Water Well Repairs Could Save Money

With today's high cost of living, no one can afford to be careless with his investments, and the farmer is no exception.

Early in April, an irrigation well located southeast of Muleshoe in the "sand hills" area of Bailey County caved in around the casing as a result of a deteriorated gasket connecting the water jacket and the discharge pipe. The water pressure blew the gasket off and pushed the water jacket back.

The result was that water escaped from the discharge pipe all one night at this point and caused a caved in area about 10 feet in diameter around the casing. The square concrete pump base dropped down about five feet below the land surface on the casing.

Jeff Smith, partner in Land and Livestock Management, managers of the farm where the well was located, called the Lubbock office of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 on April 19 to request advice as to a proper method of filling the hole and repairing the well.

Kenneth Carver, District Field Representative, went to the well site, studied the situation and took the problem under advisement. He recommended that Smith leave the old concrete base in the hole, fill in around and above it, pull the pump base and gear head and lay a new concrete base and reset the pump base.

Smith said he filled in the hole with Aqua-gel and caliche material. He then followed the recommendations of the District by setting a new concrete base. He said the rental of the pump truck, the cost of the fill material and the new pump base amounted to around $200.

"It would have been much less expensive to have replaced the gasket when we changed the water jackets than to repair the well," said Smith.

Smith, by his own experience stands behind the Water District is advocating preventive maintenance on all irrigation wells, as well as other farm equipment.

Right To Read Program To Expand

The Right to Read program next year may include twice as many schools as are involved this year in the program, according to Dr. O.R. Douglas, executive director of the Education Service Center. "We do not know at this point just how many schools will participate in the program," said Dr. Douglas, "but more will be involved."

Levelland, Lubbock - Cooper Muleshoe are presently participating in the Right to Read program for Region XVII.

Mrs. Hazel Sylvester is the director of the program for West Elementary School in Levelland, Earl Madding is director of the program at Lubbock Cooper's elementary school, and Mrs. Elizabeth Watson at Muleshoe Junior High School.

The three reading directors attended a workshop in Abilene April 22-25; the session was another in a series of skill-building sessions designed to improve reading in the Texas Public schools. Staff development is the first step in developing model programs.

Other steps in developing the programs are completing needs assessment and determining reading methodology, assessment techniques and evaluative procedures for the instructional program within the framework of the planning procedures.

Mrs. Watson covered these steps in her description of Muleshoe's program at the Abilene conference.

Dr. William R. Powell of the University of Evansville in Indiana visited the pilot schools in Region XVII during the week of April 1. Dr. Powell was assisted in his consultative service by Larry Morton, a reading coordinator for the Education Service Center.

St. Clair as a member of the Bi-State Water District, a project that was designed to stop Lubbock from getting water from around Muleshoe, presented the check to the hospital as these were dormant funds that were donated by the citizens of the area and the money could be turned back to the community. St. Clair stated that there should be other dormant funds laying around in area banks that could also be donated to the hospital.

Commission Sets Nov. 16 As Deer Season Opening

Austin -- Mark the date Nov. 16, 1974, on your calendar. It's the day that deer season gets underway in most of Texas and runs until Jan. 1, 1975.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Commissioners in their April 19-30 meeting in Austin set this and other important hunting, freshwater fishing and trapping regulations.

Quail season over most of Texas was set for Nov. 16, 1974 - Feb. 16, 1975. In South Texas the birds may be hunted Nov. 1, 1974 - Feb. 2, 1975. In the Trans-Pecos, Nov. 16, 1974 to Feb. 2, 1975; and Dec. 1, 1974 - Feb. 16, 1975, in the Possum Kingdom and Northeast.

This will add one additional weekend of quail hunting to the 1974-75 season.

To put more teeth in the enforcement of game and fish regulations, commissioners approved a ruling which will make each game bird, animal, bur-bearer and fish taken illegally a separate offense.

Game wardens will also be in a better position to enforce the bag limit on Rio Grande turkeys because hunting license this year will have three turkey tags attached.

Turkey season generally runs concurrently with the deer season.

A uniform javelina season was set from Oct. 1, 1974 - Jan. 1, 1975. In Andrews, Martin, Howard, Mitchell, Nolan, McCulloch, SanSaba, Llano, Blanco, Hays, Caldwell, Gonzales, DeWitt, Victoria, Calhoun and all counties under Parks and Wildlife Department regulatory authority to the south and west of these counties.

Regulations were established to make it unlawful for anyone while actually fishing on public waters to have in their immediate possession any fish in excess of the daily bag limits established for the various species.

Dalley bag limits were reduced on flathead catfish to five and 10 fish in possession. Daily limits on blue and channel cats were also set at 25 in the aggregate and possession of 50 in the aggregate.

Commissioners set limits on coho salmon, kabloops trout, rainbow and brown trout at five in the aggregate per day and 10 in the aggregate in possession.

A regulation outlawing the use of "noodling" poles, hand operated devices used to snag fish, was passed by the commission in an effort to reduce fishing pressure on catfish.

Gathering game fish eggs from the public waters of Texas is now forbidden. This is to prevent the collection of game fish eggs for private use.

Webb County hunters this fall will participate in the trial use of buck deer permits.

Buck deer may be harvested in the county by permit only. The permits will be issued to landowners by the Parks and Wildlife Department. The permits will not be required during the special October archery season.

Parks and Wildlife Department game officials will use the information gained from the experimental season to determine what effect the harvest of buck deer by permit will have on the overall herd.

Antelope hunting was closed entirely in the Possum Kingdom Regulatory District.

In the Panhandle, only buck whitetails and buck mule deer may be taken during the special October archery season.

Aoudad season runs from Nov. 16-22, 1974, in the Panhandle counties of Armstrong, Briscoe, Donley, Floyd, Hall, Motley, Randall and Swisher.

Blundell Reservoir in Northwest Texas will be opened to fishing June 1, 1974. Usual state wide bag limits will apply on the lake with the exception of a daily bag limit of 15 blue and channel catfish in the aggregate, 30 in possession and a daily bag limit on flathead catfish of five and 10 in possession.

Commissioners lifted the two trophy limit in the waters of Lake Sam Rayburn which lie in Angelina, Sabine and San Augustine Counties and the public waters of Jasper, Polk, Trinity, Tyler, Houston, Newton, and Nacogoches Counties.

A 100 - hook limitation per fisherman still applies in these waters.

The Sandhills Philosopher

Editor's note: the Sandhill Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm wrestles with inflation this week, even if his opponent out-weighs him considerably.

Dear editor: According to the latest government figures, inflation in this country is rising at a little over 10 per cent a year and an economist has figured out that if you set aside $1,000 and the rate continues, in ten years your $1,000 will be worth 0.

He stopped there, but if he'd continued with the same formula I guess he'd have found that in 20 years you'd be $1,000 in the hole.

That's the reason I leave inflation, like the Middle East, to other people.

However, I read another article on the matter that has me puzzled even more. According to it, the president of a big city bank claims that the only cure for inflation is a recession. He said this right after the prime interest rate went up past 10 percent and he may be working on it, but the remedy sounds like setting the broken leg of a dead race horse, or reducing speed on highways by letting the air out of everybody's back tires. It's like solving the crime problem by making nothing against the law, like eliminating divorce by eliminating marriage. It's like getting out of the frying pan into the fire, although personally I've never hankered to be in either place. Be like going from the State Legislature to Congress.

If the only cure for inflation is a recession, and the cure for a recession is inflation, it looks like we're in for a long see-saw ride.

Oh well, I've long contended that the two kids who broke the see-saw record by riding the thing continuously up and down for 29 hours in their backyard probably traveled as far in time and saw as much as the people who have breakfast in New York and jet to Los Angeles for lunch. Whipping inflation is like beating the whites of eggs. The more you whip the fluffier it gets. Yours faithfully, J.A.

MOTHER

It is so important that a child feel secure and loved the first weeks and months of its life. Our foremost authorities say that if a child's spiritual and emotional welfare is neglected in the early weeks of life, there is a great chance of permanent damage to its personality growth.

Therefore, on this day, we honor not only the beloved mothers of our adults and youth, but the very young mother who has both the tremendous responsibility and the precious opportunity to mold the life and character of the very young child. May she seek early God's help, who in the person of the Son, said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

WASHINGTON REPORT BY

Lloyd Bentsen, United States Senator

RESTORING CONFIDENCE: Those of us in positions of public trust must move swiftly and decisively to restore the confidence of the American people in their institutions of government.

I propose to start with the Department of Justice.

I have introduced legislation to insulate the Justice Department from excessive political pressures and considerations.

This bill would abolish what has become a nearly standard practice, in which a president appoints one of his principal political advisors as Attorney General.

The bill would prohibit any person from serving as Attorney General under a president in whose campaign he had held a paid or unpaid position.

John Mitchell, under President Nixon, Robert Kennedy, under President Kennedy, and J. Howard McGrath, Attorney General under President Truman, are the most obvious examples of men who managed successful presidential campaigns and were appointed to head the Justice Department.

But unfortunately, the practice has been working its way into our political system for much longer than these relatively recent appointments.

Frank Murphy served as leader of the Franklin Roosevelt forces in the State of Michigan before FDR appointed him Attorney General, and Herbert Brownell, President Eisenhower's Attorney General, had not only served in Eisenhower's campaign, but also in Thomas E. Dewey's presidential campaigns of 1944 and of 1948.

I do not feel that his practice is in our nation's best interests. The Attorney General is our nation's chief law enforcement officer, and every effort must be made to eliminate considerations which might sway him from the fair and impartial administration of justice.

An end to the need for impartiality should not be limited to the Attorney General. My bill would also prohibit any person from serving as Assistant Attorney General or Deputy Attorney General or Solicitor General under a president in whose campaign he had held a paid or unpaid position.

These positions should be filled on the basis of ability to effectively enforce the nation's laws, rather than as rewards for backing a successful presidential candidate.

It is time to assure the American people that law enforcement decisions will be free from partisan politics, either Democratic or Republican, and I believe this legislation will be a major step in that direction. My measure would also expand the Hatch Act to prohibit partisan political activities on the part of any person in the Department of Justice, from top to bottom.

In addition, it provides for U.S. attorneys and U.S. marshals to be appointed by the Attorney General rather than by the President. And it would bring Assistant U. S. attorneys and their legal staffs under the career service system now operating at department headquarters in Washington.

I believe Congress has a responsibility to restore the confidence of the American people that the law will be enforced impartially and without regard to political affiliation or political influence. That is a necessary means of restoring faith and trust in our democratic system.

Shattered by the disclosures of recent months, Americans are sorely in need of a healthy dose of confidence in their government.

Legislation to insulate the Department of Justice from political pressures is a timely and much needed therapy.

GAS-SAVING pointers are outlined in a new report on fuel economy for average drivers. Production autos were specially equipped with measuring devices for the study, which was conducted on streets and freeways in Southern California.

TRAFFIC TESTS show that congestion is one of the biggest fuel wasters. Stop-start driving can be eliminated in many cases by construction of left-turn channels, grade separations and extra lanes for slow-moving vehicles.

CONSTANT SPEEDS contribute to good gas economy, says The Road Information Program, which reported the study. The value of free-flowing traffic is measured by this test car with a "fifth wheel" linked to a special speedometer.

The roof fell in on electric utility common stocks when Consolidated Edison, the nation's largest electric utility company, omitted the second quarterly dividend. Con Ed hasn't missed a dividend since 1885. Utility common stocks have traditionally been regarded as steady dividend payers and "safe" from the standpoint of earnings per share being more than adequate to cover the dividend. When Con Ed dropped the bomb, a selling wave hit the electric utility common stock group. Con Ed's problems are unique in several ways, but the entire electric utility industry is faced with the possibility that some companies may have to reduce or omit dividends unless regulatory bodies act promptly to grant rate increases.

Con Ed has been faced with declining electricity sales, sharply climbing fuel costs and tremendous difficulties in getting its customers to pay their bills. Matters hit the crisis stage in April when the company had to announce that it was going to have to sell two partially completed generating plants in order to raise enough cash to pay its bills.

Most electric utility companies are reporting first quarter earnings 10-20% below last year. Cautious investors are estimating that earnings for the year will be off by the same amount. They may be too pessimistic. First quarter earnings were abnormally affected by increases in fuel costs which may be offset by lower fuel costs and rate increases later in the year. Earnings will probably be flat compared to last year instead of sharply lower.

Yields of 8 1/2-9% are available in a number of utility issues where the income and dividend seems secure. You may wish to consider the following for purchase now: Commonwealth Edison, Pacific Gas & Electric, Pennsylvania Power.

The following utility stocks should be avoided for the time being or until sales increases appear or rate increases are approved: Boston Edison, General Public Utilities, Northeast Utilities, Philadelphia Electric and Union Electric.

The Unusual Common At The Texas Fair

Kerrville--How long since you made a slingshot or watched a sheep being sheared? Remember how Grandma used to spin her yarn and make lye soap? Have you ever seen a blacksmith at work? Or a saddlemaker? Or a gun engraver?

All of these crafts will be demonstrated during the Texas State Arts & Crafts Fair on the Campus of Schreiner College in Kerrville, May 24-27. Grouped into one large area bounded by gently flowing Quinlan Creek and shaded by a multitude of spreading oak trees craftsmen from such diverse Texas localities as Cumby, Edom, Hull, Devine and Leander demonstrate how our pioneer fathers made items of beauty, necessity, comfort and pleasure.

An old-fashioned quilting bee reminds visitors of a social at Grandma's house. Knife makers at work alongside a gunsmith, demonstrate how tools of survival were made by our ancestors. A sheep shearing demonstration shows the first step to the weaving process. The intervening steps, carding, spinning, and dyeing are all part of the "Cycle of Fabric" demonstrations.

Tin-type photographs are taken on the spot, ala 1874.

Spurs, dulcimers, sourdough bread and even authentic Indian arrowheads are made for visitors to the Texas Fair.

Take a trip to nostalgia. Come to the Fair. You are sure to be reminded of a simpler time and relive history if just for a day.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Photogenic Puppy

Irene was so captivated by her new puppy that she took him to a neighborhood photographer for a sitting. The pictures were knock-outs. In fact, the photographer decided to sell copies to an advertising agency.

Learning of his intentions, Irene hastened to court for a stop order. And the court granted her request. The judge said that when a customer hires a photographer to take pictures, the pictures become the exclusive property of the customer.

This is the usual rule. While the photographer may retain possession of the negatives, he ordinarily has no right to sell copies without the customer's consent.

It is a different story, however, if the photographer, instead of being hired for the job, takes the picture on his own initiative. Consider this case:

A free lance photographer, putting together an exhibit of his work, took pictures of a prominent businessman. The pictures were his own idea, and he charged nothing for taking them.

Under these circumstances, a court held that the businessman—even though he bought several prints for himself—had no right to pass them along for use in a magazine.

And a free lance photograph of a street scene would not give ownership rights to people who happened to appear in the picture.

A borderline case arose when a photographer was asked to take pictures of a high school graduating class. Was he entitled to the copyright?

Admittedly, the initiative for the picture had come from the students. Still, they had not promised him any payment at all. He could cash in only if the students should decide, afterward, to order prints.

A court ruled that in all fairness, the copyright did belong to the photographer. Since he was taking that much risk, reasoned the court, he was entitled to that much reward.

"THE HISTORY OF MONEY . . ."

To borrow Rudyard Kiplings' phrase . . . "When the world was new and all" . . . there was no money. Man had no need for coins, dollars or barter items. He caught what he needed to eat and wear and depended on woman to make his cave cozy and warm with materials at hand.

As civilization matured, a medium of exchange became necessary — thus emerged the barter principle, an elementary system used even in Colonial America. In its rudest concept, hides, grains and other goods were exchanged for those things man couldn't provide for himself.

However, as societies became more sophisticated, pure barter became unacceptable, since it was difficult to decide what was or was not fair. Money — although it didn't resemble today's — came into being. Three major requirements for money emerged: acceptability to all; something easily divided with a set value; something not easily spoiled or useless.

Shells like those on the islands of the Pacific were some first monies. People wanted enough to eat and to look pretty; they were willing to trade for these.

The ancient Incas required people—even the very old, young, and crippled—to work for food, clothing and shelter. This sounds well in theory, but the people — except for rulers — were little better than slaves. They had to ask permission of the local overseer to marry, change jobs or even get a haircut.

In all man's history, there has never been a moneyless state devised for free men and women.

Real money is said to have originated in China. Through trial and error, two kinds evolved: tao and ou. Tao, strung like beads, was required always to move for the good of the economy. Tao is still used in remote parts of China today.

The first western coins, issued in Lydia, Asia Minor, about 600 B.C., were made of electrum, a gold and silver mixture. A king named Croesus later made coins of pure gold and silver. Today, when speaking of a wealthy person, we sometimes say, "as rich as Croesus".

Throughout history, many things have been used as money: coconuts; hatchets (early American Indians) rum, beer, indigo, skins — many of these were legal payment for taxes and purchases as late as 1720.

Gold dust was money during the California gold rush, and tobacco was used as money almost from its discovery. Tobacco notes were issued in 1727 and used for almost 50 years.

Ancient Egyptians used glass money and the Old Testament speaks of talents, shekels and other forms. Money mentioned in the New Testament was Roman, since the Romans occupied the Holy Land at the time of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Our money standard was officially established by Congress in July, 1785. "Greenbacks" were first printed in 1862, and by 1863, at least $450,000,000 of these had been issued.

There is much difference between today's money and the money used by Ancients, but under certain circumstances, both are money. Therefore, we should think of money as representative only of what it will buy. A nation cannot prosper simply by printing or minting more money. It excels only when its people work, avoid waste and find new markets for their goods.
