A DIVERSIFIED STATE

Texas is America's leading State, because it is a state of diversified products, more than 25 agricultural commodities of commercial importance being produced in the state. Hence it is not a State with a single day.

While farmers in the North, East and West were waiting for Jack Frost to retire, Texas was moving train loads of fruits and vegetables into those countries. Texas shipped the first six months of this year 23,104 car loads of high priced commodities and during the summer months will ship 12,000 car loads of fruits and vegetables, to say nothing of the multiplied thousands of car loads of grain and cotton and cotton products she will ship this fall.

Texas, the first of the year, was ranked by the government as the most prosperous state of the Union. It was at the head of the list because it had marketed more than a billion dollars worth of her diversified products.

No one is sanguine enough to estimate what the State will do this year. With the South Plains rapidly forging to the front, and with big increase in the crop acreage and the very best prospects ever afforded, it would be foolishness to even hazard a guess.

THERE'S A REASON

Some farmers can work 12 hours a day on a piece of land and make a bare living.

Other farmers can work on the same piece of land ten hours a day and make a living and a profit besides.

Some men can take a business enterprise, and not only fail to make a living, but go seriously into debt.

Other men can take the same business, with all its handicaps, and make it profitable.

There's a reason for the difference.

The successful man studies conditions and analyzes suggestions and makes improvements as rapidly as it is possible for him to do so. His returns are in proportion to the activity of his brain.

The failure is slow to change. He doesn't take any stock in new fangled notions. What was good enough for his father is good enough for him. And that's all he gets.

When put to practical use, brains become a valuable asset.

Bobbed hair is doomed. Paris and London have both decreed it shall go and the women of New York are already investing in switches to lengthen out their shorn locks. Why? They say because it is too common and not enough ways to bob the hair to satisfy the elite or to dress bobbed hair for the vanity of the possessor.

The British national debt, if piled up on one pound treasury notes 'tis said would reach an altitude of 4,835 miles; yet that would be a mere mole hill compared to the piling up of the combined debts of country editors.

The Farm Bureau has announced an advance of $70 a bale on cotton. It isn't so many years ago when that was the full price of a bale.

Now is the time for this town to get in line for a state park.

One instance of flirting with death is a fly sitting on a swatter in the hands of a bald headed man.

If there is anything in evolution the probabilities are that Eve had a tiny little fig leaf she called her bathing suit.

After all the girl that uses the least paint usually gets the best husband. Just another blow at fake advertising.

A pink complexion will not always hide the feelings of a girl who is blue from being green with envy.

The defeated candidates who passed out the candy kisses this year to the feminine sex ought to try the real kisses next time; they may prove more effective.

We read the other day where a 125 pound husband administered a sound whipping to his wife whose avidourpois tipped the scales at nearly 400 pounds. Evidently "justice was on our side."

Coming on the heels of the primary the Methodist revival here will furnish some of the defeated candidates an excellent opportunity to crawl under the mourner's bench and repent.

Some of the voters who have been doing a good deal of cussing particular candidates may now have a bitter pill to swallow when they have to vote for some of them in the second primary.

The things that "grow on a feller" ain't always an object of trend... unless it's tobacco or whiskey—or somethin' that flies to his head. It could be—a passel of whiskers—a core of wrinkles or warts, for, the things that grow on a feller must be reckoned as different sorts. . . . But—when it's the habit of savin', or the eatin' of regular meals, or—of takin' one's breakfast at sun-up, no matter how lax he feels! It could be a hunger for readin' or solvin' the problems of life, like raisin' the boys as they should be, or of gettin' along with the wife. . . . It might as well be somethin' noble as somethin' disruptive and bad, for the things that can grow on a feller should render him tranquil and glad! In the capable way of selectin' it's risky to judge with a whisker, for, the idea that grows on a feller, will make him the man that he is.

Pope Goes To Plainview

Mortal Life and Eternity

The longest life is scarcely longer than the shortest if we think of eternity that envelopes both.

Curious Color Changes

All babies have blue eyes when they are born, physicians agree. In some infants pigment granules begin to develop in the iris immediately after birth, and thus they become black or brown-eyed. In others no such pigment formation takes place, and the eyes remain their original color throughout life. The possibility of an adult person's eyes changing their color as a result of mental shock or physical ill-treatment has been discussed by surgeons. "It is common knowledge," says one medical man, "that great hardships may suddenly turn the hair white. The loss of color follows on certain chemical changes, due to disturbances of nutrition, taking place in the tiny particles of coloring matter which gave the hair its tint."

Wonderful Scientific Discovery Is Made By Littlefield Citizen

Great are the wonders of nature! While scientists, and especially evolutionists, have, for more than a hundred years, held to the theory that the bird was evolved from the snake, and, during all this more or less uncertain period been looking for the cross between the cold and warm blooded creatures of this character, it remained for a Littlefield furniture dealer, who, incidentally, has always been a connoisseur of nature, to make the remarkable discovery invaluable to science, and which will go down in the annals of historic histology as one of the greatest contributions of the living age.

A few days ago the Lamb County Mercantile Co., had shipped into their place of business a stalk of bananas, just ordinary good bananas that the kids buy for a nickel a piece, but as they began pulling off the luscious fruit to quiet their inner cravings the ever alert eye of Gus Shaw, superaided by a large pair of tortoise rimmed focals, caught sight of the mystery hidden within.

To the ordinary person it appeared to be nothing more than an ordinary bird's nest, but the keen discerning optic of the discoverer soon realized it was something more than that. Cranking up his mental machinery, he let his cerebral meanderings run way back into the dizzy mazes of the past when his great-great-grandfather was climbing the trees of Central America, cracking the "beans" of the lesser creatures with the coconuts he threw down with the dexterity of an American big league pitcher. Very dimly he recalled the story told him by his early progenitors; that story running something like this:

Several centuries after the firmament had been divided and the heavens had been completely separated from the neither terra firma, along in the carboniferous age, when vegetation grew far more luxuriant than even on the South Plains of Texas, there was one day a peculiar creature seen swimming lazily up from the depths of the ocean toward the placid surface, probably attracted by the strange sunlight which in some manner had rifted through the water's depths. This strange creature was neither a bird nor a fish. True it had gills like a fish and it had a fish's tail though the spread was in a horizontal direction. Where the fins grew out from the body there was a kind of feathery down, and the body and scales, seemed to be covered with short stubby pin feathers.

Attracted by the sunlight this strange creature, with its long snout like proboscis, swam up into the warmer waters of the surface and poked its nose out into the pure fresh air, instinctively drawing it in great gulps into its rudimentary lungs. There was a sudden transformation both of a mental and a physical kind. The primordial instinct of the creature leaped into action, and there came a desire that it might fly up into the face of that great luminous body that was shedding refulgent rays so graciously upon the face of the ocean. It gave a great flap of its short stubby wings and arose from the water, flew a few feet and plunged headlong into the sand of the nearby beach. It lay there for a moment and tried it again. This time covering a somewhat greater distance before it fell. By this time down upon its rough looking body had become dried in the sun's warmth and here and there could be seen a distinctly formed feather sticking out. The stubby wings becoming dried, also presented a more typical formation of the bird, that was yet to come. The body lost its slimy slickness and gained more the fleshy appearance of our modern vertebrates.

This creature was rapidly showing the effects of the evolution that had been going on within it during the centuries past. The effect was magical. Its lungs began to expand, the eyelids became more pronounced, the tail spread out according to natural modern tendency and, the creature reveling in its new found element began to take on lofty aspirations hitherto unknown in the depths of the ocean. In keeping with its new environment it wanted to fly far away into unknown lands. So, after it had rested for a few moments, it gave a great jump; propelling itself from the sand with its stubby tail, wriggling its crude looking body and flapping its cruder looking wings, away it sailed over the tree tops. But just then it flew over a placid lake and caught a glimpse of itself mirrored in the glassy waters below. There flashed through its elementary mind the thought; what a big, gawky, ugly looking creature I am, away up here in the pure blue sky. I have no right to be here; I ought to be back down there in the muddy waters of some dismal swamp. And, thinking thus, it forgot to work its stubby wings and fell headlong into the ooze of a muddy stream it was just then passing over.

But it had felt the call of the heights. The ozone of the atmosphere had already wrought its transforming miracle. It could not stay down, and, wriggling its way through the weeds and moss that lined the banks of the stream, it scrambled out onto the land, lay there a few moments until it had sufficiently dried itself, and again flew away, for miles and miles, finally alighting in a banana tree in South America. (Who knows but what it was the same banana tree from which came the stalk of fruit which the Lamb County Mercantile Co., purchased last week.) At any rate the new order of life began to assert itself, and it began to build its nest around one of the stalks of growing fruit, a habit it has continued to this present day.

However, in this twentieth century the species is very rare most of them having evolved into the birds of beautiful plumage commonly known to the ornithologists of today. Perhaps, for ought any one knows, this specimen may be a delayed one recently coming up out of the ocean, and following the primal instincts of its antecedents, built its elongated nest in this particular bunch of bananas.

While the great scientists of the world have never yet beheld a specimen of this unique creature, yet they are in one accord as to its description. They say it must have either a merganser or avocet type of bill, feet of the scansorial or zygodactyl variety, its skin containing numerous air cavities, its beak horny and covered with a leathery kind of hide, while the breast bone is deeply ridged for the attachment of muscles developed in the later years of its evolutionary period. Incidentally it has been put in the class known as "sauropsiden," which means a cross of the bird with the early reptiles.

Some two months ago a very large and colorful snake was taken from another stalk of bananas bought by this same company, and it is entirely probable that this snake was the great grand-parent of the bird that built the elongated nest found in the banana stalk last week.

At any rate, Mr. Shaw is today being heralded abroad as a discoverer on a par with Balboa, Madame Currie, Edison, Darwin, et al.

METHODIST REVIVAL BEGAN LAST SUNDAY

The Methodist revival meeting began last Sunday morning under favorable auspices, Rev. H. C. Gordon, pastor of the Methodist church at Post City, doing the preaching.

Rev. Gordon is an interesting speaker, void of any sensationalism, but rather sticking closely to the teachings of the Bible.

A tabernacle has been erected just west and adjoining the church building where large crowds are assembling twice a day for the services.

Married Sunday

A. H. Hogan, a prominent business man of Lubbock and Miss Rachel Jared, of Stamford were quietly married Sunday afternoon at the Methodist church, by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Edgar.

The Department of Agriculture says farmers all lost money on their wheat last year. It cost $1.24 a bushel to grow it. The average price was 90 cents. Unless all signs fail, farmers will get all the wheat sold this year and a good deal more. Many sections of the country producing fewer than 15 bushels of wheat to the acre, with 15 or and fertilizer costing what they do, it is hard to see how wheat can pay, even at $1.24. The Department plan is to force the price to $1.50. How many votes would that be worth?

If farmers have any wheat unsold from the last year—they usually have none when the price goes up—let them hang on to it. And if they are wise they will hold for high prices the wheat now being threshed.

When the really big people want wheat to go up, as they do now, it goes up. They have the power to make it go. It is not like one individual, professional wheat gambler, or little pool, trying to fight the wolves of the "short side."

Other grains, corn especially, and cotton and stocks, will travel upward with the wheat. What Republican victory, BIG VICTORY, demands is a prosperity boom. You'll have it. Readers may remember that this writer, when cotton was below 25, announced that it would travel up to 45. It did, moving steadily and higher than 35. What the big fellows want really happens.

A little while ago we were begging England to make room for our soldiers in her ships, and paying English shipping companies first cabin rates for less than steerage accommodation for American soldiers sent over to help England and France.

But all that seems to be forgotten.

Dr. E. Lyman Flak, scientific authority, says "Alcohol is a liability." Tests prove that "moderate drinkers do not live longer than total abstainers." That's interesting and important.

However, those on the other side of the fence say "Mere LENGTH of life is not the important thing. It doesn't matter so much how LONG you live, as how EFFICIENTLY you live."

The younger Pitt, for instance, undoubtedly drank himself to death. But while he lived he kept Napoleon Bonaparte out of England. And that was more important to Englishmen than having him live to be one hundred and fifty would have been. Again, it may be said that if he HAD drunk only water, he might have been twice as good a Prime Minister in addition to living to be a hundred.

About these things we, as yet, know nothing.

While you are sleeping, flares for the post office are crossing the continent, guided by "light patches" blazing with lights of many million candle power. Eventually, of course, that lighting will be cheap. It is only a question of power, of borrowing from the sun in the daytime enough energy to duplicate sunlight 'ably at night.

Postmaster General New is to be congratulated on his excellent work in developing the aerial mail delivery. What he does for a greater mail delivery, while most important, is of far less value than his admirable work in developing the American flying machine and American fliers.

As the new settlers keep coming the cattle are gradually forced out. This week the last branding is being done in the old Sod House pasture. About 200 calves and yearlings, the last to wear the mashed O signature, and this branding was one on land already sold.

Before another year rolls round the land of this pasture will have passed into other hands, and the last cow to roam these prairies will have gone into oblivion.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO CONSTITUTION

RELATING TO GRANTING OF CONFEDERATE PENSIONS

Senate Joint Resolution No. 10
Proposing an amendment to Section 51 of Article 3 of the Constitution of the State of Texas to provide that the Legislature may grant pensions to Confederate soldiers, sailors and their widows, who have been citizens of Texas since prior to January 1, 1910, providing that all soldiers, sailors and their widows eligible under the provisions hereof shall be entitled to be placed upon the rolls and participate in the pension fund created hereunder; levying a tax of seven ($0.07) cents on the one hundred ($100.00) dollars valuation of property in this State for the payment of such pension, providing that the Legislature may reduce the rate of pension for such purposes, fixing the time for the election to be held on such amendment and making an appropriation to pay the expenses thereof.

Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Texas:

Section 1. Section 51 of Article 3 of the Constitution of the State of Texas shall be amended so as to hereafter read as follows:

Section 51. The Legislature shall have no power to make any grant or authorize the making of any grant of public money to any individual, association of individuals, municipal or other corporations whatsoever, provided, however, the Legislature may grant aid to indigent or disabled Confederate soldiers and sailors, who came to Texas prior to January 1, 1910, and to their widows, in indigent circumstances and who have been bona fide residents of this State since January 1, 1910, and who were married to such soldiers or sailors prior to January 1, 1910, and to indigent and disabled soldiers who under the special laws of the State of Texas during the war between the States served in organizations for the protection of the frontier against Indian raiders or Mexican marauders and to indigent and disabled soldiers of the militia of the State of Texas who were in active service during the war between the States and to the widows and such soldiers who are in indigent circumstances and who were married to such soldiers prior to January 1, 1910, provided that the word "widow" in the preceding lines of this Section shall not apply to women born since the year 1861, and all soldiers and sailors and widows of soldiers and sailors eligible under the above conditions shall be entitled to be placed upon the pension rolls and participate in the distribution of the pension fund of the State under any existing law or laws hereafter passed by the Legislature, and also to grant aid for the establishing and maintenance of a home for said soldiers and sailors, their wives and widows and women who aided in the Confederacy under such regulations and limitations as may be provided by law, provided the Legislature may provide for husband and wife to remain together, in the home. There is hereby levied in addition to all other taxes heretofore permitted by the Constitution of Texas a State ad valorem tax on property of seven ($0.07) cents on the one hundred ($100) dollars valuation for the purpose of creating a special fund for services in the Confederate army and navy, frontier organizations and the militia of the State of Texas, and for the widows of such soldiers serving in said armies, navies, organizations or militia; provided that the Legislature may reduce the tax rate herein levied, and provided further that the provision of this Section shall not be construed so as to prevent the grant of aid in cases of public calamity.

Sec. 2. The foregoing Constitutional Amendment shall be submitted to a vote of the qualified voters of the State at an election to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1924, at which all voters shall have printed or written on their ballots: "For amendment of Section 51 of Article 3 of the Constitution authorizing the Legislature to grant aid to Confederate soldiers, sailors and their widows who have been a resident of this State since January 1, 1910," and "Against amendment to Section 51 of Article 3, of the Constitution, authorizing the Legislature to grant aid to Confederate soldiers and their widows."

Sec. 3. The Governor is hereby directed to issue the proclamation for said election and have the same published as required by the Constitution and laws of this State, and the sum of five thousand ($5,000.00) dollars or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby appropriated out of the general funds of the State not otherwise appropriated for expenses of publications and elections thereunder.

Approved, March 20, 1923.
