Deep Plowing Is Soil Conservation Movement In County

mon, W. P. Holland, A. S. Powell, T. M. Slemmons, E. K. Angeley, C. W. Wiseman and several others.

Dozens of other farmers have been out watching the operation, and will do the same on their own farms if they are able to secure the use of equipment capable of doing the job.

Turns to 20" Depth
Turning the soil to the 20-inch depth, is rated as a soil conservation operation, with the government paying $5.00 per acre of the cost. The total cost is approximately $10.00 per acre, which would require the farmer to pay $5.00 per acre out of pocket.

Increases Yield
Most farmers are agreed however, that even at that figure the price is still cheap. They say that the soil from the lower strata, brought to the surface, on top of shifting, sandy land, not only increases yield, but holds the land from blowing, and makes costly, customary replantings unnecessary. In addition, it is said that the benefits continue for several years from one deep plowing.

Many Lamb county farms, sandy or dry land type will get a treatment of depth plowing this spring, especially in view of the fact that abnormally dry conditions prevail, if the equipment to do the job can be found or obtained. A dozen of other counties however, will also be bidding for this equipment, on a lease or purchase basis.

The program is under jurisdiction of P.M.A. offices at Amherst. It is not a new program, but the amount the government pays or is willing to pay of the cost, was sharply increased this year.

Lamb county farmers who plan to take part in the extensive deep plowing program have been deluging the Lamb County Production Marketing administration office at Amherst the past two weeks.

The PMA is administering the granting of conservation allowances which were recently increased. The increase came as an extra inducement to farmers to practise deep plowing as a conservation measure.

The allowances are $2 per acre for plowing to a depth of 12 to 15 inches; $3 per acre for plowing to 15 to 18 inches and $5 per acre for plowing to a depth of over 18 inches.

"This allowance will be paid only once on each acre of land and most farmers are plowing to as deep as 20 to 22 inches in order to get more permanent conservation benefit," Mr. Clayton said. He added further that the allowance would be granted to sandy type soil only, and the soil that has previously been under cultivation.

Washington Woman Is Champion Afghan Knitter Of United States

Mrs. Paul F. Grove sr, of Washington, D. C., recently became the undisputed champion afghan knitter of the United States when she completed her 104th afghan in four years. These warm wool coverings were given to the Red Cross for distribution to hospitalized servicemen. Mrs. Grove, whose achievement was noted in a wire news dispatch all over the country, is herself an amputee since 1941.

Red Cross records of Volunteer Services are filled with accounts of women like Mrs. Grove. To people who think Americans are hard-headed materialists, those files would be a revelation. Last year, for example, these volunteers worked 11,900,000 hours, the equivalent of 5,721 full-time paid employees working 40-hour weeks. These people were doing vital jobs entrusted to the Red Cross by Congress through the organization's charter. They weren't on any payroll, they had no contracts, they were free to walk off the job any time they chose—but they didn't. By giving their time and service they saved the American public a large sum of money, the money that would otherwise have had to be paid in salaries to 5,721 workers, because the job had to be done.

The 11,900,000 hours of recorded service represent merely the time spent on the job by 220,000 certified Red Cross volunteers. Others from the Board of Governors of the organization on down spent additional thousands of volunteer hours in administrative work.

The nine volunteer services for which Red Cross workers are specially trained and certified make use of almost every skill and talent conceivable. The production and supply service, which utilizes talents like Mrs. Grove's, supplies necessary articles not provided for in the budgets of hospitals, clinics, and other public institutions. The motor service transports supplies and people to places they cannot reach through ordinary transportation. The well-known Gray Ladies bring cheer and a personal service to hospital patients, including those in mental hospitals. The staff aides keep the wheels going by staffing offices of the Red Cross and other charitable institutions and hospitals. The entertainment and instruction service gives parties or provides instruction for hospitals, homes for the aged, and similar community enterprises where the breath of life from the outside world means so much. The arts and skilled service does similar work in teaching creative handicrafts to help pass tedious hours. Social welfare aides help social workers in the chapter and at hospitals in interviewing families of servicemen and patients. Nurse's aides are still helping to relieve the critical nursing shortage in many communities. Canteen service prepared food for parties, picnics, and entertainments arranged by other services, or feeds victims of disasters and other emergencies. Not all chapters have all nine volunteer services, but all are prepared to make some of them available to their communities where there is a need.

There are women like Mrs. Grove in all of the services. Not like her in having handicaps, but like her in using their special talents and their valuable time for the benefit of others. It has been said, quite truthfully, "There are no lonely volunteers." Women find in volunteer service that tradition of neighborliness, even in large cities, which has characterized American community life since colonial days. They give much, but the majority will tell you they get more, from helping make their communities more worthwhile places in which to live.

Any celebration of Christmas was a crime in the Puritan England of Oliver Cromwell.

LAMB COUNTY LEADER, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1950

DALE CARNEGIE

AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING"

APPRECIATES OTHERS' VIEWPOINT

ALLAN R. MORRIS, London, England, faced a difficult problem. His firm had purchased a business similar to the one it was operating. The purchase agreement included a clause whereby Morris' firm was to take on the obligations of the company it had bought out. This seemed fair enough until the company learned about an obligation that the officers had not known was in existence.

They worked for three months on an agreement for selling their output through a sole agent. Then they gave an order that in six months' time they wished to terminate the agreement and put in their own selling organization.

To their great surprise they learned that there was an agreement in force that they were under obligation to work under the present conditions for two more years. They couldn't find a copy of this agreement but there was no mistake about it being in proper order. The agent was adamant, insisted that the agreement be carried out.

And it was entirely up to Morris to see that this plan was changed, the agent dismissed, and the matter brought to a successful conclusion from his firm's angle. Pretty difficult thing to accomplish under the circumstances.

He called on the agent, explained that he fully appreciated his point of view and added that of course there was no alternative but to carry out the terms of the agreement. Then he let the other man do the talking, only adding that if he could see their way to release them from this plan in six months instead of two years, he would win the ever-lasting friendship of all concerned, and would also be doing him, Morris, a very good turn.

Mr. Morris says he was careful throughout to show that he appreciated the agent's point of view, that he respected him personally, and that he really liked him. But he says that he knows if he had approached him in any other manner, their organization would not now be running the sales and that the agent never would have agreed to his request, which he did after thinking the matter over for only a few minutes.

The axles, steering gear and springs were formerly parts of a motor scooter. The radiator won't back up, but Stuart expects to work out that detail.

SUCCESSFUL PARENTHOOD

by MRS. CATHERINE CONRAD EDWARDS
Associate Editor, Parents' Magazine

AN INFANT'S LAYERS
A most enchanting sight is the young mother who keeps her baby's skin in a minimum, and uses the factors in choosing layers refer to as "little". Another important factor is the ease with which they go on and off. Both baby will be happier that are easy to budget for these before you start in on the frills. It is better to pay more for shirts so that they are of good material, well made with soft seams, and pre-shrunk than to have a sat-in-lined bonnet. Baby will need at least two shirts a day so the number you buy will depend on how often you plan to do his washing.

You can't count on fewer than a dozen diapers a day, so again you will need as many dozens as there are days between washings. There are three kinds of diapers: gauze, birds' eye and knitted. Birds' eye is the traditional diaper material and is still the least expensive, but it takes some time to dry and allows for less circulation of air when worn than gauze diapers do. These latter are extremely popular because the irregular weave in the gauze spreads moisture instead of allowing it to soak through. Knitted diapers look like panties and don't have to be folded. They are also highly absorbent and elastic.

Nightgowns can be either of cotton-knit or flannelette. Most babies wear them night and day except on very dress up occasions. Allow two or three fresh ones for the 24 hour period. They should open all the way down and be either buttoned or tied.

For added warmth some babies need a sweater or kimono over the nightgown. You can tell by seeing if his hands are cold. The same is true of foot covering. If the baby's feet stay warm there is no need to bother him with booties. Cute as they are, booties should be used for warmth, not decoration, though if you have gift pairs you can put them on the baby when he is being held in your lap, or when he goes visiting.

For outdoor trips the best garment is a bunting with enclosed sleeves and a hood, which may or may not be detachable. If the weather is really cold it is best to put a closely fitted knitted bonnet on under the hood.

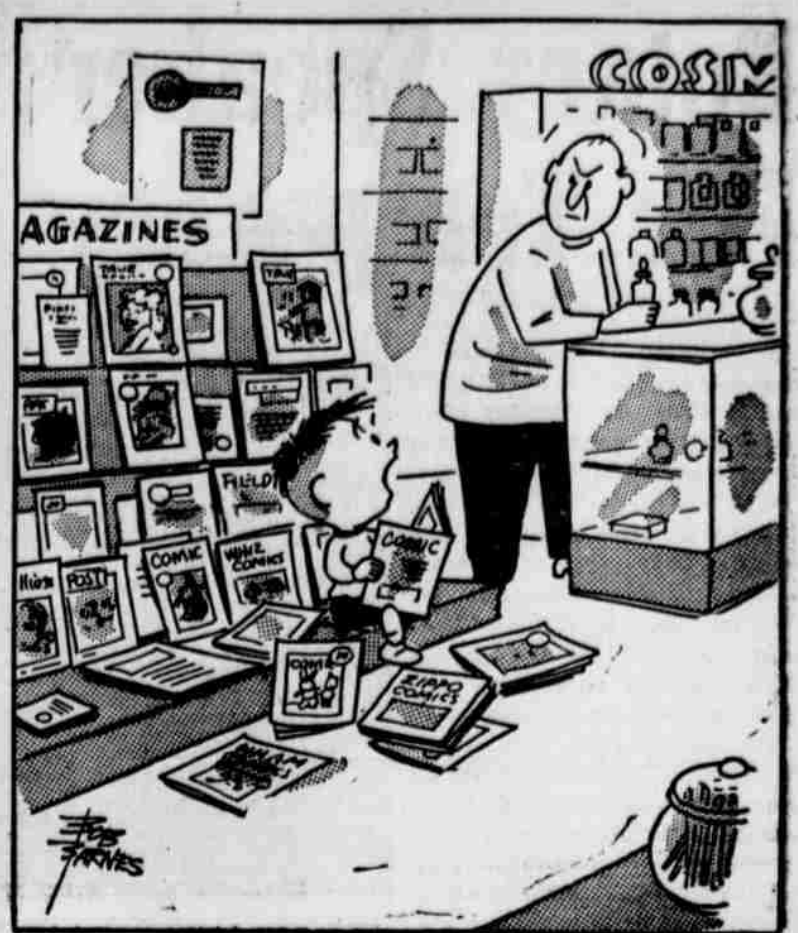

As soon as the baby is strong enough to turn over he will also be agile enough to kick his blankets off. You may have to put him in sleepers, pajamas with feet. And as soon as he can sit alone he will need warm play clothes, for he will now spend some time on the floor or in a playpen. He needs this freedom to develop his big muscles, but he also needs to be protected from drafts. Knitted suits or overalls are good for both boys and girls since they supply both warmth and freedom to move about.

Rotary Speaker Urges Hospitality For Temporary Workers In City

Dr. Clifford E. Payne was in charge of the program at Littlefield Rotary Club last Thursday afternoon, and presented Mrs. Thomas B. Duke as guest speaker. In introducing Mrs. Duke, Dr. Payne said, "it gives me great pleasure to present Mrs. Duke—however she needs no introduction to most of our fellow rotarians, as she has lived here a long time, and was the wife of our leading doctor, until his passing several years ago."

The meeting opened by singing Rotary song by the group lead by song leader Stillwell Russell, accompanied at the piano by Miss Connie Huckaby, Wolf Shaw gave the invocation. Supt. Joe Hutchinson presided during the business session.

Believing that Mrs. Duke's talk is not only interesting to local rotarians, but to all Lamb County citizens, we are taking this opportunity to publish the speech in its entirety, for our readers.

WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO FOR OUR USO BOYS OF YESTERDAY

I want to tell you that I'm happy to have this opportunity to talk about a subject that is of vital interest to me and I think all Littlefield. Being a woman of few words (as my best friends will tell you) and having a shy and retiring sort of disposition, this is quite an ordeal for me as you can plainly see.

If I were a minister, I would tell you that my test is:

"Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby, some have entertained angels, unaware."

For three years I have been fortunate in having about fifty or sixty young men living in my home at various times. "Transients", some people call them, (how I hate that word), somehow it brings to mind all sorts of riff raff and my boys certainly did not come under that classification. All have been veterans. Every branch of the service has been represented—Navy, Army, Air Force, and Marines. Their ages ranged from twenty to twenty-seven or twenty-eight years.

HE DIDN'T EVEN HAVE A LICENSE . . . This is the shambles created in Los Angeles recently when little 2 1/2-year-old Terry Hupp took his mother's car out for a spin. Here, Terry "signs" the traffic report. With him is police officer Charles O'Dell. Terry started motor, plowed through four fences, a trailer park and a few trees. To all questions of the "arresting" officer, he merely observed, "Yipe!" One trailer occupant was treated for shock.

Right now, is a good time to say, that there seems to be a growing tendency to push the war and the sacrifices, boys of this age group made, into the background. They left us as boys. They came home men.

I have never felt it drudgery in doing the work that is necessary to make them comfortable. I am truly grateful for the privilege that, though only in a small way, I can give their rooms an atmosphere of home, they, who gave so much for us. Most of these boys had had a year or two in college before entering the service. Several went back to school after the war, and got their degrees. They were just out of college and on their first jobs when they came to Littlefield. Just out of school, nerves tense from their experiences of the war, and away from the environment they had always known.—Away from home, away from fathers and mothers, LIKE YOU. These friends are our "transients." To me—our boys.

Their need I knew, was something to break the monotony, on the lighter side of life. I didn't know what to do about it. They were so reserved, so proud and so polite, I almost froze around them. I endured it for two or three months—I was lonely, so were they. Finally I asked "What is wrong, boys? Is it because you are from the north, (most of them were at that time), or don't you like Texas, —don't you want to be friends? (That certainly was a tactful question), but it broke the ice. They talked and the things they told me.—

Do you know that in most towns they have to pay extra to have a radio or an electric clock in their rooms, or that if they took more than one shower each day they paid 25 cents for it? That in some cafes the "transients" food cost more, than residents of the town and their plates were exactly the same? I'm happy to say every boy that has been with me has been loud in his praise at the way they have been treated by business men in Littlefield.

Have you ever heard some one say of Seismograph and pipe line personnel—they make high wages, get all you can out of them? I have. I had a person to say to me, "I don't like to stay alone, but I won't have those oil and pipeline boys because they are so rough." She should see them when they come in from work and get showered and dressed, ready for a date.—When they leave I'd wish by some miracle I could drop 20 years or maybe 30—come to think of it—forty wouldn't be too many.

I would like to tell you something about the men that follow the pipe line—four of the boys stayed two months with me last spring. Two of them were graduates of Hardin Simmons and they were working to make enough money to get their Master's. One was trying to finish at Vanderbilt in Tennessee. The fourth was working for a stake to get married. These boys told me, "20 percent of the young married people living in trailer camps were working to finish their education." All over Littlefield there are young men and women who are strangers in our "home town". Do you know them?

Littlefield is their home, at least for awhile, they work here, spend their money here but any social life is impossible for they haven't the opportunity to meet the people they would like to know and whom they have been reared. What do they do? Most of them go to a show now and then, but their evenings are generally spent in their lonely rooms with a book or magazine, some of them grow desperate and to escape the loneliness of solitude they are drawn into the wrong places, of course, I would not dare to suggest they can find that element in Littlefield, I'll just say, "They go to Lubbock or Amarillo, or farther off. Who is to blame?" Do you know what sheer black loneliness is? When just the sound of a voice, anybody's voice would be welcome?

It's a shock to see ourselves as others see us. Last year I had to ride the bus to Abilene a number of times. I'd meet people, who had lived in Littlefield a year—maybe longer—and who rate socially as well as you, "in other towns",—and their verdict of Littlefield is "The most selfish and unfriendly place we ever lived."—IS IT TRUE? I don't worry about the young married people they at least have companionship.

I have asked the boys, "what can we do?" and they say, "why not have in your town something like the USO we had during the war years, give some of your time to the 'Strangers in your midst', not in a condescending sort of way, but honest to goodness human interest.—Would it work? Why not try it and see? I'm appealing to you for help.

I'm proud to know that the ministers and churches of Littlefield have helped these young people as far as they can spiritually.

Have you forgotten your youth, —when you longed for gaiety and fun, and your feet tingled to dance all night? I'm aware there are two schools of thought on how to entertain them, but when you attempt to subdue their high spirits, energy and love of life, you have failed before you begin. Old feet just don't grow on young people.

I am also aware that, all of our strangers are not desirable characters, but as one young man said, "water seeks its own level,"—that kind of person you can't reach, and he will not impose upon your hospitality long—IF AT ALL.

What are you going to do about it—Forget it?

So far, I have only given the humanitarian point of view. If this does not appeal to some, there is another side of the picture that touches us all and that is "Good, old, Cold Blooded Business." Do you realize what it means to a town financially when a Geophysical Division of a major oil company moves in? They usually stay about a year to 14 months. The Texas Company was here 22 months and (Stanolind that has just moved.) 14 months.

I do not know the amount of their pay roll, but there were 33 men whose salaries averaged from 300 to 500 dollars per month, then the money spent for warehouses and office rentals.—Utilities, oil and gas and the upkeep for their machines, most of this "pay roll" was spent in your town.—Flure on it awhile, you'll be astonished.

In reading their literature, I notice the highest officials were seldom men of over-50 years of age—it seems they advance quickly in their profession.

These young men (our transients), will rise to important positions in a few years. If we should have oil in or around Littlefield, their opinions of us would have a great deal to do with the prosperity of our town.—Such as where their offices—personnel and families, are to be located.—Do we have the kind of town in which they'd want to rear their children or make it their HOME TOWN?

My admiration for the wives of these men hasn't any limit. Do you know that 80 percent of these women are college graduates? They adapt themselves to any and all conditions they find in a town.—Maybe it's a trailer camp, a two or three room apartment, but always a home,—thereby encouraging their husbands and assuring his success in his profession. They give generously of their time and money to the town they are living in, at the moment.—They work in our churches.—They teach in our schools.—They would be an asset to our social life, and we'd be broader and richer for knowing them.

Local Stars Attend Abernathy Meeting

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Boone and Mrs. Blanche Dodgen attended Eastern Star Chapter meeting at Abernathy Thursday night, when Mrs. John Laing of Earth made her official visit as Deputy Grand Matron.

A supper was served honoring Mrs. Laing and other officers.

It is a beautiful idea, written by the poet—"Let me live in a house by the side of the road, And be a friend to man."

But how much more service and happiness we could give if we'd go walk with the men in the road. We could ease the burdens they bear, and a smile, and a word of sympathy helps more than you know.

They are gone now, and part of my heart went with them. It's terribly hard on one to fall in love with 50 or 60 men—but there'll be others.

Gone is the gay little Italian from New York—the boy from Denver, and the boy from Maine. (Ernestine and Dr. Payne met and entertained him).

The vivacious Frenchman from New Orleans. The cowboy from New Mexico who, to his own surprise and amusement, is a doodle bugger. The boys from Tennessee, Michigan, Utah, Kansas, Oklahoma, Montana, Mississippi and Florida. The "native son", from California. The congenial boy from Wyoming and our own beloved Texas Boys.

They are gone—but there are dozens more here, now, and dozens more to come.

We have young people employed by various business houses during the business rush season,—will they want to come back? What?

There are two seismograph divisions—a pipe line crew and the boys with the Southwestern Public Service Co., in our town. There is also a crew of telephone company workers.

Someday your boy, or girl is going out in the world. Don't you hope they will have more kindness and consideration shown them than we have given to other parents' daughters and sons?

Don't get me wrong, these young people are not asking anything of us. But any parent knows, youth needs a little fun, recreation and friendliness. Why not give them our best gift, our hospitality and ourselves? Let's give them something to remember us by, when they are gone. Let's give them, "Happy memories of the time they were guests in our Home Town."
