SEEK FUNDS FOR TWO MUNICIPAL PROJECTS HERE

Would Build Light, Power Plant With Public Works Fund

Early hearings are expected on applications the city is making for funds from the National public works program to construct a municipal power and light plant here and water works project, it has been announced by Mayor L. R. Crockett.

Applications for the funds for the electric light and power plant is being prepared through an engineering concern in Dallas. Applications for the water project is being handled by Harry Roberts, engineer in Lubbock, who is having the matter taken up with officials in Washington through an engineering concern in Dallas.

Mr. Crockett stated that both projects, which would involve approxi-mately $150,000, would likely be acted on at an early date. He also said that it would be likely, in the event the applications were passed on, that 30 per cent of the funds would be By School Trustees donated and the remainder would be repaid through the two projects which would be self liquidating.

Press dispatches from Washington disclosed that President Roosevelt's public works cabinet board had announced that the money would be available July 1 for construction of roads in the federal aid highway system and extensions into and through municipalities and for the survey, planning, improvement and construction of secondary or federal roads to be agreed upon by the State Highway Departments and the Secretary of Agriculture.

Texas was allotted $24,244,024 for road construction.

If anyone were to attempt a jaunt through all of the "rendezvous for relaxation" in the metropolis during one evening it would be necessary to make an outlay of greenbacks sufficient to pay off a large part of that old mortgage with enough left over to send the kiddies to the country and pay grandma's dentist bill.

But for those who would like to get a glimpse of famous and infamous folk at play with a minimum of monetary discomfort, a new picture has been filmed, titled "Made on Broadway," with Robert Montgomery and Sally Eilers in leading roles, to be shown Saturday Midnight, Sunday and Monday at the Palace Theatre. It is based on an original story by Courtenay Terrett, who acquired a fund of information on New Yorkers and their habits during his many years as a newspaper man.

Park Avenue Locale

Intimate scenes are shown in Park Avenue "clubs" where politicians gather to pull the various strings to release money from the city treasury without disturbing the taxpayer's lethargy. Speakeasies organized on a luxurious scale are reproduced for the picture and peopled with suave representatives of Manhattan's smartest smart set.

Montgomery fills the rele of an ex-

Even in her pain Joyce heard the change in Neil's voice. That last word was spoken with so touchingly confident and happy note.

"All right, I'll be ready. Good bye," and she ran upstairs and shut herself in her room. There she sat down on the edge of the couch-bed and clenched her hands, staring dry-eyed out of the big window to the distant

Side Quit Hurting, Got Stronger, Well; CARDUI Helped Her

Mrs. R. L. West, of Huntsville, Ala., writes: "I was weak and run-down. I had a pain in my side, and I kept losing weight. I grew nervous over my condition—this was unusual for me, for I am very cheerful when I am well and don't easily get nervous. I knew I ought to take something. My aunt told me I ought to try Cardul, which I did. I began to feel better. I kept it up until I had taken three or four bottles. My wide quit hurting and I was soon feeling strong and well."

Riding off with Joyce that afternoon, Neil was in high spirits, with an elation in his manner that filled Joyce with shame. She rode in silence hardly answering his questions, and not looking at him.

Neil soon fell in with her mood as they rode along, and no longer both, pearly upon them.

Nell soon fell in with her mood as they rode along and no longer bothered her with conversation. Gradually then she began to feel remorse, and wished she could be less surly with Neil. He tried so hard to please her in everything, to adapt himself to her moods. It struck Joyce suddenly how much of that sort of thing he must have been doing in his married life.

"Sam says McBready has a new lot of horses in," remarked Joyce, "did he tell you there's a man from Salinas she knew not how to begin.

"Really? Gosh that's great. Sure relieves my mind."

out of the big window to the distant mountains.

Joyce was wrapped in a mood of warm compassion for Neil. She felt she could not add another unkindness to the many that Frills had inflicted upon him. His eyes haunted her and she felt the package of sand-wiches and fruit Joyce had brought. To her relief Neil talked about Manzanita topics: his mother's condition He finally stretched out ground and put his head on her lap. Joyce had just stroked back a lock of hair from his forehead, thinking absently that Neil ought to be doing something about the increasing thin-ness of his hair, when the thud of a horse's hoofs in the distance caught her ear. She stiffened and glanced up with an apprehensive fear clutching at her heart and stopping its beat for a moment.

There, in an opening between clumps of oak trees about sixty yards away, on the trail they had just left, rode Robert Ainsworth! He did not see her at first. Then his idly roving glance turned to the couple on the ground. His eyes met Joyce's, and a quick smile of recognition spread over his face. Then his look dropped to the figure of Neil lying with his head a moment.

The quizzical smile deepened or Robert's face, "No, I seem rather to have made a mistake—" he began. A new, almost insolent note in his voice whipped Joyce into anger. All at once she knew what her course must be. It mattered little to her what the outcome of this meeting was; she was determined not to be led into further described. ther deceptions.

"No mistake at all," she said quiet-ly. "Neil, he's lying if he says he doesn't know me-

She looked from one to the other of the men. Neil's expression was that of the same partly-repressed hurt that he had shown when Maitland's name had been mentioned. She knew at once that he thought Robert had taken Maitland's place in Frill's life, but that his value of decency and dignity was holding him in check. Neil's immediate, unconscious reaction to this situation did not surprise her; he was showing no reversal of his personality.

Robert, however, had suddenly be-Robert, however, had suddenly become a stranger to her. Was this her "perfect companion," was this the man whose subtlety and sympathy she had so deliriously counted on? He sat on his horse cooly and looked down on them with an expression of amused cynicism. If this attitude was a cloak for his hurt feelings, Joyce thought swiftly, it was a less lovely one than Neil's!

These valuations passed through

These valuations passed through Joyce's mind in one galloping second, while she stood there helplessly, wondering where to begin.

"May I have the pleasure of meet-ing your husband?" Robert asked, smiling.

Joyce looked at him. "Get off your horse, please," she answered, "there's a lot to be straightened out and it'll take some time . . . Robert Ainsworth, this is Neil Packard, my hus-

The men acknowledged the intro-duction, Neil curtly, Robert with the same hard amusement that so offend-

"Charmed," said Ainsworth lightly.
"Oh, don't talk that way!" Joyce cried. "I don't know you at all in this mood—you're making it terribly hard for me—"4"

Robert threw back his head and laughed. "Think, Joyce, what a lot I'm going to learn from this meeting.

laughed. "Think, Joyce, what a lot I'm going to learn from this meeting. Think of the value of it all to a novelist! Why, I wouldn't be missing it for anything! I only wish I had the pen of an Elinor Glyn to write it up adequately—"

Neil drew forward. "I don't think my wife and I have time to stop and listen to that sort of damn' drivel from you—" he began hotly, when Joyce interposed.

"Oh, this is all so fantastic! Please, please, don't begin a fight over it, when neither of you really knows a bit what it's all about . . Neil, I've been trying to make up my mind to tell you—Robert, there's a good deal due to you, too! I hadn't expected to tell you both at once, but since it's happened this way, for heaven's sake don't make it so difficult for me! I want to tell both of you the truth!"

She turned to her husband, "Neil, you never heard of Joyce Ashton, did you? Answer me that, Neil?"

"You don't mean Joyce Abbott, do you Frills?"

you? Sit down, both of you, this is going to take a long time. Please don't begin by thinking I'm crazy. You've both heard of amnesia victims, of course? Did you know you'd married one, Neil? Did you know that Florence Hilton was a girl without a past, without a life? You've got to help me tell this story, Neil, because I remember nothing before the morning after Fire Queen threw me on my had!"

"Neil, haven't you noticed that I've been so different lately? Look back to your return from Chicago that last trip. Haven't I been less reckless, Neil was staring at her dumb-founded. "You're not serious, Frills? Why—what—when—" less troublesome generally than the Frills you married?"

Robert Ainsworth said, "Lord! tell us what you're driving at, Joyce!"

Joyce suddenly found it possible to talk to these two men. It was as if her mind had for some time been pre-paring the story it had to tell, so that the words came swiftly, tensely, dra-matically. She told them of being born Joyce Ashton, of her early life in New England, of her aunt and uncle, of her start toward the Coast in search of adventure.

"I remember getting into the taxicab in Chicago in the snow—that sort of light snow when the streets still aren't quite wet, but the dirt makes them sticky. The taxi skidded violently-there was a crash-and when I woke up I was in a bed, on a sleep-ing porch, looking out at a tree on which oranges were growing. A man came onto the porch and asked me how I felt! That was you, Neil, whom I in my first appalled state fancied to have been my kidnapper!"

"Why on earth—say, how on earth
have you kept this all to yourself?
How long ago was all this, Joyce?"
It was Ainsworth speaking. Neil seemed too stunned to take in the significance of it all.

"I don't know just how I have kept it all. Of course, at first I was so terrified I couldn't think, much less act. Then I've always been awfully reticent—hated scenes—and I usually followed the line of least re-sistance. Neil was leaving to go on a business trip to Chicago. He kissed me good-bye while I was still in that paralyzed state, and I was left to fiparalyzed state, and I was left to figure things out for myself! It was all terrible, of course, but in some ways it was fascinating. Your house, Neil, is so lovely, and the outdoorness appealed to me—it was so different from the pinched ,dark, meagre life I'd been leading in the Philadelphia boarding-house that I hung greedily on ... And then of course greedily on . . . And then, of course, I found out about Frills . . . "Frills was the vicious imp that had taken possession of my while I was an amnesia victim. I found out that as well as having gotten Joyce Ashton a good husband and a beautiful home, she had made that husband desperately unhappy, been a cross little beast.

Neil looked up, "Do you mean to i

Farm Holiday Association Acts in Behalf Of Hale Farmer; Lamb County Men Present

Forty farmers of Lamb county, all members of the Farm Holiday association, went to the Plainview section Monday morning and joined with other members of the organization in bringing about an adjustment whereby foseclosure proceedings on several head of work stock and their increase,

The mortgage and costs amounted to $180,40. Through negotiations the matter was settled for $155, to the satisfaction of all parties concerned.

"Through the efforts of the Farm Holiday association a rent farmer was saved of being deprived of his only means of making a crop," said C. W. Smiley, president of the Lamb county unit of the Farm Holiday association.

The conference between the holder of the mortgage and the representatives of the Farm Holiday association took place at the farm on which the mortgage property was located. The Farm Holiday association delegation was made up of members of the organization from Hale and Lamb counties. The sheriff of Hale county was present and assisted in bringing about the settlement.

Using an old generator from a worn out car, and a propellor of two blades made from a board 2 by 10 by 10 feet long; all of which he mounted on the top of an iron pipe, Mr. Williams is securing sufficient electrical energy to keep his 32 volt battries fully charged at all times, and has electric current for his home and farm uses.

The whole system was set up and constructed on his place with the exception of re-winding the generator which was done by an automobile electrician in a local garage.

The plant has worked efficiently during the few months it has been in operation and he has had no expense or up-keep. A slight breeze is all that is required to generate a good current, and the batteries are easy to charge. It is only necessary mer 4-H club members providing for to charge the batteries a day or so at a time to get them back into shape and then the generator is turned off. government's activities in the interest

90 Per Cent Will Sign

Mr Adam said that in his opinion 90 per cent of the farmers of this county will sign cotton acreage conernment.

The contracts entered into by the revocable until July 31, 1933.

Inspections of the acreage covered in the contracts will be made by representatives of the government, or by local committees before the cotton is plowed under, and after this work has been carried out.

Farmers are warned not to plaw under any cotton until written acceptance of the contract has been received from the government.

The land, which is leased to the Government and on which the cotton is destroyed, may be used by the farmer for the production of other crops for home use

Some indication of the extent to which contracts are being signed up is gained from the fact that the four Littlefield offices had received more than 400 contracts from late Monday afternoon until last night.

Contracts are being received at the following places in Littlefield: First Rational Bank, Yellow House Land Company, Enochs Land Company, and city hall.

Very few of those who have turned their contracts into the Littlefield offices have agreed to take the option plan.

Committees Named

Mr. Adam, as county agent, is in general charge of the acreage reduction campaign. Rogers Willett of Amherst is county chairman, and Pat Campbell of Olton, and Millard Phillips of Littlefield are members of the county committee.

"The building trades will soon lead the way back to activity, giving steel, lumber, cement, and other materials a much needed boom and employment to tens of thousands of mechan-

The Star-Telegram editorial says, in conclusion:

"There is nothing, agricultural improvements excepted, more cheerful in the outlook for business recovery than the prospect of revival of the building industry.

We think-

That it would be very much in the interests of Littlefield and Lamb county if every person who is finan-cially able would start some sort of a building project.

Even if the project is small it will consume building materials and give employment to one or more men.

Every time you give a man a job it is helping to bring back prosperity. One of the reasons for the uncertain and sluggish times is the fact that too few men are regularly employed. PUT A MAN BACK TO WORK; IT'S A GREAT TONIC IN THE

EVENTUAL CURE OF UNCERTAIN AND SLUGGISH CONDITIONS. AND NOW, A MESSAGE TO THE BOYS HEREABOUTS WHO HAVE BEEN REMINDING THE

EDITOR OF A HEADLINE WHICH APPEARED IN A RE-CENT ISSUE OF THE LAMB COUNTY LEADER-

Here's the headline: "Good Crops Assured"

Just because the rain was a little bit slow in putting in an appearance, many of you figured that the editor was a wild eyed optimist. Well, we acknowledge that we are a wild eyed optimist; wild as the male specie of the cow. But there's one thing to remember: Lamb county doesn't fail folks; it's the most friendly county that we know anything about.

RIDE AWHILE, LAMENT AWHILE-

The bicycle riding craze has hit Littlefield.

14. The Glass-Steagall banking reform law insuring deposits.

That is a tremendous list of new legislation. Many of these laws completely change the methods in which business has been conducted and establish new functions of immense power for the Government. As in war time, new bureaus and administrative boards are finding it hard to get office space in which to begin their new duties.

It looks like a busy summer ahead for Uncle Sam.
