Dear Friends,

Over the past year in office, I have been working hard on the requirements for state certification. This is a five-year process of taking weeklong courses, along with overseeing the day to day operations of the County Tax Office. I have completed Course 1 - Introduction To The Property Tax System; Course 2 - Appraisal of Real Property; and Course 8 - Assessment and Collections. I have achieved a Class II Assessor Collector status with B.T.P.E. (Board of Tax Professional Examiners). This is the state organization that administers all the courses and state exams. My goal is to achieve a Class III Assessor Collector status by the end of this year. To achieve this, I will take two more courses and then the State Review and a four-hour examination in Austin. If I achieve this status by the end of the year, I will be a year ahead of the B.T.P.E. schedule.

I would like to continue representing the people of Wheeler County as Tax Assessor Collector. If you choose to vote for me I will continue doing the best I can for the people of Wheeler County. Thank you, married George A. Simpson, a buffalo hunter and Sylvania Wood, a buffalo hunter's daughter records indicate. This ceremony was new to the Lieutenant and not provided for in the army regulations, but the Lieutenant got through the ceremony. No one knew where the couple came from or where they went at the time. Their marriage was the first recorded in the Texas Panhandle.

Violence was a way of life in the late 1800's and it was left to the soldiers of the fort to enforce the law. The murder of the Casner brothers in April of 1877 brought a series of violent acts to the eastern Panhandle. The surviving Casner brothers sought revenge by hiring assassins to kill the alleged murderers. As a result, Mr. Goodfellow, a rancher on the Canadian River, killed the alleged killer, John Bottom and a man named Strong on the 18th of May 1877. During the escort of Mr. Goodfellow by soldiers from Fort Elliott and a sheriff to Henrietta, Texas, to be tried for the murder of John Bottom, the party camped at night about four miles down the creek from Sweetwater City (Old Mobeetie). A band of armed men rushed into the camp, disarmed the sheriff and the military guard and took the prisoner out of camp. Mr. Goodfellow was hung from a tree after about a half-hour of questioning. The body was taken back to Fort Elliott for burial. Lieutenant Witherall was brought before a court martial and exonerated from the accusations made against him in connection with the murder of Bottom.

that their relatives had died most often untimely deaths. On October 5, 1877, First Lieutenant, 19th Infantry, Thomas M. Wenie, Post Quartermaster at Fort Elliott notified the family of the deceased Um. Couch a cattleman in the area, that Couch had been shot and killed by Patrick Sanders. It became the duty of the Quartermaster to have a coffin built for Couct, and to have him buried in the post cemetery and to place a marker on his grave. At least once again, on December 13, 1877, Lieutenant Wenie asked the Dodge City Times to publish for the information of the friends and relatives of the Thomas Tesch, a German from Ohio, that Tesch had been shot and killed by another German named Munson, commonly known as Frenchy, at Munson's ranch near Fort Elliott. Tesch had worked for Lieutenant Wenie as a sheepherder. Lieutenant Wenie had Tesch buried in the post cemetery. Lieutenant Wenie must not have thought the frontier too violent since he took leave of the post in April of 1878 to get married and returned to Fort Elliott soon after with his new bride.

gained a reputation as a successful horse-thief capture. Reports on October 20, 1877 claim that Captain Davis went out after horse thieves, A few miles southeast of Fort Elliott in the direction of Fort Sill, he captured five notorious horse thieves and delivered them to Fort Sill. On his return to Fort Elliott, Captain Davis had a fight with another gang of thieves, which resulted in one thief, supposedly, Chummey Jones being killed. Chummey Jones was a disreputable scoundrel which name was a thing to shudder at, and was often used by mothers to frighten their wayward children into obedience. Captain Davis' horse was shot from under him and several bullets put through his coat. Some dispute arises over the events after leaving Fort Sill and the return to Fort Elliott. After returning to Fort Elliott for re-enforcement's, Captain Davis left with 12 more men to rid the country of horse thieves and mur-

A second version of the story is that when Captain Davis captured five horse thieves, among the five were Chummey Jones and Charley Morrow. When he took them to Fort Sill, the commanding officer at that post refused to receive Chummey Jones

Oklahoma, where the wind blows free! Boy! It sure got in some practice last night and today. We got an inch of rain to go with the 0.4 earlier in the week. That was an answer to prayer. They kept mentioning Roger Mills County and Beckham County with the tornado watch last night, but I didn't hear of any damage around. Several of our neighbors spent the night in the cellar.

Been warm so long folks are getting spring fever. Gus Schmitendorf and his mother, Allison Lockhart, were over to visit J. E. and Clara Lou McGuire and discuss garden plans. Allison has a small greenhouse. Joe's brother, S.T., in Tulsa called to hear how we were faring in the storm. Said he had planted potatoes and set out onion plants already.

Had a nice card from Betty Brothers. She has her new foot now and it walking. She thanks everyone who helped with the project. Especially Oliver and Jo. It's wonderful how many for the last two terms of office. It is my wish to continue to serve as your county commissioner. I live in Wheeler and I need this job. Some of the things that have been accomplished in the past seven years are the addition of asphalt around the Briscoe and Mobeetie Schools. The building of Truck Scales on I-40 that brought in $60,000 for the county last month. Also $100,000 were saved for the taxpayers of Wheeler County through safety programs presented to the county employees. I believe with hard work, experience and determination we can continue to improve county roads, make improvements in other areas and save the taxpayers money. Your continued support would be appreciated.

and Morrow. Captain Davis and his men started to take them to Fort Elliott. Captain Davis soon returned to Fort Sill and told the authorities the two prisoners escaped from them but that he did not believe they would ever steal any more horses. Captain Davis left again for Fort Elliott. A scouting party sent out from Fort Sill after Captain Davis left, found Chummey Jones and Charley Morrow dead, hanging from a tree. As Captain Davis returned to Fort Elliott, but still 30 miles away, the ambulance wagon with a driver and an attendant riding within was attacked as it approached a buffalo hunter's tent. The buffalo hunter commenced firing his gun and the first shot grazed Captain Davis' body and the second shot knocked Davis' horse from under him. The ambulance driver was shot and killed by a second man hiding in the bushes. Both the buffalo hunter and the ambusher were shot and killed by the soldiers. After returning to Fort Elliott for reinforcements Captain Davis left with twelve men to rid the country of horse thieves and murderers.

From reports in the Dodge City Times it appears that the soldiers at Fort Elliott and the Texas Rangers had a strained relationship. In November of 1877, five Texas Rangers came to the post and, after "spying" around, went to the post trader where they met Mr. P. Duffey, whom it seems they were after. He was arrested and turned over for safe keeping to the post guard. Duffey had previously had a ranch at Fort Concho, Texas. He had reportedly killed seven drunken soldiers when they had attacked his home after he had refused them liquor. Duffey had also killed a citizen for whom he was arrested, had a bond posted by two sureties and then skipped out on the $1,000.00 bond leaving his bondsmen to stand the loss. The Rangers arrested Duffy for the forfeited bond. The reporter

Marci Wright, Wheeler Cookie Chair, at 826-3694 did not believe Duffey would everreach Fort Concho.

Since the officers at Fort Elliott provided the only form of judicial review before the counties in the Panhandle were organized, the officers would sit as a Board of Officers to review reports of criminal activity and rule on the evidence presented by witnesses. In January of 1878 Captain C. Mauck, 4th Cavalry, Captain E. H. Liscum, 19th Infantry and 2nd Lieutenant G. K. Hunter, 4th Cavalry, sat as a Board of Officers to review the Mason-Ryan shooting. Joe Mason was connected with a "free-andeasy" kind of house in Sweetwater City, when Ed Ryan came up to him and commenced abusing him, when Mason was an officer of the law there. Mason gave Ryan the choice of leaving or being shot. Ryan must have refused to leave since Mason shot Ryan and buried the dead man. Lieutenant Colonel J. P. Hatch of Fort Elliott ordered the Board of Officers to inquire into the killing of Ed Ryan and to make a report in writing on the merits of the case. The Board met on January 5, 1878 and after examining

The preceding tales of murder and thievery are only a few of the stories reported to the newspaper in Dodge City, Kansas, when the soldiers at Fort Elliott had to take a hand in maintaining law and order. The real mission of Fort Elliott was to suppress attacks by Indians who did not remain in the Indian Territory. In September of 1878, between Dodge City and Fort Elliott, Indians were reported to have shot eight people who were treated by a doctor who was just immigrating to Ford County. Two companies of the 4th cavalry from Fort Elliott went to Fort Supply to assist with the containment of the marauding Indians. This may have been the Dull Knife Raid in 1878 when a band of northern Cheyenne under Little Wolf and Dull Knife fled northward from their reservations in Indian Territory toward the Powder River country raiding as they went. Although pursued by the military, the Cheyenne reached their destination in

In December of 1878 the Lepan Indians from Mexico were reported south of Fort Elliott. The military intercepted them and determined that they were harmless and had committed no depredations as they made the trip to Indian Territory to visit their friends, the Kiowas. After Fort Elliott was established no major Indian battles were fought. The presence of the soldiers and the slaughter of the buffalo had succeeded in stifling the Indians. However, the soldier living at the fort lived with the belief that a major Indian war could break out at any time. In January of 1878 a twenty-two year old enlisted 4th Cavalry Trooper Henry Langford Thayer, wrote his mother about conditions at Fort Elliott. A company had been sent out to contain the Indians but was expected back on January 20, 1879. He believed the Indians had had enough and were willing to surrender and go back on the Reservation. He hoped they would remain quiet the rest of the winter but unless a decided change was made in regard to the management of them, a serious outbreak was expected as soon as spring opened and the weather became warm enough for them to get restless. Thayer also told his mother that he planned to save $20.00 every two months by placing the money in the hands of the paymaster and that at the end of five years he would have $675.00 when he left the military in 1883. Even with this savings plan he would still have enough money to pay his washing, Tobacco and tailors' bills besides always having a dollar or so in his pocket in case of an emergency. A private received $16.00 per month, from which one dollar was deducted until the end of the enlistment. Langford was trying to convince his mother that he was much better off financially in the Wild West than he would have been back in Boston clerking in a store.

Major James Biddle of the Sixth Cavalry selected the site of Fort Elliott on the Sweetwater Creek. Major Bankhead erected the first buildings, which were on a very small scale but provided quarters for the soldiers. These early structures gave way to several large frame buildings built by Quartermaster Wenie, considered to be a progressive man, after Colonel John P. Hatch assumed command of the fort. Trees were planted around the ground and other improvements were made in 1878 that made a marked change in appearance. Soldiers did most of the labor. Much to their aggravation, the men at the fort made thousands of adobe bricks from which they constructed corrals and some new buildings under the supervision of Colonel Hatch, which earned him the nickname of "Dobe Hatch".

Because the construction of the fort was for the most part, from wood, fire was a continual source of concern and a disaster when it struck. One of several major fires occurred on March 8, 1879. At 3:00 a.m. the garrison was aroused by the rapid firing of the sentinel and the cry of fire caused by the flames from the office of the commanding officer, Assistant's officer and the post library. The flames moved very quickly since the interior of the building was lined with canvass. Ten minutes after the fire was first discovered, the entire building was in flames and nothing of any importance saved. All the records and retained papers and books including about 300 volumes of standard works belonging to the library were destroyed along with all the furniture, desks, chairs, and tables, property that could not be immediately replaced because of the scarcity of lumber at the post. The only fatality was "Little Nell," Sergeant-Major Warren's dog who was 16 years old and slept in the office and was a pet for all the men.

It was in the spring of 1879 that the 10th Cavalry came to Fort Elliott when Company F, 4th Cavalry moved from Fort Elliott to Fort Sill. General John W. Davidson, Colonel of 10th Cavalry, relieved Colonel Hatch. Colonel Davidson took command in March and moved into a new building recently erected. He continued building and making improvements to the post. Co A. 10th cavalry Gave a grand "hop" in March, soon after their arrival to the post. The arrival of the Companies of the 10th Cavalry comprised of Black troopers added to the social life of the post. The Dodge City Times reported that the gaiety and festiveness of the "hop" eclipsed anything of the kind within the memory of the oldest inhabitants, as the dancers balanced to the soul-inspiring banjo.

Life at Fort Elliott was an adventure for the brave and the curious. The placement of Fort Elliott in Wheeler County on the Sweetwater Creek was a strategic success and accomplished its goal of freeing the Panhandle of Texas from Indians and protected the buffalo hunter, ranchers and farmers while they began to plant the land and import cattle for ranches. In October of 1890, the troops left the fort and the fort buildings were sold at auction. An exciting period of Texas Panhandle history had come to an end.
