Off the Dole, on the Payroll
By T. C. RICHARDSON, Secretary
Breeder-Feeder Association

Last week we discussed the folly of keeping livestock and poultry "on the dole"—just enough feed to keep them alive. Everyone will agree that they don't pay until they are on the payroll, which means placing them on a producing ration.

Thinking of the farm as a factory turning raw materials into commercially finished products, the livestock may be considered both as machines and as labor. As machines they transform materials into new forms; as labor they do part of the work for themselves.

As machines they must have all the raw material for which they have the capacity; as labor they must work regularly at the job, if they are to pay a manufacturing profit to the owner. It is the owner's job to see that the raw material is supplied as needed, in the proper combinations, in productive quantities, and at regular hours so that there will be no idle time for the machines and laborers.

If it takes 25 pounds of feed daily to keep a cow giving a gallon of milk, she must have more feed to produce two gallons, and still more for three gallons. Authorities estimate that 20 5-pound hens can get along on seven pounds of digestible nutrients a day, but it will require nine pounds for the same 20 hens in full laying.

Since no feed is totally digestible this means that allowance must be made for the indigestible waste materials in the feed, which varies widely in different feeding materials.

Production for sale, whether of eggs or milk, comes from the surplus of feed above a living ration.

The substance of this theme is to take the animals and fowls off the dole and put them on the payroll. The quicker the feed is turned into a saleable product the better the chances of profits—always with the reservation that the ration is properly balanced for the purpose it is intended, and that it shall be supplied at the rate at which it will be most efficiently utilized.

It is a common saying that "a fat hen won't lay," but it is certain that a poor one can't lay. The "fat hen" theory is putting the cart before the horse—the hen gets fat because she isn't laying, and therefore turns her food into fat instead of into eggs. This may be her own fault (lack of laying capacity) but it is just as likely to be because the feed she gets is better adapted to fattening than to egg production.

Now is a good time to start the light weight turkeys on full feed for the Christmas market. Ross M. Sherwood, chief of the Poultry Husbandry division, Texas Agricultural Experiment station, quotes a man who has handled a great many turkeys as saying that "my records show that the profit in turkey raising is almost in direct proportion to the size of the birds."

In other words it costs about the same to raise a small framed turkey to the finishing period as a large one, and the latter has a larger capacity for putting on edible meat. Since a pound of turkey is practically always worth more than the several pounds of feed required to make it, the bird which will use the most feed in the finishing period is the best market for the feed.

Whatever the size of the skeleton, it is only the fat turkey which will bring the top market price.

Home-Making Hints

By MISS VERA MARTIN
Home Management Supervisor
Farm Security Administration

What about the day after Thanksgiving, when some of the feast remains, and the food budget is overstrained from Thanksgiving's bounty? Here are two excellent "day-after" recipes, prepared by Miss Vera Martin, county home supervisor for the Farm Security administration.

First, there's turkey turnovers: Chop cold cooked turkey in fine pieces. To one cup of meat add one tablespoon of breadcrumbs, one teaspoonful of chopped onion, one cup of cold gravy, and one tablespoonful of catsup.

Make a rich biscuit dough, roll out thin, and cut into squares. Spread the meat on one corner and fold the other over it, pinching the edges firmly together. Bake in a hot oven 15 to 20 minutes, until golden brown.

Or if roast beef was the Thanksgiving repast, here is an excellent use for the remainder. The finished product is called "cecils," and they are made as follows:

Run cold beef through the food chopper, using the coarse knife. To two cups of beef add one pint of canned tomatoes, four tablespoonsful washed rice, one tablespoon of chopped onion and salt and pepper to taste. Let it simmer until the rice is soft. Take leaves of cabbage and wilt in hot water.

Place a large spoonful of meat mixture in the center of each leaf, fold the edges over and pin together with wooden toothpicks. Place in a stew pan with two cups of meat broth or gravy and simmer for 15 minutes. Remove the toothpicks before serving.

As a precaution in preparing dishes of left-over meat, care must be taken to merely heat them through as the meat is already sufficiently cooked, and too much cooking renders the meat indigestible.
