New Officers To Lead French
 Reports from Paris, France, stated that General Maxime Weygand Saturday night summarily dismissed 15 generals who figured in the French rout from the Meuse front, and injected fresh blood into his Allied high command for the decisive phase of the battle for the English Channel.
 A war ministry communique under the heading of "penalties" said the 15 commanders of full armies, corps, divisions and other army services had been removed from their posts. Their names were not announced.
 Their commands already have been taken over by new men chosen by General Weygand in his flying trips to the front to lead the campaign against the German corridor to the sea.
 Seven infantry colonels were promoted to the major generals to fill the places of those ousted. Promoted are Henri Martin, Jean Besse, Andre Durand, Charles Mast, Charles de Gaulle, Gustave Nemy and Louis Buisson.

 The Nazis poured masses of tanks and infantry through the breach between the northern Allied forces and the central French army in an effort to tighten their hold on the English Channel coast.
 On the northern side of the corridor the Germans occupied Valenciennes and other crests northward, Arras, making contact with the British-Belgian positions, and pressed their attack on the Dover strait of Calais.
 On the southern side of the German salient French operations along the Somme river were reported continuing "with success."

The SNOOPER SAYS . . .

Dear Diary:

Are the years monotonous . . . the same old seasons and weathers and aspects of nature? Never anything new to admire or wonder at?

The monotony is in our eyesight, which goes on seeing nothing but the common and invariable things; simply because, from long familiarity, these are the easy things to see. But these are only the frame of the picture; the picture is never twice alike.—Edward Rowland Sill.

Thursday—The sun is up now when I go to bed early to mail the papers.

I read this afternoon that this is a good year to "See America First" when one is thinking about vacations. Vacationing Americans who plan to do just that will find plenty of cooperation. Latest development along the line is the announcement that 66 of the country's railroad lines have inaugurated a plan enabling travelers to go places on the installment plan. Under the plan, applications for credit of $50 or more can be made through local ticket offices, with loans being made through local banks. If credit is granted, trips can be made on the so-much-at-regular-intervals plan. There's no down payment!

Friday—Bought my first pair of Nylon hose today. Already hundreds of feminine limbs have felt the soft touch of the new fabric which science has conjured out of coal, water and air. Nylon hose may usher in a millenium in woman's world. They look good, they feel good, and they wear well. That, like the nickle cigar of old, is what the world has been needing.

I tripped out to see Mrs. E. S. Billings late this afternoon, and enjoyed looking at the many canaries she has out there. Most of the birds are of the chopper species, however, she has a few German Rollers that sing with their mouths closed. She says all of them are very contrary, especially when someone comes to see them who would like to buy one, they will not even chirp, or pretend to sing.

Saturday—A cup of coffee early in the morning with the best friend in town helped to start this day right for me.

I heard today about Blair Goodwin, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. John Blair, who reads magazines at Walters, and if his companions come along and suggest a game, he places the magazine he is reading back on the rack, but remembers the number of the page he was reading on, and goes back later to finish his story.

Out to the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Vaught this morning, in time for their breakfast at 10:30. Those hot biscuits would taste good to any working girl! The rest of the day my desk has been adorned with the beautiful roses I brought from their place.

Sunday—To church this morning to hear Rev. E. E. White of Plainview, district superintendent of the Plainview district, who preached at the Methodist church. He has just returned from the General Methodist conference, which convened at Atlantic City, Ga. He told of the large number of Methodists who came from other countries; also about those attending the conference praying for world peace.

Monday—Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Pierce and Dodd Weatherly enjoyed riding horseback tonight . . . but I'm unhappy, 'cause I'm not riding, too. Went to the skating rink for a while, but I can't skate anymore because I can't forget how badly I sprained my left ankle two years ago. Since I make my living by walking, I better not take the risk of falling on skates, although I have skated a lot in my life.

"Say, Margie, how about writing a story about our dogs being poisoned again," two unhappy little boys said to me this afternoon as I passed Vaught's Dairy delivery truck on the street. These boys, Bobbie Foust and John Henry Chapman, deliver milk for Mr. Vaught.

John Henry's collie dog and his "big fluffy" cat were poisoned last Friday night, and Bobbie's little black Scottie was poisoned several days ago. They told me about dogs belonging to Junior Mauldin and Patsy Batton that were poisoned, too.

A boy's best friend is his dog, and anyone who feeds a dog poison is . . . well, that person must never have had a dog when he was a little boy.

These boys are heart-broken about losing their dogs. Bobbie said every dog he has had, someone has poisoned it, and he is "getting tired of it."

Tuesday — Mrs. Ruth Hughes, president of the Los Angeles chapter of the California Federation of Legal Secretaries, rated the respect of many employers last week when she said the best stenographer

"shouldn't even think of going to work with a run in her stocking." . . . Mrs. Hughes, who presented facts to prove her point, says "very few men can keep their minds on their work and on a run in a woman's stocking at the same time."

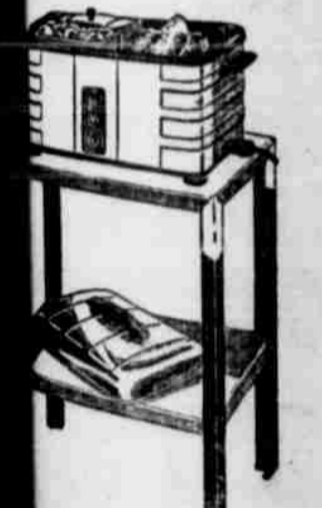

agreed that Mrs. Hughes was just about right. Someone is pushing me off the typewriter, and &&&&&?????"; represents the words coming from the shop for copy for the machine. Guess this is another one of those places where I came in. MARGIE

FROCK FOR TOTS

Here is a simple form (8687) for the little girl in your life, that will have an irresistible daintiness when you make it yourself and give it the fine, careful finishing that costs a lot when you buy it ready-made! This frock hangs full and flaring from a pointed shoulder yoke, with two inverted pleats in the front and one in the back, and the little bow under the chin looks so sweet!

This design gives you a choice of two sleeve styles—little round puffs or fluttering wings that make her look like an angel. Buttercup yellow dimity, pale pink lawn, blue organdy or white batiste make up beautifully like this.

Pattern No. 8687 is designed for sizes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 years.

Pattern 8684—It's a joy to get hold of an apron that won't slip and slide, goes on and ties without any tricky cross-buttoning, and really looks well, while it's attending to its business of protecting your frock thoroughly. This new one goes on over your head, covers the top as well as the skirt of whatever you have on beneath. And it fits beautifully—the wide waistline section of the bodice is cleverly cut on the bias, to take care of that.

What's more, you can make the same basic apron look very different, according to whether you finish it plain, with bias binding, or add two patch pockets, and trim it with a lot of rickrack braid, Gingham, percale, calico and chintz are nice bright materials for this.

Pattern No. 8684 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48.

Form for ordering patterns: Paper, Town, State, Send 15 cents in coin (for each pattern desired) together with your NAME, ADDRESS, PATTERN NUMBER and SIZE. Patricia Dow Patterns, 206 W. 17th St., New York, N. Y.

IMPORTANT—Be sure to fill in the full name of your newspaper, Town and State in the box above when ordering patterns.

Many Visitors—

Littlefield reported that 854 persons visited the project last week. Among the visitors were Mrs. Frances Fox, of San Antonio, state director of recreational projects, Miss Evelyn Richter, Lubbock, district director of professional and service division, Mrs. Myrtice Gillespie, Lubbock, field supervisor of the sewing room projects, Miss Ruth Jennings, Lubbock, district superintendent of housekeeping aide, Mrs. Emma Robinson, Lubbock, district timekeeper for library projects, Mrs. Marie Carrington, Lubbock, assistant field supervisor of sewing room projects, and Mrs. C. B. Watson of Hutchinson, Kansas.

Miss Alma Byers, superintendent of the housekeeping aide project in Littlefield, stated that 507 persons visited the project last week. The frame garden, a utility shelf on a closet door, and a divan made from a quilt box at the housekeeping aide project house were most interesting to visitors. Miss Byers said.

A total of 75,957 interested citizens in the Lubbock district visited and carefully inspected Professional and Service Projects in the various communities in the Lubbock district last week. Projects in Lamb county had a total of 5,373 visitors.

This week was intended to serve as a report to taxpayers a visual report not a mere compilation of figures, to enable citizens to see for themselves what use is being made of some of the dollars and cents they pay for taxes.

Many valuable suggestions have been received already from these visitors concerning methods of improvement of projects already in operation and new types of services needed in the various communities.

WPA professional and service projects provide employment for more than one-half million men and women, whose work and achievements are essentially community betterment. Production projects, such as sewing, weaving, canning and gardening, provide clothing, food and other necessities for distribution at the direction of the sponsors to families and tax supported institutions. Public Health projects, with their allies, housekeeping aide and school lunch projects, give assistance to needy, sick, and help to serve the malnourished with the right kinds of food, provide household aid to needy families in cases of emergency.

investigation, said Pass, riding along, apparently had fallen asleep at the wheel. The car gradually pulled to the right side of the road for 400 or 500 yards.

It struck a high embankment and a corner of the culvert. It did not overturn, but was badly damaged, the sheriff reported.

Latest reports indicate Mr. Pass was resting as well as could be expected late Wednesday.

At the time of the accident his wife, Mrs. G. C. Pass, his mother and Mrs. Sid Hopping, a sister, were at Mineral Wells, where Mrs. Pass, Sr., had been taking treatments for rheumatism, and other ailments. On account of her illness, they were not notified until Tuesday of Mr. Pass' injuries.

It is believed he was enroute to Mineral Wells when the accident occurred.

U. S. To Train 50,000 Pilots For Air Service

By a vote of 391 to 1, the House Friday approved an unlimited expansion of the army air corps a few hours after President Roosevelt had announced a broad plan for training 50,000 pilots to man the cockpits of the nation's future fighting planes.

Meanwhile, however, the Senate naval committee imposed a top of 10,000 planes upon the navy's air strength, in recommending passage of a measure authorizing the expenditure of an estimated $2,200,000,000 for the naval air corps and its bases ashore. The maximum was fixed, it was said, so that the navy would have to ask congress for approval when the time comes to exceed that number of fighting ships.

The army air corps bill, which now goes to the senate, would suspend the army air corps' present legal maximum of 6,000 planes until June 30, 1941. It also would permit the army to train an average of 3,500 pilots annually, as compared with 2,500 at present and allow 6,000 air corps reserve officers to be on active duty simultaneously. In addition the legislation would permit the army to discharge "fifth column" suspects among its civilian employees regardless of civil service restrictions. Representative Marcantonio (Al-NY) who cast the only vote against the bill, issued a statement saying "I feel that this is similar to the preparation of 1916, a step toward launching us into a war we should keep out of."

The senate naval committee acted on the naval bill after Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the naval air corps, had said the United States has "far and away the best naval air force in the world." However, Senator Byrd (D-Va) had interpreted figures presented earlier by Towers as indicating the navy had no more than 500 up-to-the-minute planes.

Chairman Walsh (D-Mass.) suggested that the earlier testimony be suppressed because it presented "a very bad picture" for national defense, but the committee rejected the suggestion.

The bill authorizes the navy to increase its roster of pilots to 16,000, besides boosting its air strength to 10,000 planes. Walsh told reporters it was estimated that an outlay of $1,200,000,000 would be needed to attain this two-fold goal, which the navy hopes to reach in four years.

Latin Countries
Take Stringent Defense Measures

From Buenos Aires, Argentina, comes the report that Latin American countries are pushing a round-up of subversive elements and "pseudo nationals," adopting stringent measures guarding against "fifth columns" and unanimously agreeing to protest Germany's invasion of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg.

One of the principal reactions to the German march came in the form of increased demands for greater coastal defenses, particularly in east coast countries. In Argentina the marine and war ministries prepared special requests for congress for emergency funds to strengthen national defenses. The request was based on a special commission's study of fortification of Argentina's 1,800 mile coast stretching from the mouth of the Rio de La Plata to the Straits of Magellan.

The Argentine government considered building two and possibly three new naval bases along the southern coast; at Puerto Deseado to defend the oil fields at Comodoro Rivadavia, another at Puerto Madryn, halfway between Puerto Deseado and the naval base at Tierra Del Fuego as a defense for the straits of Magellan.

Argentina also was expected to add 250 pursuit planes to her air force. In Montevideo, the Uruguayan government was ready to project new national defenses, and the congress had before it a bill which would oblige all able-bodied males between 18 and 30 to take a course in marksmanship.

A number of countries took vigorous steps to stamp out Nazi or anti-Nazi demonstrations. In Buenos Aires, police arrested several alleged leaders of a "Pseudo national" group which planned a demonstration to demand the resignation of Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantillo because of his policy regarding the European war. He recently proposed revision of Pan-American neutrality because of Germany's invasion of the low countries and has spoken indignantly concerning it.

In Buenos Aires province, police raided the home of Helmut Lentz, a German, and confiscated a clandestine radio transmitter which allegedly was disseminating Nazi propaganda.

In Montevideo, police and members of the "national committee for democracy" clashed when the group attempted to parade through the principal streets. A small number succeeded including the police and went to a German pastry shop and held a demonstration.

A Mexican newspaper reported that President Lazaro Cardenas had instructed the interior department to "avoid by all necessary means that certain elements, Nazis or Communists, attempt to upset public order," adding that the Mexican government had "decided to energetically halt any agitation."

The joint, 21-republic protest against Germany's newest invasion was announced by the Uruguayan government which said that its contents would be released by the government of Panama, clearing house

PRESIDENT REPORTS ADVANCES IN ARMY AND NAVY DURING PAST 7 YEARS

In his radio address Sunday night, President Roosevelt made a solemn appeal for national unity, and coupled a pledge of military security with a warning against Trojan horse treachery and the "undiluted poison" of foreign-sponsored dissension. Calling for an end to fear, illusion and calamity-howling, the chief executive said in his fourteenth radio "fireside chat" that American defense forces would be built up "to whatever heights the future may require."

He denied charges of critics that money spent for the army and navy in the last few years had "gone down the rat-hole." Instead, he said: "This money has been used to make our army and navy today the largest, the best equipped, and the best trained peacetime military establishment in the history of this country."

After declaring that nothing in the present emergency justified cancellation of "any of the great social gains" under the New Deal, Mr. Roosevelt asserted that "today's threat to our national security is not a matter of military weapons alone."

"We must deal vigorously," he said, "with spies, saboteurs and traitors." The new technique of weakening a nation at its roots, he continued, is discord aimed at "confusion of counsel, public indecision, political paralysis and, eventually, a state of panic."

"Campaigns of group hatred or class struggle have never made much headway among us, and are now making headway now," he said. "But new forces are being unleashed," he said, "deliberately planned propaganda to divide and weaken us in the face of danger as other nations have been weakened before."

"These dividing forces are unalloyed poisons. They must not be allowed to spread in the new world as they have in the old."

The president said that "the past two weeks have meant the shattering of many illusions" for persons who had "closed their eyes" to events abroad or "who would not admit the possibility of the approaching storm."

"They have lost the illusion," he declared, "that we are remote and isolated and, therefore, secure against the dangers from which no other land is free."

The president's address was largely a review of the expanded defense program and its effect on industry, labor and consumers. He spoke at a desk in the "diplomatic break room" on the basement floor of the White House, surrounded by few invited friends, and immediately afterward he left on an overnight yachting cruise down the Potomac. He was accompanied by Secretary Hopkins, who has been active in plans to step up industrial production for defense purposes.

The president reiterated the administration's promise to advance RFC money to private industry to help expand factories and personnel under the preparedness program.

"We are calling on men now engaged in private industry to help us in carrying out this program," he said, "and you will hear more of this in the next few days."

"Private industry will have the responsibility of providing the best, speediest and most efficient mass production of which it is capable," Mr. Roosevelt declared, however, that the administration's "offensive against social and economic inequalities and abuses" should not be broken down by "the piecemeal movement of those who would use the present needs of physical military defense to destroy it."

"There is nothing in our present emergency," he said, "to justify making the workers of our nation toil for longer hours than now limited by statute. As more orders come in... tens of thousands of people who are now unemployed will receive employment."

Similarly, he continued, there is no reason to lower wages or break down the old age pension and unemployment insurance system.

The president called for protection of consumers against higher living costs and asserted that "no new group of millionaires (should) come into being in this nation as a result of the struggles abroad."

After opening his talk with an appeal to aid the Red Cross war relief fund, Mr. Roosevelt detailed advances in the army and navy during his seven years in office.

The navy received $1,487,000,000 more since 1933, he said, than it did in the seven years before that date. For that money, he explained, 215 fighting ships were laid down or commissioned, personnel rose from 79,000 to 145,000, and useful navy air craft increased from 1,127 to 2,892 planes on hand and on order.

The army received $1,292,000,000 more since 1933, he continued, than in the seven preceding years. Since 1933 it purchased 5,640 planes, the president said, making these other army comparisons:

- Enlisted men, 1933, 122,000; 1940, practically doubled.
- Anti-aircraft guns, 1933, 355; 1940, 1,700.
- Modern infantry mortars, 1933, 24; 1940, 1,600.
- Modern tanks, armored cars, 1933, 48; 1940, 1,700.
- Pilots, 1933, 1,263; 1940, 3,200.

Advocate Amending Neutrality Act

A group of 47 capitalists, industrialists, business men and oil, railroad and steamship executives asked Congress Saturday to amend the neutrality act to permit granting of credits to the Allies for purchase of vital materials.

Identical telegrams were addressed to Congressmen Albert Thomas, Sam Rayburn, Marvin Jones and Hatton W. Summers of Texas, and Sens. Alben W. Barkley, Morris Sheppard, Tom Connally, Key Pittman, Pat Harrison and James F. Brynes, appealing for action to aid the ambattled Allies.

The messages said: "Believing that certain portions of the neutrality act no longer correctly interpret the national sentiment or national interest of the American people, We respectfully urge that the act be amended to permit the granting of credits by our government to the Allies for the purchase of Agricultural, mineral and industrial products of the United States. We further urge the repeal of any and all statutes which may prohibit the granting of such credits."

The group included will L. Clayton, international cotton factor; S. R. Bertron, Power company executive; Hugh R. Cullen and S. P. Parish, oil executives; J. W. Evans, chairman of the Houston Port commission; J. M. Lykes, president of Lykes Brothers Steamship lines; H. M. Lull, vice president of Southern Pacific Lines; H. R. Safford, vice president of Missouri-Pacific Lines; L. R. C. Towles, president of the Houston cotton exchange; J. M. West, oil man and Texas publisher; John T. Scott, banker, and R. W. Wier Lumberman.

German Weather Forecast Accurate

Reports indicate that German meteorologists have developed a long-range weather forecasting system, which American meteorologists believe has enabled Adolf Hitler to time his blitzkriegs with favorable weather.

From Washington comes the report that American weather bureau officials have been studying the German system and have developed a long-range forecast program which they plan to begin within the next few months.

The forecasts, to be made in collaboration with Dr. H. C. Willette of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will be issued twice a week and will forecast weather for seven days ahead.

American Meteorologists studied the German system under Dr. Franz Bauer in Frankfurt, Germany, prior to 1937. Since then the Germans have guarded improvements because of their military value.

German meteorologists have been able to forecast weather for a week or 10 days ahead with remarkable accuracy, according to Dr. Carl G. Rossby.

Bauer's forecasts have been based partly on the pressure distribution in the upper atmosphere, mass air movements and on a correlation of this data with detailed weather records over the past four years, Dr. Rossby said.

draw experts from industry, agriculture and labor, transportation, communication finance and consumers, Early said. They would assist—but not supersede—the government officials, he declared.

LATE WAR NEWS

WEDNESDAY
London—British Admiralty announces fall of German held Narvik Arctic ore port in Norway. B. E. F. still fighting as a unit in Flanders retreats several miles toward coast. It is now believed that Allies will seek escape from German trap via channel ports.

Activity of all aliens over 16 years of age, regardless of whether they are from an enemy country are drastically restricted under a new order effective June 3.

Paris—Allied armies of the north fighting fiercely against odds, were reported Wednesday to be inflicting heavy casualties on German forces attempting to pinch them off, but their situation was acknowledged to be "very critical."

A "murderous" battle is raging in the Flanders pocket, a war ministry spokesman said, but he gave no indication of the turn the fighting was taking. The French and British troops were said to be displaying "admirable courage."

Along the front from the Somme to the Aisne the French armies of the center continued to consolidate their positions, and the situation there was described as "extremely favorable."

The high command announced that three villages south of the Somme had been recaptured from the Germans, indicating that the Nazis now held only two bridgeheads on the French side of the river.

The Germans originally established bridgeheads on the south side of the Somme at five points when they drove across the stream to occupy Amiens. The principal portion of the city was said to be now in French hands.

A German raid on French positions in the Ardennes sector near the little town of Chateau Porcien was thrown back by heavy French fire, a communique said. The Maginot area to the east remained quiet.

Along the channel, it was said, Dunkerque itself "is not directly menaced."

Calais was also still in French hands at the latest reports Tuesday night, the sources added.

German fuel reserves at Bremen, Hamburg, were bombed by Allies.

BERLIN—High command reports capture of Ostend and Lille, with German troops fighting in streets of Dunkerque; famed World war battle area of Ypres stormed by Nazis; Nazi bombers blast 700,000 Allied soldiers falling back to sea from Flanders.

Rome—Italian War fervor heightened by Belgian collapse; Allied hopes of keeping Italy out of conflict appear doomed.

DUBLIN—Ireland calls up army reserves and moves swiftly to put her forces on a war footing.

WASHINGTON—Congress tackles problem of raising $683,000,000 a year in new taxes to finance president's $3,000,000,000 preparedness program.

A special trained supervisor will be in charge of the project, with nine assistants, from local WPA rolls.

Sponsored by the various organizations in Littlefield, first plans for the project only included the three summer months, but with WPA assistance, the project will continue indefinitely.

Recreational centers are well-established at Lubbock, Plainview and Lamesa, and it is expected that the project in Littlefield will be started in the near future.

On Guard, America!

It is especially important, in the light of the Government's concern at this time about national defense, for all citizens to be watchful lest secret agents of possible enemy nations find ways to hamper America's preparations against war.

We are not thinking so much about physical "sabotage," the destruction or injury of industrial plants in which munitions are being manufactured. Doubtless there will be manifestations of that sort of activity...

That this is going on, there is no question. A widespread campaign of false ideas and lying promises, deliberately intended to induce our people to sell their birthright for a mess of pottage spooned out by the dictators, is being carried on all over America.

It was by methods like that that Germany was enabled to take possession of several other nations without important resistance. The way had been prepared by the dissemination of the belief that the German system would work to the greater advantage of the people of Czechoslovakia, Poland, Norway, Denmark and Holland.

A LIVING MEMORIAL

Our deeds will long outlive us. And the deeds of those who have gone before us are remembered. Those whose deeds bespeak the heroism and sacrifice of war... whose lives were laid down in battle... will always be cherished in the living memorial of the mind.

Memorial Day, and all that it stands for, is brought forcibly before our minds this year, chiefly because of the disturbed European situation. Let us pray that peace will be restored to the earth... and that nations and peoples will once more live in harmony.

The liner President Roosevelt sailed Thursday night from New York for Galway, Ireland, to bring home Americans. Notice by the U. S. Government of this action was given to Britain, France, Germany, Belgium, Holland and Norway lest they molest it.

Secretary Hull telegraphed American envoys at London, Paris, Berlin, Brussels, the Hague and Oslo to inform the governments to which they are accredited that "the government of the United States expects this vessel to make its eastward and westward voyages with-

Refugee Children, Innocent War Victims, Appeal to America's Heart for Survival

"DEATH-DEALING airplanes ride the skies. The carnage of their creation sweeps many lands. Armored tanks and motorized artillery roll across whole countries destroying, as in a blight, all standing in their way. Cattle, crops, homes, people—innocent and defenseless children—stand in fear, then in despair, only to fall into destruction. Some will live. They must be aided to endure, to struggle on, to survive."

This was the message directed to America's generous heart by Chairman Norman H. Davis of the American Red Cross, in asking prompt contributions to a $10,000,000 war relief fund to be spent by the Red Cross for help to military and civilian wounded, and the homeless people of the warring nations.

"We must send relief as needed and not to late to be of use," Mr. Davis said. "We must send clothing, bedding, shoes, medications, surgical dressings and food."

Before the most recent devastation of neutral countries by aerial blitzkriegs was begun, the American Red Cross had sent 320,000 garments, knitted sweaters and hospital clothes for the women and children victims in England, Finland, France, Germany-occupied Poland and for Polish refugees in other countries. To the Red Cross societies of the nations engaged in battle, the Red Cross sent 933,000 surgical dressings. These garments and surgical dressings were made in 1,500 Red Cross Chapters throughout America. In addition, the American Red Cross purchased medicines, shoes, blankets, knitted underwear and almost a thousand other items at a cost of $1,500,000 for shipment to the Red Cross societies of belligerent nations. But with destruction, suffering, and thousands of wounded added each day to the frightful toll of war as new nations became involved, the American Red Cross appealed to the nation for at least a ten million dollar relief fund. Contributions can be made to the local Red Cross Chapter in any community in America, Mr. Davis said.

Texas Cowboy Reunion
 At Stamford July 2

Opening with the grand parade on Tuesday, July 2, the 11th annual Texas Cowboy Reunion will have its big closing day on the Fourth of July. Improvements on grounds and buildings are underway and added features for the celebration which brings some 65,000 people to Stamford each year are being worked out.

The cowboy rodeo, in which actual ranch hands compete, will again be the outstanding entertainment feature. Cash purses amounting to $2,300 will be awarded in addition to the championship prizes, consisting of five special made saddles.

Other entertainment features include the old fiddlers' contest at the Will Rogers Bunkhouse, old-time dances at the Coombes Round-Up Hall and sponsors' dances at the Reunion pavilion.

Beginning this year, new emphasis will be placed on the livestock angle. Details are being worked out for a horse show which will likely feature three kinds of animals. Gaited horses will probably be included and these will perform in the arena as an added attraction in the rodeo program. Breeding classes of the popular ranch type animal, known as the Quarter horse, will be included and also breeding classes of Palominos. One or more classes of steers are proposed.

Total prize list in the livestock division will be about $1,000.

The Texas Cowboy Reunion Association, oldtime cowboys' organization, will hold its annual meeting and election of officers during the reunion. Lewis Ackers, Abilene ranchman, is serving his second year as president and will preside at sessions of the association.

CHAPTER X

Synopsis
 After her husband's death, Anne has worked to support her family. Bernice, the eldest, is married to Bill Carter. Jim, Anne's son, is infatuated with the rich Helen Sanders. Anne suspects that Cathy, a little dancer, is in love with Jim. Janet, Anne's younger daughter, is unhappy because her friends neglect her. She is assisted by Tony Ryan to help restore the Phillips estate which she has bought. Janet believes Tony is ready for Priscilla and himself.

Am passing through Bay City tonight at nine five on the way to New York, the telegram read. Must see you. Come down to the station and ask for father's private car. (signed) Helen.

The old clock on the discolored wall behind the Judge's desk pointed to six minutes to nine. It was eleven blocks to the station and the esplanade was crowded with machines waiting for the express from New Orleans. Jim did not have time to look for a parking space. He left his battered old fliver leaning against a Don't Stop Here sign and raced into the depot. The train to New York was heading in. Jim galloped down the track beside it.

She began to draw him back to the platform. Jim's head was whirling. He tried to murmur something respectfully to his future father-in-law, but he was prevented by the sweet delirium of Helen's lips again pressed to his for kisses.

"Four days is forever!" she cried tragically. "How can we bear it?"

The station was slowly sliding past. Jim nervously disengaged himself from her embrace. He stopped and kissed her.

"Do you love me?" he cried.

"Yes, yes, God knows I do!" he stammered. "But I—I've got to go, dear. I can't afford to be carried along. Good-by, good-by, my darling!" he cried a little frantically

"I don't know anyone I like more," Jim said.

"Jim!" called a clear imperious voice from the observation platform of the rear car.

There she stood, leaning out to peckon to him.

Somehow he was beside her on the platform and she was in his arms clinging to him, her lovely red mouth lifted to his. He kissed her and it was ecstasy and it was torment, just as it had been in all the dreams he had dreamed about her.

"I've missed you so!" she cried "I ran away from you and every day I've wanted to come back. I love you."

Jim was certain he would not lift a finger to save himself if Helen Sanders ordered him to get down on all fours at her feet.

"We've only ten minutes here," she explained breathlessly, "and you have to see Father."

She caught his arm and pulled him into the car. A stout bald man with a harassed face and snapping brown eyes was sitting in a large wicker chair distating to a solemn young fellow wearing thick tortoise-shell glasses.

"Father!" cried Helen rapturously. "It's all right! Everything's all right! This is Jim. We're going to be married."

She kept her arm about Jim's neck as she shoved him forward. He was horribly embarrassed.

Mr. Clive Sanders cleared his throat. "So this is Jim," he said with an amiable though slightly rusty smile. He put out a strong chubby hand. "Congratulations, my boy. You seem to have successfully harnessed this young typhoon of mine."

Jim swallowed painfully. "I—er—"

Helen interrupted. "We simply haven't time for the customary conventional speeches," she said impatiently. "We've got to go on to New York tonight, but we'll be back in about four days."

Ahead the engine gave a warning blast. "Oh!" wailed Helen. "We'll be pulling out in a minute. Oh, Jim darling!"

He was whistling when he came into the flat, whistling unsteadily because his head was still whirling.

"Dearest!" Anne cried, "I haven't heard you sound so cheerful in ages."

Jim swooped her off her feet, held her up suspended in mid-air, kissed her soundly.

"Prepare for a shock!" he cried gayly. "I'm going to be married!"

"To Cathy! Oh, Jim, I'm so glad!" cried Anne joyously.

Jim stared at her as if he had walked off into nothingness. "To Helen Sanders?" he corrected her roughly.

"If only she makes you happy," said Anne in a broken voice.

"What more could a man ask?" demanded Jim.

It was the next day at noon. Janet on her way home from school had encountered her sister on the corner outside her office. "Jim's going to marry the daughter of a multimillionaire? I can't believe it!" explained Berenice.

"It's true, worse luck." Janet glanced at Berenice curiously. "What have you been doing to yourself? You look terrible, as if you'd been to the wars or something."

Berenice flushed. "I'm doing nicely, thank you."

"I still say you don't look it," persisted Janet.

"Are you and Bill fighting again?"

"No," said Berenice with a bright metallic laugh. "Bill and I don't fight anymore. You see," she drew a ragged breath, "he's left me."

"Berenice!"

"Yes," said Berenice laughing shrilly, "he packed up and moved out a week ago while I was at work."

"Oh, Berenice, I'm sorry." "This will break mother's heart!" cried Berenice, gripping her arm. "I won't have her told. It would worry her to death. You've got to promise. I'll keep you here until you do."

"All right," said Janet wearily. "I promise"

Berenice had felt sorry for Bill after he failed to win the contest. She had made up her mind to be more gentle and considerate.

She had even refused several invitations and stayed at home with him for a night or two. They had played chess and had a pleasant time. It had been almost the same as it used to be when they were first married and so in love with each other, except that Berenice was no longer in love with Bill. She merely felt sorry for him, she thought. Poor Bill!

Then they had another quarrel and all Berenice's antagonism was aroused. It was about Guy Sheldon. Bill had never liked Guy and Bill liked him less still as his wife's employer. Bill said Guy Sheldon was a disgusting old fool who had never had a decent thought about a woman in his life.

"I know his kind," said Bill, "and it burns me up to think of my wife being associated with that brand of skunk! He can't walk by a pretty girl without touching her."

Berenice had to admit that there was some justice in the charge. Guy was a big open-faced man with a
