City Financial Report Shows:

Income Up, Spending Less

A mid-year financial report reviewed Tuesday night by city councilmen shows the City of Littlefield is rolling along with overall revenues a little higher than foreseen and overall expenditures slightly lower than expected.

The financial report studied Tuesday night by the council shows a balance of $80,815.54 in the general fund, as of March 31, 1960. This compares to $69,814 at the same time a year ago.

The council met informally at a downtown restaurant to review the city's financial condition and discuss this year's paving program.

More discussion of both finances and paving is expected to night at a regular council meeting. The session is scheduled at 7 p.m. at the city hall.

Also scheduled for action are these items: appointment of members to the board of equalization, introduction of a weed control ordinance, discussion of a subdivision ordinance and opening of bids on central store items.

Messner received 175 votes to 154 for his challenger, Carroll Blackwell. Kelley was named on 211 ballots, winning over John Welch, who got 116 votes.

The turnout of 330 was easily a new record for the community. Previous high mark was 257 in the regular city election April 5.

In that election, Messner and Blackwell each received 128 votes. Welch and Kelley each got 101 in the April 5 vote.

City Clerk Ruby Anderson said the turnout included about 260 voters who had paid poll taxes and 70 who were over 60 years of age and exempt from poll tax payment. Total of poll tax receipts issued in the community was 297, she added.

Earth voters will ballot in a water sewer bond election totaling $30,000 Saturday, April 30.

An Editorial

You Can Help Prepare Before Tornado Comes

What will you do when you are warned of an approaching tornado?

It may depend on where you are at the time.

No real protection against tornadoes has been devised except going underground, either in a storm cellar or well-supported basement.

But some protective measures can be taken.

Tornadoes usually travel along the ground at a rate less than 20 m.p.h., although winds within them may be 500 m.p.h. So an automobile can easily outrun them.

Tornadoes travel in a general southwest to northwest direction, although they may change directions often while moving in a generally northeasterly direction.

Persons caught in the open should lie flat in the nearest low place.

Absentee Voting Gets Under Way

Absentee voting in the First Democratic primary election, scheduled May 7, got underway here Monday and will continue through May 3 at 5 p.m. County Clerk Charles Jones announced this week.

Jones listed three ways in which voters may cast absentee ballots:

1. By personal appearance and certification that the voter will be out of the county on election day.

2. By mail, if postmarked outside the county.

3. By physician's certificate of sickness of physical disability, which will prevent the voter from appearing at the polls.

The county clerk said he does not expect as large a turnout in absentee voting this year as in 1958 when 277 absentee ballots were cast.

"I'd guess around 125 ballots this time," said Jones, "because the election is being held earlier."

He explained that farmers are busier in May than July and that fewer people will be going on vacation next month, in comparison with July, the month in which the first primary has been held in the past.

Highlighting the first primary in Lamb County are these contests: three candidates for state attorney, two for sheriff and four each for county commissioner posts in precincts 1, 2 and 3.

Legion Building Given To Scouts

Members of Littlefield's American Legion post voted Tuesday night to give their meeting place — the Legion Hall at 6th and Westside — to local Boy Scouts.

Judd Walker, commander of Richard New Post 361, said the scouts will take immediate possession of the building.

Two troops — 38 and 41, will use the building for their meetings. In addition, an Explorer Scout unit is expected to be formed soon, and members of that unit also will meet there.

"We're tickled to death to get the building," said Tom Hibon, scoutmaster of Troop 38. "It will give us three or four times as much room."

Hibon said the scouts have no immediate plans to repair the building, but added: "We are going to have to fix it up."

He said money for repair of the building will have to come from public subscription.

Boy Scout Troop 38 is sponsored by the Rotary Club and meets each Monday night. Troop 41, with Philip Adkins as scoutmaster, is sponsored by the Lions Club and meets on Tuesday nights.

The building which has served Boy Scouts in the past will be turned over to Cub Pack 41.

Walker said the American Legion post will use the new VFW building for future meetings. The Legion meets on the first and third Monday nights of each month.

Only reservation made by the American Legion in turning over the Legion Hall to the scouts is that the building will revert to the Legion at any time the scouts (Continued on Page Six)

VALIANT has come to Batson Motors in Littlefield

LOWER YOUR COST OF LIVING IT UP!

Rich playboys would cheerfully pay through the nose for Valiant. Just because it looks terrific. The other side of the coin is this — you don't have to. Sure, Valiant's got a low price, but that's just a new inclined engine that nurses regular like the U.S. Mint was going out of business. With a unitized, rust-proofed body that nurses regular like a longshoreman drinking juniper tea. With a fully-keeps your battery charged (it even charges when you stop for lights!). But while Valiant pinches luggage in the trunk. And the ride would make some high-priced cars blush with envy. So take a tip from all the families who've balanced their budgets with Valiant. See the man who sells them. Valiant deserves a personal check. Yours.

Women Hiring Household Help Must File Tax Return

Housewives who hire household help by the day or by the week have until April 30 to file the quarterly social security tax returns on wages paid to their employees during the first three months of 1960, announced John G. Hutton, district manager of the Lubbock Social Security Office, today. A return must be filed with the District Director of Internal Revenue for any household worker to whom an employer has paid cash wages of $50 or more during the three months of January, February, and March. Wages of as little as $4 a week paid to a worker each week during this three-month period will have amounted to more than $50, Hutton pointed out. Some employers may not understand their responsibilities under the law. Also, some household employees may have asked their employers not to file the returns because they do not want to have their share of the social security tax taken out of their pay. The law, however, holds the employer responsible for making the returns and paying the taxes, he said. The social security tax on wages paid in 1960 is 6 per cent, 3 per cent deducted from the employee's wages, and a matching 3 per cent to be contributed by the employer. The combined tax increased from 5 per cent to 3 per cent beginning the first wages paid in 1960. Household employers make their social security tax returns on a special simplified form printed on the inside of a self-mailer envelope. Any housewife who employs domestic help can get on the mailing list to receive the form every 3 months by writing to the District Director of Internal Revenue or she may ask the nearest social security office for a copy of the booklet, "Social Security and your Household Employee". This little booklet on social security information for household employers contains a postcard she can send to the District Director of Internal Revenue asking that she be put on the mailing list. A representative of the Lubbock Social Security Office will be in Littlefield on each Thursday at 9:30 a. m. in the county Courtroom. And will be glad to assist in all matters pertaining to Social Security. The coast of North America was discovered by John Cabot for the British, in 1497.

STATE CAPITAL Highlights AND Sidelights by Venn Sanford

AUSTIN, Tex. — First it was $100,000 homes for college presidents. Now its $36 doorknobs for the State Office Building.

Increased costs have forced the school to raise its tuition fee to $600 a year and more.

Cracked floors are now being removed and replaced by the contractor, at no cost to the state.

RAW MATERIALS—Gov. Price Daniel has promised to have two sets of ingredients ready when the State Finance Advisory Council meets May 16 to begin shaping up a long-range fiscal policy for the state.

After hitting an all-time high of $88,000,000 in March, the deficit dropped to $76,496,222. It is expected to drop further through the spring but not enough to get out of the red this year.

HOUSTON U ASKS AID — Now under consideration is whether the University of Houston should become a fully state-supported college.

Editor's Note: The Sandhills Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm has found out about the new weather satellite now circling the earth.

Most of us tend to take it for granted that an individual is free to think for himself and that his rights are protected by law.

It is this liberty and equality under law that distinguishes our system of government from communism.

Our respect for law is vital to the continued growth and strengthening of our nation.

TOWN and COUNTRY

by

Wendell Tooley

"Where will my next meal come from? That's a silly question!" you say. "We have plenty of food in this country."

Yes, we do have plenty of food. But we may not always have it. Even today, two of every three human beings in the world do not get enough to eat. And the situation may get even worse.

Why is it that we have an abundance of food in America? Will we always have it? Will our grandchildren be able in the future to eat as well as we do now - or will they like many people of the world today, come to know the gnawing pangs of hunger? These are questions worthy of a little thought.

First, about our abundance of food here in America.

Food is produced by farmers, of course, and at one time just about everybody in the United States was a farmer. Today only 12 per cent of our people are engaged in farming as a source of livelihood. They produce all the food needed for themselves and for the other 88 per cent of us, as well as some for export and still there's a surplus left.

Obviously the modern farmer is much more efficient than the farmer of 100 or even 25 years ago. He uses new tools, new machinery, new methods and more plant food - so that one farmer today can feed himself and 23 other persons. The rise in farm efficiency in the past two decades has not been matched by any other major industry.

In the United States today, a smaller proportion of our working force is needed to feed and clothe our people than in any other major country of the world. Manpower released from farm work has been free to construct better homes, better automobiles, better highways and schools, and other things that give us our high standard of living. This is not possible in other countries such as Russia, where one farmer feeds himself and only three to five others.

What about the future food supply in America?

Farm efficiency will continue to increase, for the next few years at any rate. There are limits, though, to the quantity of food that an acre of land will produce - and some day we may approach those limits. The amount of land available in this country for food production is pretty well fixed, although some additional acreage can be made productive through irrigation and similar projects.

Meanwhile, our population is expanding at the rate of more than 2 1/2 million persons a year. Think of that! Every two years the United States adds the population equivalent of another North Carolina - with almost a million to spare. There are now about 180 million people in America. Within 15 years there will be some 230 million. Within 40 years our population will double! In practical terms this means that land available per person for food production in America will be reduced by one-half in the next four decades. On a worldwide scale, even more serious problems loom. The earth's population took 50 centuries to reach a billion but only one century for the second billion. Only 35 years is being required for the third billion, which we've almost reached. Probably the fourth billion will be reached in 15 years. Truly the world's population, as the experts say, is "exploding."

If future Americans are to be well fed and well clothed, we need to do everything possible to promote a sound, strong agriculture. This will require the active interest and support of the 88 per cent of our people who are non-farmers as well as the 12 per cent who are engaged in farm work.

"If farmers are so efficient today, why are food prices so high? And why does the government have to spend so much on subsidies to farmers?" you ask.

These are fair questions. First, about food prices. Isn't it true that ALL prices have gone up sharply in the past 10 years or so? Don't automobiles and houses and everything else cost more dollars now? As a result of inflation, the dollar today won't buy as much as in the past - no matter what you spend it for. Could you or any other fair-minded American honestly expect food prices to remain the same, or drop, at a time when all other prices were rising?

Also, isn't your family eating a little "higher on the hog" than it was 10 years ago? Chicken perhaps, instead of beans - eggs instead of oatmeal - and meat 10 times a week instead of seven? And isn't a great deal of your food already cut up or mixed or sliced, and in some cases even cooked? Don't you get a lot of built-in maid services which weren't available a few years ago?

We get the cheapest food in terms of human effort of any major country in the world. It takes six minutes of the average worker's time to buy a loaf of bread in the United States. In France it takes nine minutes; in Germany, 12; in Russia, 14. Working time required to earn a quart of milk is eight minutes in the United States, but it's 16 in France, 20 in Italy, and 42 in Russia.

Even with inflation, food prices in the United States remained fairly stable from 1952 to 1957. Why? Because the prices received by farmers actually dropped 20 per cent during this period. If farm prices had gone up at the same rate as other cost-of-living items, all of us would have paid 25 per cent more for food and clothing. A 20-cent loaf of bread would have cost 25 cents. A $4.00 shirt would have sold for $5.00. And so on. Altogether, American consumers - that means all of us - would have paid an extra 70 billion dollars for food and clothing during this period. This means that farmers, by receiving lower prices for their commodities, subsidized consumers to the tune of 70 billion dollars from 1952 to 1957.

Subsidy? That sounds like a dirty word, doesn't it? If so then we have been dirty for a long, long time. Subsidies have been a part of the American political system for many years. Airlines get subsidies. So do shipping interests, the petroleum industry, the housing industry - and many, many others. In the last quarter of 1952, Life Magazine paid $1,275,000 postage, while the cost to the government for sending this magazine through the mails was $3,424,000 - a loss to Uncle Sam of more than two million dollars on this publication in just three months. This is only one of many examples that could be cited.

"But farmers, I'm told, get more subsidies than anybody," you say. Do they? In the past 10 years, for every $1.00 this country has spent on subsidies, farmers have received only $0.10.

This is why farmers get awfully tired of metropolitan newspapers headlining the cost of farm subsidies. They wonder why those newspapers don't headline the cost of some other subsidies, too.

Speaking of subsidies, what about this? In the last two decades, over 10 million of our finest farm boys and girls have moved to towns and cities to earn their living. Parents spend at least $15,000 to bring up a child and get him through high school. So doesn't this great migration of boys and girls actually amount to a huge subsidy - something like 150 billion dollars from farm to city.

"But I'm sure," you say, "that the government does spend a lot to help farmers." Yes, it does - but not as much as people have been led to believe. Uncle Sam's expenditures for "agriculture" amount to slightly over five billion dollars a year. That's about seven per cent of the total budget.

Does all of this go to farmers? By no means! Many activities performed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture fall in the realm of public service - something that benefits the public much more than it does farmers. Meat inspection, for example, is a $17 million activity conducted by USDA to assure the public of a safe meat supply. The national school lunch program, which also costs millions, primarily benefits the nation's youth. Our tremendous food shipments to friendly nations overseas since World War I have been conducted as part of our foreign policy in the "cold war" - not primarily for the benefit of American farmers. Even the USDA crop and livestock estimates are used more by processors and merchants than by farmers. Why, then, should these and similar activities be described as subsidies for agriculture?

It's true that many farmers receive direct payments from the federal government under such programs as the Soil Bank and the Agricultural Conservation Program. It's true, too, that some of our price support programs which benefit farmers have been costly to Uncle Sam.

Agriculture has been going through a technological revolution - a period calling for severe adjustments by farmers. Increased efficiency has brought two kinds of surplus - first, a surplus of human labor on the farm; second, a surplus of agricultural commodities. The steady migration of farm people to city and town has been underway for at least 50 years and is still going on yet there still are more workers on farms than are needed, and many of them can't find suitable employment elsewhere. A great social and economic upheaval is underway, and its impact has been so far-reaching as to merit the serious concern of our government.

As for the surplus of agricultural commodities, this has been good for consumers but bad for farmers. Why? Because even a small surplus will bring lower prices. If potato growers over-produce by a mere five per cent, for example, the prices they receive for their crop will be at least 10 per cent lower. Farmers have high fixed costs - land, tractors, machinery and other equipment, and so on. When they receive a lower price per pound or bushel, they try to maintain their income by producing more pounds of bushels. So the surpluses get bigger and prices drop even lower. Farmers face many uncertainties in their business - weather, diseases, insects, and so on. To add further to their problems, they are largely unorganized. There are only a few major auto manufacturers in the United States, and only about a dozen major companies produce ing steel. But there are about 4 1/2 million farmers, each making his own decisions and running his own business. No single farmer can do much about changing the supply of food and fiber coming to market. Producers of major commodities are not well enough organized to control the market, and for this reason farmers over the years have had to take whatever price they could get at the market place. Yet the public interest demands that we have a strong, sound agriculture to produce an adequate supply of food and fiber for the needs of ourselves and our allies. That's why our government has stepped in and tried to assist in maintaining a sound agriculture.

Some of our price support programs, such as tobacco, have cost the government very little if anything. Other such programs could be made just as effective.

But haven't price support programs caused a big increase in food and clothing prices?" you ask. "Isn't it true that I'm paying both high prices and high taxes - all for the benefit of the farmer?" This is a widespread opinion. Let's take a look at it.

Of every $1 spent for food about 64 cents goes to people who buy, handle, process, package, store, transport, and sell farm products. Only about 36 cents goes to the farmer.

If the farmer in Kansas gave away his wheat, you'd still pay 19 1/2 cents for a 25-cent loaf of bread. If the cotton producer gave away his crop, you'd still pay $2.75 for a $3 shirt. And if the tobacco farmer gave away the tobacco (hey raise you'd still have to pay 19 1/2 cents for a 25-cent pack of cigarettes).

Price support programs have not brought about a big increase in the cost of food and clothing - despite what farm program critics may say.

Even so, farmers by and large do not want to rely indefinitely on subsidies - from Uncle Sam. They do, however, want an opportunity to earn their fair share of the national income. In the past they have not had that opportunity.

Even with government program, farmers receive only about four per cent of the national income - although they make up approximately 12 per cent of the population.

Including government payments, the rental value of farm buildings, and the value of food items produced and consumed at home, the average farm resident receives an income only about one-half as large as that of the average non-farmer.

Farmers feel they are entitled to a better deal than this. To make ends meet, in the face of lower prices and rising costs, hundreds of thousands of them have been forced to take part-time jobs off the farm. Surely the business of producing food and fiber - the basic needs of our everyday existence - should be able to "pay its own way." Surely farmers deserve a better economic reward than they have received in the past.

One of the greatest challenges facing America is this: Can we develop an economic system in which the farmer, who produces the raw materials for the food we eat and the clothes we wear, will be justly rewarded for his investment, his management ability, and his labor? Thus far we have failed in this challenge.

What can you do to help? There are several things. First, take an active interest in public policies affecting agriculture. The future of agriculture is just as important to the nation as a whole as it is to farmers.

Second, tell your friends the facts about American agriculture. Remind them that we are the best fed and best clothed people in the history of the world. Tell the public interest demands this. Unless we are good stewards and protect our precious soil and water, future generations will go hungry because of our failure. (2-12-40) A & M Economist Writer
