FLY THORNTON ON THE JOB
... C-C banquet caterer

How Do You Feed 300 People All At Once?

Everyone sympathizes with her when she has to feed a hole brood at Sunday dinner. But what about Fly Thornton? He'll be feeding about 300 people when he caters the annual Chamber of Commerce Banquet Jan. 26. Feeding large numbers of people is no big chore for Thornton, however. He's been doing it since he came to Littlefield in 1925 with a cafe. Now he is owner of Thornton's Cafeteria, which has been in business the past 15 years. He says that it is not much of a problem to feed 300 people, everything is prepared in advance. He has to be ready, and he has plenty of food on hand. "Getting the plates and setting out the tables is a worry. But the chamber of commerce was kind enough to ask 20 girls to help serve." Thornton says all the cooking is done the day of the banquet, making of the dessert being in the morning. Then, at noon the meat and vegetables go on the fire.

He explained that all the meat is cooked in five big ovens in his own cafeteria kitchen. Then the vegetables are cooked in huge five-gallon kettles. All the food is carried out to the banquet site, in this case the high school cafeteria, before the banquet begins. "It is a lot of work," he says, "but it's not as hard as people would think. Everybody here knows what they're supposed to do and that makes the job easier." Thornton was speaking of his staff of six employees who will prepare all the banquet food that day and still conduct business at his cafeteria. Catering banquets is nothing new to Thornton. Because he has fed hundreds of Littlefield people in banquets for service clubs and school functions. But he does admit that this will be the first banquet he has catered in a long time, simply because he hasn't tried.

County Holidays Are Announced

2 Injured In Wreck Sunday

Two Littlefield boys remained in good condition Wednesday in hospitals here after being injured in a one-car accident Sunday on U.S. 84.

Taken to Medical Arts Clinic-Hospital by Hammons ambulance was Bruce Dirickson, 17, and taken to Littlefield Hospital and Clinic was Richard Lynn Pryor, 17, also by Hammons ambulance.

Both boys were reported in good condition Wednesday morning.

The accident occurred about 12:20 a.m., Sunday about .3 mile west of East Delano Ave., police reports said.

The boys were going west on 84 in a 1966 Chevrolet, driven by Pryor. The vehicle went out of control, skidded and turned over at least one time, police said.

Dirickson was a passenger in the car.

The vehicle was estimated as a total loss.

Slight damage occurred in a two-car accident about 3:29 p.m., Saturday, at the intersection of East 3rd and Harrell.

Police reported that a 1963 Ford, driven by Helen Hope Kimbrough of Littlefield, collided with a 1956 Oldsmobile, driven by Cynthia Gay Crone, also of Littlefield.

The Kimbrough vehicle was traveling east on 3rd Street and the Crone auto was going north on Harrell when it failed to yield right of way and hit the Ford in the right side, police said.

A break-in was reported Sunday night at the home of O. W. Testerman, 225 E. 26th St., according to police, but nothing was taken from the premises.

Police said someone entered the garage which was open and broke a window and screen to enter the south door of the building.

Also a bicycle was stolen this week from the front yard at 615 Wiedel St.

Council To Hear Airport Report

Also, authorization to advertise for bids for a pickup for the city water department will be given, he said.

Also nine ninth graders from the Littlefield Junior High School Band have been named to an All-Region Junior High Clinic

Barton, Downs Seek Re-Election

Pair Files Wednesday For April 1 Election

Incumbents Pat Downs and Jack Barton filed for return bids on the board of the Littlefield Independent School District Wednesday at the school tax office for an election slated April 1.

Downs, 41, who is current school board president, is seeking a second term, and Barton, 43, is running for a third term.

School board members run at large in Littlefield as they are elected in a city-wide vote here instead of by precincts or places. Terms of the board are for three years.

Downs, who has lived in Littlefield 20 years, said he has enjoyed working as a board member the past three years.

"I will do my best to support the school district," he said, "and I will maintain the same policies as I have in the past."

Downs noted that he has not been absent from a school board meeting since he was elected, and said that he would support the present school administration.

"I am proud of our school system," he said. "I think it is in fine shape. I will continue to work toward its improvement and for the youth, because I consider youth as the backbone of our country."

In filing for his re-election, Barton said that the past years that he has been on the board have been good ones for him. "It has been a pleasure working with the administration and other board members," he said.

"I justify my filing for another term because I think it takes at least two to three years to get acquainted with the problems of the school district," he continued. "I feel that I would be of better service now than I have been in the past."

"Of course, the board hasn't solved all its problems, and we don't have a perfect school system," he said, "but we certainly have worked in that direction."

Downs and his wife, Dot, have two daughters, Susan, 17, and Nancy, 16. They attend the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Barton, a 1943 graduate of Texas A&M and a Littlefield resident for eight years, and his wife, Mary, have four children, Cathy, 15; Lynn, 13; David, 11 and Richard, 10. They attend the Methodist Church.

County Residents Spending More For Medicines

It's not only for the good things in life that Lamb County residents are spending more money at the present time.

They are also spending more for medicines -- a total of $554,000 a year.

And the reason is not only that drugs cost more nowadays. Much of the increase, believe it or not, is attributed to the fact that local people have more to spend, on average, than they did a few years ago.

It is all quite understandable, according to a new government study. It shows that people with more money at their command spend more for ointments, laxatives and other non-prescription drugs than do those with less money.

The report, just released by the National Center for Health Statistics, a division of the Public Health Service, is based on interviews with 134,000 persons throughout the country.

Among those in Lamb County's geographic region, the amount spent for medicines averages $22.80 per person annually.

Of this sum, an estimated $17.50 per year is for medicines obtained on written prescriptions from physicians.

The rest of it goes for drugs and medications that are available without prescriptions, such as nose drops, liniments, pain relievers, vitamins and tonics.

On the basis of the government's sampling survey, the total expenditure for medicines by Lamb County residents is estimated at $554,000 a year.

The American people as a whole are spending more than $4 billion a year in that direction, or about $21 per person, the report states. Not included are drugs dispensed to hospital patients.

Age, sex, education and income are some of the factors that affect the amount that an individual spends for medicines. Younger people spend less than older ones. Women more than men and people in the South and West more than those elsewhere.

In Lamb County, according to the latest figures released by Sales Management on retail drug store sales, their volume for the year came to $1,270,000, compared with the total three years before of $989,000.

BEST SELLER SELLS WELL

Take A Look... How?

By DARLA CRONE

Back to World War II rationing! When the magazine distributor from Lubbock News Co. made his semi-weekly rounds in Littlefield last Monday, he attracted nearly as much attention as the cigarette man used to back in the 40's. By the time he left town there wasn't a Look Magazine to be found.

The sudden popularity was, of course, caused by the first serial installment of "Death of a President," the book by William Manchester, which is guaranteed to be a best-seller because Jackie Kennedy wanted to keep parts of it out of print.

She finally succeeded in getting some of it "expurgated," as the publishers say, but it's still the hottest item on the newsstands.

About 17 copies of this famed issue arrived Monday in Littlefield. About 15 times that many could have been sold in one place if it had been available. In talking to the manager of Robbins News Stand, it was found that she received 8 magazines and could have sold from 200 to 250. People are still asking for them. She received a call from Sudan asking for copies. The next issue may not even arrive in Littlefield because of the great demand.

Roden Drug got its usual three and these were sold before they were even unwrapped. They could have sold at least 50 that day.

Furr's Super Market received only two issues and could have sold dozens more. Piggly Wiggly received one copy and it was sold immediately. The name of the alert person could not be found.

West Drug had its quota cut from six to three and these were spoken for before they arrived. Their story was the same. They could have sold many more if the supply had been available.

One of the local stores did not even receive a single copy of the magazine and was told that they would not get any of the next issue. The store could have sold all it could have possibly received if the magazine had been on hand.

One of the stores said they stopped getting Look Magazine a few months ago, because there was no demand for it. Now there have been several calls and inquiries for this particular copy, however.

The County Wide News and Lamb County Leader should sell so good!

OWNER'S REPORT

Cindy And Her Prince

By Bill Turner

The trouble with some Britons is, they don't appreciate literary genius, modern style. As proof, consider the sad tale of Dennis Potter, a playwright by trade. Or so it is alleged.

With a slight assist from the Brothers Grimm, Potter pattered around and came up with a tale about a girl named Cinderella.

This he entitled "Almost Cinderella." For reasons that may never be explained, this bonbon was bought by someone at the British Broadcasting Corporation, and that genius and/or others decided it was a perfect offering for Christmas Day.

But then there was a surprising switch, and the BBC announced that it was not either going to present Playwright Potter's potion. Why? Well, that you'll have to figure out for yourself.

JUST ABOUT everyone knows the story of Cinderella and how the fairy godmother of this sweet young thing not only got her to Prince Charming's ball but made her the stellar attraction at the Prince's wedding.

A nice, wholesome story but strictly for squares. So Potter put it around a bit and came up with a version suitable for Britain's far-out set, including the Mods and the Rockers.

The Potterized version dressed Cindy in a miniskirt and a sneer. Not only was Cindy contemptuous of her nasty Aunt and her disagreeable cousins, she had no use for anybody.

Which proves that blood is thicker than water.

BEFITTING SUCH a beastly female, Potter gave her an appropriate soul-mate in a Potterized Prince Charming.

You could call him a bit of a nut, and be charitable. As Potter put it: "Princing comes out as a somewhat unbalanced character who has sexual problems but he can't find satisfaction with other girls."

Having created such a delightful Potter provided an appropriate story. To sum it up, the Prince strangled his girl friend. At midnight.

And since this tidbit was scheduled Christmas broadcast, that would have about the time the shepherds saw the We're glad that someone at the BBC sense enough to strangle this weird before midnight.

Now the question is: what network is it for the American audience?

"Who Said That?"

Has anyone out there ever tried to sell a house?

I use the word "house" with good reason because once the For Sale sign goes up, it's no longer a home.

Our house in Olton went up for sale last November and, believe me, advertising does pay . . . it was open house every day.

All of five of us in the family became quite adept at house showing, better known as Everybody Take Their Battle Stations.

If we were lucky, the telephone would give us about 10 minutes warning that a prospective buyer was on the way and I would sweetly say:

"Of course, come right on over."

Then I would slam down the telephone, yell "SOS" and the mad dash was on . . . throw the toys under the bed, stuff the newspapers in a handy drawer, lock the cats up, run the sweeper down the middle of the hall, hid the trash under the sewing table.

We got pretty good at our timing because just as the doorbell would ring, all the kids would dash for a chair and look innocent, I would take a deep breath, open the door and say:

"No, we weren't doing a thing, just sitting around. Come on in."

WE SOON discovered that there is just something about house hunting that seems to turn normally well-mannered, nice people into two-headed monsters.

And they come in all sizes, shapes and sorts.

There's the family out for a drive and they're always wondering what those crazy newspaper people have in their house and what better chance to find out?

Then come the clock collectors who've heard that I have a few around the house and want a chance to look them over. They aren't interested in the house. They want to buy the clocks.

There are the art critics whose main purpose is to scoff at my strictly amateurish efforts; the interior decorators who inform you where the couch SHOULD be placed;

and the just plain lonely who . . . place to go.

This last group is particularly interesting because they always come at dinner time and then settle down for a five-hour visit.

"Go right ahead with your meal," they insist, "I'm not a bit hungry . . . Well, if you insist, I'll just have a bit."

TO SEE your home through other people's eyes can also be quite an experience since this is honesty until it hurts.

For example, I never before knew that foam rubber padding was bad for the feet, that red carpet should be used only in night clubs, that all window seats are perfectly horrible and even that I hadn't sealed my jelly properly.

All this and I was foolish enough to actually have enjoyed living in that house for several years.

After about a month, I came to the conclusion that my $20 thousand dollar shack would, in a pinch, do to house the chickens . . . if they weren't very particular chickens, that is.

THERE WAS the humorous side, too. I will never forget one bright afternoon when I was scheduled to appear in a local play and was dressed appropriately for the part.

Unfortunately the part was that of a high school girl. Now, from the stage, I might could get away with mini-skirt, saddle oxfords, poor boy shirt, knee socks and a big bow in my hair above eyebrow length bangs.

But face-to-face is a different matter and this is just where I was when the door bell rang as I was sneaking out the back door.

To my horror, I went to the door and, for the first time, met a nice retired couple who had come to look at the house.

All through the tour, I apologized for my appearance, explaining WHY and they assured me it was quite all right but I don't think they ever really believed I didn't dress that way all the time.

Just as they were leaving, the gentleman glanced at my mini-skirt and said:

"Don't worry about it. My wife and I have travelled all over and we've seen all kinds."

Ed Packwood Motor Company, in Littlefield, started making car inspections Wednesday about noon, immediately after receiving the necessary stickers from Austin, under the new Automobile Inspection law, which makes inspection and presentation of an approved inspection sticker, a prerequisite to securing new 1952 license plates.

The seventy-nine members of the Lamb County Fair Association have been notified to meet at Lamb County Court room, Monday night at 7:30 o'clock to discuss and make plans for the 1952 fair. V. M. Peterman, president of the organization, is calling the meeting.

FFA sponsor announced the chartering of a special bus to carry his boys to the Stock Show, leaving Thursday night (after school) January 24 and to return on the following Sunday, and Monday estimated that forty boys would make the trip.

A very small amount of cotton remains to be gathered but it begins to appear that the South Plains area cotton crop for 1951 will total close to 1,260,000 bales, according to estimates of release figures by the U. S. cotton classing office in Lubbock.

George L. White, director and head of the Lamb County March of Dimes campaign for 1952, started this weekend on a tour to every town and community in the county, to organize local campaigns in each, for the March of Dimes campaign which will be officially opened Monday morning, and continue for the remainder of the month.

A street sweeper has just been purchased by the City of Littlefield, and was used for the first time Tuesday night, with Shorty Clark operating same.

At a called meeting of the City Commission Wednesday afternoon, it was decided to invest $4,000 out of the Water Works Sinking Fund in Defense bonds.

Everything is in readiness for the six day working program at the Red Cross Sewing room recently established in the basement of the First Baptist Church under the management of Mrs. Ed Hewitt.

AS announced by Pat Boone, County Chairman, Lamb County's quota for the Bond and Stamps sales for 1942 is a minimum of residents of this county to invest as much as possible in bonds or stamps thereby furnishing the Government with means with which to buy material to win the war of freedom. He asks that all citizens see their postmaster or banker and invest their share in this cause.

Dr. Clifford B. Jones, president of Texas Technological College, Lubbock, will be guest speaker at the third annual meeting of stockholders of the Lamb County Electric Co-operative, Inc., at the Palace Theatre here Monday, February 2, O. K. Woodall, superintendent, announced this week.

Sneak Peek At '87, Part III

By PAUL HARVEY

You will go to a doctor in 1987 mostly to prevent illness. You will get 30 systematized automated tests. The results will be fed into a computer, digested and analyzed for your doctor.

The doctor will operate with a scalpel as bright and as hot as the sun -- bloodlessly -- simultaneously vaporizing and resealing body tissue as it is cut.

And sure-enough "smart pills" will be as commonplace as today's tranquilizers. Pills which stimulate brain cells to absorb more learning more quickly.

With understanding of the metabolism of bacteria, converted sewage will become an important power source.

And with microminiaturization, your dainty earrings may be a hearing aid.

Hospitalized burn victims relax, suspended in air -- touching no bedding. Floating on a cushion of air.

A hospitalized patient may shut off intolerable pain by pushing a button on a tiny box in his pajama pocket.

And on Wall Street, 20 years from today, 50 billion shares will be listed. And half of the products then represented on the Big Board are presently undiscovered; their names aren't even in the dictionary yet.

We will have established bases on the moon with rotating populations of scientists. But the harvest of resources will have been disappointing. Man's appetite for further space exploration will have diminished.

Man's fascination with "outerspace" will be then have been replaced by a preoccupation with "inner space." Learning to understand himself, his brain waves, will engross him.

This is as far into the future as responsible men can now see.

But beyond these soon-to-be-realized objectives -- lies an even more exciting horizon -- as research compounds itself.

The dreamers of 1987 will dream bigger dreams -- of whole cities moved -- by air -- intact. Whole cities air conditioned under a transparent dome. Maybe the whole earth.

Total environmental control. By 1987, with the sum of recorded human knowledge doubling every two years, and with more time for dreaming -- man will plan:

Linear cities -- honeycombs of steel into which your own living unit can be helicoptered into place and "plugged in."

Life expectancy -- limitless! Oh, it is no future for the timid. But today's school-agers are with anything they are willing to reach for.

And in reaching -- they fulfill many purposes.

What we have is God's gift to us. What we make of it -- that is our God.

(Copr. T-M, 1967 Gen. Fea. Corp.)

THE ABUNDANT LIFE

First Things First

By BOB WEAR

We admittedly live in a confused and confusing world climate, but it is not inevitable that we be confused. It does mean that we must be constantly making evaluations and choices. We cannot have everything, know everything, do everything, or go everywhere. Some things are right and some wrong; some are true and some false; some are desirable and some undesirable. Obviously, life is a series of choices; and its success or failure depends, in great measure, upon our choices.

In our choosing, there is only one wise standard to follow; we must let first things have first place. If we use some other standard, our choices will be something less than best. It is common knowledge that some things are relatively more important than others, and in the light of this knowledge our daily choosing must be done. Since we do have some dependable guidelines to aid us to choose wisely, we must not resign ourselves to the feeling that we are being overwhelmed by a merciless fate. We must never give up and let the tide of time carry us along to certain misery and loss.

An anonymous writer has said, "Life is too short to provide for everything. Choose you must, and as you choose, choose only the best -- in friends, in books, in recreation, and in everything!" The injunction of inspiration is simple and to the point -- "Test all things, hold fast that which is good." The right and privilege of choice can be protected most effectively by being used wisely. The responsibility of choice can be met most successfully by being exercised in the light of all the truth available to us.

Christ, the master teacher, stressed the importance of putting first things first when He said, "Seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things (physical necessities) shall be yours, too." This basic truth helps us realize that spiritual values are superior to material values. If we keep this knowledge uppermost in our thinking, we will be able to put first things first.

We know that time, energy, life and opportunities are limited. Therefore, the only possible way to have the best, be the best, and do the best is to be diligent in making sure that we put first things in first place. This practice never fails in producing the best possible results.

FARM NEWS

Farming, Ranching Costs To Go Higher

The cost of farming and ranching will be higher in 1967, according to John McHaney, Extension economist at Texas A&M University. Farm production expenses will increase again in 1967 but at a slower rate than in 1966, said McHaney.

The 1966 cost of farming—as measured by overall farm production expenses—was up a whopping 8 percent over 1965, he said. It cost farmers about $3 billion for overall production expenses in 1966.

McHaney said the increase in expenses results in part from higher prices for certain production inputs—particularly feeder livestock and feed. Prices paid by farmers moved up slightly for motor and other supplies, and building and fencing materials. Then too, he said, more purchased inputs were used in 1966, contributing to the increase in total farm expenses.

The A&M economist said farm production expenses will likely rise again in 1967 though not quite as much as the 1966 increase. Increases are highly probable in 1967 for taxes, interest, and insurance. Higher expenditures for several production items, including fertilizer and pesticides, are likely because of increased use of these items.

Part of the increase on the cost of farm inputs in recent years can be attributed to increasing use of services that were formerly done by the farmer or were not even available, said McHaney. Farmers now may have feed delivered directly into their beef, poultry or hog feeders. They may have buildings constructed, fences built or fertilizer applied rather than doing the work themselves.

Waggin' Tongue

By TEX ROGERS

Beginning this week, hundreds of 4-H, FFA and FHA members throughout the area will start that tedious task—and ritual—of preparing animals they have raised during the year for livestock shows on the local, county, and even regional level. Many hours of work will be required as each boy or girl gets his calf, pig or lamb ready for the judges. And many sleepless nights and a lot of miles will be registered on the old pickup's odometer as they go from one show to another.

But when it's all over, most of those boys and girls—and their parents—will probably say it was worth it.

Why? Why will those kids spend so much time and money just to show off a bawling calf or squealing pig?

The answer is deeper than that blue ribbon won by showing the grand champion heifer, and it probably can't even be measured by monetary gains.

To begin with, participation in livestock shows provides a definite educational value, particularly to those boys and girls who will be in agriculture later in years. By entering animals in competition, they learn selection and judging of livestock, disease control, rationing, parasite control and good management practices.

Then, if a 4-Her performs the task of feeding his animal properly, and keeps it in good health, a keen sense of responsibility is developed.

Responsibility is something too many youngsters today may lack, simply because they don't have anything to be responsible for. But, not so, in the case of a boy or girl who is trying hard to develop a winner in the show ring.

Livestock shows also provide a good lesson in sportsmanship, too, because they teach how to be good losers as well as winners. And for the youngsters' own benefit, stock shows teach boys and girls that different judges look at animals in different ways. This keeps them on their toes in feeding, fitting, breeding and exhibiting livestock.

A vital factor to come out of livestock exhibiting is the idea of achieving excellence through competition. For a young man on the farm, whose life is centered around animals, a winning entry in a stock show provides a goal to aim toward.

Livestock shows also may do a lot to strengthen communities, and there are a lot of reasons in doing so.

First of all, stock shows work for the common good of all youth, and they afford an opportunity for further expansion and development of youth.

Stock shows also provide a means of the businessman and farmer to work together, and they keep youth interested in the livestock industry.

Most important of all, however, is the fact that livestock shows provide worthwhile activities for an often idle generation.

By assuming responsibility in taking on a livestock project, a youngster can enter a character building process at an early age, and can be recognized for his accomplishments.

Wind Erosion Can Be Controlled

Out in West Texas, especially during the winter after crops are harvested, wind plus unmanaged land equals blowing dust.

Blowing dust is a problem which not only deals misery to residents of this part of the country, but it also eats away at the valuable top soil on the farm land. And good farm land is the most important asset to the area, because from it grows the economy of the people.

It is doubtful that the dust problem in West Texas will ever be completely solved. The terrain and soil makeup in this area almost prohibit it. But good conservation and crop management can do a lot in keeping the soil on the land where it belongs instead of in the air.

There are several farm practices recommended by the Soil Conservation Service after the crops are harvested and the land is being prepared during the winter for the next crop.

SCS workmen gather them all up into one term called crop residue management, and the main purpose is control of wind and water erosion.

That is, during the winter, when the land is not producing, there are practices which can be used to keep the top soil on the ground and the water in the ground, whenever it does rain.

There are two basic crops produced on the South Plains—high residue crops and clean till crops—and there are ways to work the land to prevent wind erosion for both.

High residue crops include small grains, sudexes and sorghums. Clean till crops are cotton, peas and beans. There are methods which can be used during the winter to help preserve and prepare the land for both types.

B. T. Kisner, Lamb County conservationist, said a good practice is to try to keep the residue on the soil as long as possible. This keeps the soil from blowing, protects the land from water erosion and surface crusting, and maintains an even soil temperature.

Residue could be left on the land until about April for dry-land irrigation farms, and until the land is prepared for pre-irrigation for sprinkler-type irrigation farming, he said. Tandem discs, chisels and stubble mulching sweeps are good equipment because they open up the ground and break it up into large clods, Kisner said.

Land levelling also is a good practice for irrigated land, Kisner said, because it helps a lot in erosion control.

On cotton land, many farmers in the area are spreading burrs back on the soil after harvest, Kisner said.

With a minimum of three tons per acre, about all the minerals from the burr mulch goes back into the soil and a more balanced action of bacteria is maintained, he said.

Adding of fertilizer with the burrs is recommended on irrigated land, he said.

Another procedure is to spread cotton burrs on the end of turn rows, as many area farmers are doing, because it is in the turn rows that much wind erosion begins.

Because of the varied texture of the soil in the area, different amounts of residue are required, Kisner noted.

Toward Olton, where the soil is of fine texture, it is recommended that 1,000 pounds per acre of residue be used on land with normal rows, and about 750 pounds per acre on land with close-spaced rows, he said.

The main point, however, is to keep the residue on the land as long as possible during the winter, he said, because it has been proven that for every foot of height or residue, a four-foot strip of protection is made in direction of the wind.

YOU CAN TELL THE DIFFERENCE in land that has been managed well during the winter and land that hasn't been touched in these two photos. The cotton land in the top picture has had burrs applied to it as a cover, while the land in the bottom picture has been untouched this winter after the cotton was harvested. Now it is at the mercy of the wind. Both photos were taken the same day of fields less than one mile apart.

SCS Irrigation School Is Held

The Soil Conservation Service held an Irrigation Training School in the REA Building last Tuesday. Conducting the school were W. Y. McAdams, Area SCS engineer from Lubbock, and Joe Krizek, SCS engineer from Littlefield.

Those attending the school received information from McAdams on planning, inventory system alternatives, notekeeping, use of irrigation guide, use of date sheets, irrigation water management, time of irrigation, time of sets, rate of application.

Krizek spoke on sample forms, graded furrow with tailwater recover and cutback head, level furrow, level border, graded border, with tailwater recovery and sprinkler.

Once nematodes get at your cotton, yields go down and so do profits. But with FUMAZONE® 86 soil fumigant applied at only 1 to 2 gallons over-all an acre, you can take care of root-knot, sting, meadow and other nematodes—those tiny soil pests that attack plant roots, suck away profits. FUMAZONE 86 soil fumigant increases yields up to $200 an acre. Many High Plains ranchers just like yourself tell us that's exactly what happened to their yields after their soils were treated with FUMAZONE 86. It can be applied right from the drum. No mixing, no diluting, no nozzles clogged with foreign material. You can use the chisel method, the plowsole method or inject FUMAZONE 86 into your irrigation water. Could you ask for greater flexibility? Sure you could. So here it is. Apply FUMAZONE 86 before planting, at planting or after planting. It's the only type of soil fumigant that can be used on living plants. Ask your Dow Farm Chemicals supplier about it. # Freeloaders, Spongers Will Always Be, History Shows ever entertained an guest who stayed ... loaned money and ... back ... or known ... always expected you to foot the bill, chances are you can sympathize with the Ohio couple who were Monte Woolley's hosts in the famous Broadway play, "The Man Who Came to Dinner."

Woolley played a literary lion who falls on the couple's icy step while staying at their home during a lecture tour. During his stay, he wouldn't let them use their own living room, in-sulted his hosts' friends, ran up a huge phone bill, encouraged the daughter of the house to elope with a man her parents thought impossible, persuaded their son to become a school drop-out and installed a flock of penguins in residence.

But while the couple in "The Man Who Came to Dinner" were unwilling hosts, another fictional character may have been the most ungracious host of all time. Ulysses, the hero of Homer's "Odyssey," came home after 20 years at sea to find that a gang of young men had moved in and were about to force his faithful wife, Penelope, to choose among them.

Penelope tricked them by promising to marry one of the suitors as soon as she finished her weaving, but each night she would unravel what she had done during the day. Ulysses, with the help of his son, Telemachus, and some faithful servants slew all the suitors with the exception of one — whom he politely asked to leave.

Such barbaric methods were unheard of at Hampton Court, the famous residence of England's King Henry VIII. There were no corridors at Hampton Court; instead each room was built railroad fashion onto the next one. Each day a whole procession of freeloaders (tacitly called courtiers) went tramping through Henry's royal bedchamber!

Such embarrassing lack of privacy need not be encountered by today's hosts and visitors, thanks to the increasing number of convenient and comfortable hotels and motels in and around our communities. In fact, the trend now, according to researchers, is for sophisticated visitors to stay at a nearby hotel or motel even when visiting family or intimate friends. In this way, there's just enough privacy and separation to allow different generations and individuals to enjoy the visit — and yet allow each person a chance to live at his own pace. A glance at the Hotel & Motel Red Book at any of the more than 6,000 American Hotel & Motel Association facilities or wherever travel is arranged, travelers and hosts alike can book accommodations ahead of time swiftly and conveniently.

The country noblemen who lived during the reign of King Louis XIV of France didn't need a Red Book to find out where they would stay; they shared the magnificent palace at Versailles whenever they could. These royal moochers were entertained lavishly — but in exchange they found it necessary to swear their loyalty to the king.

Another king who lived at Versailles later on, Louis XVI, was not so lucky. On Oct. 6, 1789, a howling mob of Parisians descended on the palace and forced the king to return with them to Paris. There, over the matter of revolution, he literally lost his head.

These abductors may have numbered among them the same squatters who made camp in the famous Louvre in Paris during pre-revolutionary days, building bonfires and making merry inside.

Another sponger who helped precipitate a revolution — this one in Russia — was the sinister monk and court favorite, Rasputin. Because of his apparent powers to alleviate their son's condition of hemophilia, Rasputin became the permanent house guest of Czar Nicholas II and his wife, and gained great political power. After offending most of the Russian nobles and meddling in numerous controversial affairs of state, he was poisoned by Prince Yusupov. But when that failed to bring death to the mad monk, Yusupov and friends shot the moocher and threw his body into an icy branch of the Neva River.

So next time you're having trouble getting rid of an "overnight" guest — or keeping your distance from one of the great spongers of today — tell him the story of Ulysses and his guests or the "sad" end of Rasputin; maybe he will take a hint!

Lake View Downs Cats, 66-41, In Foul Game

The flight was swell all the way down and back, but in between the weather was foul as the Littlefield Wildcats were man-handled by Lake View, 66-41, in San Angelo.

The Wildcats quints had to fly down to play the San Angelo school Tuesday because the great distance would have prohibited them from more studying during this week of semester exams.

Lake View stands 2-3 in District 3-AAA play while the 'Cats are 0-5. They face the league-leading Levelland Lobos Friday in Wildcat Gym with the B team game tipping off at 6:15 p.m.

The game started on fairly even terms with Littlefield trailing 16-11 at the end of the opening period. During the second quarter of play Littlefield doubled its points, but Lake View led 28-22 at halftime.

The Wildcats then staged a comeback in the opening minutes of the third round, and moved up to within two points of their opponents, but as the final minutes of the quarter ticked away, Lake View staged a surge and finished the period with a 49-34 lead.

Fouls plagued the Wildcats in the final stanza as four players were dismissed from the action one by one.

Fred Koontz was the first to leave at the opening of the period. Then, with about six minutes left, Kevin Hutson, who led Wildcat scoring with 15 markers, drew his fifth penalty. Nevill Manning went out with four minutes left, followed by Wilmer Williams. Rocky Woods was Lake View's high-point man with 28 tallies.

Deadline For Vehicle Inspection April 15

Col. Homer Garrison, Jr., director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, reminded Texas motorists today that most vehicles have not yet been inspected for their 1967 vehicle inspection sticker.

"The inspection period is two-thirds over and only about one-third of the vehicles have been inspected," said Garrison. "This means that during the 14 weeks remaining before the April 15 deadline for inspections, more than twice as many persons each week must have their car inspected to avoid long lines forming at the end of the period."

In urging motorists to have their vehicle inspected at an early date, Garrison pointed out that officials inspection stations are easily identified by the standard sign displayed at or near the service entrance of the garage.

He advised that inspection stations are being urged to request permission to inspect any vehicle brought into the garage for repairs or regular service.

"In this way," Garrison pointed out, "time will be saved for the motorist as well as for the inspection station."

"And if you have not had your vehicle inspected, take it to one of the 5,500 authorized inspection stations for a 'check-up' and start the new year off right with a safe vehicle."

EO Act Amendment Offers Resources In Poverty War

Additional and much needed resources for hard-pressed, low-income Texas rural people desiring to improve their farm income or start small businesses will be provided through an amendment to Title III of the Economic Opportunity Act recently signed by President Johnson.

This fact was pointed out this week by Mr. Truman J. Jones, Farmers Home Administration County Supervisor for Lamb County.

"This important Economic Opportunity Act amendment increases from $2,500 to $3,500 the maximum war-on-poverty loans that the USDA Farmers Home Administration can make to individual Texas farmers or other rural residents," Supervisor Jones said.

This amendment also authorizes additional credit to borrowers as long as their outstanding indebtedness for an economic opportunity loan does not exceed $3,500.

The new Economic Opportunity loan provisions will more adequately cover the financing of needed land, working quarters and equipment needed to establish many Texas economic opportunity individual enterprises on a sound basis," Jones explained. "Another important point is that the program can now supplement original loans with capital for improvements or expansion."

STILL A MYSTERY -- Don Avery is shown above trying to figure out how a letter sent to him at Ehiyhstsl, Tex., ever made it to Whitharral, its real destination. Due to an error in hand placement the name of the town on the letter became Greek to those concerned.

Nothing Stops The Mail Service In This Area

EHIYHSTSL, TEX. ??? The windshield envelop containing a check for $130 was addressed to Don Reding, Ehiyhstsl, Tex. As the Whitharral postmistress was routinely putting up the mail, she did a double-take as her eyes caught the Ehiyhstsl. She took time to write the name down, while pondering how in the world it had ever arrived at the right destination. There was no zip code, nothing else on the envelope except the return address of the Commodity Credit Corporation at Post.

Don Reding came in and whirled the combination on his box. He didn't know where Ehiyhstsl, Tex. was located either, but he had proof that he was Don Reding. He is a farmer and was expecting a government check for about $130 for payment for cotton put in the loan.

He took the check to the Littlefield bank where he does business and cashier Nelda Smith hardly blinked an eye before making a deposit slip.

Meanwhile back at the Whitharral Post Office, Kay Herring still puzzling over how the check traveled over one hundred miles to a non-existent town, still arriving at the right town delivered to the right person, sat down at her typewriter. After a minute of doodling, she had the clue.

By moving the left hand over one key too far to the right, a typist who uses touch-type would spell Whitharral E-h-l-y-h-s-t-s-l. Someone down the postal line must have remembered his high school home-key typing lesson.
