Eastex Field To Shut Down For Tests

Pressure Readings To Be Taken For Next Four Sundays

AUSTIN, Nov. 16 (AP)—The world's greatest flowing oil field, East Texas, will be shut down for four consecutive Sundays beginning November 21 so that engineers may test its future.

The state railroad commission, which administers conservation laws in Texas, yesterday ordered the big field shut in on those days so that bottomhole pressure tests could be conducted more efficiently.

The railroad commission, in a supplementary order issued in Austin Tuesday, authorized an increase in daily allowable for the Iatan East Howard field, from 5,516 to 7,119 barrels. Monday's order affecting the entire state left the Howard-Glasscock field allowable unchanged, at 14,329 barrels.

tion of oil throughout the state by nearly 70,000 barrels daily in an effort to bring output in line with declining consumption.

The commission fixed the allowable effective today at 1,354,143 barrels, which was $88 below that on November 12, 2,466 more than on November 1, and 51,701 less than the basic allowable for October, or that effective October 1.

The federal bureau of mines had estimated Texas share of the national demand for December at 1,399,900 barrels daily, compared with 1,413,300 for November.

CLEARING WEATHER

The political atmosphere here at home has undoubtedly changed substantially for the better in the past few weeks, and there is nothing foolishly optimistic in saying that the prospect is more reassuring today than it has been at any time since Mr. Roosevelt returned from South America a year ago.

There is good reason to believe that the president is no longer acting on the assumption that his electoral majority gave him a personal mandate to execute his personal program.

This change in the methods of approaching current problems is far more important than any specific revision of the tax laws, or what not, which he may propose to congress. On any specific measure, honest men may differ.

We may look forward now, I think, to something much better than a vindictive, destructive and indecisive quarrel between the conservatives and the reformers.

In stating his terms of peace, the president has lifted the controversy out of the morass of an interminable quarrel on to some kind of a solid ground where specific principles can be debated.

Both used to be office boys. Both went through the mill. Billy had two years in the cutting room, served as script clerk and then as assistant director.

Then she explained: "I keep my jewels and their imitations in identical boxes. This afternoon I thought I was taking the imitations down to a friend who wanted to borrow them, but suddenly I had a premonition that these were the real ones, and now I can't tell until I have my jeweler look at them."

"No, I couldn't. As a matter of fact, it was my friend who first thought that I had made the mistake. I wanted her to wear the jewels anyway but she refused. It was too late to go by my jewelers then, but I telephoned him and made arrangements to see him after the theater."

At the automobile show I ran into further activities of the camera fiends. They were mostly tourists, armed with diminutive motion picture cameras, who lurked in the aisles waiting to take pictures of the celebrities who sauntered past the cars.

Another favorite diversion of the camera-minded ones was to pose in the ritzier machines, either behind the wheel or leaning nonchalantly against the door while having themselves photographed.

Sights and Sounds By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Accent on youth: Executives 30 years old and younger, writers who were office boys a few years ago (like Norman Krasna), producers and directors, producers just over the 30 line—they're common. And I've just met a director who's only 23, who has a co-director who's 26. It's true that Billy Witney, the younger, and Jack English are co-directors in the comparatively inexpensive serial field.
