The bride, escorted to the alter by her father, Morris E. Albers, was dressed in a gown lovingly designed and made by her mother, Vivian Albers. The floor length gown, fashioned of candlelight slipper satin, was constructed with an overlaid bodice of alencon lace accented by loop braid laced to close the neckline and continued to edge the portrait collar. The lace was echoed in the tapered cuffs of the leg-of-mutton sleeves and the deep flounce of the skirt. A bandeau of lace and satin, reembroidered with seed pearls, held a cathedral length veil of bridal illusion. The bride carried a bouquet of white roses, daisies, stephanotis, and babies' breath cascaded with ivy. Her only jewelry was a gold locket which belonged to her great-grand-

Attending her sister as maid of honor, Margaret Albers was attired in a dress of solid blue patterned after the bride's gown. Moria Seyle, the bride's sister, Rene' Staff, a college friend, and Joi Frantz, a high school friend, who served as bridesmaids, wore identically fashioned dresses of powder blue sprigged with a design of spring flowers. Sheer broad-brimmed white hats trimmed in cornflowers and blue ribbons, together with bouquets of daisies, blue and white straw flowers, and babies' breath completed the attendents' ensembles.

The groom wore a black tuxedo with an ivory ruffles shirt. His boutonniere was a white rose. Powder blue shirts and daisy boutonnieres complimented the tuxedos of the male contingent of the wedding party. Lewis Britt of Wheeler served his brother as best man. Serving as groomsmen were Roy Don Chick of Wheeler, Casey Cameron of Clayton, New Mexico, and James Albers of San Antonio. Morris Albers II, brother of the bride, served as usher.

The vows were exchanged at an alter marked by two large footed baskets of field flowers. Six single candelabrums appointed with massive tapers, white satin bows, and trailing ivy flanked the alter. Traditional wedding music was provided by sentation to the groom, James ding vows and those used in crystal, and silver. Assortments Mrs. T. M. Caldwell, Clarendon; Reverend Joseph Tash, long- bride, assisted in the rites by

E. V. Thompson, the prizewinning author of "Chase The Wind," now writes a magnificent saga of conflict and passion set against the huge canvas of nineteenth-century Africa, continuing the dramatic tale of Josh Retallick and Miriam Thackeray and their son Daniel as they set about establishing a trading dynasty against savage odds for from their English homeland. Shipwrecked off the Skeleton Coast of South West Africa, the Retallicks must learn to survive and to forge a new way of living in a wild place for different from Australias plains. They are caught up in the fierce tribal warfare between the ruthless trader chief Jonka and his Afikaners and the newly resurgent Herlro.

"Murder in the Hellfire Club" was written by Donald Zachert. when Ben FRanklin arrives in london in 1757, he is intent upon little more than remembering old friendships, refurbishing his wardrobe, and conducting a bit of business with the Penn family on behalf of the Pennsylvania colony. It all begins when the porter at the Vulture Tavern is found dead in a room bolted from within, his body iunmarked by any sign of violence. At the heart of the case is the infamous Hellfire Club; thirteen dissolute freethinkers who have scandalized all England with their blaspheomous descrations and sexual debaucheries "Murder in teh Hellfire Club'' is a cerebral mystery filled with wit and color.

Sewing Tools, Gadgets Available

Homesewers can choose from a vast assortment of sewing tools and gadgets to save time and make sewing enjoyable and easy.

Certain sewing tools such as needles, pons and scissors are essential when beginning to sew. As sewing interest and skills advance, other items become necessary or desirable. * Measuring tools are important for a well-fitting garments and a symmetrical appearance. Most measuring tools available today are dually marked in inches and yards as well as centimeters and meters. Select one with clearly printed numbers in the units needed.

* Tools to cut accurately maintain presice marking. Cutting slightly out of line can change a garment's fit and professional appearance while carelessness can permanently ruin a garment.

* Marking tools needed vary according to the fabric type. Transferring pattern markings accurately is essential to sewing sucess. Because many tools are essential to sewing success, choose quality ones to begin with. Repair or replace items as soon as they become worn. Store tools to prolong their life and keep them convenient to save time when sewing. If possible, try out tools such as scissors before buying to see how they perform. Examine other items for the correct size, type and quality materials needed for the job intended. Since most people are right-handed, tools are usually designed for right handed use. However, several tools are available especially for the left-handed.
