Condition Of Curtis Morris Satisfactory

The condition of Curtis Morris, 14 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Morris of Lum's Chapel, who suffered injuries when he was hit by an automobile as he was crossing the highway in front of Cameronumber Co., recently, is reported as satisfactory.

Curtis suffered a broken left leg, back injury and bruises. The accident happened about 9:30 o'clock Wednesday night of last week.

The driver of the car stopped and carried the injured youth to the Payne-Shotwell Hospital, where he has since been confined receiving treatment.

At the time of the accident he lost both his glasses and his hat. His mother, Mrs. Morris, reported to the Leader that the glasses had been found and returned to him and which he is very appreciative.

He said, however, that should anyone find his light colored hat, he would be grateful if they would either take it to the hospital, or they might leave it at the Leader office, and it will be taken to the owner.

It is expected that Curtis will be confined in the hospital a few more days.

SUGAR BOOTLEGGING

Now that the sugar rationing furore is over and we are settled down to getting our half a pound per person per week, all of the talk and discussions which preceded it appear to be a lot of ado about nothing.

The few people who did a little hoarding have owned up and are using up their extra supply, the storekeepers, who worried about how to keep their customers happy now have a clear-cut system to follow, and the discussions over who was being patriotic and who wasn't, so far as their sugar-buying habits were concerned, have ended.

Sugar rationing seems to be working fairly smoothly and problems which still remain will soon be straightened out.

There isn't much question that all people and storekeepers will try to comply strictly with the rationing order—for no one wants to be subject to a possible $10,000 fine and a year in jail provided by the Second War Powers Act for violation of such an order.

But the government is taking no chances with possible violation plans getting a start and has already begun vigorous investigations to nip in the bud any smart "ideas" which may be tried. This being our first taste of rationing, the OPA intends to prove, right from the beginning, that any illicit traffic in rationed articles will be expensive business to those so engaged.

We don't expect that there will be any elaborate speak-easy set-up for doling out illicit sugar, but it is quite possible, unless carefully guarded against, that some of the people who have access to sugar will try to make a profitable "deal" now and then.

The best way to prevent such action by selfish and unpatriotic individuals is for all of us to have nothing to do with anyone who makes any proposition for getting us a little extra sugar on the side. Any person making such an offer is committing a major crime and anyone accepting such an offer is being a party to that crime.

WAR-WINNING SLOGAN

Donald Nelson, head of the War Production Board, has a slogan which probably will be the determining factor in winning this war. His slogan, which he is said to apply to every move he makes, is:

"A year from now—what will we wish we had done today."

If Donald Nelson can get the complete answer to that question today, there is little doubt that a year from now we will have the war well in hand with victory certain.

The more you think about that slogan, the broader its applications become. As far as the war is concerned, it can be applied with equal effectiveness to decisions on production, building of new plants, labor legislation, taxes, price stabilization and the movements of our armed forces. Wrong Steps taken today will be regretted a thousand fold tomorrow and the future of every American depends on people like Mr. Nelson making decisions which time will prove to be the right ones.

By projecting his thinking a year ahead, and looking at today as if he were viewing it in retrospect, Mr. Nelson has an excellent formula for preventing wrong decisions from being born.

In addition to the advisability of this yardstick being adopted by those who are directing our war program, it is probably an excellent one for everyone of us to apply to the part, however small, which we may be able to play.

Are you postponing activities which, a year from now, you will realize would have been of tremendous help if you had started today? Think it over—and keep Donald Nelson's slogan in mind.

Mrs. V. S. Cassel Returns From Visit To Crowell, Texas

Mrs. V. S. Cassel returned to Littlefield Wednesday afternoon of last week from visiting her sister, and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lanier, at Crowell, after being absent over a week.

Mrs. Cassel reports that the Lanier home was completely destroyed in the cyclone, which swept that part of the country, but that they were able to save some household goods, including bedding, and all their clothing. Mr. Lanier owns and operates the James Lanier & Son grocery and hardware business, and his business and the Ferguson Drug were the only establishments who could open the next morning after the storm. Mrs. Cassel said that the Lanier building was a two-story structure and that the family, on their home being blown away, are now living above the store, until the residence can be rebuilt.

On Mrs. Cassel's leaving for Littlefield Mrs. Lanier went to Knox City to visit her brother, E. E. Taff.

Mrs. Cassel said that the Court House in Crowell was condemned, and they moved the records, and County Clerk's office to the second floor of the Lanier building.

Mrs. Crowell stated that it was nothing short of a miracle that there were not many more injured or killed when so much damage was done to the town.

BREAK O'DAY IRON

By Reginald Wright Kauffman

CHAPTER III

SYNOPSIS

A man identified as Joseph Slinn is found drowned in the Hudson river near Albany, N. Y. Slinn was insured by the Protective Life Insurance company, and his beneficiary is a man named B. E. Twombly who lives in Troy. The company's Albany agent, Carlin, identifies the body, and the insurance money is paid to Twombly. But Jerry Glidden is not satisfied. He believes that Slinn was murdered. Convinced that he is right, Jerry goes to Albany. Arriving there he learns that Carlin has left for a vacation in Maine. Jerry then goes to Doncaster, Pa., Slinn's birthplace. He finds an Angela Slinn listed in the telephone directory of the nearby town of Ironburg.

One train more: Ten miles, to Americus. Then a motor bus. Ironburg wasn't a burg; it was a few scattered frame houses, in need of paint, grouped about a general store. Jerry, suitcase in hand, was the first passenger to descend. He hurried through the doorway.

A blackened counter, with barrels of sugar, coffee and dried fruit in front of it; upon it, smoked hams under wire-net covers; behind it, shelves of canned food. One end a cage surrounded and was labeled: "POST OFFICE & PUBLIC TELEPHONE."

Nobody here. "Hello." He turned. Carrying a maulsack, a girl was entering—and such a girl that he marveled how he could have passed her on the porch without stopping to look at her.

Brown hair and eyes, mighty pretty, but—what was especially astonishing in this rustic and old fashioned frame—entirely modern.

Her hair was nicely dressed, in the latest style. Her skirt was short—but not too short. Her stockings were the correct shade. Evidently, there were radios and movies within reach of Ironburg.

Jerry gasped. Angela Slinn? He hoped not!

"Can I help you with that bag?" She laughed. "Nope." Not any verbal "Thank you." Easily she swung the sack into the cage, went around the counter and confronted him. Mighty pretty.

"Well?" "My name's Glidden."

She let the introduction pass without acknowledgment. Nor did she tell him who she was. In fact, she said nothing.

Those little success books didn't cover such emergencies as the present. "I'm here on a sort of vacation," Jerry explained, "and I thought this store would be a good place to get a line on the best hotel."

"The best? There's only one, and it's got exactly six bedrooms without a bath." She pointed out of the window to a dejected hostelry across the way, fallen into permanent melancholia. "You couldn't have missed it."

All very fine, but not business. He therefore said: "Thank you—Miss Slinn."

She shot him a quick glance—no more. "I haven't often heard that name," he persisted.

"No?" "It doesn't suit you."

"Nothing does. I'm hard to please."

She turned her back abruptly. She went into the cage, emptied the sack of its scanty contents and began to sort letters.

She seemed to have forgotten, not him especially, but everything except this occupation. Yet rudeness had no part in her manner; her action simply announced that, there being work to do, it must be done.

Glidden had no recourse save to go; after all, what you couldn't find out about a village's inhabitants at that village's hotel must be scarcely worth the seeking.

So, though he felt somewhat like a defeated candidate on the day after election, he picked up his suitcase and left. As, however, he climbed the hotel steps, the charm of that store girl pulled him around.

Another person, on the point of entering the store, stood looking at him in turn.

The sun, being opposite to where it had risen, bathed in level, blood-red rays a squat, solid, large boned and big muscled woman of middle age and long acquaintance with toil.

Sunbonnet, mother Hubbard, brogans—no urban modernity about her, at all events. The sunbonnet shaded her broad face, but among its shadows played two restless greenish flames; her eyes.

The woman knocked out a corn-cob pipe against a pillar of the store porch. Could she be that girl's mother? Old enough.

"I'm a fool," Jerry concluded. "The phonebook gave two names. This older one's the postmistress, of course. It's queer how nobody gets a name that fits in this world."

The peach is Angela Slinn for sure.

The peach is Angela Slinn for sure, and here's her boss, Rose Walker.

He tried to stroll nonchalantly into the darkened hotel office and as nonchalantly hire a room that overlooked the post office—he meant the turnpike.

"And who's your friend Sunbonnet Sue glowering at you from the store steps?" he inquired, merely by way of making talk.

The proprietor craned a cross-hatched neck. "Oh, that there?" he mumbled, pulling a drooped mustache that was white where it wasn't stained by tobacco juice. "That there's Miss Angela Slinn."

"WHAT? That one?" It was a relief to find that the pretty girl hadn't the ugly name. Host Hassler of the local hotel smiled knowingly.

"You're vonderin' about the ozer. I seen you come out o' her store. Well, efferbody likes the looks o' Rosie."

Jerry was wondering about Miss Walker. He knew that his interest ought to center on this Slinn woman, but he was quite content to hear whatever his loquacious landlord would tell of the younger person.

It had to do, more or less, with that ore mine which, at a distant and happier day, gave Ironburg its name. Merrily launched by a firm of Philadelphia promoters, the Break O' Day Iron Company—people around here seemed to like the morning—started with a yield plentiful and high grade. Then the Philadelphians quietly unloaded, and Phineas Walker, a rich man for those times, used nearly all his fortune to buy in.

"I can guess the answer," said Jerry.

Precisely. The quality of the ore became useless for industrial purposes. The mine was flooded, too; a mysterious lake appeared, bottomless, folks said, without inlet or outlet. Then the inevitable, a receivership with nothing to receive except Walker's beautifully engraved stock certificates, and no money to redeem them. Walker died of a broken heart.

"So your pretty postmistress is his daughter?"

"Granddaughter. An orphan, inheriting a practical head from her mother. When she grew up, there was just enough money to buy the store, and she bought it. 'Congressman Plinius, down to Doncaster, got her the p.o. She's a smart girl; she's doin' fine . . ."

Hassler wandered on to other and less interesting topics; hard hotel times, the heat. This was the district's driest summer in thirty years.

His guest pulled himself up short. What was the success maxim? "The boss' business is your business." Especially when he's trying to fire you! "What," asked Jerry, "about this Slinn woman?"

"Oh, Angie just helped Rosie 'tend store now an' then. Lived, rent free, in a Walker shack out around that old ore mine."

"Does Mrs. Slinn—"

"Miss. Anyways, so she calls herself. And then jes' look at her."

Jerry couldn't, luckily, as Angela Slinn had gone indoors. But he quite realized she wasn't the sort men marry.

"Lives alone?"

"Nopody else'd live there. It's awful desolate like. Jes' that there mine vis a lake in it visout a bottom. Ain't anuzzer house for a mile around. Angie's got a kitchen garden, but it dakes her to farm it."

"Any relations?"

"Noffer heard tell o' none. She don't belong here. Ve don't know vere she's from, she's that close mouthed. She talks like Rosie or you"—Hassler consulted the register that Jerry had just signed, the first arrival in two months—"or you, Mr. Glidden—and she kin swear like a motorman."

"When did she come here?"

"Fife year' ago—mebbie six."

Of course there was not one chance in a thousand that this creature should turn out to be a near relative of the deceased Joseph. In his application for insurance he had written himself down as an only child, and any discovered lies in that application would invalidate the policy.

Nevertheless, there appeared to be some mystery about her. She was a Slinn; Doncaster, where Joseph had said he was born, lay not too far away, and, finally, she was the sole clue to information obtainable.

Jerry must somehow find out more about the dead man before he took up the beneficiary's trail. For this reason alone had he come to Pennsylvania.

So the store was not long open next day before he entered it. Only its brown-eyed proprietor was present.

"Yes?"

"Good morning. I—I was looking for Miss Slinn," stammered Jerry, "and now they tell me she's—she's the other one."

"Not here."

"Do you know where I can find her?"

"At her place, I guess. She's always there when she isn't here, and she's only here when she feels like it."

"Do you happen to know whether she ever lived in Doncaster?"

The girl behind the counter looked at him sharply. "Is this an unexpected inheritance or just an old bill?"

"It isn't either."

"Then you'd better ask Angie." Jerry inquired the way and wished it took longer to tell.

"Can't I sell you something?" Miss Walker demanded.

What could he buy? He did want to prolong this interview.

"I got in some first rate peppermint stick last night."

She was laughing at him. He left her and started out to pay a call on Angela Slinn.

A cloudless day and peaceful. The empty turnpike ran between woodlands where the oaks and button-woods were green, and where the blackbirds sang.

Jerry turned off along a designated bypath. It had been a road, but it was overgrown, and the trees met above it. For an hour he followed it, then came out upon a landscape of an entirely new character.

Desolate, Hassler had used the right word—desolate even under this summer sun.

Between black hills spread a wide tableland. Something over there that looked like long abandoned quarries. Here were the last ruins of a few frame houses, too dilapidated to invite a rat.

No other token of human habitation save one distant hut scarcely better than these.

The other hut stood perhaps half a mile off, beside a thick plantation of pines, the only trees that could take root here.

Angela's house was roofed by tarpaper, and its sides were made of laths and clay. How anybody could inhabit it during the winter, Glidden couldn't surmise. It was about thirty feet long by twenty wide, had no windows and contained, certainly, not more than one room.

As Jerry walked across to it, not a sign of life was visible.

There was, as Hassler had said, a kitchen garden around it—a rather ailing kitchen garden—and a stovepipe issued from one wall and mounted skyward.

But nobody was in the garden, and no smoke rose from that improvised chimney.

There was a door, of sorts, on the farther side. He tried it. It even had some kind of lock, and the lock was in use.

"Now then," said Jerry ironically, "remember what Mr. L. is always preaching: 'Courtesy counts.'" He lifted a fist and knocked as gently, as he knew how.

Notes From County Agent

This is to again remind you of the grasshopper mixing station that is in operation in Littlefield, located at the CCC Camp. Every farmer who has grasshoppers, poison them now before you get too busy in the field and before the 'hoppers have a chance to do any damage.

Most of the poison mash will be spread by hand. If you have quite a bit of poison to spread, or will work at it on several different days it would be a good idea to wear rubber gloves. If the poison stays on your hands very long at a time it will cause the fingers to get sore around the finger nails.

Sticktite fleas around farm buildings are often a source of annoyance and sometimes cause some damage, particularly to poultry. The best way to get rid of fleas is to clean dirt floors and get all of the loose dirt raked away. The ground should then be sprayed with a strong disinfectant solution, or a strong solution of common salt may be used. You cannot get rid of fleas until you destroy the breeding place and that is usually loose dirt.

Poultry that have fleas on them can be treated with vaseline or some other type of grease on the comb and head parts.

During the past year the United States Department of Agriculture purchased more than seven and one-half billion pounds of farm commodities most of it going to other countries under the lease-lend program. Meat, dairy and poultry products comprise more than half of this total. Food purchases now are running at the rate of more than one hundred million pounds a week.

At that rate of purchase we can all realize that it will take an awful lot of food to supply the demand. The farm people have the responsibility of producing all the food commodities that they can. We hope that you have accepted that responsibility and are doing what you can in the production of food.

Volunteer sudan and cane will not qualify toward meeting your 20 per cent minimum conserving acreage. The regulations say that these crops must be seeded when they are to be used in this manner.

Eighty-three wheat farmers of Lamb County went to the polls Saturday, May 2, and voted for Wheat Marketing Quotas on the 1942 wheat crop. Seventy-three votes were cast in favor of marketing quotas and 10 votes against quotas. This makes 87.9 per cent of the votes cast in favor of marketing quotas in Lamb county.

All farmers who have grasshoppers are urged to go to the CCC Camp in Littlefield and secure enough poison for their farm. Grasshoppers are very small now and many farmers probably have them but are not aware of the fact. For maximum results from the poison it should be spread while the mash is still wet and after the temperature has reached 70 degrees. Let's kill them before we get too busy.

President Roosevelt has asked that a human chain system of communication be set up in every state in the nation and every county in the state so that every farm or ranch family in the nation can be reached within a few hours should an emergency make it necessary.

At a meeting in Amherst this week the County Agricultural Victory Council discussed plans for carrying out the wishes of the President. Each Community in Lamb County is represented by a man and woman on the County Agricultural Victory Council. The members of the council will serve as community leaders in their communities, and will appoint several neighborhood leaders in their community. These neighborhood leaders will contact all farmers or ranchers in their neighborhood whenever there is some information that they should have.

By such a system every farm or ranch family in the county can be reached in a very short time if every community and neighborhood leader will function and do their part. necessary but during times such as of communication may not seem necessary but during times such as these we can not tell when it will be needed. We have been asked by the President to set up such a system and it is hoped that every man or woman who is asked to serve as a community or neighborhood leader will do so. By serving as one of these leaders you will be doing a little more to help win the war which is the most important job that has ever confronted the American farmers.

Some of the information that may go out over this communication chain will be any message of emergency nature, information that might help farmers produce more food, feed and fibre, news about diseases and insect infestations. Information can also come back over this chain from the farmers and ranchers to the County Agent's office.

All farmers who have certificates for the purchase of peanuts or who would like to have some peanuts to plant should contact the AAA office so that their orders may be pooled and the peanuts gotten through the office rather than going somewhere else to secure them.

Many small calves are lost each year because of an infection of the naval cord. This loss can be prevented by the applying of tincture of iodine to the naval cord as soon as possible after the calf is dropped.

Things would be much worse if we had to pay income tax on what we thought we were worth.

--AND NOW FOR THE BOOK OF LIFE

May It Show The Record of an Individual Who Has A Full Rich Life Ahead of Him ---

"My country 'tis of thee, Sweet Land of Liberty. . . ." Where but in America, could you find so many boys and girls, young men and women, graduating from public schools and colleges all over the country? Some look forward to more education—some will take up tools—some will start careers—and countless thousands will take up arms for their democracy.

"We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union"—High school students of today are presented with vaster fields of learning than were available to anyone in Washington's time, proof of the fact that Americans are working to make their union more perfect. But Washington was great then, and would be great today—because he could think, perceive, evaluate, and act. He learned more from life than he did from books. So can today's graduates. That from which they graduate . . . a school is intended to prepare them for learning from life.

Great problems lie before the graduates of 1942. To all comes the challenge of a world at war—and a world which must be rebuilt after the war. This is the first and greatest responsibility which rests upon their shoulders.

There also will be other problems which must be overcome before the individual can become truly strong—but every problem affects a national problem . . . for this country's problems are made up of the problems of its people, which converging and diverging make economic and social changes.

" . . . testing whether this nation, or any nation, so conceived and so dedicated can long endure . . . so that government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth . . ." Graduates—the book of life is open before you. May it become a history of continued success for you and for the United States of America, which is you!

Conditions In Burma Described By Anton Man

The following item appeared in the Anton News recently, and since it is interesting and timely, the Leader is publishing it herewith:

Mr. D. R. Frederiksen of route 2, Anton, who spent four years in Burma, during which time he learned quite a lot about the Burmese people. The News requested Mr.

Frederiksen to give us a little story of the country for our readers, which he consented to do. Here is his story briefly stated:

Mr. Frederiksen with his family and other American families entered Burma in 1919 as employees of the Indo-Burma Oil Co., which was a British concern. "Buck" Frederiksen was a small infant at this time and during their four years in Burma he learned to speak the Burmese language fully as well as he did the English, however it has all gone from him now, stated Mr. Frederiksen.

The natives of Burma are the very worst kind of slaves to the British, being without schools or other methods of enlightenment. Not one out of a thousand can read at all. They know nothing at all of our civilization. Their knowledge of the white race has come from the wrong British masters. There are very few American missionaries in this country, and they never get out of the cities, where there is a little more civilization than out in the jungles.

The natives are dirty and filthy, and wholly unprepared for self government. The Japanese will have no trouble in controlling them as they are servile and cowed. However, Mr. Frederiksen took occasion to visit Guam and other American possessions, and he found a better state of affairs. The Americans have set up schools, and are introducing American culture among the natives. He found the natives of those countries over zealous in their loyalty to America. In Burma, the natives never cross the master British. If they do happen to displease them, they fall down on their faces and extend their hands up, begging for mercy.

Government is by the British Military Police, who maintain a form of law and order. The Burmese people have no standard of morality, whatever. However, they are not narcotic addicts, nor drunkards. They do make a kind of toddy from the sap of palm trees which is a mild intoxicant.

Mr. Frederiksen was a driller for the oil company and being in the American Colony had better living conditions by far than could be had by the native people. But, even so, the crows were so thick in Rangoon that they had to put "scare crows" in the windows to keep them away. The flies likewise were so numerous no American can ever imagine just how bad they are.

The country is surveyed in circles, rather than in sections as it is here. In these circles was where they had the oil development. But where these circles came together, there would be small triangles, as circles will not take all the space (as setting three buckets in a triangle will leave a small triangle in the middle). These little triangles belong to the Burmese people. Instead of drilling oil wells on them they dug shafts and carried the oil out in pails, selling it to the British oil companies.

They maintain the family life, after a fashion. Although they have no marriage ceremony nor courtship. The parents will, perhaps, give a girl child away in her infancy. Or if a man sees a female that he wants, he may buy her if she consents to it. This may be done even if she has a "husband." However, the woman or girl gets the money paid. The women and men work side by side, with no difference or preference shown. The women turn the little naked children loose to grow up like livestock.

The religion is that of Buddhism. Certain babies are declared to be Buddha Priests. They never take a wife. They may be identified because they keep their heads shaved and wear a yellow robe. (There are quite a few Hindus in Burma, and they have a different form of religion.) The country is literally spotted with "pegolas." They take the most precious things that they possess and make the pegolas. Upon these pegolas they place an image of Buddha. Then they fall down and worship that image. Twice each year the "poveys," which are religious celebrations, continue for 30 days, during which time the drums beat constantly. When one drummer gives out, another takes his place. During these feasts the bones of any priest who has died is cremated. (His body is laid out at death so the ants and crows can eat the flesh off the bones). The people make many floats of bamboo and paper. These floats are made to resemble elephants, lions, tigers, etc. Then the judges select the best float which is used to haul the ashes of the priests to the favored pegola, where the ashes are stored away to be worshipped.

The principal cities are Rangoon, Prome and Mandalay. Rangoon is the capitol of the country and is a seacoast town. Prome is the railroad center. Mandalay is the mining and oil center. There are many British and other foreigners in these cities. They have some schools, churches and other cultural institutions in them.

Much of the finest timber for furniture manufacture is taken from the forests of Burma. The natives go out into the timber, fell the trees, and assemble them into large rafts as near the Eriwadda River as possible, tying the logs together with bamboo. If the logs are very large, one or two elephants are used to carry them to the place where the rafts are assembled. Those rafts must stay there awaiting a rise in the river sufficient to carry them down stream. The loggers have their cabins built on the rafts and ride downstream with the logs. Sometimes they are three years in getting to Rangoon, where the logs are sawed into fine lumber and sold to the British for "a little of nothing," as Mr. Frederiksen put it. There are no motor vehicles outside the large cities. However, the best way to see those cities is to hire a ricksha, which is a two-wheeled cart, in which the native balances his weight with the weight of the passenger and pushes it on with his legs. They can beat a car anytime in those cities, by dodging in and out, thereby gaining time on a car.

There is no fear of uprising among the Burmese as they are not allowed to have either guns or ammunition. They are just poor, rotten, degraded heathen, with masters who care nothing whatever for them. Mr. Frederiksen feels that after the United Nations have defeated the Axis, the United States and then those poor people will have the same treatment that we accord the Philippines.

National Cotton Week May 15-23

Rural people of Texas will be among the most enthusiastic to celebrate National Cotton Week, May 15-23, because they know the importance of cotton in the economic life of their state and nation, says Mildred Horton, vice director of the A. and M. College Extension Service and a member of the Texas National Cotton Week Committee.

Through the state's 217 county home demonstration and assistant agents, Texas farm families are being urged to emphasize "conservation" of cotton during the absence.

Care of clothing and household cottons is in line with the Victory Demonstrator's war-time pledge which thousands of farm families are making with the Extension Service, Miss Horton, says. One part of the pledge is to "take good care of everything I use—food, clothes, furnishings, equipment, etc."

Mrs. Dora R. Barnes, extension clothing specialist, points out that most cotton materials give long life. During National Cotton Week she will emphasize materials which require little pressing or ironing such as woven "crinkled" materials and woven seersucker . . . materials which are sanforized shrunk and will not shrink out of shape with laundering.

Cotton week clothing which is safe, comfortable, and attractive, is being recommended to women and girls who are taking the place of men and boys on the farm or in war industries. Some of the crease-resistant fabrics excellent for work clothes, are light-weight denims, seersucker, and gabardine.

With paper and linen scarce, Mrs. Bernice Claytor, specialist in home improvement, says cottons are being used more widely in the home. She urges homemakers to use unbleached muslin for household purposes, since this will save bleaching and dyes.

In addition, homemakers will soon be asked to limit their bedding supply to four sheets and four pillow cases per bed, so it is important that their bed linens be given the best of care. One sheet contains enough material to make four pairs of shorts for a man in the army.

"Hellzapoppin" To Be Shown At Ritz Coming Week End

"Hellzapoppin" will be featured at the Ritz Theatre Saturday night, Sunday and Monday.

The story opens on a scene in Hell with Johnson as the devil and Olsen on a swayback. Suddenly the scene changes and a director shouts that they have to have a love story. So they fix up a story which includes Paige, a playwright, and Jane Frazee. Paige is in love with her but his rich pal, Howard, loves her too, so he won't do anything about it. The story within a story resumes and Auer is introduced as a real nobleman pretending to be a fake. He woos Jane but she eludes him and he falls into the clutches of Martha Raye. Olsen and Johnson are trying to fix things so that Paige and Jane can get married and they decide to blitz the show. Their crazy antics turn the show into a hit and a producer buys it and presents a lavish premier.

The cast: Ole Olsen, Chic Johnson, Martha Raye, Jane Frazee, Misha Auer, Catherine Johnson, Robert Paige, Lewis Howard, Nella Walker, and Clarence Kolb. Producer is Jules Levey. Directed by Henry C. Potter.

Farmers Make New Record On Payment Of Bank Loans

Farmers and ranchmen generally are cutting down debts at a more rapid rate than at any time in the history of the land bank system, reported R. L. May, director of the Littlefield National Farm Loan Association upon his return from a conference of representative directors of 19 associations held at Lubbock on April 30, 1942.

This group of directors, meeting with officers of the Federal Land Bank of Houston, reported that farmers' cash is flowing into debt retirement and that the land bank's loans are in the best condition in 10 years. In addition, they said, a reserve fund of approximately $850,000 already has been stored up by land bank borrowers as a cushion against future conditions. The land bank pays interest on funds placed in the "future payment fund" equal to the rate paid by borrowers on their loans.

The directors urged that land values should be appraised on the normal agricultural value rather than according to market trends. This policy helped to prevent wholesale foreclosures during the depression and is equally important now in times of rising prices, they said. It was explained that a farm or ranch family must go through periods of both high and low prices and good and bad yields during the years it spends in paying off a long-term mortgage; this makes the normal production value of the land based on average income a safe guide.

Total land bank and land bank commissioner loans outstanding through these 19 associations represented at this meeting amount to 14,876 for $30,910,851.03.

Every home owner who uses coal is urged to buy next winter's supply immediately. At This Time It Is Our Pleasure and Pride To Extend SPECIAL RECOGNITION to the COTTON GROWERS of Lamb County and The United States

To assure victory for our country and prosperity for the years to follow we would do well to give cotton products our preference when buying goods, for the use of cotton releases silk and woolen products for Uncle Sam's use; and increases the market for our own cotton. In the hands of our cotton growers and consumers lies the fate of America.

Keeping Mediterranean Lifeline Open

This photo was made somewhere in the Mediterranean sea when units of the Italian fleet engaged a British convoy escort on their way from Alexandria to the besieged island of Malta. It shows a British light cruiser throwing out a smoke screen to shield the convoy as another British cruiser elevates her forward 5.25 guns ready to shell the Italian fleet.

Britain's Parallel to Our Squalus

This British submarine, H.M.S. Thunderbolt, is shown returning to her base after a successful foray against Axis shipping in the Mediterranean. The Thunderbolt was formerly the Thetis, which sank during her trials at about the same time the U. S. submarine Squalus met disaster in a test dive. Like the Squalus the Thetis was salvaged, and again like the Squalus it has been taking a heavy toll of the enemies of democracy.

because he has passed the local board tests, or even because he has been ordered to an Army reception center for possible induction, that he will be accepted by the Army."
Registrants who are inducted will be given ample time to return to their homes to adjust their personal affairs within a few days after induction, General Page stated, pointing out that a liberalized policy regarding furloughs for newly inducted registrants has been announced by the War Department.
He said:

"Local boards have today been instructed to attach to the delivery list for each group of prospective inductees the names of those for whom furloughs are recommended, and the Selective Service System has been assured by the War Department that such furloughs will invariably be granted if recommended by the local board."
These furloughs for inducted registrants will begin not later than five days after induction, according to General Page, and will not exceed ten days except that when an inductee lives at a considerable distance from the Army reception center, a leave up to 15 days may be granted.

Arrive on 'Diplomat Swap' Steamer

The Swedish liner Drottningholm, which has been chartered by the United States for use in exchange of American and Axis diplomats, has arrived at Jersey City from Goteborg, Sweden. The vessel will take aboard German and Italian diplomats to Lisbon for swap for American diplomats. A group of children who made the voyage from Sweden are pictured aboard the vessel.

"This new Army policy should prevent any undue hardships to se-lectees who are inducted," General Page said. "In the past there were some cases of hardship under the present system of inducting forthwith selectees who pass their final physical examination at Army reception centers. Some men, expecting induction, had made final disposition of their personal affairs and then were rejected. Others were considerably inconvenienced
after induction while awaiting leave to adjust pressing personal matters.
Now, every prospective inductee can be assured that if he requires reasonable time to return to his home to dispose of his personal affairs, leave will be granted to him within a few days after his induction."

SEEKS ELECTION

My husband has been called to the service of his country and is now in the United States Marine Corps, therefore I am seeking this office.

I feel that I am fully qualified for the office.

It will be impossible for me to make a house to house canvass, because I do not have a car. I will try to see as many as I can.

I will appreciate the consideration of each and every voter of Lamb County, and if you see fit to elect me to this office, I will guarantee you honest, fair, and efficient service as your County Treasurer.

Sincerely, SALINA POTEET DAVIS.

The program for the evening is not completed, according to Supt. Hemphill, who stated that an effort was being made, and it was expected to have an out-of-town speaker.

JOHNNIE LIPPARD

(Continued from Page One) Johnnie by his parents was dated January 18, and arrived about six weeks ago. He intimated in it that he was on the move considerably.

Mr. and Mrs. Lippard received official notice dated Jan. 20, 1942, from the U. S. Navy recently that their son, Johnnie, had been awarded the Silver Life Saving Medal for bravery in rescuing V. E. Jacobson, Machinist's Mate 2nd Class, U. S. Navy, from drowning in shark infested waters of Manila Bay on April 28, 1941.

Lippard and Jacobson, who is 24, and whose home is in West Salem, Ore., were passengers on a Navy Ferry proceeding from Manila to Cavite, P. I., when the latter lost his balance and fell overboard at a point midway between the Manila breakwater and Cavite.

Lippard had been on a leave of absence and was returning to Cavite from Manila when the accident happened.

Jacobson, in falling, struck his head against the hull of the ferry and was unconscious, floating with his head submerged, when Lippard, disregarding personal safety, jumped overboard and with the aid of a life preserver brought Jacobson to a position from which he could be hauled aboard the ferry.

Besides the above information, the official notice of award granted, as sent to Mr. and Mrs. Lippard, under instructions of the Commandant of Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. George Holcomb, contained the following commendation to their son: "Your presence of mind, good judgement and willingness to risk your life in waters infested by sharks was beyond the requirements of your duty, and was the means of saving the life of another member of the Naval Service.

"Your quick action, fearlessness and swimming ability saved the life of Jacobson and were in keeping with the best traditions of the Marine Corps, and merit and receive my high recommendation."

Lippard was born April 13, 1921, at Sudan, Texas.

Jacobson was born February 21, 1917, at Potter, Nebraska. He enlisted December 14, 1935, at Denver, Colo. His mother, Mrs. Florence Jacobson, lives at 1026 Eighth Street, West Salem, Oregon.

Lippard has three brothers and four sisters: Calvin, a senior in Littlefield High School; Sam of Craig, Colo.; D. D. of Marlin, Texas; Mrs. Nancy Lou Salmon of Littlefield; Mrs. Homer Ellis of Seagraves; Mrs. Barr Stevenson of Borger; and Mrs. Earl Taylor of San Diego, Calif.

The EDITOR'S COLUMN

OH, WELL, THERE'S NOTHING LIKE HAVING A FEW IDEAS!

A number of Littlefield men are reported to have given some consideration to the possibility of importing their tire requirements from old Mexico, but, in the midst of this "tiring" subject, one of the group conceived the idea that it might be wise to inquire of some official or semi-official if such a program could be legally effected.

A letter was written to the Eagle Pass Chamber of Commerce, and J. M. Mabe, secretary, replied as follows: "Dear Mr. ... In order to bring tires out of Mexico you must first obtain a permit from your local rationing board. This permit must be sent to Washington and have a permit issued from there permitting the tires to be bought from a foreign country, before you can pass them over at this port, which of course makes it almost impossible to cross tires from Mexico.

"We will be glad to have you come down and pay us a visit."

The foregoing information could be interpreted about as follows:

THE CHILDREN OF THE LITTLEFIELD "TIRE IMPORTERS" PROBABLY WOULD BE GREAT, GREAT GRANDPARENTS BEFORE THE LOCAL GROUP WOULD GET THEIR TIRES, AND BY THAT TIME THERE WOULDN'T BE ANY USE FOR AUTOMOBILE TIRES... EVERYBODY ON THE EARTH WILL HAVE SOME UP-TO-THE-MINUTE MODE OF TRAVEL... SHOOTING THROUGH THE AIR LIKE SUPERMAN, FOR EXAMPLE.

JUST THROWING MONEY AROUND! AND HOW!

During the recent heavy windstorm a young woman emerged from a Morton store with a roll of checks in a pocket of her sweater. The wind snatched the checks from her pocket, blew them in every direction, and in the wink of an eye dozens of men were chasing checks over the streets of the Cochran county city. How many of the checks were lost was not known.

(Credit J. H. Lucas of the Enochs Land Co. with furnishing us the above information. J. H. bears an excellent reputation for veracity... even if he has been in the land business for many years.)

HE KEPT THE GOVERNOR WAITING FOR HIS MORNING NEWSPAPER

Gov. Coke Stevenson found fault with newspaper delivery the other morning. It was raining and the boy who delivers to the executive mansion was a bit late.

"I had to wait until 6 o'clock to get my paper," said Stevenson, who still follows his ranch-country habit of rising early.

A. & M. GRADS TRAINED IN MILITARY SERVICE

Brig. Gen. Frank E. Lowe, U.S.A., chief officer of the Reserve Officers Training Corps, Washington, D. C., will deliver the commencement address to the graduating class at Texas A. & M. College Friday night, May 15.

Significant is the fact that of the 741 men to receive degrees at the May commencement, a total of 565 will receive commissions as second lieutenants in the Officers Reserve Corps and are expected to be called to active duty shortly after graduation. All of them received their military training under the R.O.T.C. program headed by General Lowe and the school again will turn out more commissioned officers for the army than any other institution of higher education in the nation.

From Oklahoma City he will go to San Diego, California, where he will be inducted into the service. Mr. Davis passed the preliminary physical examination at Lubbock on May 9.

Former Resident Dies In Dallas

Holly Davis, 47, formerly of Littlefield, and a resident of Gainsville since 1938, died Wednesday, May 6, in a Dallas hospital, following an illness of about a month.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary E. Davis, of Gainsville; two sisters, Mrs. J. O. Allison of Gainsville, and Mrs. Dodd Fuitts of Lamesa; five brothers, Lavada and Lewis of Gainsville; Pled of Spur; Gene of Sanger; and Pvt. Clyde Davis, whose whereabouts is unknown; and a nephew, Alvin R. Allison of Littlefield.

Funeral services were held in the First Baptist Church at Gainsville Friday afternoon, with burial in the New Hope Cemetery at Gainsville.

Mr. Davis contacted blood poisoning from a bruise he received when he jumped from a truck about a month ago. He apparently was getting along alright when he suffered a heart attack and was taken to the hospital.

Upon receiving word of his uncle's death, Alvin Allison of Littlefield left immediately for Gainsville where he attended the funeral services.

New Salvation Army Officers Arrive

Captain and Mrs. White, of the Salvation Army, arrived last week to carry on the excellent work of Captain Saunders, who because of ill health was forced to take a sick leave and go to Dallas to rest.

Captain and Mrs. White came to Littlefield from the Salvation Army Training College in Atlanta, Ga., where they studied for eight months before they were commissioned on April 27, 1942. Both carry the commission of Captain in the Salvation Army and were appointed to the Littlefield corp when Captain Saunders applied for a sick leave.

Captain White was born near Belfast, Ireland, and moved to Toronto, Canada, about 17 years ago. Two years ago he went to Washington, D. C., where he began to prepare himself for the Training College. There he met Mrs. White who was born in Canada, but has lived in the United States for about fourteen years. They were married in Washington by her father, who is in charge of the Temple Corp of the Salvation Army there, and then went to Atlanta to the Training College in September of 1941.

Captain and Mrs. White are welcomed to Littlefield for they will carry on the fine work which Captain Saunders was forced to leave.

Local Women Attend Luncheon

Mrs. Earl Hobbs was the guest of Mrs. H. W. Wiseman at a Founder's Day luncheon given by the National Honor Fraternity, for teachers, Delta Kappa Gamma, at Amberst last Friday.

A Founder's Day program was given by various members of the fraternity, who read original songs and poems, and held a sandlighting service, in memory of the founders of Delta Kappa Gamma, who have passed on, and honoring those who are living.

The other Littlefield members, Mrs. Addie Spyeke and Miss Marion Short, were unable to attend because of the urgency of school matters.
