whose is the sun.

The latest scientific discovery of the effect of the sun upon our affairs, announced by Professor Hiland of the U. S. Bureau of Standards, accounts for the ability of radio waves to travel around the globe.

It has long been known that upper space, not very far from earth's surface, there is a layer of highly electrified air particles which radio waves are reflected to the earth. If it was not for this layer they would shoot off in straight lines into space, but being reflected from this invisible roof they come back to earth and zig-zag their way around the globe.

Observations made at the time the eclipse on August 31st seem to prove that this "radio roof" is caused by powerful invisible ultra-violet rays from the sun which, at a certain distance from the earth, split the atoms into ionized electrical particles. If this did not occur, scientists say, these invisible rays would strike the earth and probably destroy life.

The sun is not only the source of life, but a potential source of death.

The Littlefield Chamber of Commerce Tuesday wired Attorney General Allred, supporting his program in appealing from the district court order.

Work was underway this week by a committee of the Littlefield Chamber of Commerce and the members of the County Commissioners court in obtaining the balance of the deeds to the right-of-way in connection with the improvement of Highway No. 7.

George L. Carver, a highway department engineer, attended a luncheon meeting of the Littlefield Chamber of Commerce and later conferred with the Chamber of Commerce committee and the members of the Commissioners court.

40,000 volts when a power line broke and fell across the fence. It also found the utility company negligent in not having the line equipped with a circuit breaker and power ground wires.

Mrs. Dear testified that on the night of May 24, 1931, she was awakened suddenly to gaze upon what appeared to be a scourge of fireflies or a shower of asterites. Wire fences for miles around, she said, were radiating a greenish glow, and green clumps of bear grass near the fences apparently were burning with an eerie reflection that lit up the countryside.

Then she saw the fence near her barn break into flames and she ran out to save her buildings. She seized a bucket of water, washed it at the fence, and was knocked violently to the ground. She hurried another bucketful and again was knocked down. Giving up the efforts she started to the house. As she passed through a gate the bucket came in contact with the fence and she was hurled to the ground a third time, she said.

Mrs. Dear said she had never had any experience with electricity and was unable to understand the cause of the shocks she received or the
