I hope you are all enjoying the holidays as I am.

To freeze or not to freeze. Many times you may wonder what foods freeze well. If you have a freezer, cooking ahead of time can save valuable minutes later.

Here are some things not to freeze; Mayonnaise and oil-based salad dressing (they seperate when frozen) Raw potatoes - turn mushy after freezing. Always cook potatoes not quite done, cool and freeze. Lettuce, celery and carrot sticks - and other fresh vegetables eaten uncooked lose their crispness and become limp and unappetizing after freezing. Hard cooked eggs - don't freeze well.

Fresh tomatoes - Have a high water content, and they collapse when thawed. Freeze them only for cooking purposes.

Potato salad - needs fully cooked potatoes, mayonnaise or other salad dressing, and hard-cooked eggs, none of which freezes

Crackers and canapes .get soggy and unpalatable when thawed. Store canape spread for crackers in the freezer. Thaw and spread on thick fresh crackers just before serving.

Milk and cream - should not be frozen except for emergency rations use. The nutritional value stays the same, but they don't look appetizing. If you do freeze, thaw in the refrig-

Egg white frostings don't hold up well during freezing and thawing. Frost cakes for freezing with butter, fudge or penuche icings -- they come out of the freezer just as luscious as they went in.

Custard pies - get watery, unpleasant looking, and tough when frozen.

Unblanched vegetablestake on odd flavors and lost nutritional value and resh color in a few weeks

Store meat unseasoned for true flavor when meat is thawed and cooked. Seasoned uncooked meat sometimes changes flavor when frozen because onion, garlic, and clove flavorings get stronger during freezer storage. Fried foods - become soggy.

Pie meringues -get

Layer cakes with soft fillings - are soggy when thawed. If you want to use a soft filling (custard, pudding, etc.) freeze the cake layers separately, and add fresh filling after the cake is thawed.

Egg in the shell expand during freezing and crack the shell, exposing the egg to air and bacteria For more information on It'll be a white Christmas for cotton farmers. Gins at Wheeler, Kelton, Twitty and Shamrock are working around the clock. Prices are good. Looks like cotton men have their work cut out for them. Darville Atherton and Ray Kirkland looked like they were real busy at the Kelton gin last week. W.H. Riley at Shamrock says the cotton is pretty sorry, report ing that it took 4 to 5 acres of land to make a bale in some fields.

Jeff White was awarded the Shamrock Longhorns 4-H pig through an essay contest last week. Bill Turnbow, 4-H livestock leader, donated the pig to be awarded to club members. Those receiving the pig return a pig the folowing year.

Up Allison way, Kenneth Chandler has a fine Hampshire pig on feed for the County Livestock show. About forty 4-H pigs in the county ard on feed for the show and about twenty stt show and about 20 steers.

The scabi es quarantine is still in effect. W.O. Jones, state inspector for the Texas Animal Health Commission is staying at the West Motel in Wheeler. Folks wishing to get a permit to move cattle can contact him there. To this date, we have no confirmed cases in the county, but we do have an exposed case. Any shipments to Colorado have to be dipped within 10 days prior to shipment. We urge all cattlemen to inspect their cattle for scabies and report any suspicious cases to state or federal animal health officials or to me

We still have plenty of the 1972 editions of the Farmer's Tax Guides available at our office.

A lady from Porum, Okla writes us to say that she has 40 tons of Sericea uspedeza hay, and 30 tons of Bermuda lespedeze hay for sale. She says she willtry to keep the price of her hay enough below that in our area to pay transportation charges. We hear they have big hay surpluses in that area.

Hope all of you have a happy and prosperous New

Proof by Poll

Science has long played a vital role in the courtroom. X-rays, blood tests, photographs, fingerprints-all are familiar ingredients in the judicial process. But what about the data provided by a modern public opinion poll? Are polls considered scientific enough to be trusted?

To a growing degree, yes. As polling has become more skillful, courts have become less skeptical. The fact remains, however, that the law will take a hard look at any particular poll before putting faith in its findings.

To begin with, the poll must be extensive enough to be significant.

In one case, an accused felon sought a change of venue on the ground that the local populace was prejudiced against him. But the only proof of prejudice was a poll of a few dozen individuals. The court decided that such a poll did not carry enough weight to make its point. Nor will the results be persuasive if the questioners used "leading questions." A soap company claimed in court that the name of a new chewing gum was so similar to the name of its soap that the public would be confused. To prove it, the company produced a survey that seemingly did show such confusion. But the questions had been slanted to induce the desired answers. The court decided this poll wasn't worth much either as a means of proof. On the other hand, in a case involving a charge of false advertising, a carefully conducted poll was accepted as good evidence of how the ad was understood by the average consumer.

And in a case testing the use of radios on buses, a poll helped to prove that most of the passengers liked the idea.

Most successfully, polls have been used in trademark cases to ascertain how familiar the public is with a brand name.

Of course, polls will never be as scientific as fingerprints. But when the state of the public mind is at issue, polling can give justice a kind of help it can get in no other way.
