Theatre and Woman's Club Seeking To Benefit Library

The Little Theatre of this city is planning to have a unique festival which promises fun and merriment.

On the night of October 31, "Halloween" the Little Theatre, assisted by the Woman's Study Club has engaged a band of Romany Gypsies to come to the city and serve a delicious gypsy stew and other delicacies to all who will visit their camp from five o'clock 'til twelve.

It is expected that these gypsies will encamp in the park close to the American Legion Hall.

The romantic nomads will sing and tell their fortunes by the light of the moon, probably supported by Jack-o'-Lanterns.

During the evening there will also be a gypsy dance in the American Legion Hall and the proceeds from the gypsy supper and the dance will be used for the purchase of books for the Littlefield Public Library.

Let us all remember the delightful June Frolics, sponsored by the Little Theatre.

Hearing Wednesday Before I. C. C. and State Railroad Commission

Virtually the entire interior of Texas, and particularly the cotton sections were represented at a hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission and the State Railroad Commission in Dallas Wednesday, at which a strong protest was entered against the plan of the Fort Worth and Denver, and some other railroads, to put into effect freight rates on cotton in Texas "eliminating the present cost of compression from the rates."

Among those in attendance was Arthur P. Duggan of Littlefield, president of the South Plains Freight Rate Association.

Damaging to Interior of State
A letter which was recently sent out by the South Plains Freight Rate Association said in part:

"It is the consensus of opinion that the proposed rate of the Fort Worth and Denver, Wichita Valley and other railroads, if put into effect, would be detrimental to all interior interests.

"These proposed rates would virtually destroy large investments in interior compresses, warehouses and so forth;

"Taxable income on these investments in the interior would be lost to the local communities;

"Unemployment would be increased;

"The price received by the producers would be decreased;

"Every other agency affected, producers, buyers, ginners, other handlers, bankers and business institutions would be hurt;

"All these things would decrease all business done in the interior and decrease the business done by the railroads;

"The only beneficiaries of such rates will be one or two large shippers at the ports.

GOVERNMENT REPORT SHOWS COTTON GAIN

Increased Federal Estimate Is Followed By Sharp Price Decline

The government cotton report as of October 1 gave the total cotton production forecast for the United States as 11,425,000. The figure showed an increase of 15,000 bales, or one per cent, over the report of September 1.

The crop reporting board said, in commenting on the report, that good cotton weather during September brought about the increased estimate, although light frosts, which have occurred since October 1, were not taken into consideration in compiling the Federal estimate released October 8.

Reacting on the strength of the October 8 production estimate, cotton prices declined to as low as six and one-half cents a pound immediately following the report.

Released simultaneously, a census bureau report showed 4,885,465 running bales of cotton ginned from the 1932 crop prior to October 1, compared with 6,409,657 for 1931 and 6,303,895 for 1930. This was favorably received as lower than expected and was credited with a partial recovery of prices shortly after the price break resulting from the increased production estimate.

Fred Z. Payne & Co have completed an audit of the records and books in the secretary's office of the Littlefield Independent School District, and found all records and books in "excellent shape", according to their report to the board.

The auditors made special comment on the efficiency which is maintained by Secretary J. S. Hilliard.

In making their report, they said: "In conclusion we want to thank your secretary, Mr. J. S. Hilliard, for the assistance rendered while on this assignment and for the perfect record kept, which was so easy for us to follow."

The audit covered all records and books in the secretary's office from September 1, 1929, to August 31, 1932. Throughout the entire survey of the books and records, the auditors did not find one error of any kind. Such a record is something of which any public officer, or private concern has every reason to be very proud.

Mr. Hilliard became secretary of the Littlefield school board on January 1, 1928, and has served in that capacity continually since that time.

WELL-TO-DO CANDIDATES

George Washington was the wealthiest man in the United States when he was elected President in 1788. A good many other Presidents have been men of considerable means, and a good many of them have been poor men. Theodore Roosevelt probably had the largest personal fortune of any President since Washington, when he entered the White House. President Hoover at the beginning of the war was worth several million dollars, but had spent a great deal of his capital in Belgian relief work and other philanthropies, and lost more of it through unfortunate investments, before he became President, according to the interesting and expensive magazine called "Fortune," which sells for $1 a copy.

Mr. Hoover started in life with nothing and was making $100,000 a year as a mining engineer when he was thirty, according to Fortune, which estimates that he was worth something over $4,000,000 in 1914 and now has left about $700,000, mostly invested in bonds, which bring him an income of about $35,000 a year apart from his salary.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic candidate for President, has an income of about $17,500 a year apart from his salary as Governor of New York, says Fortune. About $12,500 of this is from investments made by himself and his wife of money which they inherited. Governor Roosevelt's magnificent home at Hyde Park, New York, is owned by his mother, who is estimated to be worth about half a million dollars.

Both of the candidates for Vice-President are also well-to-do. Both Mr. Curtis and Mr. Garner have been the architects of their own fortunes.

We do not see that it makes much difference whether a Presidential candidate is rich or poor. Even Norman Thomas, the Socialist candidate, who presumably represents the poor, married a considerable fortune. Perhaps, on the whole, the country is better served by putting men in office who do not need the jobs, but who are economically independent and able to devote their lives to public service.

A SENSIBLE APPEAL

Following in the wake of President Hoover's designation of October 9, as "Fire Prevention Week," governors of practically every state have issued proclamations pleading for its observance. As Bailey county citizens will recall, this paper has long contended that there is not a more sensible special observance in the entire year than the one we have come to know as the week for preparing against fires.

Thousands are at this time of the year preparing their stoves and furnaces for winter service. But not all are careful to see that the flues, piping and chimneys are in perfect condition. Thousands do not seem to realize that millions of dollars, representing thousands of homes, go up in smoke every year because of defective flues. This is the time to forestall such losses. Ridding the house of rubbish and waste that has accumulated over the summer months, and especially that which may be lying in attics and cellars, is the best kind of fire prevention.

It is also a reasonable time for taking care with camping and picnic fires, and to make sure that matches, cigar or cigarette stubs are not carelessly tossed from the open car into the dry grass and weeds along the high-way. It doesn't take any practice and only a limited amount of brains to prevent fires. Being careful is the secret of it, and the reward is the saving from destruction of your home or some one else's home. If you think the reward is worth the labor, then join with your neighbors in celebrating "Fire Prevention Week" by being careful, and by taking all necessary steps to ward off a visit from the fire fiend.—Muleshoe Journal.

My aunt told me I ought to try Cardui, which I did. I began to feel better. I kept it up until I had taken three or four bottles. My side quit hurting and I was soon feeling strong and well." ## NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"I kept after Gilbert for years to tell you he was your father. He kept putting it off, kept stalling, torturing himself. At heart, John, he was sound but impractical. I don't seem to startle you with this news."
"Judge, I've been aware of it for some time." John turned. He was crying. He dashed away the tears. "I enjoyed going around with my dad. But—well, I said something once I would have given my right hand to recall. I knew the thing was working out. Now it's too late."
"Of course you have rights in the estate."
"I have not thought of rights, Judge."

enough to want to look her best when meeting him. Women are queer. He slept dreaming of his father, a poignant clutching at his heart. He dreamed of the sinking ship, of Van Horn, a hero, a hero, and of Josephine. They would often talk about his dad in after years. John stepped out of his shower. Breakfast had been sent up. Then the mail came. He would be at the shaft at nine, the privilege of easier times and of his step.
"A letter, Mr. Breen. Special, registered." He signed the receipt. It was a heavy envelope. John laughed, he was feeling better; something from Josephine. He was awkward,

He opened the little packet—it was the engagement ring—Josephine's ring.

"But you haven't a leg to stand on, John. Gilbert never changed his will. I'm one of the trustees. There's not a scrap, not an atom of legal evidence to support you. The best evidence you have, John, is your appearance. My good boy, you are the image of Gilbert Van Horn as a young man. The portrait in the library, the one on the east wall, is you. But you have nothing tangible to support your claim."
"Claim?" John considered a while. That's a new one on me. I'm not claiming anything. Great God, sir, I'm down far enough as it is. The fact that he will never be here again is all the trouble I can stand. What a hero— John stood and looked through the window; the park was blurred before his eyes.
"The estate's left to Josephine."
"Well, I'll marry it then." John looked at Judge Kelly, a smile flickering on his face.
"She's difficult, John, I'd have been better pleased if the thing had been better pleased if the thing had... "Forget that, Judge. I appreciate your feeling. Who else knows about this—this—relationship?"
"Not a soul, so far as I know. Malone has a theory—only Harbord might know. Gilbert confided in me, as his father did. God, what a city! The old name, the old tradition, gone."
"Come, Judge, you take things too seriously. I'll change my name, some day, perhaps."
"Then you won't do anything?"
"What can I do?"
"Marry Josephine, John, and we'll tell her afterward."
As Judge Marvin Kelly rode down town he shook his head, his head frosted with wisdom and filled with doubt. What a mixture life is! John slept fitfully that night. The next day he would insist on seeing Josephine, he was eager to see her. Three days had passed since her return. The papers were full of the disaster. Perhaps she was foolish he tore the thing open, a heavy nub fell out, wrapped in tissue paper. He opened the little packet—it was the engagement ring—Josephine's ring! John gasped. In his hand was a sheet of her blue note paper.

Dear John:
I am marrying Gerrit Rantoul. I owe my life to him. Don't blame me, John. It is best for us both now that poor dear, brave Gilbert is gone. Forgive me. Josephine.
Years of slavish toil followed for John. He sunk himself in his work. Occasionally he heard of Josephine and Rantoul, married and in the vortex of young and gay America just before the war.
Finally the aqueduct was finished. Talking it over with Harbord and Pug Malone one night Judge Kelly went to a littered desk. He searched for a moment, then found a card. "My friend, Almon Strauss, has started something interesting. The Bureau of City Plan. An engineer named Colfax is in charge. I think there's a place for John if I say the word. A place for an enthusiast endowed with a modicum of brains. My sad past, gentlemen, leads me to the belief that the wisest a man is the less enthusiastic he gets. Solomon was an utter pessimist."
"Enthusiasm starts wars, and wisdom ends them." Harbord had lit his pipe. Malone, also smoking, thought deeply. "John Breen was thrown into this city with nothing but enthusiasm; he may find wisdom, and perhaps some happiness, within its walls."
For a year he had been at work with Colfax, as assistant engineer of the Bureau of City Plan. The city unfolded him, enthralled him. He seemed to be playing with a set of magic blocks, scheming, planning, and soon they would build.
One day, John had checked over reports of a field survey accounting for many acres of land safely under water and purchased by a commission spending other people's money. Colfax smoked interminably, cigar after cigar, his teeth champing at the rolls of weed, tossing the butts when burned to the middle.

"Do you sense this thing?" he asked, waving his hand in a general sweep. "I mean the thing that has us all—this lighting of a brand?" John hesitated in his reply. Colfax seemed unnerved, the night was insufferably hot, and he, too, came to the office with the din of war added to another clamor coming to a surge within him. Colfax, thin but of fiery energy, seemed to radiate a restless, gnawing sorrow.
"What I have said about the city bears out the rottenness abroad. Everything is wrong. It will drag us back in the wash of war. The reformers will fail, the people will fail, and the grab and gouge and hell of blood and hate will swing around the world, killing everything we do. This stuff," and Colfax brought his fist down with a bang on bundles of reports, "this might as well be burned, for the good it will do while I am here, or you too."
"I have worked years, given all that is in me, to set a standard. I seek a city to set up as an ideal habitation of men. You know my theories about the heating and feeding and sanitation of groups, you know the Colfax formula for the regeneration of waste materials and the return of nitrogen to the soil in an endless cycle. We must strive, Mr. Breen, to the time when the terrible waste will be overcome and men may live for something other than their appetites and greed. When plenty will be common and the poor will only be the poor in spirit, or in mind. You know this, you have seen the plans and the fitting of them to meet the transition from industrial truce to industrial peace and freedom.
Colfax suddenly stood upright and walked to the window looking out over dark roof tops. A strange feeling of prediction filled the small, white painted office. John had stepped to the window beside his chief and also looked out, as if seeking an answer.
"I have become convinced that my work is done," Colfax continued without looking at John. "It is no use continuing, at least for me. I have written Almon Strauss, a great man, Mr. Breen, not afraid to remain in Paris. For the next month I will set things to rights, turn over the records, and you can go on, or not, as you see fit."
"But—" John stammered. It seemed so unnatural.
"It is better so—"

It was dark when the two men left the Bureau. Colfax, who roomed alone, north of Fourteenth Street, in shabby fashion, turned on his heel at the corner. "Good-night, Breen—John." He half hesitated and then did an unusual thing. "Here, shake." He wrung the hand of the younger man with a strong cold grip—"Good-night—"
John Breen got home late that night. The ride uptown in the subway had been sticky, tiresome. Bits of paper and dust and dirt cluttered the trains. He felt tired, discouraged. The business of the Bureau, being financed by the mysterious Almon Strauss, a man he had never seen, appeared futile, worthless, impossible.
Then he was only half asleep. A deep rumble tumble and heavy crash of sound roared up the river. What had happened? After a while it was silent. Apparently some colossal explosion. He had waited and went to sleep. Black Tom, freighted with T.N.T., had gone off and the lower sections of the city were in disorder, glass littering the streets. The crimson aurora of the fiery detonation had, for a few minutes, lit up the quaking town. Blackness descended on Wall Street and Broadway. Offices were deserted. Only on Park Row was there action; men scurrying for news and the clang of patrol wagons and ambulances rushing special officers and doctors to the streets. But the larger part of the prostrate city was asleep.
A smaller detonation took place north of Fourteenth Street. Still trembling with the shock of the explasion, a beaten man placed a pistol at his temple and pulled the trigger. Colfax, Director of the Bureau of City Plan, crashed over on the crest of noise. He thought the city had been blown up by the Huns. The morning papers quite forgot the suicide.

"Colfax is dead." John Breen had phoned Judge Kelly.
"Too bad, John. Too bad. Better go up and look over his papers. He has no relatives."
That day John gathered the few belongings of the strange man. He lived alone. His name had been changed, by due process of law, Thumbing his nose at fact, he, who was Vladimir Kahlfuss, became Victor Colfax. It explained much to John. The man had been swamped by his own sincerity, a victim of the times; of all time.
As John rode home in the subway that night, in the crush, he saw everything on end. Car after car, crowded to suffocation, slipped by him, the uplifted hands of passengers seemed a symbol of the complete surrender of the masses, white impotent hands held up, thousands of hands, white hands.

Urges Opposition of Centennial Jarvis closes his report with a recommendation to the local committees to oppose the proposed Texas Centennial Amendment to the Texas constitution. The recommendation is: "Your Central Public Expenditure committee of West Texas recommends that the proposed constitutional amendment which, if carried, will enable state appropriations for the holding of the Texas Centennial, be opposed. This amendment is being voted upon at the November election.
Although the Texas Centennial is a worthy and patriotic project, your committee, nevertheless, feels that in view of present economic conditions and due to the present plight of taxpayers, this proposed state expenditure should be opposed."

Other members of the West Texas Public Expenditure Committee are:
J. O. Jones, Lubbock; A. J. Swenson,
Stamford; D. A. Bandoen, Stamford;
J. C. Mytinger, Wichita Falls; and
C. N. Bassett, El Paso.

Increases Dairy
Production, Profits
An increase of 130.2 pounds of butterfat per cow his second year as a dairy herd demonstrator over his first year record is reported by Roy B. McQuatters, Lamb county dairyman cooperating with D. A. Adam, county agent. He attributes this remarkable increase to close culling, made possible by records; to the addition of better cows to the herd; and to his feeding which has centered around good pastures and soy bean hay.

His five cows last year averaged 7,198 pounds of milk which tested
4.9 per cent. Butterfat and skim milk were valued at $471.35, and feed cost was $116.77. Butterfat

Miss Marion's stories for Mary Pick-pre-eminence in supplying material for stellar personalities.

"Blondie Of The Follies" Will Be Filmed At Palace

Although motion picture making is admittedly an industry—one of the five greatest—it is only by departing from the iron-bound rules of industry that the best results in film production are gained.

"Blondie of the Follies," Marion Davies' new starring picture with Robert Montgomery featured serves to illustrate this point. This new Cosmopolitan picture will be shown at Palace Theater Saturday midnight, Sunday and Monday.

In the realm of home management and in individual buying in general the advertisements act as a market guide . . . a guide not only as to where to buy and what price to pay but often as a guide as to what to buy. Many things that make life more enjoyable and comfortable are first discovered in the ads and then later repurchased through the ads. Many things that save on the family budget are discovered when the home-maker has learned to find the news of what's new by watching the advertisements. THAT IS WHY THREE OUT OF FOUR READ BEFORE THEY BUY.

PRAYER FOR PARENTS OF THE P.-T.A.

This prayer was sent out for all organizations and our local president, Mrs. Max Toucher, has chosen to print it in the form of a resolution, as follows:

I hereby resolve, through the merits of Jesus Christ, that I will be a better parent to my children. I shall try to understand them, to listen patiently to them and to answer all questions truthfully and kindly. I shall be as courteous to my children as I expect them to be to me, not interrupting, not contradicting, not accusing unwisely and asking their forgiveness when I have done them a wrong.

I shall not laugh at their mistakes, shall not ridicule, shall not punish them for my selfish satisfaction, shall not quarrel nor nag when they err.

I shall try to live so that my daily actions will be a convincing demonstration of what a good citizen should be, making the environment of our home so wholesome that they will not want to stray elsewhere.

I shall teach them to reason, and shall grant them their necessities, and any wish for their comfort, or pleasure within the bounds of that reason.

I shall teach them to be honest, in word, thought and action, and to the farthest extremities. When they have learned honesty, with themselves, with their fellow citizens and with God, all other virtues will be a natural asset.

I shall put forth a noble effort to develop character that will demand the greatest esteem; in that character one may see a personality that speaks for all the effort spent upon it, courageous, honest, considerate noblemen of tomorrow.

So help me God.
The Parents of the Children.

It's easy to say they're all alike and easy to prove they are NOT. Dissolve a genuine Bayer Aspirin tablet in water, pour it off, feel the fine powder that coats the glass. secretary of state, to certify Mrs. Ferguson as the nominee.

Governor Sterling filed his suit the day Mrs. Ferguson's nomination was confirmed by the state Democratic convention at Lubbock, alleging that upwards of 50,000 votes had been cast illegally in Mrs. Ferguson's favor. He asked that her nomination be set aside and that he be declared the legal nominee. The Fergusons made counter charges of fraud in the campaign conducted for renomination of Gov. Sterling.

The Supreme Court's decision held that Mrs. Ferguson's certificate of nomination, issued by the convention was prima facie valid and gave her a title to the nomination that could be set aside only by a final judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction. Since the court concluded it was impossible to obtain a final judgment, because of the size of the case, it declared that Mrs. Ferguson had the right to have her name appear on the ballot in the proper place.

They should demand that peddlers show a certificate from the grower that the fruit is fit to eat. When licenses are issued by the city to fruit peddlers, the city asks to see the certificates from the growers, but sometimes fruit is peddled without a license unknown to the city.

A mass meeting of the Socialists of Littlefield and Lamb county will be held at the Littlefield City Hall at 3 p. m., Saturday, October 22, according to an announcement made Wednesday by Lee Bennett. The purpose of the meeting will be to form a local unit of the Socialist's organization.

An extensive program of redecorating and remodeling of both interior and exterior is being carried out at the Littlefield Hotel, and when completed, according to Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Whicker, who are in charge of the premises, this property will be one of the greatest beauty spots in this section.

The program includes redecorating of the whole interior and exterior of the building; the remodeling and redecorating of the diningroom, kitchen and back portion of the house, which was affected by the fire of several months ago, as well as complete new furnishings for that section; new roof; new flooring of the front veranda; new awnings on the entire building, etc. The new fireproof paint is being used on the outside of the building, as well as the two garages, which it is planned to remodel into two modern 2-room apartments each.

According to the management, the dining room of the hotel will be in readiness to serve the public, and open in a few days.

The Alamo

In Texas history the Alamo is the "Shrine of Texas Liberty." In coal, Alamo is a product that will give complete satisfaction. No slack. No dust. A steady burning, economical fuel. Great, big lumps. All this coal was unloaded by hand. No shovels were used. The price—well, folks, it is exceedingly low considering the quality. Come and see us. We'll tell you more about Alamo coal.
