LITTLEFIELD BAND RE-ORGANIZED

WILL ATTEND WEST TEXAS C. OF C. MEET

Monte Bowron is Director; Former Officers Re-elected

Monte Bowron, former director of the Littlefield band, met with 14 Littlefield musicians at the City Hall Monday night and re-organized the local band.

Dr. Ira E. Woods, president of the local chamber of commerce, met with the organization and discussed possible plans for financing the organization.

To Attend W. T. C. C. Convention
Plans are being made to send the band to the annual convention of the West Texas chamber of commerce which meets in Big Spring next month. The band is also planning to accompany local business men on a series of good will trips in the near future.

A discussion was held on the possibility of the band sponsoring a dance and play or musical program to raise funds for the trips; however, no final decision on the steps to be taken was made.

To Stage Membership Drive
A motion was made and carried that former officers of the band continue to serve in the new organization. A membership committee was appointed with hopes of securing a membership of at least 25 members. Monday and Thursday nights were the dates set for rehearsals.

The local postmaster will inspect Route 2 Thursday.

F. E. Beard, who has been ill for the past two weeks suffering from rheumatism, is slightly improved. He caught cold the night the Beard home was destroyed by fire, from which he developed flu, and then rheumatism.

LOCAL GOLFERS LOOSE TO SLATON IN OPENING MATCH

TO MEET BROWNFIELD HERE SUNDAY, APRIL 16

A team of 11 Littlefield golfers was defeated by the Slaton club in their first match in the South Plains Golf tournament Sunday afternoon by a score of 8 to 3.

The match was hardly so one-sided as the score might indicate, it was reported. Six of the matches were lost one up, on the 18th or 19th green. Neal Duffy, of the Littlefield club took a 79 for the lowest score of the day.

JUNIOR CLASS TO PRESENT PLAY TUESDAY EVENING

The Junior class of Littlefield high school will present its annual play at the high school auditorium, Tuesday evening, April 11, at 8 o'clock.

Madame Majesty will again show that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach. The Mrs. Jones of the play is the Madame Majesty of all cooks past, present and future. The keynote of the play is Spring, when all thoughts turn to love and salads.

The cast includes a lazy colored valet and a colored maid who has all the elements of a volcano, one delicious flapper, one young sheik with a John Barrimore temperament, one young woman who resolves never to marry. Scramble these together in a cozy house in the country. Add a modern business man who loves quietness and nature, his wife who loves everybody but her husband, his mother-in-law who loves nobody but her allowance. Mix with misunderstandings, quarrels and tears, and then add an Englishman who sees a joke in everything even if a little late, one made musical genius, and last but not least an attractive, refined and understanding cook.

This delightful recipe will be sure to please you when served with sprigs of elopement, thrills, fun and suspense at the high school auditorium, Tuesday evening.

Nicknamed! that's what happened

THE contest for a name and slogans for Conoco's new gasoline is over. The winning name and slogans have been selected and awards made to the contestants listed here.

More than half a million good friends tried sincerely to help us, and we are grateful to all of them for the names and slogans sent us, each of which had a careful reading and consideration.

Even though we have selected and paid for a splendid name, we find we cannot use it or any of the many hundreds of good names submitted.

Here is what happened: Personality always wins a "nickname." We never thought of that in our anxiety to get a good name for an outstanding gasoline. Bronze was used as a color to make this new gasoline distinctive and to protect our customers. It was liked by everybody—they, you, everybody called it Conoco Bronze.

Therefore, conforming with contest rules, we are using a name of our own creation, the name used in all the contest advertisements—"Conoco Bronze"—even though it is not the name for which we paid $5,000.

Each user of Conoco Bronze gets a perpetual prize of instant starting, lightning pick-up, greater mileage and power—for it is a great gasoline.

SYNOPSIS

When Joyce opened her eyes one morning to see a fruit-laden orange from the end of the luxurious porch where she lay in bed, she couldn't decide what had happened to her, for the last thing she remembered was a skidding taxicab Chicago on a sleeting November night. And when she saw the circlet of diamonds on her wedding finger and a man who called her Frills, she bid her an affectionate goodbye before leaving home for a hurried business trip, warning her to be careful after her fall from her horse the day before, she was even more puzzled. The gorgeous house that was identically her home, the faint brown lines on her fingers—she had never picked—and the initials on her toilet articles, F. L. P., added to her bewilderment. But—"it's heavenly," she said. "I'd be perfectly happy to spend whole day right here."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Who was this man? What did he expect from her? He was older than Neil Packard, his eyes—older, and wiser. His thick eyes had heavy, drooping lids and his mouth a slightly one-sided smile to the full lips. The nose was straight and clean cut, his chin narrow, while, like Neil, his face was only tanned. He was dressed in a tuxedo and had an unmistakable air of smartness about him. "I called up while you were asleep," he went on, pulling out a silver cigarette case, "did Roxie tell you? This morning." Without taking his eyes from her, he put two cigarettes between his lips and lighted them expertly, both from the same flame. Extinguishing the match with a quick flick of his hand, he offered her one of the cigarettes. From his automatic pocket, it was plain that this was an accepted procedure. "I... I don't care for any—now,"

AFTER 40 bowel trouble

Constipation may very easily become chronic after forty. And any continued constipation at that time of life may bring attacks of piles and a host of other unpleasant disorders.

Watch your bowels at any age. Guard them with particular care after forty. Whenever they need any help, remember a doctor should know what is best for them.

"Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin" is a doctor's prescription for the bowels. Tested by 47 years' practice, it has been found thoroughly effective in relieving constipation and its ills for men, women and children of all ages. It has proven perfectly safe even for babies. Made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients, it cannot gripe; will not sicken you or weaken you; can be used without harm as often as your breath is bad, or when your tongue is coated; whenever a headachy, bilious, gassy condition warns of constipation.

faltered Joyce, making no move to take the cigarette and surreptitiously attempting to push her chair farther back, away from him. He was so close that it seemed to her he must be able to look right through her eyes and read her confused thoughts.

"For Heaven's sake, Frills, what's the matter? Better smoke; your nerves need steadying. How do you feel?"

"Well, I have a headache, naturally... and I feel sort of shaken up," replied Joyce, dropping her eyes before his ardent gaze.

"You're lucky it's not worse," he remarked forcefully, "what you need is a good stiff drink right now, and I'm going to give it to you. Got some real Canadian rye here, some Jake Townsend got me." He drew out a large silver flask, unscrewed and filled the top and handed it to her.

"Joyce was aghast to find she could not struggle free from his grip."

She accepted it without protest, silently. Perhaps it would help steady her nerves.

Joyce smiled an embarrassed acknowledgment and gulped the liquor down hastily.

"Feel better?" he inquired, still watching her closely. "Lord, Frills, I was in a torment till I found out you weren't seriously hurt! If Neil doesn't take Fire Queen away where you can't get at her, I'm going to do it myself. That beast ought to be killed, and you know it. If you weren't such a stubborn little devil, you'd admit it."

Joyce now knew without doubt that this man was "Mait." His assured tone sent a tremor of apprehensive terror through her.

"Did Neil get away this morning?" he asked, flicking ashes from his cigarette.

"Oh, yes."

"I was afraid he might cut out the trip on account of your accident, and do us out of our bit. You'll be all right to go with the crowd Wednesday?"

Joyce's heart sank. Go where? "Oh, no, I can't... I... don't feel up to going anywhere..." she answered quickly.

Frank perplexity mingled with real alarm swept over the man's face. "Judas, you act queer this morning! Never knew you so quiet... so queer."

Joyce was thinking desperately, "I must get rid of him. I can't stand much more of this sort of thing... I've got to do something quick. I'll make use of a little 'temperament,' I guess."

She jumped to her feet and exclaimed, "Oh, let me alone! Can't you see I'm sick? And if you don't like it, you can... you can..." she faltered, her burst of courage evaporating suddenly, and she turned toward the door, her one thought to escape.

"I can go to hell," supplied Maitland. He laughed, without rancor, and looked relieved. "Fine! That sounds more like you, darling."

He followed her with long strides into the living room. Joyce, confident now that he understood he had been dismissed and was about to leave, turned and held out her hand to him.

Instead of taking it however, he came close to her and swept her into his arms. "Listen, sweetheart! I'll come tonight—up through the garden..." Between the rapidly muttered words, his kisses fell on her neck and face with scorching touch and ardor.

Joyce was aghast to find she could not struggle free from his grip.

At last, her unresponsiveness and her feeble efforts to free herself seemed to reach his consciousness. He lifted his head to gaze inquiringly at her. His eyes were humid; his hands some face moist and flushed.

"Let me go!" gasped Joyce, taking advantage of his slightly relaxed hold to pull her arms out from under his. Putting her hands against his shoulders, she gave him such a suddenly violent push that she broke his hold. He stared at her in blank amazement at the unexpected repulse, then a shadow crossed his face. "Frills, something's happened to you. Has Neil? ... It is Neil? Tell me what it's all about!"

Joyce backed to the door, fighting for self-control. "Let me alone! Don't touch me... go away—" She was almost sobbing.

"But, sweetheart, I... can't understand it. Don't you love me? What have I done? Or is it Neil? Has he been—"

Without answering, Joyce fled upstairs, her knees trembling under her. The very force of her aversion, however, took her to the front window, and, peeping out from behind the curtain, she watched Maitland getting into a long gray sport roadster outside the door. He glanced up and saw her, Joyce dodged back, angry at having been seen, but not before she caught the wide confident smile on his face and the wave of his hand toward her.

Then she ran into the big bedroom, and shut and locked the door. "Oh dear! What am I going to do? Well, next time I'll know enough to keep at a distance and not give him a chance to grab me that way!"

She was interrupted by a knock. At first, she decided to pay no attention. Then, merely to get away from her own disturbing thoughts, she hastily opened the door.

Roxie stood there, holding out a yellow envelope. "Telegram for you, Mrs. Packard."

"Oh? Oh, thank you," said Joyce taking it. When she had torn it open apprehensively, dreading to encounter further complications, Joyce read: "HOW ARE YOU PLEASE WIRE ME HOTEL BLACKSTONE LOVE NEIL." It was evidently sent enroute for it was headed Sacramento.

"He's much nicer than Mait!" she thought impulsively.

What should she telegraph? She sat down at the desk and considered. Then, picking up a pencil and scrap of paper, she finally wrote: "Everything fine. Don't worry. Take care of yourself. Love, Frills." "I could use another word. That's only nine, and my thrifty New England soul does hate to waste anything. Shall I say 'Much Love'? I'll be the telegram will be different enough from what he expected without that. Now, how does one send it? Telephone it? Or have the chauffeur, if there is one, attend to it?"

She finally decided to telephone the message. Scarcely had she hung up the receiver than the bell rang. She listened in and heard as before Roxie's calm answer.

"Hull, Roxie, can I speak to Frills?" drawled a feminine voice.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Emery, but she gave orders she didn't feel up to answering the 'phone today."

"Is that right?" with an incredulous note in the voice. Look here, Roxie, go and tell her I'm on the wire, will you? Ross and Ed and Ethel and I want to come over after dinner..."

Joyce shuddered. Ross and Ed and Ethel! Whew! Four new ones at a blow. Who were they?

When Roxie appeared, Joyce said, "Please tell Mrs. Emery I have a headache and I don't feel like seeing any one for a day or two."

She smiled with a touch of malice when she heard Mrs. Emery's remark to Roxie. "Say, Roxie, honest, did Frills say that? Has Doc been in today to see her?... Frills is sure sick when she won't see the gang."

Joyce set her lips indignantly at this further evidence of the unknown Mrs. Emery's familiarity with her affairs. She was glad that Roxie answered with obvious acidity, "No, ma'am."

"I like Roxie," she decided gratefully.

It all began to seem to Joyce like a species of fantastic game. How long could she hold off these unknown friends? With the one important exception of Maitland, the points had so far been in her favor. With care and good luck she might continue to win, until there came the move which would require her utmost skill—the return of Neil Packard.

Her restlessness gradually became more than mental. She found her hands moving nervously, the fingers rubbing together automatically, or picking up objects aimlessly. When she sat down it was impossible to keep her body still for more than a moment at a time. She realized a craving in her for something—without knowing what it was.

When Roxie appeared to ask whether she wished dinner, she gave an affirmative answer, adding that she would like it served upstairs, and that she was not at home to any callers.

"Excitement must make me hungry," thought Joyce later as she sat before the attractive dinner which Roxie brought to the boudoir and arranged on a small round table. "Anyhow I'm not so far gone with shock that I can't appreciate good food when I taste it."

When the sun had disappeared darkness came on rapidly—not with the soft lingering twilight in the East. Going out on the sleeping porch, Joyce caught her breath with delight at the brilliance of the stars in that clear deep blue velvet of the night sky. There seemed to be more than she had ever seen before, closer together and brighter. The entire sky was powdered with stars. She could plainly see the scalloped line of the distant mountains against the firmament, and beyond the garden the blossoming fruit trees spread a carpet of soft white, faintly shimmering in the starlight. Not a building, not an artificial light, emptiness spread around her like a pool of fathomless still water, lonely, awe-inspiring.

Joyce sat there until she discovered that the night air was actually cold, a surprising change from the hot sun of the daytime, and she returned to the house.

At ten-thirty Joyce was still so wide-awake that she had no desire to go to bed, but a feeling of restlessness swept over her again, and she could no longer sit still in front of the fire.

"It must be safe to go downstairs now... Think I'll sneak out to the kitchen and look for something to eat."

She found the lower part of the house in total darkness, but remembering the cubistic floor lamp just inside the living room door, she fumbled for it and successfully pulled the chain. This gave her light enough to find the kitchen.

When she had finished eating Joyce tried the back door and found it locked. Then, before she went upstairs again, she made the round of all the windows and doors on the lower floor.

When she was in bed, Joyce lay tense for some time, nervously sure she would never go to sleep. She could not have lain awake long, for when she woke to broad daylight, Joyce had no recollection of a sleepless vigil in the dark.

She felt so much better that her courage went up with a sudden leap. There was a quality about the brilliant sunshine and clear air which sent a thrill of pleasurable excitement through her. The prospect of the coming problems stimulated instead of disheartening her. Today she would play the role of Mrs. Neil Packard more convincingly...

"FAITHLESS" AT PALACE THEATRE TONIGHT, FRIDAY

Bankhead and Montgomery Are Newest Screen Lovers

Introducing Tallulah Bankhead and Robert Montgomery — Hollywood's newest combination of screen lovers. They appear together for the first time as co-stars of "Faithless," which will be shown at the Palace Theatre tonight and Friday night.

Miss Bankhead was borrowed from Paramount to play the feminine lead in this drama of the penniless rich, based on a story by Mildred Cram. It is her first engagement away from the studio which brought her from the London stage to screen stardom.

Best Suited As Playmate

To add luster to the occasion, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer selected Robert Montgomery for the jaunty hero of the story. Montgomery recently appeared opposite Marion Davies in "Blondie of the Follies." He has also played leading man to Norma Shearer, Greta Garbo and Joan Crawford, and stood forth in his studio's opinion as the personality best suited as a "playmate" for the exotic Miss Bankhead.

This combination brings together two stars who suggest in the public mind the sense of smartness which the story of "Faithless" requires. It is a romantic tale of two young members of the "idle rich" who become stepchildren of the depression, and find themselves suddenly struggling in the whirlpool of present-day economic adversity.

Good Supporting Cast

A talented cast supports the stars. Included are Hugh Herbert, Maurice Murphy, Louise Classer Hale, Anna Appel, Lawrence Grant and Henry Kolker. The picture was directed by Harry Beaumont, who has proved himself an expert on dramas of modern youth with such hits as "Dance, Fools, Dance," and "Unshamed."

Miss Bankhead displays a variety of elaborate costumes designed for her by Adrian. Pretentious New York and Florida backgrounds in the picture were created by Cedric Gibbons, one of Hollywood's foremost scenic designers.

White, who was killed at Spur, August 1, 1931, when his car went into a deep ditch.

Mr. Gowdy will go to Austin in a few days to appear before the Board of Pardons to seek the release of Orta Eiland, convicted at Plains on a robbery charge and sentenced to five years. ## Great Numbers To Make Auto Tours

"Continental Oil Company is firmly convinced that the 1933 travel season will be the most important in recent years and has made elaborate preparations for it," according to Dan Moran, president. "Improved roads in all sections of the country, better automobiles, and highway and scenic information that leaves little to be desired will all be contributing factors. The World's Fair in Chicago, which opens during June, is likely to stimulate more long distance automobile travel this year than anything else, however."

Some conception of Conoco Travel Bureau activities may be gained from figures released at the close of 1932. During the past year more than 6 million free road maps were distributed by the bureau and by the 18,000 service stations which sell Conoco products. All of these stations have been equipped to act as local branches of the bureau. They are not only charged with the responsibility of selling petroleum products, but must also be prepared to furnish the tourist with all types of local information and show a decidedly friendly interest in his welfare. Branches of the bureau are also to be found in several thousand hotels and newspaper offices.

Plan Vacation Trips

The number of vacation trips which the bureau planned during the past year reaches the astonishing total of 143,375. Since each trip was enjoyed by a group made up of at least three or four people, it is estimated that approximately half a million individuals were served. Of this number 52,293 visited the state of Texas. In addition to maps and scenic pamphlets each group received a Conoco passport designed to help its members confirm their identity while traveling through strange sections of the country. In addition, the passport makes it convenient to keep an exact record of each tour. This handy little booklet is included among the numerous helps which the bureau provides free of charge.

More than twice as many motor trips were planned by the bureau last year as during 1931. Since a recent survey shows that the average distance covered by each 1932 tour was 3,400 miles, it has been estimated that the total distance for all tours approximates 436 million miles, or more than four times the distance from the earth to the sun.

According to Mr. Moran, anyone who travels by motor car is entitled to receive free assistance from the bureau. This can be done by writing to the bureau's central offices in Denver, or by applying at any station selling Conoco products.

RECALLS EARL YDAYS

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram recently carried the following article:

How the plow and the barbed wire fence gradually drove the cattlemen farther and farther westward as civilization eliminated the free range and conquered one frontier after another are included in the early West Texas experiences recalled by T. H. Pennington of Amherst.

A native Texan, Pennington has been associated with the cattle business for years, beginning his career on the range at the age of 12 when he was a regular cowhand on his father's ranch. Pennington is one of the newest members of the West Texas Pioneer Association.

When farmers invaded Collin County J. L. Pennington, father of the pioneer Amherst rancher, moved his herds to Clay County, but it was not long until the plow began turning over range grass there. The next move was to Claude, Armstrong County, in 1894. It was there that young Pennington really began his career as a cowboy. That section was really "open spaces" then, Pennington recalled. It was not uncommon to ride all day without seeing anything except antelope, coyotes, prairie dogs and rattlesnakes.

Dr. H. Z. Pennington of Eldorado, operated a farm and ranch in Garza County a number of years. He helped organize the Post Pioneer Association. In 1924 he moved to Amherst and was in business there until 1931. He recalled that he herded cattle on the present site of Amarillo.

"Home Owned Stores Are Interested In The Town . . . ."

Says Another Lamb County Woman

That's just one of the many reasons the people of Littlefield and territory have given for their trading at home-owned stores.

A letter from a Lamb County lady reads in part:

"To build a prosperous town is to keep your own money in circulation in it and to do this I must patronize the home-owned stores, whose owners are interested in the town and not someone whose interest is elsewhere, and not in our growth and prosperity. If I buy from home-owned stores and induce my friends to do likewise, I shall be doing my part to help the merchants to offer lower prices and better values than can be found elsewhere. And at the same time be helping my town grow."

Contract Bridge

Submitted by Mrs. C. E. Cooper

A successful slam bid furnishes without doubt the greatest pleasure in the game of contract bridge. It is the deserved reward of the correct exchange inferences and exactness in thought.

Slam bid rare only extensions of the same principles which make game bids. All slam bids have their foundation in correct low bids. More possible slam bids are lost through an incorrect opening "one no-trump" bid made by a player with a weak 4 card suit bid, than from any other cause, because never in after bids can that 4 card biddable suit be shown and the valuable information that such a suit is held by the opening bidder is never known to his partner. All successful slams have their inception in exact opening bids and accurate responses. All bids above minimums may be shown by rebids of the suit and thus a photograph of the distribution of the hand as well as the honor strength is spread before the partner. Mr. Culbertson claims that a malleable and biddable slam occurs about once in every three rubbers and that a great number of good game bids are wasted upon unsafe slam attempts while an equal number of true slam bids are never made because of unsound bidding and responses. Often slams depend upon the success of a finesse. If this is shown to be a fact by the bidding and the chances for its success or failure are about equal the slam should be bid, but if its success depends upon more than one finesse it should not be bid. One should not expect too much of Lady Luck.

The new four and five no-trump bids which have been discussed in this column at a previous writing are undoubtedly the two greatest aids to slam bidding ever worked out and should be mastered by every player as soon as possible.

There are three conditions necessary before the possibility of a slam bid can be decided. First: The two hands must contain favorable distribution, a good trump suit, some second suit length and almost always a short or void suit. Second: About seven honor tricks in the combined hands. Third: A partner whose bids can be relied upon to give exact information.

Side Quit Hurting, Got Stronger, Well; CARDUI Helped Her

Mrs. R. L. West, of Huntsville, Ala., writes: "I was weak and run-down. I had a pain in my side, and I kept losing weight. I grew nervous over my condition—this was unusual for me, for I am very cheerful when I am well and don't easily get nervous. I knew I ought to take something. My aunt told me I ought to try Cardui, which I did. I began to feel better. I kept it up until I had taken three or four bottles. My side quit hurting and I was soon feeling strong and well."
Cardui is sold at drug stores here.

HOG PRODUCTION INCREASES

Increased interest in hog raising as a result of the widespread home meat canning campaign is indicated in the findings of Roy W. Snyder, meat specialist at A. and M. College. In 1930 the Texas hog population was considerably below 1,000,000. In 1932 this had climbed to approximately 1,500,000 head. In 1932 Texas farmers killed 53,044 hogs to be cured and canned by themselves.

At Laconia, New Hampshire, the Chamber of Commerce was not content to rest upon the town's prestige as a summer-vacation resort—it proposed more as a playground for winter-sport enthusiasts, sponsoring, for instance, that picturesque three-day event, the New England Sled Dog Race, a vivid description of which was lately broadcast over the air.

Out at Unionville, Missouri, the Chamber of Commerce set out to intelligently develop new trades in its territory. It brought about the local manufacture of sorghum syrup—it being discovered that, near by, there is a peculiar kind of clay that works wonders in filtering and clarifying that very useful product.

Then there is the Grant's Pass, Oregon, Chamber of Commerce, which was largely instrumental in forming an irrigation district around the city. Territory that had been owned a few years ago by 260 people now contains more than 2,100 farms in a high state of cultivation, with excellent diversification of crops. Collaborating with county officials, this energetic chamber also carried out the plan of a "travelling cannery" on a truck for each agricultural district. Farmers' wives prepared fruit, vegetables, and meat, and these were canned on the truck at the rate of 2,000 to 5,000 cans daily—operations continuing night and day last summer.

Operate Gold Mines
A perplexing, even perilous situation had confronted the town of Durango, Colorado, early in the depression. Because of the low prices of base metals, the near-by mines and smelter were closed—enterprises which in large measure had supplied the life-blood of the community. Hundreds of unemployed were in the bread-line. But the Durango Chamber of Commerce courageously sought the remedy. Near by, there was a rich gold-bearing area. The market for gold is exceptionally high. The local mining men realized the opportunity that existed, but they were despondent or without funds. So the Chamber of Commerce stepped in and organized a corporation called "The Chamber of Commerce Lease," with the object of reviving that project and thus relieving unemployment. Adequate financing was secured in less than two weeks. Competent engineers volunteered their services. Properties were examined, and leases were obtained on the most promising ones. Men were put to work at a "grub stake wage" that was not high, but which carried the added proviso that the workers were to get 40 per cent of the profits. Ore worth $260 per ton in gold began to be shipped—and one vein running $11,000 per ton was discovered. Profits for both stockholders and miners came to be definitely assured. Roads were built—machinery was installed—the circle of benefits steadily widened.

A different type of valuable service was rendered by the Chamber of Commerce up in the thrifty town of Rochester, New Hampshire. Its directors had long been disturbed by the depressing effect of a big unoccupied building located on the main street. The Chamber did not waste any time in vain lamentations. It formed a subsidiary known as the "Factory Holding Company" which purchased and repaired the offending vacant building, with the money received from the sale of $25,000 worth of stock to 224 local stockholders. Soon it was able to lease the structure to a manufacturer of women's shoes—and through the establishment of this new enterprise, more than 400 of the city's then unemployed found work and contentment and purchasing power again.

Obtain Seed for Farmers
Down in the region of Electra, Texas, a number of years ago, the early plantings of cotton had been completely ruined by rain, sand, and wind storms. The farmers had been compelled to replant their cotton from five to seven times—and thus the supply of highgrade cotton seed for planting became entirely exhausted. Almost before the condition was clearly realized, the farmers were "up against it." They sent out a desperate "S. O. S." The Chamber of Commerce at Electra leaped immediately into action, recognizing the fact that, to take advantage of a favorable break in weather, days and even hours counted most momentously if a crop was to be made. In its determination to obtain the essential seed at once, the Chamber spent $40 on telephone calls and telegrams. The first call for each supply went in at 8 o'clock on the morning of a certain day—and at noon of that same day the first cotton seed delivery was made, at a central point in easy access to the farms. The Electra Chamber of Commerce, working feverishly but efficiently, was able to deliver 44,000 bushels of cotton seed within a few days. The drastic need was met; the day was saved. Government-tested, high-grade seed was provided—the price was such as to save the local farmers almost $3,000 and the cotton that was produced proved to be above par. So we are not surprised to learn that a lasting friendship was cemented between the farming community and the Chamber of Commerce of Electra, Texas.

Nothing is more vital to this nation than the welfare of its farmers. The restoration of a due measure of prosperity for agriculture is an indispensable prerequisite of any sound forward movement. For an outstanding example of this let us turn to the extraordinary accomplishments of the Chamber of Commerce at Moultrie, Georgia, a town of only a little more than 8,000 people, situated in Colquitt county. I am about to give you one of the most astounding facts in contemporary American business annuals: This little town of Moultrie (with fewer people than you would find in many a big city office building) has paid in the past four years to the farmers of Georgia, Alabama, and Florida more than 40 million dollars for farm products, either for its own consumption or for re-shipment. That is an average of about $35,000 for every single business day—in an era that embraces all of the black abyss of the depression. Obviously, we shall find intelligence, wise management, and driving force back of an achievement such as this. This Moultrie Chamber of Commerce had an idea, and evolved a plan. The results of this idea and plan are attracting today not only national but international applause. The Chamber of Commerce set the Colquitt County Plan in motion in 1924 and it has operated successfully ever since. It involves nothing abstruse or complicated; the Plan is simplicity itself. The bankers agreed to furnish money to worthy farmers who would practice diversification. The Chamber of Commerce members agreed to furnish "An Every-Day Cash Market for Every Product of the Farm." The farmers agreed to diversify crops (there is the crucial point,) and this rational diversification has proved the key to unlock the door of success. What has been the result? In 1929 the value of Colquitt county's farm products was nearly 8 million dollars—as compared with only one million in 1914! The value was multiplied eightfold in 15 years.

I want to stress again the fact that the Moultrie Chamber of Commerce working in close cooperation with the County Agent, has been the motivating force responsible for this remarkable record. All the instrumentalities and necessary adjuncts of this plan for Better Business have been attended to.

Manage Community Affairs

At Corning, a town of about 16,000 in the Southern Tier of New York State, I find a comprehensive and admirable plan for civic and commercial betterment being operated by the aggressive, far-sighted Chamber of Commerce. It represents a deliberate effort to centralize in one office the management of community affairs. This office is so equipped and staffed as to provide all of the physical equipment, management and clerical assistance necessary for the conduct of any program that a local community organization may undertake. At the base of the whole organization-structure rests the Five-to-Ten-Year Program of Development of the Corning Chamber of Commerce. This covers such matters as the drafting of a city plan, the establishment of an airport and State armory, a five-year lighting program, an industrial and economic survey of Corning, an employment bureau, energetic service to established and prospective industries, improving the physical appearance of the business district, retail sale promotion, community advertising and conventions, etc.

In studying this truly national question of the part that is being played by the small-town chamber of commerce in the big job of overcoming the depression, it is amazing to find that many of the smaller chambers have been abandoned entirely, or have temporarily ceased operation, during these past three years, because of lack of financial support. Failure to provide such needed support is tragic in its shortsightedness. Never have able chambers of commerce been needed so urgently as they are now. As I have said before, the passengers on a transatlantic liner do not jump overboard, in the midst of a raging tempest, to row ashore each for himself so as to save their landing-fee! And that is what the abandonment of a chamber of commerce amounts to in troubled days like these. Far from being deserted, every encouragement should be accorded to them, especially to that vast majority of chambers which have stuck to their posts of duty most gallantly all through this terrible storm. Only through such cooperation and business teamwork can we ride out the hurricane and reach safely the haven of better times.

Mr. Arnold succeeds in office Homer Hall, who has served on the commission for the past two years.

Express Appreciation

Mr. Crockett, Mr. Boone and Mr. Arnold requested the Lamb County Leader to express, in their behalf, their appreciation to the voters for the confidence placed in them and declared that they will exert their utmost efforts to render efficient and satisfactory service to the people of this city.

Mr. Crockett issued the following statement: To the Voters of the City of Littlefield:

I desire to take this method of stating to the voters and citizens of Littlefield that I appreciate to a degree beyond my ability to express the confidence in me manifested by the election of myself as Mayor of our City. I shall endeavor at all times to reward your confidence and support by giving efficient and faithful service to the City.

When I made my announcement as candidate for the office, I published a brief outline of the policies I would try to carry out if elected Mayor. I now pledge that I shall attempt to carry out those policies.

Being Mayor of a City the size of Littlefield is no small job, and an officer can succeed only so long as he has the support and cooperation of the citizens, and I now earnestly solicit your support and cooperation.

I shall always be open for suggestions on the part of any and all citizens of the city as to the proper method of conducting its affairs, and I want each and all of you to at all times feel welcome to come to me and talk over our problems and your problems so far as they relate to the conduct of the affairs of the City.

Again thanking you for the confidence expressed in me and soliciting your support and cooperation, I am, Very truly yours, L. R. CROCKETT.

Sales Thanks Voters

To the Voters of The City of Littlefield:

I wish to thank those who supported me during the mayoralty race, and to say, again it was a genuine pleasure to have had a part in the progress of Littlefield as its mayor. And to those who supported Mr. Crockett, may I say that there is not the slightest ill feeling on my part. I am sure Mr. Crockett will work in the best interests of Littlefield. And may I add that, in Mr. Boone and Mr. Arnold, Mr. Crockett has two very able co-workers.

Let's all work with our new commission for a bigger and better Littlefield. Respectfully, T. S. SALES.

Arnold Expresses Appreciation

In expressing his appreciation to the voters, Mr. Arnold said: "As a citizen of Littlefield for many years, I have felt for some time that I would like to be of some special service to my city. That, and the request of a number of friends that I seek office as a city commissioner, was responsible for me making the race.

"I appreciate very much the confidence the voters of this city have placed in me in electing me to the commission, and I will at all times seek to give the kind of service that will never cause them to regret the confidence they have placed in me.

"I feel that I can accomplish the most in the interests of our city only through the cooperation of all of our citizens; therefore, I want every citizen to feel absolutely free to discuss with me all matters pertaining to the interests of our city. We do not all see alike, but we can at least discuss matters in which we are vitally interested, and out of such discussions often come desirable solutions, a better understanding of those things which we individually and collectively wish to achieve in the interests of our city.

"We have much to be accomplished; let us all work together that the job may be done; that we may enjoy a bigger, better, a finer place in which to live and rear our families."

Boone Thanks Voters

Mr. Boone, in expressing his appreciation to the voters, said:

"I have always felt it a great privilege and a pleasure to serve my city in whatever way its citizens desired. It fell to my lot to be appointed a city commissioner about three and one-half years ago. I especially enjoyed the work and it was with the consent of the city at heart that I sought re-election two years ago and also last Tuesday.

"You have demonstrated by your large vote Tuesday that you want me to continue to serve you. I want you to know that the great confidence placed in me is appreciated from the bottom of my heart. I will enter on the work for another two years with enlarged zeal and a determination to seek out every opportunity to do more and more in achieving that goal to which we are all striving—a larger and a better Littlefield.

"There is one message that I especially want to give to the citizens of Littlefield, and that is this: By taking more and more interest in the affairs of the city, we can accomplish much that we have often felt was impossible. Come to our meetings; work with us; we will welcome all assistance given in the interests of your city and my city.

"I pledge to you that I will at all times continue to work for an economical, business like and progressive administration."

That now is the time to really give consideration to the creation and development of the canning industry in Lamb county.

That we should not let another week or a month go by without some real action being taken in the matter.

That if we don't take immediate action we are overlooking a wonderful opportunity to be of real service to our county.

That we should not feel that any step toward the creation and development of a canning industry in Lamb county is too small.

That a small beginning most often brings success.

That every mother, son and daughter of us should have something to say relative to a canning industry for Lamb county.

That a meeting should be called to bring about immediate action. NOW—

Say what you think. You can say that we are wrong, if you wish; we don't mind a bit. BUT SAY SOMETHING, THAT IS THE ONLY WAY TO GET ACTION.
