

Stamp Plan Increases Food Sales in County

Expenditures for food in Wheeler and Wheeler county were increased $3,090 during the month of December through the government's food stamp program, it was revealed today by L. J. Cappleman, regional director of the Surplus Marketing Administration for the 13 Southern states.

This sum represented the amount of blue stamps issued by the Wheeler and Wheeler County Stamp program office during the month. In addition, $4,097 of orange stamps were purchased from the government during the period, bringing the total amount available for food purchases due to the stamp program to $7,187 for December.

Participating in the Wheeler and Wheeler County Stamp program during the month were 323 cases, representing with their families, 1,259 persons. Those participating represented 97.2 per cent of the 1,294 persons in the area eligible to receive stamps during December.

Since the stamp plan has been in operation, $20,556.50 in blue stamps have been issued in Wheeler and Wheeler county, augmenting regular food expenditure for the area by that amount.

Amount of blue stamps issued per person during December averaged $2.45.

Clean Gardens Afford No Place for Insects

Cleaning garden plots of dead stalks and other litter as far in advance of spring planting as is possible will help greatly in whipping damage by insects in 1942. It is important to do so in view of the likelihood of a shortage of some insecticides.

According to Cameron Siddall, entomologist of the A. and M. College Extension service, many insects which destroy or injure garden plants over winter in truck crop residue left on the ground, in weeds, leaf litter and under boards and accumulation of trash on the land. Others find refuge in ditches, waste places and in and around storage houses. Garden sanitation is more important than ever this year because of the increased need for many vegetable crops in the Food-for-Freedom program.

There still may be time to reduce insect populations by plowing as soon as the condition of the soil permits, Siddall says. Land not subject to erosion may be plowed before winter is over in order to expose many insects and insect eggs to freezing, as well as to bury alive those hibernating in weeds and plant residue.

For example, tomato aphids and common stock borers, which pass the winter as eggs on grass and weeds, cannot survive if buried by plowing. Tomato hornworms and tomato fruit worms, which develop during the latter part of the season on crop remnants, may be destroyed in like manner.

Peas are among the foremost vegetables required for wartime food stocks. Growers can boost total output and profits if they work together in cleaning brush-filled fence rows in each community, isolated trees having rough, loose bark, and abandoned orchards. All of these refuges are favorite winter hibernating places of the destructive pea weevil.

Siddall emphasized the importance of feeding pea vines dried for hay before the 1942 pea crop blooms in order to prevent emergence of hibernating weevils.

State 4-H Club Boys and Girls Take Over

Texas' 4-H Club girls and boys have jobs less dramatic than marching off to war, but all 88,000 of them can be depended upon doing a task equally as important. That's the opinion of Onah Jacks, state girls' club agent of the Texas A. and M. College Extension service, who has talked to hundreds of Texas 4-H club girls in the last seven weeks.

With so many men called to the armed forces and defense industries, there are fewer people left on the farms to feed and clothe our nation and its allies. That means the young folks not old enough to fight, but plenty old enough to do their part efficiently, will take over.

"The fact that this job must be done voluntarily makes it all the more important," the state club agent explains. She points out that it may be only a matter of time before women are drafted to do some farm work, but the farm and ranch boys and girls already have beat the draft.

"A recent trip over Texas visiting in the homes of about 76 4-H girls convinced me all over again that a 4-H club girl can do the work about a farm home," Miss Jacks says. "For example, Evelyn Young in Carson county took the place of a regular farm hand last summer. Her father is dead, so she is a mainstay at home. Evelyn hauled grain, took care of cows and other stock. She can handle a tractor, a frame garden, a dairy cow, any sort of canning equipment, and she's a whiz with chickens—even when they have to be wormed."

How to Distinguish Nationality of Aircraft

Civilian air raid spotters will have no difficulty distinguishing Axis planes from those of the United Nations if they memorize the markings illustrated above. American and British planes have designs of red, white and blue, and Russia has a red star. Watchers on the southern border occasionally may see the red triangle of Mexico. Axis raiders are easily spotted through the familiar black cross and swastika of Germany, the round red rising sun emblem of Japan and the Roman fasces insignia borne by Italian planes.

TEXAS OUT-O'-DOORS

Even birds are joining Uncle Sam's army, and believe it or not, they'll play a big part in winning the war, the game department revealed today.

There's no joke about this. The species referred to is the Antwerp messenger pigeon, commonly called the carrier pigeon.

In the army signal corps they have what is known as a pigeon service, and one of the eight base lofts in the United States is located in Texas to serve the army Eighth Corps area.

The legislature last year passed a law making it illegal to kill or maim or molest any of these carrier pigeons in Texas. Game wardens months ago were instructed to enforce this law diligently and all other peace officers have the right to enforce it.

To date the game department has no record of a single violation, but the department today warned sportsmen to be on the alert and never take a shot at one of these birds. It may be bearing an important army message.

The question then bobs up, "How can I identify a carrier pigeon?" That's about as tough as the identification of ducks by inexperienced (or experienced) waterfowl hunters who are supposed to leave some species alone.

The carrier pigeon closely resembles the common domestic pigeon you see every day around town. Their coloration varies, just as does the coloration of the domestic pigeon. So you won't get any help at all there.

But they are a little smaller than the domestic pigeon, and more streamlined—built, say, like mourning doves. The carriers are larger than mourning doves, however.

Since carrier pigeons are thus virtually indistinguishable from domestic pigeons, the best thing to do in order to stay within the law and help out the army would seem to be to just let all pigeons alone. Don't kill any of them.

As for the carrier pigeons joining Uncle Sam's army, that's no joke either. Most people don't know it, but, the game department said, there are over 300 civilian lofts of these birds in 10 Texas cities, and each of these lofts has been registered for auxiliary service at the request of the war department. They're "in the army now."

Most other kinds of birds are helping out in this war too, for that matter. What would we eat if it were not for the birds? Without them we could grow no crops, because insects would destroy them in the fields. The birds, by feasting on insects, make it possible for us to grow most of our food. It is roughly estimated that the birds of Texas are worth $94,000,000 annually to Texas agriculture.

Let's do all we can then to protect wildlife during this war.

Come Right In, Friend!

Texas deer are friendly critters. The Conroe Courier carries a story about a seven-point buck that showed up on the court house lawn, to the astonishment of busy shopping crowds.

And the Tyler Telegraph tells us that a doe was seen lightly tripping across the old city airport recently.

And all this happened while the deer season was in full blast.

NEWS IN THE WORLD OF RELIGION

Because the publishing of Bibles has come to a practical standstill on the European continent, while the bindery of the British and Foreign Bible society, in a London suburb, has been destroyed by an incendiary bomb—with the loss of not only stock, but of most of the machinery—the American Bible society is busy with "emergency projects" to meet some of the calls coming from all parts of the world.

Recent undertakings of the society include 130,000 Spanish Bibles, 10,000 New Testaments and 150,000 gospels in Russian, 50,000 Gospels of St. John for Greek war prisoners, 600 pulpit Bibles for American army chapels, 10,000 Bibles for southern France, and the reprinting of the Slovak Bible.

The Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. has made 20 grants totaling more than $40,000 from a special emergency fund to help churches adjacent to defense industries to help care for new situations that need added building or added ministerial or teaching personnel. In some cases specially trained workers have been provided for limited periods; in other cases whole buildings have been remodelled so that they can care for the religious needs of defense workers, their families, and especially their children.

"In Chungking, in Free China, one Methodist chapel remains intact and gladly houses a congregation made up of Chinese educated in England and the United States," reports Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer, of the Board of Missions of the Methodist church. Seventeen different denominations are represented among the attendants. On the campus of West China Union university in Chengtu, there are now in operation five universities, three of these having come from Nanking and one from Tsinan. They hope to return to their old campuses when the war ends. Most of the hospitals in China today are desperately short of funds for actual drugs and supplies.

The migration into Free China has affected the hospitals just as seriously as the churches, and the result is even more apparent because medicine and bandages must be bought if the hospitals are to render service.

FSA ASSISTS FARM YOUTHS WITH LOANS

How the Farm Security administration is assisting American farm youths to participate in the nation's Food-for-Freedom drive, was explained here this week by Clarence Zybach, chairman of the County USDA Defense board.

Farm Security loans for 4-H and Vocational Agricultural club projects are available to boys and girls whose parents are now co-operating with this agency. The loans, not exceeding $75.00 for each individual, are made to the club boys and girls at 5 per cent interest, and can be made for a period up to five years.

Supervision of the 4-H club loans is given by the county extension agent, and the Vocational Agricultural club loans are supervised by vocational agriculture teachers.

The pictures above show how the farm youth in Briscoe county made it possible for the county to exceed its quota set by the State USDA Defense board for an increase in dairy animals. Farm Security loans were made to more than 75 club members for the purchase of young dairy heifers, sheep and heifer beef stock.

At the top are J. B. Brooks, jr., and Troy Brooks, with their 4-H club flock. Also in the picture are Claude Carpenter, Farm Security supervisor, and County Agent Lem Weaver.

All the boys and girls participating in the special type of financing in Briscoe county have organized themselves into a club project association with an advisory council of leading citizens. The association has an insurance plan which protects the club members against livestock loss by death.

Club members in Wheeler county wishing to finance their projects with Farm Security loans during 1942 should contact Jake Tarter, county agent, or Frank O. Wofford, rural rehabilitation supervisor for the FSA with offices in the court house here.

In some neighborhoods several families band together to buy a canner among them—then plan their canning so that all can use it. The canning center carries this co-operative scheme still further by making a comparatively few canners serve many families.

Zinc, used for certain types of tops for glass jars, is another strategic material. Take special care of these zinc tops. As long as they are not dented on the edges, not misshapen, and the porcelain lining is unbroken, they may be used over and over again with a new rubber each time. When you open jars with this type of lid, never pry it with a knife blade or other metal instrument. That dents the edge and ruins the top.

LISTEN, SON

Listen, Son: I am saying this to you, as you lie asleep, one little paw crumpled beside your cheek, and the dark hair stickily wet on your damp forehead. I have stolen into your room alone. Just a few moments ago, as I sat reading my paper in the library, a hot stifling wave of remorse swept over me. I could not resist it. Guiltily I came to your bedside.

These are the things I was thinking, son: I had been cross to you. I scolded you as you were dressing for school because you gave your face merely a dab with a towel. I took you to task for not cleaning your shoes. I called out angrily when I found you had thrown some of your things on the floor.

At breakfast I found fault, too. You spilled things. You gulped down your food. You put your elbows on the table. You spread butter too thick on your bread. And as you started off to play and I made for my train, you turned and waved a little hand and called "Good-bye, Daddy!" and I frowned and said in reply, "Hold your shoulders back!"

Then, it began all over again in the late afternoon. As I came up the hill road I spied you, down on your knees, playing marbles. There were holes in your stockings. I humiliated you before your boy friends by making you march ahead of me back to the house. Stockings were expensive—and if you had to buy them you would be more careful! Imagine that, son, from a father! It was such a stupid, silly logic.

Do you remember, later, when I was reading in the library, how you came in, softly, timidly, with a sort of hurt, hunted look in your eyes? When I glanced up over my paper, impatient at the interruption, you hesitated at the door.

"What is it you want?" I snapped.

You said nothing, but you ran across in one tempestuous plunge, and threw your arms around my neck and kissed me, again and again, and your small arms tightened with an affection that God had set blooming in your heart and which even neglect could not wither. And then you were gone, pattering up the stairs.

Well, son, it was shortly afterwards that my paper slipped from my hand and a terrible, sickening fear came over me. Suddenly I saw myself as I really was, in all my horrible selfishness, and I felt sick at heart. What had habit been doing to me? The habit of complaining, of finding fault, or reprimanding—all of these were my reward for being a hoy.

It was not that I did not love you; it was that I expected so much of youth. It was measuring you by the yardstick of my own years.

And there was so much that was good, and fine, and true in your character. You did not deserve my treatment of you, son. The little heart of you was as big as the dawn itself over the wide hills. All this was shown by your spontaneous impulse to rush in and kiss me good-night.

Nothing else matters tonight, son. I have come to your bedside in the darkness, and I have knelt here, choking with emotion and so ashamed!

It is a feeble atonement. I know you would not understand these things if I told you during your waking hours, yet I must say what I am saying. I must burn sacrificial fires, alone, here in your bedroom, and make free confession.

And I have prayed to God to strengthen me in my new resolve. Tomorrow I shall be a real daddy! I will chum with you, and suffer when you suffer and laugh when you laugh. I will bite my tongue when impatient words come. I will keep saying, as if it were a ritual: "He is nothing but a boy—a little boy!"

I am afraid I have visualized you as a man. Yet I see you now, son, crumpled and weary in your cot. I see that you are still a baby. Yesterday, you were in your mother's arms, your head on her shoulders. I had asked too much, too much!

Dear boy! Dear little son! A penitent kneels at your infant shrine, here in the moonlight. I kiss the little fingers, and the damp forehead, and the matted hair, and, if it were not for waking you, I would snatch you up and crush you to my breast.

Tears came; and heartache, and remorse, and—I think—a greater, deeper love when you ran through the library door and wanted to kiss me.—Author Unknown.

We wonder if there isn't many a father who will recall similar incidents in the life and development of that little boy who has now reached young manhood and is called away with thousands of others to the misery, privations, suffering and probable death in the dreadful war now ravaging most of the so-called civilized world? It's something to think seriously about, but which very little can be done about at this late date.

Pure Seed Is Necessary for High Quality Cotton

Pure seed of an approved variety is the first requirement in the production of better quality cotton at a lower cost, according to M. C.

Jaynes, cotton specialist of the A. and M. College Extension service. Better quality at lower cost should be the slogan of producers in 1942, he says.

"The planting seed situation in Texas as reported by reliable sources," he explains, "seems about as follows: A fair supply of Mebane strains, but a probable shortage of other varieties, especially Deltapine (D. & PL.) and Acala. Due to weather conditions prior to and during the 1941 harvesting, the germination was injured in many areas." Jaynes says he is assembling information regarding available seed supplies within and outside Texas.

Seed should be reasonably high in germination in order to insure a good stand, the specialist continues. Only seed with an official or proper test should be planted. It is advisable this year especially to test home-grown seed because seed of low germinating quality likely will be offered for sale. Even this type will be costly and if planted may result in crop failure.

"I am advised that the Republic of Mexico now is placing orders for Texas seed and that Oklahoma is making inquiries as to seed sources since that state is very short on planting seed."

Treating seed is an economical practice, especially when seed is somewhat low in germination. Records kept for years by the Texas Experiment station, Jaynes says, prove that treating seed will materially increase the yield.

Canning Equipment

Material most used in making steam pressure canners until recently has been aluminum, which is now a vital defense material. Therefore, any homemaker who owns an aluminum canner can help by taking the best care of it. Other canners are available in enameled steel and tinned steel.

No matter what the canner is made of—it should be washed after each use and stored where it won't be dented or surfaces roughened. If the canner is of enamel, take special precautions not to chip it. Keep the safety valve in good working order. Never let the pressure gauge get under water, and keep the opening to it clean with a toothpick.

Check the pressure gauge occasionally to see that it is registering correctly. If it isn't, you may not be getting the temperature you think you are getting in the canner, and consequently failures and loss of valuable food may result. Pressure gauges may be checked with the help
