

"Flight Command" With Robert Taylor Comes To Palace This Week End

Spectacular thrills of the air come to the Palace Theatre Saturday mid-night, Sunday and Monday with Robert Taylor, Ruth Hussey and Walter Pidgeon in "Flight Command," smashing drama of naval aviation.

Taylor plays Alan Drake, Pensacola cadet, assigned to the crack "Hell Cats" squadron. Amid thrills of battle practice and intimate details of life at an air base, he seeks to comfort the wife of his commander when her brother, his best friend, "crack up." Members of the squadron, loyal to the commander and his wife as is Drake himself, misunderstand the situation and in his anger Drake resigns. After a sensational rescue during maneuvers, the misunderstanding is cleared and the squadron reunited in loyalty takes to the air.

Amid the dramatic episodes run thrills of dive-bombing, forced landings, battle practices, Taylor's close escape when his fighting plane tangles with an aerial target, and other peak moments of excitement in the air.

Frank Borzage, who directed "The Mortal Storm," and is himself an aviator, directed. The cast includes such names as Paul Kelly, Sheppard Stradwick, Nat Pendleton, Red Skelton, Dick Purcell, William Tannen, William Stelling and Stanley Smith.

Pensacola and North Island are principal locales and replicas of important locales there were authentically constructed. Noted films carried cameras aloft for the major thrills.

To Raise Demand By Consumers For Products Of Farm

1941 Livestock Outlook Aided By Industries In Cotton Belt

New factories that are being built in every Southern State and re-employment by established industries are important factors in the improved 1941 outlook for Southern farmers who are blending livestock production with the production of cotton.

"Reductions in unemployment, coupled with increased earnings of those who have not been classed as unemployed, should raise the demand by consumers for farm products," a recent report on the 1941 outlook pointed out. "Most important among these products are meats, dairy and poultry products, vegetables and some fruits."

Interesting in connection with this increased employment is a recent estimate that one hour's wage received by the average American will buy 2.1* pounds of beef, whereas the same amount of labor will earn an Englishman only 1.4 pounds, a German 0.9 of a pound, and a Russian 0.3 of a pound—when meat is available at any price.

Re-employment benefits Southern cotton-livestock farmers in two ways observers point out. Workers can consume more lint cotton and eat more of the livestock products produced through the feeding of cotton seed feed products in balanced rations. In this way, the flow of wages to unemployed throughout the country is a direct encouragement to farmers to blend livestock production with the growing of cotton, which supplies both lint and cottonseed feed products.

That any increases in consumer demand for meats, dairy and poultry products will be especially beneficial to Cotton Belt farmers is indicated by these facts:

1. Decentralization of industry and the trend of industry to locate in the South promise to result in relatively greater industrial development in the Cotton Belt.

2. Meat consumption has been relatively low in many Southern areas, so that per capita consumption, as well as total consumption, may be expected to arise with increased buying power.

3. Packing plants, cheese plants and other marketing facilities that have been expanded sharply in the South encourage Southern farmers to produce and market meat which, in the past, has had to be shipped from other states.

4. Relatively small livestock production in much of the Cotton Belt offers opportunity for expansion. Climatic conditions, supplies of grains, roughages and protein concentrates, and may other factors enable Southern farmers to produce livestock efficiently and economically.

Such factors as these in the 1941 outlook for agriculture are expected to encourage County Agents, Vocational Agriculture Instructors, College and Experiment Stations and other agencies that are already aiding Southern farmers in developing a balanced program in which livestock production and the raising of cotton and feed grains and rousage are blended.

More Cotton Goods But Less Acreage

Texas farmers are expected to take full advantage of the supplementary cotton program which will compensate cotton farmers for voluntary reduction of cotton acreage below the 1941 national acreage allotment by providing them with cotton stamps for the purchase of cotton goods.

Commenting on the supplementary program announced Monday in Washington by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard, Geo. A. Slaughter, chairman of the state Triple-A committee pointed out that for the past several years Texas farmers have not planted up to the total allotment for the state.

The supplemental program is expected to bring about a reduction in 1941 cotton production of around one million bales and at the same time help reduce further the government's holding of the cotton surplus which now amount to nearly twelve million bales. "Basic conservation and parity programs already in effect under the AAA will be in no way changed by the new voluntary program," Slaughter said.

Administering the program will be a responsibility of the Triple-A and the Surplus Marketing Administration will provide and redeem up to 25 million dollars worth of cotton stamps which farmers will receive for their voluntary reduction below their individual allotments. In cooperation, the Extension Service of A. & M. College will carry on an intensive educational program to help cotton producers obtain the greatest benefit from the provisions according to H. H. Williamson, Extension Service director.

Farmers will receive stamps for planting less than their 1941 allotments or their 1940 measured acreage, whichever is lower, at the rate of ten cents a pound times the normal yield of the underplanted acreage up to $25 per family in the case of sharecroppers, tenants and owner-operators. The new program is to be accompanied by an intensive campaign to encourage improved living standards through more gardens and food and feed production for home consumption.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Hemphill spent Saturday in Lubbock. Mrs. Hemphill visited her sister, Mrs. E. R. Howell.

L. E. Gandy, brother-in-law of Mrs. L. C. Grissom, spent Saturday and Sunday in the L. C. Grissom home.

tenant governor. Justice F. L. Hawkins of the Court of Criminal Appeals gave him the oath.

The ceremonies were conducted on a broad, high, bunting-draped platform, constructed before the capitol main entrance—the Texas Lone Star and the Stars and Stripes—hung above the arched doorway.

The famous Longhorn band of the University of Texas and the Aggie band of Texas A. & M. college contributed stirring tunes.

Following the double inauguration, thousands walked across the street to the governor's mansion grounds and ate barbecued beef, buffalo, sheep and pork—15,000 pounds of it—possibly the biggest party of its kind ever held.

The streets in front of the mansion were roped off, and the crowd enjoyed dancing until far into the night.

Senate President Pro Tempore Clay Cotten presented Senator Jess Martin of Fort Worth, O'Daniel's home town, who presented the governor for his inaugural address.

cheon at the Presbyterian church, when the volunteers and members of their families and guests were honored. The luncheon was served by the Presbyterian ladies.

The group sang "America" before Rev. Roy Shahan, local Baptist pastor, offered the invocation.

Otto Jones, chairman of the county draft board, introduced W. A. Schrier, secretary of the board and Mrs. M. V. Cobb and Miss Dorothy Newgent, clerk and assistant of the board. He also introduced the volunteers, and expressed appreciation to the men who did not wait to be called, but volunteered for selective service. Mr. Jones pointed out that to date there had been no one drafted from Lamb county, as the quota had been made up of volunteers. The first group of men left November 22.

Billy Hall, county attorney, introduced the business men who were hosts to the affair, and E. A. Bills discussed the meaning of the draft.

"Conscription is a great thing," he said, "because we need to defend the rights and privileges which we enjoy in America. We believe that God is standing by democratic nations, and we have much in this country worth fighting for, in the event we should enter war."

"Selective draft is not a new thing," T. Wade Potter, local Legionnaire, told the group. "President Washington asked the first congress of the United States for a selective draft law. It has again become necessary. Draft is a measure for the prevention of war, and we should have started conscription several years ago."

"The boys are going to like the training camps, and after a year's training many will enlist in the regular army," he continued. "They will be benefitted physically, mentally and morally, and this training is a privilege for the young men of our land. This training will influence the dictators in other countries and they will realize this country is prepared, and will not stand for an invasion."

Reverend Shahan stressed the privileges of religious freedom in America, and urged the boys who go to camp to not neglect their spiritual lives.

Mr. Jones introduced the only married man, Francis Garland Lankford, who was among the group of volunteers, and Mrs. Lankford.

Legionnaires and members of the Chamber of Commerce who attended the luncheon were Dr. M. V. Cobb, J. M. Stokes, Floyd Coffman, O. K. Woodall, Sam Batton, G. C. Vaught, Jack Farr, Y. Onstott, father of Vance Onstott, who was one of the volunteers, W. H. Madden, J. B. Dubose, Billy Hall, W. H. Rutledge, J. D. Evans, Rev. Roy Shahan, Raymond Renfro, Gene Yeager, Carroll Blacklock, R. W. Rutherford, J. S. Hilliard, E. A. Bills, T. Wade Potter, J. A. Price, Otto Jones, J. A. Staggers and Sam Hutson. Hutson and others helped to sponsor the affair.

Other guests were: Mrs. W. H. Bell, mother of J. W. Bell, who volunteered; Max Stansell, brother of Richard Stansell, who was a volunteer, Mrs. Lankford and Miss Margaret Bandy.

Legionnaires accompanied the group in the parade to the train.

The following boys boarded the train for Lubbock, from where they will be sent to the training camps this week:

Edward Anderson, Jr., Littlefield; Oliver Lee Lovelady, Sudan; Gerald Dee Walker, Sudan; Boyd Amos Stamps, Olton; J. W. Bell, Littlefield; Vance Onstott, Littlefield; Francis Garland Lankford, Littlefield; Mose J. Anderson, Littlefield; Earl Milford Peek, Littlefield; Kenneth Grant Richards, Littlefield; Henry Myers, Earth; Victor Edward Kubin, Anton.

he didn't smile with contentment on receiving same.

Mr. Hill didn't have transportation, but in order to get here in time, what did he do but hitch-hike to Littlefield, getting here early Monday morning—in time to participate in the program arranged in honor of the 23 volunteers, and to leave by the 3:14 train for Lubbock with the other boys. So everything went off fine—and the local draft board's scheduled quota was made up after all.

A triangle stamp was complementarily stamped by the local chamber of Commerce, on each letter that was mailed from the new post office on that day. "Littlefield, The Pulse of the Plains, Yes—We moved into our new $75,000 postoffice January 16, 1941, Texas," was on the stamp.

"Imagine how I felt, when I went to the old post office building two days after removal, to get my mail," said a business man down the street. Mr. Storey reported that many people kept forgetting, and going to the old post office quarters, until it was padlocked.

All the new boxes have keys, and only one key was issued to each family who secured boxes. Two keys were issued to business firms. Approximately 600 keys were issued the first day.

 Texas Farmers By Cottonseed Mills

DALLAS, Jan. 21 — $3,627,309 was the amount received by Texas cotton growers from the sale of cottonseed to oil mills during the month of December, it was announced here today by Bennette Wallin, secretary of the Texas Cottonseed Crushers' Association. This estimate is based upon the reports of two Federal agencies, the Bureau of the Census and the Agricultural Marketing Service.

Growers' cash income from seed during December was about twice as large as during the same month of 1939. During the first five months of the current season, beginning August 1, Texas oil mills have paid growers a total of $23,109,006 which is $5,306,000 greater than during the same period last season.

With the Texas cotton crop 11 percent larger this season than last, seed receipts by the mills to date have increased by about the same percentage. Cash farm income from cottonseed, however, has risen 30 percent.

Federal Land Bank

For the second time since its organization in 1917, Texas' largest bank, the Federal Land Bank of Houston, is owned entirely by farmers and ranchmen of Texas. According to advice received from Sterling C. Evans, president of the bank, all Government-owned stock has been retired and all of the capital stock of this cooperative credit institution is in the hands of those who use its facilities.

Originally capitalized by Congress, the Federal Land Bank of Houston was established in 1917 to provide farmers and ranchers in Texas with a source of long-term amortized, low-cost farm mortgage loans made through national farm loan associations. Wise management of the cooperative credit system coupled with members' favorable repayment record, made it possible to retire the capital stock invested in the Federal Land Bank of Houston by the Federal Treasury, it was explained.

Conservation Is Said Essential

WASHINGTON -- Conservation of soil and water resources were declared as essential to the national defense in an agriculture department report which cited the work done on farms in Texas.

The report was transmitted to President Roosevelt.

"The productive soils of the country are the backbone of the nation's agriculture," the report stated. "How these soils are used and how they are conserved will largely determine the efficiency and permanence of agricultural production."

"This nation without regard to the war, must maintain standard of productive land. The American standard of living depends on it. Failure to maintain the soil will be a direct peril to our civilization."

The report cited the work done on the Elm Creek demonstration area near Temple, in a drainage basin of 206,000 acres inhabited by more than 600 farmers.

The report observed that in Texas there had been an increasingly serious problem in dealing with farm tenants as a result of the adaptation of tractors to farms. In Texas alone, the number of tractors increased from 9,000 to 99,000 from 1920 to 1940. Each tractor, the report asserted, usually forced three or four tenant farmers off the land.

Major Jessee also points out that in addition to the selective service men, it is extremely important that the regular army be built up thru three year enlistments to its maximum strength, and in the shortest possible time, as the regular army must, in addition to its other functions, furnished highly trained cadres around which new units of the United States larger army of selective men must be built. Recruiting for the regular army continues also, and the Lubbock station is interested in obtaining the highest type of young men for this service.

In a letter to the Leader dated Jan. 15, Major Jessee wrote: "Please advise the young men reached by your paper to consider this matter and if they are interested to apply at the nearest Army Recruiting Station. Stations are located at Lubbock, Amarillo, Childress, Pampa, Plainview, Big Spring and Sweetwater.

"We are particularly interested in obtaining the largest number of flying cadets from young men who have had two years in college and are interested in aviation. These men are to be trained to become Army pilots and reserve officers. We also have vacancies for enlisted men in the Air Corps and Field Artillery."

The expansion food sale staged by the Alexander Food Store over last week end was an outstanding success, as reported by the partners, Jack and Carl Alexander.

In preparation for the sale larger stocks were purchased and many improvements carried out at the store.

Mrs. D. S. Parkinson served hot biscuits made from Packard's Supreme Flour; the representative of Folger's Coffee served coffee; Brown Cracker & Candy Co.'s representative passed out crackers; and a representative of the Del Monte products also exhibited and demonstrated the fine products sold by that company.

In an interview with Mr. Carl Alexander Wednesday, he said: "We were more than pleased with our volume of sales this past week end. It far exceeded our expectations. Mr. Charles V. Peach submitted his resignation after being elected as commercial teacher. He secured another position which he preferred to the position at Spring Lake.

Littlefield CCC Boxers "Warm Up" At Tahoka Friday Night

A flurry of fists belonging to Dale Odum of Lubbock and Junior "Tech" McLaurin of O'Donnell, featured a "fight night" card at Tahoka High gymnasium Friday night, which had been billed as a dual meet between Tahoka and Littlefield boxers.

The eleven bout program, witnessed by a large and cheering crowd, was the first in a series of "warm up" programs leading up to the District Golden Gloves tournament at Lubbock February 6, 7 and 8.

Tahoka will be hosts to a preliminary Golden Gloves boxing tournament on the nights of January 23 and 24, Thursday and Friday nights, to which amateur boxers are invited.

Junior McLaurin, Texas Amateur Athletic federation lightweight champion, now fighting as a welter weight, used his extra reach and a fine right hand to advantage tonight in winning a close decision from Dale Odum, Lubbock High School football quarterback, in one of the best fights ever seen here. Both are expected to go far in the District tournament, if they don't meet each other too soon.

Results of the other matches:
 Taylor of Littlefield CCC defeated King of Tahoka in a middleweight contest; Woody Culpepper of the CCC lost a decision to F. B. Forence of Draw, in the light heavyweight division; Warren of Tahoka outpointed Kisar of the Littlefield CCC team in a flyweight match; Proctor of O'Donnell knocked out Brown of Tahoka in the first round; they are 126 pounds.

Todd of O'Donnell defeated Gilliam of T-Bar, in the 118 pound class. G. W. White of Tahoka won a decision over Yenez of Littlefield; they are flyweights. W. D. McCarthy of Littlefield won a close decision over Mutt Sessums of Tahoka in the bantamweight division.
 James Stotts of Slaton, back in the Golden Glove / Middleweight wars, knocked out Hatchell of Tahoka in the first round. In another flyweight fight, Sport Pendleton of T-Bar won a decision over Wayland Hughes of Tahoka. Pat McKibben of O'Donnell lost a lightweight bout to Jake Weathers of Tahoka.
 All boxers, regardless of whether they win or lose in preliminary tournaments or meets are invited to register for the District Golden Gloves tournament at Lubbock early next month.
 Contracts have recently been awarded for the construction of 276 miles of REA lines to serve 442 members of the McCulloch County Electric Cooperative, 116 miles of lines to serve 176 members of the Bandera County Electric Cooperative, and 253 miles of lines to serve 401 members of the Concho Valley Electric Cooperative.

Second Mattress Program To Get Underway Soon

Plan Will Provide Families With Material To Make Cotton Comforts

Work on the 1941, or second mattress program, will begin as soon as local committee men and women think it advisable to open the centers. Delay in some incidents has been the result of waiting until sufficient application have been approved to insure work for several days when the centers are once opened. Those receiving mattresses will be notified to report at the time and place specified, to process the material into mattresses in accordance with the directions issued by the Extension Service. Those who have not filed an application should come to the office of the Extension agents to do so.

A recent report from the state office indicates that the 1941 program will also enable low income families to receive material for a cotton comfort for each mattress received under either of the cotton mattress programs. Work on comforts will not begin in the immediate future but those eligible to receive a comfort should make requests for same. It will only be necessary to make a request in writing indicating that the applicant desires material for making comforts.

"MOCK TRIAL" IS FEATURE FOR BRIDAL SHOWER AT OLTON HONORING MRS. CLARENCE DAVIS

Miss Treva Jennings was hostess to a miscellaneous shower at her home at Olton last Thursday night, honoring Mrs. Clarence Davis, recent bride.

An interesting and unique program was rendered. The Bruton sisters sang, "So You're the One," before officers of the law, Lee Cates and G. M. Vann appeared and "arrested" the bride, rushing her to the courtroom at the Lamb county courthouse for trial.

At 8:15 o'clock, the 50 ladies who were present, went in a body to the courthouse where a mock trial was held for Miss Salina Potvet, alias Mrs. Salina Davis, who had previously been indicted by a grand jury, with Miss Pauline Bledsoe acting as foreman.

The district judge, Mrs. Ann Blythe, called the first case on docket, State of Texas vs. Miss Salina Potvet, alias Salina Davis, charged with marriage with intent to defraud, and ordered the clerk, Mrs. Frank Cummings, to bring the papers in the case to her desk.

The district attorney, Mrs. Bob Kirk, and the attorney for the defendant, Miss Treva Jennings, proceeded to choose a jury.

After the jury was duly selected, the district attorney read the indictment and the case was underway. It was very common for one of the attorneys to object to a question because it was "immaterial, irrelevant, highly prejudicial and has no bearing upon the facts of the case."

The jury, after weighing the facts and evidence, returned a verdict of "guilty" and assessed the defendant a punishment of 99 years in custody of Clarence Davis as his lawfully wedded wife.

The bride was presented with many lovely gifts at the trial and refreshments were served.

AMHERST METHODIST CHURCH

Appeal for the Church College

All denominations have their colleges and schools. It has been demonstrated different times in the history of the churches that the church with no schools and colleges soon ceases to be. That if a church lives, grows, and holds its people it must have its schools and colleges. Even the very youngest sects or churches today see the need of a college and they are building them.

Of the 1,078 colleges in the United States, 842 are directly related to some church and owes its life to a body of church people. The 26 left are under private and tax support. If all the denominational schools were changed to tax supported schools it would add to our taxes per annum $335,000,000.

Some people of the churches do not believe in church schools and colleges, but a church must have its trained ministry and leadership and if a church does not train this part of its people some other church will, and people usually go where they are fed.

There is a cry going out today for a more loyal attitude towards the church school and a greater support thrown to them or else they shall soon cease to be. "Within 25 years the church school will be taken over by the state if they do not get greater support and more loyal attention, thus warns the Dr. Charles F. Wishart, president of Wooster College. With dwindling resources and decreasing enrollments many of Ohio's 60 church schools face a gloomy future." What is true there is true elsewhere.

There is no competition between the church and state schools but their work is complementary and supplementary.

This is another modern condition that is a fruit of the times and must be corrected or else the next generations will lose a primary factor in their lives. The Christian college is not passing because its place and use are not needed but due to a wrong shift in the minds of many church people and because many people who are not church minded ought to be so.

We shall hope that a revival of church and Christian interests may be seen ere this move goes much farther.

We had a better offering last Sunday for our McMurry College than we had last year, but not as much as they need or we should have received.

Our services for the Sabbath are as usual, except at the evening hour group meetings will be at 7 and church at 7:30. We miss you when you are absent and wonder if you are sick, visiting or someone visiting you, or you are somewhere else.

Telephone No. 27 for office supplies, office forms.

M. J. Wilson at one o'clock last Thursday afternoon, and 17 women were in attendance.

Miss Connie Wilson gave several piano selections, after which the afternoon was spent in planning the 1941 yearbooks.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Floyd Brown, Feb. 8.

The Amount We Pay For Eye-Care

By Dr. B. W. Arnstead

Our Government has analyzed the expenditures of "we the people" and has records showing the average amounts spent each year by the average and all classes of American Families. It is taken according to the income level of the particular family.

According to the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, the average family expenditure on eye-wear during a 12 months period is ONLY $3.22. This particular record was made between the years 1934 and 1936 of 14,469 white and negro families included in a "Study of Clerical Workers" made in 42 cities with populations over 50,000 by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. Families on relief or with incomes below $500.00 per year were excluded from the survey.

Think of it, only $3.22 per year is spent on the average family for eye-glasses! Isn't that a reasonable and small amount to pay for the upkeep on such a vital and hard-working organ of our body. Isn't it money well spent though. When we think of the value our eyes are to our livelihood we can truly say that any amount 5 or 10 times that much would still be extremely cheap, when we think of the pleasure brought to us by no other means but our eyes, then we can hardly realize that their "true value" can not be estimated—they are PRICELESS. Our very living, as well as our happiness and pleasure, comes to most of us directly through the use of our eyes. From the very minute we wake up in the morning until the cover is pulled over us at night and the lights put out, we are constantly and continuously using our eyes, our most priceless and most valuable possession.

Little do we think of the fact that all through the day and during our waking hours, it is our eyes which are using the most nervous energy from our bodies. Yes, it is true that every second the eye is open that there is a constant and continuous stream of nerve impulses streaming from the eye to the brain carrying messages which are interpreted in the brain. It takes energy, and lots of it, to transfer these messages even if the eye is functioning normally in every respect . . . and more energy if there is malfunction present. The eye does not actually see anything . . . yes, that's what I said . . . the eye does not actually see anything but it does act as a camera. The eye receives the light from an object and takes a picture which is sent in the form of nerve impulses back to the brain where the picture is developed and then projected. It all works similar to the camera and motion picture show. The camera takes the picture, then it's developed and the motion picture machine projects it. This is what is taking place constantly every day in the week and every week in the year throughout a lifetime. There is no machine so perfect but what it will need some little attention and repairs occasionally when used to any extent. Yet, when we think of how much the human eye is used and how little attention we give it and how few repairs we make—it is no wonder we think of it as being very close to perfect.

Some people have the misfortune of being born with eyes not perfect in every respect. These people usually realize the need for repairs and go to the optometrist for his services. But it is the person who is born with good eyes and good vision and uses his eyes constantly each day doing strenuous work with them that never thinks of his eyes ever needing the attention of the optometrist. That is when he trends on dangerous grounds. No, we cannot always blame that person since his eyes do not always warn him of trouble ahead. Not like the stomach, the eyes sometimes never warn us of trouble until the condition has gone much too far. Even then some of us are careless and more or less neglectful about going to our optometrist in the community for at least a consultation. Most optometrists are easy to get along with and are more than glad to talk over the visual problems and difficulties of their patients without charge to them. Where a lengthy technical examination is made, naturally he has to make a charge for that service but lots of us could eliminate some of our eye discomforts and other visual disturbances by merely consulting the optometrist and getting his advice about the eyes and their care.

Another alarming fact is that about 60 to 70 percent of all the glasses worn by people throughout the world are worn because of discomfort and not worn merely because these people cannot see clearly. For these 60 to 70 percent of the persons wearing glasses, if they were to go without them they would experience headache, nausea, dizziness, nervousness, burning and itching of the eyes, and many other symptoms which can only be relieved in these cases by the use of glasses. Could these persons have bought their glasses at the 5 and 10 cent store and still gained this comfort? Definitely not! Such procedures are dangerous and harmful even to the patient who only needs better vision.

After all considerations of the comfort and pleasure as well as good vision brought to us by our eyes and by the use of our optometrists' services, it is unbelievable to think that the average family expenditure on eye-glasses for a year's time is only $3.22. At such a tremendously low cost to us, we can afford to have our eyes examined more regularly and get the services our eyes deserve. Everyone should have their eyes examined at least once a year, and more often if

Heart Trouble - Head Trouble

An appeal to the American heart will always meet with more response than an appeal to the American head. An Army could stand at our doors with leveled bayonets and demand that we feed them or die ourselves; and even if we believed them we'd toss a few rifle bullets in their direction and ask them to feed on that—and we'd probably send a hand-grenade for dessert.

But let that same army leave its bayonets behind and ask for food because it was starving, and seventy-two committees would form over-night. Collections would be made in every neighborhood—and the army would be fed.

We're a funny people. Soft-hearted. Hard-headed. And sometimes we get our wires crossed and half of us let the soft heart dominate while the other half is busy with the hard head.

Something like that is happening today. We are being swamped with appeals for food from France, Norway, Belgium and all the Nazi-occupied countries. The hard-headed among us see a risk in feeding these people—a risk that it may help the Nazi cause. The soft-hearted want to feed starving people—and the dickens with the risk. Each group has its own proponents and urges its own cause. But on one cause at least, they can find common ground—the feeding of the children of France as proposed by a group of A. E. F. veterans.

These veterans of the World War are avoiding the controversial problem of shipping American goods through the blockade by soliciting funds to purchase food in Switzerland. They have made contact with the Quakers who maintain a staff in Switzerland and see that the food gets to the source for which it is intended. Of this group, General J. Pershing has said:

"I am acquainted with the efforts of your group of A. E. F. Veterans to raise funds so that the Good Quakers may continue their care of destitute and underfed children in unoccupied France. It is my privilege to endorse without reservation this movement of former soldiers and to wish them every success in their humanitarian aims."

No one can help in the former commander-in-chief in his wishes. The A. E. F. makes an appeal to all us Americans—the hard-headed bunch of us with the soft hearts.

Mr. Wingo spells his name differently from any other "Beyrlis" in the country, I suppose, and recently when I was talking to them and jotting down news notes, I stumbled over the name several times, when he said, "That's all right, I never had a teacher who ever spelled my name correct." I resolved to get it in the paper correct—but alack and alas! It was

In a recent issue of the Amarillo News-Globe, a cartoon appeared of Dr. Hugh A. Sticksel, Amarillo optometrist who is a friend of Dr. B. W. Armistead. Headed "Panhandle Personalities," the cartoon was accompanied by interesting facts of Dr. Sticksel's life. His hobby is duck hunting, and a small picture of two ducks was drawn in the cartoon, one duck saying, "It's the same fella. He shot at us last year," and the other duck said, "and the year before."

and Dr. Armistead in November and they drove all over Lamb county shooting at ducks, but they didn't get a one. The Lamb county ducks know how to "duck" from those doctors!

Jack will be remembered by his many friends in Littlefield as the one who sang first tenor with a local quartet, composed of E. O. McIver, B. L. Cogdill, Arthur Mueller and himself.

He's the young man, in case you don't remember, Mrs. Ernest Thompson said reminded her of Nelson Eddy, when she visited here a year ago.

He is employed by the Union Compress & Warehouse Company at Slaton, and is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Norman of Littlefield.

CHAPTER VI

Synopsis

After Mark Alexander's beautiful wife Ellen died, her whole family became interested in Valerie, Ellen's daughter by a former marriage. All were Shirley seemed to have their eyes on the trust fund left Valerie by Ellen. Dorothy, Elise, and their husbands, want Valerie to live with them, but Mark will have none of it. Mark and Valerie go on a two-months' automobile trip and as they near home they meet Lucy Tredway, owner of a broken-down traveling library. Mark asks Lucy to tutor Valerie and live with them.

Mark knocked at Valerie's door the next morning just as she was about to knock on his. He came in and drew her down beside him on the window seat overlooking the hotel gardens. "Just in case you have five minutes you don't know what to do with before breakfast," he said.

"If you're sure it won't be any more—" She leaned her head against his arm, and looked down in the flower beds, multicolored in the morning sunshine. But when she heard about Lucy she sat straight up.

"How did you know?" she cried. "Know what?"

"What I was wishing for? Ever since you brought her into the car. When I saw her in my dress, I could hardly bear it—I mean, giving her up! She's so sweet, father, and she's—oh, like one of us. So many people aren't, if you've noticed."

"I've noticed," said Mark. "I don't want you to lose your enthusiasm, but we'll go a bit slow just the same."

"How?"

"Well—Lucy insists on our looking her up. Probably we'll do it today. The places are all near. Then she'll go home with us and try it out. Then if she doesn't like us, or we don't like her, we'll call the whole thing off."

"It'll be whether she likes us," said Valerie positively. "You'll see, I know I shall always love her. Something tells you about people. It's funny. Of course it would be silly not to like you—"

"Is my face red?" said Mark. He jumped up and pulled her to her feet. "Do you want me to be a conceited old man with a squint in my eye from looking down on people?" She dropped behind him

It's a sort of institution. I couldn't abandon it. I mean it."

"But I can't let you," protested Lucy. "And I can't afford any more repairs. So I really don't see"

"Look at it this way. I'm buying the Ark for the repairs. And cheap enough. I want the books too. You can buy them all back later, if you want to. But I'd feel a whole lot better about it that way. All right?"

"It's marvelous," said Lucy. She would work twice as hard with Valerie to make up for it. It was a great load off her mind. She hadn't quite realized what the Ark meant until she abandoned it by the roadside in the rain. And selling her father's books had seemed awful. Now that she was going to be a wage earner, she could, as he suggested, buy the things back.

Mark hunted up the best garage in town, and made arrangements

Quietly, Mark handed Lucy an envelope

on their way to the elevators, eyeing his slim erectness critically. "You'll never be old, father," she said seriously. "You'll just go on and on—being you."

Lucy met them later in the hotel lobby. She made no explanation as to why she hadn't joined them for breakfast. As a matter of fact, she had got up early on purpose, preferring to conduct her business transactions alone.

She packed the perfume, the sippers, the nightgown, and the drugstore soap in a little bag Valerie had loaned her, and came down to the office and paid her bill.

After that, she had just twenty-five cents, twenty of which she exchanged for coffee and rolls at a drugstore counter on a side street.

She made some inquiries about the sale of her books and finally ran to catch a timid little man in a second-hand book shop. He listened vaguely while she told him about the library. He seemed, Lucy decided, to be afflicted with chronic suspicion. He could never, he said, commit himself without seeing the books. And even then, with times what they were—

Lucy thanked him and went back to the hotel. Even with five cents in her pocket and no sale for her books, there was an extraordinary "It to her suits."

She met Valerie's eager hand, and turned a cheerful grin on Mark. She had, she said, made inquiries about towing in the Ark, and scrapping it.

"But I want to salvage the Ark," explained Mark. "You never know when we may need it. And then you may not like us, and may want to escape in the night. How would you make your get-away?"

"So what?" asked Lucy. But an unforeseen hope was stirring.

"So leave the Ark to me. I'll have it put in shape and sent home."

about the Ark and about sending the books to Wide Acres. Their luggage was stowed away in the car, and they started out to hunt Lucy's references. Mark tried to laugh her out of the idea, but when he saw what it meant to her, he decided to go through with it. They called first on the judge who meted out justice at the Allington courthouse. Allington was the county seat and the court was in session, which was a break for Lucy.

Valerie was much impressed by the building, which was of Civil war vintage, with a round and rather tarnished dome. The processes of the law terrified her slightly until she met Judge Brown, who was round also, and a little like the dome except for the tarnish.

He greeted Lucy with wheezy enthusiasm. He had gone to college with her father, and was quite definite in his opinion of the family. "Surely that's enough," said Mark as they came out of the musty corridors into the sunshine.

"Just one more—Mr. Barrows, over at the bank in Melton. It's only ten miles. You promised!"

They dragged Valerie away from the pigeons strutting over the grass in the courthouse square, and went back to the car.

"You never told me he was a president," said Mark an hour later. He was, he said, tremendeeply awed by bank presidents. "And he's known you since you were five. Don't you feel completely vindicated by now?"

"I suppose so," said Lucy dubiously. "I did so want you to see the dean—but if you haven't time—"

"We haven't," said Mark. "I'm a hard-working, president myself. Nothing swanky, like a bank. Just a chemical company. But I can't show up once in a while, they may throw me out on my ear."

So Lucy had to be satisfied. They drove back to Allington, to find the van towed in and work already begun. Lucy let down the back steps and climbed aboard to pack her things.

Valerie got in after her, occupying at once a place for future trips. The small bed that had slid up against the side when not in use fascinated her. The half dozen shining pans hanging from their hooks and the tiny oil stove, suggested incredible adventure.

They almost had to drag her away when they were ready to leave. Valerie could hear Mark talking to the head mechanic while Lucy was packing. She heard the man say something about a new engine, and saw the quiet nod of Mark's head, and his quick glance at the old van. Evidently Lucy was not to know.

She would never tell. If the Ark needed a new engine, it was no more than it deserved.

Back in the car again, Mark looked at his watch.

"Can you stand another night at the hotel?" he asked. Valerie nodded with enthusiasm, but Lucy glanced with sheer panic at her purse. She could hardly tell them that besides the Ark, her capital consisted of a five-cent piece! "You see, it's almost dinner time. If we stay here, we can get an early start and make Wide Acres probably by evening with ease—"

"Of course," thought Lucy, "he couldn't imagine anybody with only five cents. What's a ten dollar a night hotel to him?"

But she changed her mind later in the evening. As they left her at her door, Mark handed her an envelope. He did it so quietly that even Valerie hardly noticed. In her room, Lucy tore the envelope open. A hundred dollar bill lay cozily inside a sheet of hotel note paper.

"Half your first month's salary in advance," Mark had written. "Just to bind the bargain. So you can't walk out on us." Then his initials. Nothing more. Lucy sank down on the tufted satin of her bed. She had never owned a hundred dollar bill before. She felt like Croesus. Were employers often like this? she wondered.

They reached Wide Acres in time for dinner the next night. Lucy never forgot her first sight of the house. Mark had told her a little about it, and she knew it was comparatively new. But as they drove up to the door, and she glimpsed its mellow brick beyond the great white pillars of the portico, it was hard to believe it hadn't been there forever.

Chiltern opened the door. The spirit in which the two men's hands met was obvious, although all Mark said was, "Well, Chiltern!" And Chiltern answered, "It's good to see you back, sir."

Mrs. Banwood stood, primmer than ever in the background, waiting to be greeted. And there were the still-smiling Alice, and Katie, the other maid. Lucy was explained to them all simply as "Miss Tredway, who has come to us as Miss Valerie's tutor." Lucy felt more than a little strange as she followed Mrs. Banwood to her rooms, with Valerie at their heels. What standing had a tutor? She had read that secretaries in great houses often had their meals served upstairs, to avoid embarrassment. But what happened to tutors?

And what was she between classes? She had gathered from Mark that she would then be a sort of companion. Although she had never had a steady job before, she knew she was being overpaid for this. Two hundred dollars a month, and such a home! Well, she must try to earn it! So far, it looked like no job at all.

She had heard Mark tell Mrs. Banwood to show her several guest suites and let her choose. But she never got farther than the first one. She took one look at it, put down her purse and gloves, and said, "I like this so much, I won't look at any more, thanks."

It was a bedroom, sitting room and bath, all done in delicate mauve and green and silver, with here and there a faint touch of blue.

"Dinner is at eight, Miss Tredway," said Mrs. Banwood. "The houseman will bring your bags immediately. Shall I send a maid to you?"

"No, thanks," said Lucy. "I'm quite used to looking after myself."

Mrs. Banwood said "Thank you," and shut the door. Lucy took off her hat and loosened her flattened hair. She glanced at Valerie, who still stood in the middle of the sitting room looking critically around her.

"Wouldn't you really like to see the others?" she asked. "I could show them to you myself, you know. Maybe you'd like them better." She hoped Lucy would say yes. "But I couldn't possibly like anything better," said Lucy. "Your mother must have had pretty marvelous taste!" It was the first time she had mentioned Valerie's mother to Valerie.

"You see, my father built this house quite a long time before he married us—" Valerie explained. "I remember he told mother she could do anything she wanted to with it. And mother said it was almost too perfect as it was, and she wouldn't dream of touching it."

"And how sensible that was!" Valerie had accomplished a strange withdrawal at the mention of Ellen. Lucy could have understood grief. But this detachment—almost as if she spoke of some character in a story or play—was a trifle uncanny.

Valerie jumped up from the deep chair before the wood fire. "I'll have to change," she said. "It's twenty minutes to eight."

A man knocked and came in with Lucy's bags and she began at once to unpack.

An estimated 10,000 persons saw Lee O'Daniel lay his hand on an Bible raise his right hand and solemnly swear to uphold the law and constitutions of State and nation as he was inaugurated for a second term as governor of Texas today.

Massed in front of Texas' red granite capitol, they also heard the governor declare that the State government was in a critical condition because of a departure from the true principles of democracy. Cannons boomed in a 19-gun salute and military planes roared overhead as Chief Justice James P. Alexander administered the oath to O'Daniel.

When The Roll Is Called At Lions Club - Kenneth Will Be There! And How!

When the roll is called at the Lions Club luncheons — Kenneth Houk will be there.

Kenneth, so the story goes, had been absenting himself from the luncheons of the local club with a regularity that totaled several meetings in succession.

Fellow club members missed Kenneth immensely — they didn't want the well known meat market proprietor absent from their gatherings, so — they did something about it.

Jimmie Alup, William L. Aldridge, J. R. Eagan, Durwood Howell, and Raynes Sparks made up a special committee on action to bring Kenneth back into the fold. Wednesday they borrowed one of Pryor Hammons' ambulances, went to the Houk Grocery & Market, loaded Kenneth

and The Local Draft quota Was Made Up

How do happen right here in Littlefield!

Otto Jones, chairman of the local draft board was informed Saturday that Elmer Lowell had volunteered, one of the 23 local men to leave here Monday for military training, had enlisted on a 3-year basis in the National Guard and was stationed at Camp Bowie, Brownwood, did he get excited—yes—and no wonder—with orders from the government to have ready and send 23 men—to find one had chosen a three-year enlistment and left a vacancy.

Then the miracle happened — the local Draft Board received a letter late Saturday from Leslie Hill, who had previously volunteered here, and who had gone to East Texas to live, to the effect that the unit there would not accept him and that he was returning to Littlefield.

Well, that message was sure comforting to Mr. Jones, and maybe

All Well-Coached Elevens Need A Good Cheer Leader

It is the dream of every football coach to have as their first child a son, whom they can watch on the gridiron following in their father's footsteps, as the years go by.

But slack and alas!

A cute little red-haired daughter was born to Coach and Mrs. Abe Murphy Saturday morning at the Payne-Shotwell Hospital. The child, who weighed six pounds and three ounces, was named Martha Jean, for Mrs. Murphy's mother and her youngest sister.

Mrs. Murphy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Cardwell of Shamrock, were disappointed that they were unable to arrive in Littlefield a few hours after their first grandchild's birth, but their younger daughter, Jean, underwent an appendectomy at a hospital in Shamrock Jan. 13, so they will visit here as soon as she recuperates.

Mr. and Mrs. Murphy moved to Littlefield last fall, and he is coach of the Wildcats, local football squad.

These and other cries were heard all day long Thursday, as hundreds of Littlefield citizens stood in line at the new post office on the opening day, waiting to get keys to the new boxes. The lobby was packed with people until long after six o'clock, and postmaster W. D. T. Storey and other employees kept the window open a while after closing time to accommodate the crowd.

The first letter mailed from the new postoffice was written by Postmaster W. D. T. Storey to Congressman George Mahon in Washington, D. C., expressing appreciation from himself and the entire personnel and stating how proud they were of their new quarters.
