Khrushchev's 'Secret' Talk Was Too Much For U.S. Red

For many years one of the best known American communist artists was the novelist Howard Fast. Though he did not formally join the party until 1943, he had long been a dedicated and a passionate Marxist, and he had come to the belief that communism was ". . . an adifice dedicated singularly and irrevocably to the ending of all war, injustice, hunger, and human suffering-and to the goal of the brotherhood of man." His novels-which sold in tremendous quantities throughout the world-faithfully reflected this view in one way or another.

Then came the fateful day-June 5, 1956 when the New York Times published the long full text of the "secret" Krushchev speech which told in lurid detail of the terrors and brutalities perpetuated under Stalin. This, for Fast and a number of other American Communist Party members, meant the parting of the ways. Now he tells his story in a book, "The Naked God," just published by Frederick A. Praeger, Inc. A section of it has been printed in the November 16 issue of The Saturday Review, under the title "On Leaving the Communist Party."

It is a somber, compelling and sometimes horrifying fale. Poverty, hunger and despair brought this highly gifted writer to the left-wing movement. He accepted, apparently in full willingness, the harsh disciplines of communism. These disciplines are backed by the threat of expulsion from the part-and to a sincere and devoted communist, Fast explains, ". . . expulsion was almost as bad as death - and sometimes worse."

He writes of party leaders under the Stalinist structure. A leader, Fast says, is a man (and his name is legion) "who dirties the page of history and blackens all the colors of man's dreams." He parrots the going party line ad nauseum. of warm greetings and sunny dis-He ". . . eschefs original opinions as the devil himself." He is contemptuous and threatening to those below him in the hierarchy, and a boot-licker of those above. Fast writes: Not even the warden of the Federal prison where I served a sentence as a political prisoner years later ever treated me or anyone else with such inhuman disdain and contempt; indeed, the warden I refer to was a man of heart and compassion; and only in the Communist Party from Communist leadership have I experienced myself and seen directed toward so many others such an attitude toward people."

Even a mild criticism of communist policy, on the part of a writer, could and would bring down denunciation of a sort that ". . . a civilized person would reserve for patholoigical criminals." Any kind of lying and deception was used if it would serve party ends. Fast cites a famous Soviet writer who, during a visit to New York, was asked what had happened to a number of other Soviet writers of whom nothing had been heard for a long time. He assured his audience that all were alive, well and working, and actually discribed in detail the works each was supposed to be engaged upon. This was a pure and deliberate fabrication. All the writers had been executed or were in prison.

Fast's defection am the party is all the more signifieant because, for so long, he made great personal sacrifices, financial and otherwise, he kept the communist faith. Even when he could no longer find a commercial publisher, he kept on writing and published his own books—an enterprise which is almost invariably a failure for an author. Yet, he says, be was luckier than his counterpart in the Soviet Union itself. For he was allowed to live and write even while he fought the policies of his own government. The Soviet writer who did that,, by contrast "... was cruelly tortured and ... put to death."

And now, Howard Fast tells us, he has found freedom. There is, to him, many an imperfection in the United States but "... it is a land where the individual, in his work and in his rights, is recognized and defended." Then he says: "Whatever the Communist Party once was, today it is a prison for man's best and boldest dreams. Tomorrow belongs to those who break down the prison walls that inclose the minds of men, not to those who support such walls."

On Christmas Mail

The Post Office Department has suggested its customers mail their packages and cards early this year. The depart- vented. ment anticipates what my constitute a record volume for this Christmas season.

As the reader probably knows, if he will tie his local mail into one bundle and the out-of-town mail into another, ospecially with Christmas cards, it will speed service and delivery. The Post Office Department is eager for senders to remember to include delivery zone numbers in addresses.

If you have not already sent that Christmas present to your son, husband or brother overseas, you will be lucky if he gets it in time for Christmas. It might be advisable to send it by air at this late date.

The custom of sending Christmas crds is a widely accepted one and even people who see each other every day throughout the year are found mailing each other cards at Christmas time. Whether the custom will survive in this fashion or whether we will return to the old practice of sending cards to friends seen only occasionally, or who live in a distant location, only time will tell.

In any case, if you are not politician and if you send out Christmas cards by the hundreds, mail them early this year. Give the poor fellow who receives it time to get one in the mail to you-for no one can possibly keep up with all the sources of Christmas cards.

This is the week when state employes, from the Governor on down, hold their annual Christmas program. School choral groups in Austin share in the festivities with carol singing. And the Governor brings the traditional Yuletide message.

In a speech before an Austin civic club, the Governor hit at the "mossback philosophy" those who want to "preserve the status quo" in state government, 'especially in regard to spending money." They "do more to undermine the cause of local selfgovernment than the most vocal advocates of federal power," he declared.

DILEMNA REMAINS - Whether a school district should follow state or federal law in regard to integration is still an open ques-

A federal judge declined to rule on the issue for the Dallas school board. A state law, passed last spring, says a school will lose state aid if it integrates without a local election. A federal court has ordered Dallas schools to integrate Jan 27. Members of the Texas Attorney General's staff appeared at the hearing to argue that a lower federal court could not set aside a state law. Federal Judge William H. Atwell agreed.

But the order to integrate remains, leaving Dallas and other districts which foresee a similar problem, without an answer.

International Financing Looks Good To Philoson

Elitor's note: The Sandhills Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm apparently still doesn't understand international finances, his letter this week indicates. Or maybe he does, we don't know.

Some people still think us folk in the country are narrow-gaug ed, can't see beyond our ow lences, and I was reading in a copy of a newspaper which turned up in my mail box as a sample copy where an international expert in Washington said if th. United States is going to survive everybody has got to think in international terms.

Well, in the same paper I read the following article from Lon-

"Britain will postpone its annual payment of $175,00,000 on its United States postwar loan, due in December, because of its fi-pancial straits." The article went on to say that this will be agreeable with Washington, as the loan payments are handled on what is called a "simplified procedure," with the understanding that England can defer payments whenever its financial position requires it.

Now if this is what that expert means by thinking in international terms, just mark me down as an internationalist.

If I can find any bank or other leading institution in any part of this state willing to make me a loan on international terms, I'll be at the door waiting for it to open the first thing in the morn-

Study Of Storage Of Ground Water Starts At TRF High Plains Station bus and Ethel Rita S'nelair of ground water got underway the High Plains Station of the Texas Research Foundation on

The study of the controlled movement of measured water into water bearing sands is being conducted by pumping water through underground pipe from an irrigation well into the recharge well, 14 mile away, adjacent to the east lake at the Sta-

The experiment, which will be continuous for six weeks, is deigned to discover the behavior of recharged water in the under-

Among the items studied are the permeability of the sands; the rate of movement of water; the practicality of recharging water sands and the most economical way of conserving surface lake water.

The flow of water into the recharge well is measured at both the source and the recharge well to give accurate tests. This is the first time equipment for accurate measuring and recording the data has been set up in this area. Three four-inch wells are located eight, 50, and 100 feet from the recharge well so that observations can be made to get data. Wells 12 and 112 miles away are being checked to determine any effect the test has on them.

During the first five days of testing, 5,889,000 gallons of water had been pumped into the recharge well. A rise in the water level of 24.61 feet was recorded at the recharge well, 21.31 feet at the test well 8 feet away, and 20.93 at the well 100 feet from the recharge well.

The irrigation well supplying the water showed a draw-down of 21.45 feet during the five-day period while a well 350 feet away showed a drop of only 5.07 feet. A flow of 800 gallons per minute was selected to run the test. This rate could be varied up or down.

The recharge program is a cooperative effort of the U. S. Geoogical Survey, the Texas State Board of Water Engineers and the High Plains Station, Jerry G. Cronin and the staff of the USGS are in charge of the research

Al Winslow, assistant district geologist from the Austin district office, is assisting in the reearch program.

Interest throughout the High Plains area is evidenced by the number of visitors and inquiries covering the experiment.

Preaching Service
Evening Preaching 10:00 am 11:00 am he true light that is intended for every man has come into the world. This light shines perpetually into the darkness in which man lives and the darkness cannot overcome it. It radiates from the manger stall at Bethlehem; it gleams from Calvary's hill; on Easter morn it broke the bonds of time and is eternally present in our world. Joy to the world indeed! Praise God from whom all blessings flow!

The light is here; we need not even ask it, but only open our eyes. Then why do so many walk yet in darkness? There is only one answer, they love darkness better than light. For those who stumble blindly about life and yearn for respite, there stands an eternal invitation -"Come unto me all ye who labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." For those whose hearts ache with emptiness -"Behold I stand at the door and knock. If any man will hear my voice and open the door I will come in to him."

Is something wrong with your life-an inner restless dissatisfaction? The answer to every human problem comes only from God our Maker. He alone can forgive and reassure.

Through the church God has committed the provision and proclamation of His forgiveness and redeeming love. Without a church relation no one is securely related to God. Everyone should be in the Church and the Church in everyone!

Today Americans are spending two per cent of the national income for schooling, and the number of students has increased more than 1,200 per cent since 1900, Tom Hansen, superintendent of schools at Carlsbad, N.M., later pointed out.

Dr. Paul Misner, president of the National School Facilities Council, predicted that American education will undergo unprecedented toughning up and improvement within the next decade,

To Share Our Life

Lesson for December 22, 1957

THE baby Jesus we have been seeing everywhere these days His picture is on the greeting cards, songs about him are sun (mechanically for the most part on every street. Fresh candles are lighted in front # of his statue in many churches. Luke 2 is memorized in a thousand Sunday schools. Now that is about all some people ever see or think about Jesus. He is the baby we have to Dr. Foreman hear about once a year.

Christians know better than this. Indeed Christians, from very early times, never saw only a baby in the manger at Bethlehem. Here is no ordinary child, made romantic by the hardships of his birth. He is more than a symbol and example of the sweetness and helplessness of all babies in the world.

"Who for Us Men Became Man"

The Child of Bethlehem is the Event of all time. For this child is the Son of God made man, What men have often longed for, what poets have dreamed, what every man needs, here it is . . . only not as we expected. What we want is a God who is near us, nearer than heaven, nearer than Mount Olympus, yes nearer than the nearest temple. If possible-and who dared it could be?-we want God in human form. But what we might have expected is a very grand human figure, some super-man, born to power and majesty. What God has sent us is quite different: just a baby. A baby who cannot talk nor walk nor live without help, a baby born to displaced persons in the poorest of circumstances, with no very bright future likely. Yes. this is He. When God became man he came all the way. He came to share our life.

Sharing Struggle

Theologians say that Christ had a human "nature" and a divine "nature." The Bible seldom if ever uses such language. The New Testament just calls Jesus "He." Jesus himself called himself Son of God; he also called himself a man. (John 8:40.) The Nicene Creed, one of the most ancient and widely used creeds of the church universal, says that the Son of God 'was made'' (i.e. became) man We can make this clearer to our minds if we simply say that Jesus shared our life. He shared it to the full, he identified himself with mankind. He shared the circumstances and the conditions under which all men live. We said just now that a baby born as Jesus would have no rosy future; and this was true of Jesus. His life was one of constant struggle. In his boyhood it must have been a struggle with poverty; as he grew older he had to wrestle with temptation, with misunderstanding and

Sharing Suffering

Possibly not all human life is a struggle; but there is no man with lifelong exemption from suffering. We know Jesus suffered on the cross; we often forget that he was always a "man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." We do not read that he wept on Calvary; we do know that he wept at the death of a friend. We know the Pharisees hounded him to his death. We forget the times when he was nearly lynched by angry mobs. He knew a kind of suffering which is harder for a sensitive soul than physical pain: suffering of the mind and heart. That his mother misunderstood him, that his brothers did not believe in him, that he "could do no mighty work" at Nazareth, his own home town, because of their stubborn unbelief.

Bearing Sin

One thing Jesus did not share with us: sin. And yet even this he shared in two ways. He always sided with the sinner, so much so that his critics called him "friend of sinners;" and in the end he suffered because of sin. Paul in one place writes, "For our sake he (God) made him to be sin who knew no sin" (II Cor. 5:21). This brings us face to face with the awesome mystery of the Atonement; but as a Scottish minister once said, the reason we do not understand the Cross is not be-cause our minds are dull but be-cause our hearts are too poor to understand love. If the baby in the manger had died then and there, it would have been sad. But only if that baby lived, and grew, and suffered, could the child become Man, giving his matured life a
