Lay and clerical leaders for the most part declined to comment on the asserted movement to superannuate Cannon.

News Behind The News THE NATIONAL

Whirligig

Written by a group of the best informed newspapermen of Washington and New York. Opinions expressed are those of the writers and should not be interpreted as reflecting the editorial policy of this newspaper.

WASHINGTON By George Burns

Outlanders— Our boast to the world that we are the land of opportunity would appear to be borne out by the autobiographies in the Congressional Directory.

Nineteen of our national legislators were born in foreign countries—four Senators and fifteen Congressmen. The count in the House might run a little higher but some of the members either fall to sketch their lives or record the places of their birth.

Twelve nationalities are thus represented in Congress.

The four Senators are James J. Couzens, of Michigan and Felix Hebert, of Rhode Island, both born in Canada; Robert F. Wagner, of New York, born in Germany, and James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, born in South Wales.

Foreign-born Congressmen and their countries of origin are: England, Durham, of California, and Ramsay, of West Virginia; Scotland, Crosser, of Ohio; Ireland, Carley, of New York; Germany, Schuetz, of Ill. and Jacobson, of Iowa; Italy, Palmisano, of Md., and Cavichia, of N. J.; Sweden, Holmer, of Mass.; Denmark, of Minn.; Norway, Hoidal, of Minn.; Austria, Ellenbogen, of Pa.; Canada, Hart, of Mich.; Czechoslovakia, Sabath, of Ill.; and Ukraine, Koppelman, of Conn.

Westwarders— Another interesting point stands out in these Congressional biographies. It's that Horace Greeley's advice to young men to go west is still heeded.

In the southern states and largely in the east and central sections, your orators in the halls of Congress first saw light of day within the states they represent.

Not so out where men are men, etc. Eighteen western Senators and thirty-six Representatives migrated to their points of election—including such men as McAdoo, of Calif., Borah, of Idaho, Wheeler, of Montana, Norris, of Nebraska, Pittman, of Nev., Thomas, of Okla., and Cutting, of N. Mex.

Utah alone of the western states gets a gold star for local talent. Both of Oregon's Senators are home products but two of her congressmen came from Illinois and one from Pennsylvania.

Of all the southern states Texas has the biggest quota of importations with seven congressmen born elsewhere.

And just so the boys on the farm don't get discouraged the old log cabin is still a stepping stone. Any number of our legislators proudly mention that they were "born on a farm."

Spray— The government won a decision in the U. S. Court of Customs and Patents Appeals the other day that got little or no publicity.

It should have had a big spread. Step by step federal lawyers have been fighting the case for seven long years.

The court's unanimous decision is of vast importance to fruit and vegetable growers—particularly the apple men.

Back in 1925 a government chemist named Arthur M. Henry evolved a process for washing the poison spray residue from various fruits and vegetables. Uncle Sam required the spraying but the residue raised Cain with the export trade and did domestic business no good.

Hotel Men Select El Paso As Next Convention City

The annual spring meeting of the West Texas Hotel Men's association, held Saturday in Big Spring, with headquarters at the Crawford, was attended by one of the largest number since the organization has been in existence. Over 100 hotel men with their wives and friends were guests here through Saturday and some of them remained for the Confrey dance held at the Settles Saturday night.

Many of the members expressed the opinion that the spring meeting here was one of the best ever held by the association, saying that much good came from the convention in the way of meeting and renewing acquaintances, and much gained from the swapping of hotel problems.

Every member of the association without exception brought news of increased business, with prospects for an even better volume in the future.

Members of the Bluebonnet Chapter No. 34 Hotel Greeters of America also met here Saturday for their spring meeting.

Called To Order The convention was called to order at 12:30 at the Crawford ballroom, by President L. B. Campbell, San Angelo. He introduced G. L. Woodard, local attorney, as toastmaster. J. C. Douglas of the Douglas Hotel, Big Spring, gave the invocation.

Welcome Address Carl S. Blomsheld gave the welcome address, and Elmer Elliott, DeSoto Hotel, Dalhart, gave the response.

Each officer of the association was introduced.

An amusing feature of the program, though not scheduled, was the appearance of Ray Cantrell, Big Spring, Walter Duff, San Angelo, Elmer Elliott, Dalhart, and Bun Allen, Sweetwater, in the role of a quartet.

The toastmaster announced that his part of the program was not scheduled, and after the first verse of "Sidelwalks of New York" the crowd boomed the singers. Mrs. J. H. Kirkpatrick accompanied on the piano.

"Cal" Introduced Calvin Boykin, manager of the Crawford, was brought to the front of the ballroom and introduced. He was given a big hand by the visitors, who demanded a speech. Boykin said "When do we eat?"

Negro Spirituals Two negro spirituals were sung by Carl Young and Al Crowley. Big Spring artists, with banjo accompaniment by the latter which were roundly applauded. An encore number was given by Crowley.

Mangold Speaks Visiting ladies were introduced by Toastmaster Woodward, after which the speaker of the day, "Uncle Charlie" C. A. Mangold, owner of the Jefferson Hotel, Dallas, spoke to the hotel men on "Who And What Is A Greater."

Mr. Mangold, a veteran hotel man with wide experience, though in his 75th year, delivered a very forceful and interesting address. He prefaced his remarks by recalling his first visit to Big Spring early in 1889, just after the completion of the Texas & Pacific Railway into this city. He compared the city then and now, saying that he was astounded at the remarkable progress this city had made, especially in the hotel business.

"Big Spring has hotel facilities here that are equal to many cities twice or three times as large. I remember way back in 1889 on my first visit here that I put up in a simple two-story wooden structure called a hotel. Now look at things. You have several hotels here of large size that any city should be proud to claim," said Mr. Mangold.

Getting into his given topic, Mr. Mangold told the hotel men, and greeters that the work of the hotel clerk or porter is just as important and vital as that of the manager or any person in any capacity in any hotel. "The impression the greeter makes on the hotel guest at first is the principal thing that counts," said Mangold, "and above all fair dealing, honesty, and good service."

Meanwhile, two men questioned for three hours, were released when authorities expressed satisfaction with the explanation of their movements.

Continue Quest For June Robles

TUCSON (AP)—A dash of heavily armed officers for an unannounced destination added mystery Saturday to the quest for kidnaped June Robles, 6, missing for the fourth day.

Investigators said the fire started when Travis threw gasoline into a heating stove.

KIDNAPED ARIZONA GIRL

Little June Robles, 6-year-old daughter of a wealthy pioneer Arizona family, was kidnaped as she was walking home from school at Tucson, Ariz., Wednesday. The kidnaper, in a note to the child's father, Fernando Robles, said unless $15,000 ransom was paid June would be slain. Tucson police, aided by 1000 citizens including cowboys armed with six-shooters and members of the American Legion, immediately took up the search for the kidnaped child. (Associated Press Photo).

The shot was fired a few minutes after he arose at 7 o'clock. He entered the ranger service in the lawless days of West Texas. As sergeant under Captain Monroe Fox he participated in cleaning up the Big Bend country.

Society Girl Finds English Life Static

Monotonous Routine Draws Wife Of Lord Into Affair With Play-Boy

One of the most fascinatingly varied functions among the elements is the action of ocean water—and it is this which contributed the title of "Riptide" to Norma Shearer's latest starring vehicle which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will bring to the Ritz Theatre today and Monday.

The dictionary will tell you that a riptide is the condition when water becomes roughened by conflicting tides or currents. What is remarkable about this condition is that there is no resolution of the conflict until one weakens and is diverted to another direction. It is not a question of triumph; it is a question of weakening and disappearance.

And this, by strict parallel, is the story which Edmund Goulding has both written and directed in "Riptide." Norma Shearer, as an adventurous American woman who has married into London society, finds that the dulcet and sobriety of English life is not enough for her, even though she relishes it to a certain degree and loves her husband moderately well. When a wild young American play-boy comes into her life, he does not displace her husband by any means; her love somehow encompasses both of them.

And then, by natural selection, one of these joint and conflicting currents of love weakens of its own accord and the woman is free to continue in a single direction with her true companion. Herbert Marshall plays the role of the husband in the new Shearer drama, and the part of the American play-boy is filled by Robert Montgomery. The impressive cast also includes the noted English stage star, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Skeets Gallagher, Ralph Forbes and Lilyan Tashman.

It has been estimated by agricultural authorities that American farmers spend $40,000,000 annually for planting seeds.

Three mad dogs went on a rampage recently in Gastonia, N. C., and bit 17 persons.

Right now Herbert Marshall as Lord Rexford seems to have the upper hand in his struggle to hold his wife, Norma Shearer. But his Lordship experiences all the emotions when Robert Montgomery as Tommy tinkers with his wife's affections. "Riptide," leading Ritz attraction, is a chronicle repeated of separation, estrangement, reconciliation. The last estrangement is worse than the first. So is the reconciliation, but it is unconvincing in the light of former wistfulness.

Corruption And Abuses Attached To Reservation Administration Is Bared In Potent Production

Richard Barthelmess' newest picture for First National, "Massacre," which will be shown on the screen of the Ritz theater for the first time next Friday and Saturday, is said to be the most pretentious production in which the star has appeared for many years.

The picture, which deals with the American Indian of today and his conflict with modern civilization, combines picturesque and colorful spectacles with dynamic drama and a unique romance.

Barthelmess has the role of a Sioux brave who has been educated at Haskell. Steeped in the ways of the white man and ignorant of the conditions of his own people he begins his career as a circus rider and wins the plaudits of white girls for his dare-deviltry. He is lionized by a wealthy society girl seeking new and unusual thrills.

Called back suddenly to his reservation, his eyes are opened to the pitiful plight of his people by an Indian maid who has fallen madly in love with him. Cocksure of himself, he tries to take things into his own hands and starts a series of thrilling and dramatic incidents that wind up with the smashing climax of an Indian uprising.

Ann Dvorak and Claire Dodd, the former in the role of an Indian maid, and the later as the white society girl, are the rivals for the love of the young chief, the three forming one of the strangest triangles on record.

Other members of the cast are well known on both the stage and screen and include such famous players as Dudley Digges, Henry O'Neill, Robert Barrat, Arthur Kohl, Sidney Toler, Clarence Muse, Charles Middleton, Tully Marshall, Douglas Dumbrille, William V. Mong, DeWitt Jennings, Henry Kolker and Frank McGlynn.

Besides the cast of regular Hollywood stars there are 300 Indians in bit and extra parts, forming a colorful background for the picture. In addition to the realistic touches showing the Indian in his impoverished and neglected condition, there are picturesque scenes which reveal the ancient customs of the race, their religious ceremonies, tribal rites and ceremonial dances.

Chief Standing Bear, of the Sioux nation, acted as technical advisor on the production and supervised the accurate presentation of Indian life. The story is by Robert Gessner, who made a special investigation of Indian affairs in order to secure authoritative facts for his book, "Massacre," on which he based his story, which was dramatized for the screen by Ralph Block and Sheridan Gibney. Alan Crosland directed.

"I AM POWERLESS in the grip of love! . . . 'Gadly I give my heart to the man I love . . . to safeguard or trample on . . . to pet or to bruise. I hold back nothing . . . love heeds no restrictions. The world prefers to misunderstand . . . raised eyebrows and shocked glances greet me in Biarritz, Cannes, London and New York, but I never look backwards . . . I have no regrets. Life is interesting, exciting . . . and love makes it so when one is held in the Riptide."

Famous Dance Unit To Give Only 3 Shows

Big Spring Is Only Small Town Stop Billed Between Coast And N. Y.

Easily the most outstanding offering here in several seasons is the three performances of Maria Isabel and her forty international artists Tuesday evening and Wednesday.

It is, in the words of J. Y. Robb, manager of the Ritz theater, a stroke of fortune which brings the famous Latins here for an appearance.

Enroute east for engagements with the larger theaters, Maria Isabel, the world's greatest exponent of the authentic Spanish dance, and company found an opening in their schedule. Hearing of this, Manager Robb snatched at the opportunity to bring so renowned a company into his theater.

There will be one performance Tuesday evening and a matinee and evening showing Wednesday.

A part of the group of acclaimed artists is Marcos Devalos and his Spanish recording orchestra. Among others included in the company are such personages as Martinez and Espinosa, Joseph Barcelina, Paulita and Hugo, Adriana and Tina, Nicholas Navarro. There is also the Trio de Madrid, three artists reeking with musical talents.

Maria is the American girl who made a life venture out of her study of the Spanish dance and won acclaim of critics on two continents.

Her interpretations astounded audiences in Spain and Portugal and other countries with authenticity of the dance.

The company carries a gorgeous array of costumes, beautiful sets. Said William F. McDermott of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, "Her costumes are extraordinary in variety and richness. They would do for 'Ziegfeld Follies' in the palmy days."

So varied, unique and colorful is the sparkling presentation that it is said to worthy of any concert stage with a snap that will delight all types of audiences.

Among the dances to be presented will be an interpretation of the original caricia which took America by storm.

It is rare indeed that Maria Isabel and her artists appear in towns as small as Big Spring. Rare indeed is it that they are presented in cities of less than 100,000 inhabitants.

A bunch of wild animals; exciting horse races, a pitched battle between an enraged tiger and a man; and a raging fire which burns down an entire tourist camp are several of the most potent elements that bring a thrilling, entertaining climax to the Paramount picture, "She Made Her Bed."

Tuesday and Wednesday to the Ritz theater.

The leading players are Richard Arlen, Sally Eilers, Robert Armstrong and Roscoe Ates. With Grace Bradley, Charley Grapewin and Arlen's eight-months-old son, Richard Ralston, completing the supporting players.

This, incidentally, marks the first screen appearance of the Arlen baby. He was given the role originally intended for Baby LeRoy, but that youngster had grown so, from the time he was cast until the picture went into production, that he could not be used.

Ralph Murphy directed from a screen play by Casey Robinson and the original story, "Baby in the Ice-Box," was written by James M. Cain. It ran in a popular magazine a short time ago.

The picture concerns the hectic romance that develops between

Benny And Horse, Incurable Soldiers, Develop Friendship Bonds Faster Than Human Love

A popular story from within the covers of the Saturday Evening Post comes to the screen in "Keep 'Em Rolling," RKO-Radio Pictures' production of Leonard Nelson's "Rodney" with Walter Huston and Frances Dee heading the popular cast in this dramatic version of the magazine yarn.

The show plays at the Queen today, Monday and Tuesday.

Retaining the basic theme of a man's devotion to a horse in "Rodney," "Keep 'Em Rolling," according to Albert Shelby Levino's adaptation, is said to be charged with more drama, comedy, pathos and romance than the original story.

The war department co-operated extensively, permitting RKO-Radio to use Fort Myer, Virginia, as location grounds, and the 3rd cavalry and 16th field artillery regiments to work in the picture under the supervision of Colonel Kenyon A. Joyce, U. S. A.

"Keep 'Em Rolling" reveals intimate phases of a soldier's life against the backgrounds of post headquarters, drilling fields, battle grounds of France, stable sheds and canteens. The hero, Benny Walsh, is an incurable, boisterous soldier who makes the army his business career in 1915. His swashbuckling gets him into bravos and the guardhouse, and his belligerent nature attracts Benny. They react upon each other into fast friendships.

When the World war comes, Benny and Rodney go overseas. They are wounded and render distinguished service which is rewarded by honor citations. Then they return to the post, many years older, worn, haggard. They appear ready for retirement to the efficient Colonel James Parker, who denies Benny re-enlistment, depriving him of a merited government pension; and commands Rodney to the bone-mill and glue factory. The love of Marjorie Deans, Benny's old-time friend, for Parker does not prevent her from intervening in Benny's behalf.

Months later, a child is born to his wife. Armstrong jealously attempts a diabolical revenge which turns against him, but which brings the picture to a most thrilling climax.

EPIC CENTURY April

This is an illustrated quarterly classic devoted to Texas and the Great Southwest, according to the announcement on its cover. In its pages will be found history, legend, lore, adventure, story, biography, Texana and Americana—in short all that is interesting about the life of this state.

The magazine is being published by the Naylor Printing Co. of San Antonio, whose books have always related strictly to Texas. The last of them reviewed in this column was Bushick's "Glamorous Days," a story of San Antonio.

This issue of the magazine deals mostly with San Antonio. An interesting article gives the detail of the remodeling of the Spanish Governor's Palace. The illustrations are excellent; the story as a whole gives facts and information that make it worth reading and remembering.

Other articles include an account of the Texas Navy and the capture of Santa Anna. The present day is paid a tribute in an account of the Pioneer Flour Mills and a story on "The Co-operative Principle" as applied by the Great American Life Insurance company, which had its beginnings in San Antonio.

The first edition of this quarterly is interesting to look at and fairly so to read. Its life however depends on how it can keep up that interest. We await its next issues with anticipation and in the meantime extend it our best wishes.

Behind The City Park Scenes

Carl Parker, Caretaker, Tells What To Expect This Summer; Bluebonnets At Their Best In Park Sunday

BY O. R. F.

People who want to go to San Antonio and see the bluebonnets—and can't; people who try to grow big perfect and rare flowers in the west—and can't; people who can't do things and people who can't; people who like to tell you how to do things and people who like just to look on—in short everybody in Big Spring ought to drive out to the City park this afternoon and see the bluebonnets now in all the glory of their heavenly blueness.

Although the bluebonnets may be the chief objective of most of the local motorists, let me tell you how to enjoy the park trip all the more—by keeping an alert eye on what Carl Parker, the caretaker, promises us for the summer. The park is twice as much fun if you know what's going on behind the scenes.

According to Mr. Parker this is going to be a pink and red summer. Such pinks and such reds! And such jawbreakers of botanical names.

Already the red phlox along the east side of the entrance to the park proper are out in riotous burst of color. They were doing pretty well Thursday when a peppery little hail storm came along and set them back a few days. Behind the phlox are Sidonia japonica and forysthia with an occasional Arizona eypress to give a background of green for the mass of color in the foreground.

Beauty of Oxford

Don't turn into the park just now but go on south. To the east are beds of verbenas—those huge red and pink fellows known as the Beauty of Oxford, considered the world's most beautiful. Mr. Parker uses these varieties only, and uses them with a lavish hand. On the west bed are lantanas in pink, buddina (better known as butterfly bush) and the rose garden.

The rose garden was planned only this spring. But it is ready to bloom. Sixty-two roses and everyone of them healthy. Along this driveway, whose beauty will rival that of the main entrance this summer, are larkspur and sinias. Red and pink hibiscus are being planted there for an experiment—hibiscus are similar to a cotton blossom but their popularity is chiefly connected with their fame as a Hawaiian flower. Certain pink Beauty of Oxford verbenas are also planted in the bed that follows the west side of the creek.

At the circular bed at the end of the driveway are yellow cannas surrounded by pink lantanas.

The petunias attracted many an eye last summer, such huge fringed petals, so deeply purpled, so rich in velvety color. Petunia admirers will be surprised to know that these hardy flowers disdain certain parts of the park and refuse to grow there; instead of turning up their noses they merely turn yellow. So Mr. Parker, who has to know soil as well as flowers to get the best results, puts the petunias in the places they will do best. They thrive particularly well in upper beds along the main driveway. This year he is hoping to grow an exceptionally rare variety of pink petunia.

Pink Petunias

Seeds of these pink petunias are very high priced. Last year he had a few plants so he saved the seed. (Ever try saving seed—or even finding them—from petunias?) He has a lot of seed this year and he hopes to make the bed at the upper end of the main driveway as pink and rosy as a western sunrise.

The little gray plants edging the big beds are santolinas. They stand trimming and make lovely edging plants giving a nice color contrast. Red lantanas border the big green lawn in the center. Lantanas are a popular flower because they are hardy and come up again in the spring.

The bluebonnets that spread from a few plants brought from Central Texas by Mr. and Mrs. Nat Shick, have become such a big patch that they give a fair idea of how the flowers look in fields. Later Mr. Parker intends to spread seed over the hills. Just now he is

Greatest Attendance On Record Forecast For Sixteenth Annual Convention Of West Texas C-C

SAN ANGELO—The greatest attendance in many years is predicted for the sixteenth annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, San Angelo, May 14-16, by Maury Hopkins, convention manager of the regional chamber. Hopkins has been in San Angelo for the past four weeks in charge of the headquarters office for the convention.

"From the response we are getting from the one hundred and seventy-five affiliated towns, it looks like the San Angelo convention is going to crowd the attendance record set up here eleven years ago when San Angelo entertained the 1923 convention," Hopkins said.

"At this time, twenty days before the convention, we have more local directors nominated, more entries in the My Home Town Speaking contest, more young lady representatives in the evening show; more bands reporting they will be here for the convention, more entries in the poster exhibit contest, and more reports of organized delegations than at any similar time within the past four years," he added. "All of these things are taken as indications of what we may expect in attendance."

Hopkins also said that the program was practically complete, and will be announced in detail soon. Every speaker on the Rehabilitation group conference has accepted. They are, Clifford B. Jones, Spur; Marv McGee, Fort Worth; James F. Owens, Oklahoma City; Dr. Bradford Knapp, Lubbock; A. C. Williams, Houston; James Shaw, Dallas; Houston Hart, San Angelo, and R. L. Holliday, El Paso.

Speakers before the agricultural group conference who have accepted are: O. B. Martin, College Station; J. Edwin Brown, Canyon; Guinn Williams, San Angelo and A. H. Leidigh, Lubbock.

YAQUI JOE TO BATTLE BENNY WILSON IN MAIN SCRAP MAY 3

Middle-weight Champion To Meet Abilene Grappler In Finish Match At The Casino

The program of the Public Expenditure conference is also nearly complete, speakers already having definitely accepted being Wallace Perry, El Paso; Chas. W. Lewis, Sweetwater; R. M. Wagstaff, Abilene, and Dr. Herman G. James, Vermillion, S. D.

Walter D. Cline, president of the organization is the keynote speaker before the general convention on champion. In two out of three fights he has finished his opponent. Matchmaker Casey Jones said Saturday.

Tony Conli of New Jersey will meet Jimmie Murphy of Dallas in the semi-final. The match will go two out of three falls with a forty-five minute limit. The main bout between Yaqui and Benny will have a two hour limit.

Due to a long friendship with Casey Jones, Joe agreed to come here without a large guarantee to settle claims being voiced by Wilson.

Yaqui features the flying body scissor hold, standing leg split and is claimed to be the fastest man in the world with the flying toe hold. His legs are insured for ten thousand dollars. He keeps in trim by skipping the rope.

The first local work-outs will be held at 8:30 p. m. Monday at the Club Casadena.

engaged in seeing they have a good start. He says they have not had a lot of water—some in the winter and some in the spring at the beginning of the growing season. They are a foot and more high! If you don't believe it, ask him. Don't try betting and then measuring because more than likely they'll prove to be over a foot.

Mr. Parker has been here for two years—now going on three—and has seen all sorts of weather at the park from flood to ten below zero to last summer's drought. One year he had to remake the flower bed just above the ford three times when it was washed out from the creek overflow.

West Texans who think that all there is to gardening is sticking a seed into the ground and keeping it wet with the hose and a weather eye cocked out for the neighbor's chickens or a severe sandstorm, will be shocked to hear how much work goes on behind the scenes at the City park to produce all this tumult of color and these beautiful extensive beds that surprise all our summer visitors.

Behind the Scenes

First Mr. Parker makes his soil. Then he plants every seed in its individual pot. Or he plants in the pot a cutting that he intends to propagate for next summer—a fall job. The cuttings go into their pots in the fall. The seeds were planted last February. The pots are kept in cold frames. If a freeze comes up Mr. Parker must visit them in the night and see that lanterns keep them warm. Raising young flowers is on the same order as incubating young chicks.

I asked Mr. Parker how many thousands of flowers he had planted and potted for the coming summer. Here are his statistics: 3750 petunias; 2290 sinias; 350 Spanish apples (a flower that resembles a fuchsia, 1100 santolinas, 1600 carles and pink Beauty of Oxford verbenas; 500 red lantanas; 350 pink lantanas. Each little seed planted with care! The park is another evidence of in union there is beauty.

In the winter, also, the hills and the whole park is cleaned of weeds and other undesirable growth.

Not only will new varieties of flowers be added to the park, but also new fish to fish pond—200 fish. There have been planted 20 Chinese elms this year.

Mr. Parker also contributes plants to the City Hall and gives "Doc" Akey of the golf links a helping hand with his flowers around the clubhouse.

DESPERADO LEAVES ARSENAL BEHIND HIM

This array of firearms and ammunition was found in the Little Bohemia lodge near Mercer, Wis., after the flight of John Dillinger and his gang from the secluded spot where federal agents had planned to trap them. The collection included a wide variety of gangster weapons which the desperado apparently was forced to leave in his rush for freedom. (Associated Press Photo)

THIS WAS DILLINGER'S CLUBROOM---UNTIL GUNS BARKED

This was the rendezvous of John Dillinger and his band of murderous outlaws—the Little Bohemia resort near Mercer, Wis.—until federal officers started to surround the place and Dillinger and six henchmen escaped. Officers are shown inspecting the lobby of the resort lodge after the battle. (Associated Press Photo)

FIGURES IN TAMMANY SHAKEUP

These men are figuring in the shakeup of New York's Tammany Hall, which was climaxed by the ousting of John F. Curry as leader. James J. Hines (right) and Edward J. Ahsarn (upper left) dominate the confused scene. Hines, though he voted for Curry, was accused by the latter of leading the revolt. Ahsarn is a candidate for Curry's post. Grover Whalen (lower left) was mentioned as a possible member of a committee which may be named to take over the leadership. (Associated Press Photos)

Becomes Target In Dillinger Case

Melvin H. Purvis (above), chief of the Chicago bureau of investigation of the federal department of justice, was criticized in some quarters for failure of his operatives to catch John Dillinger. In Mercer, Wis., near the scene of the desperado's escape from a federal trap, a petition was circulated asking that Purvis be removed. (Associated Press Photo)

Woman Saves Him From Kidnap Trio

Charles M. Kella, Jr. (above), telephone engineer of Fort Worth, Tex., was rescued from the rumble seat of his own car by a woman filling station operator after three men had kidnaped him. The woman, Mrs. G. H. McKee, heard Kella tapping from his odd "cell," and seized her husband's pistol when the trio couldn't pay for gas. Two of the abductors were caught. (Associated Press Photo)

VICTIMS IN BATTLE WITH GUNMEN

Two of the four persons injured in the northern Wisconsin battle between Dillinger gangsters and federal officers were Carl Christensen, constable of Spider Lake, Wis., shown with his nurse, Mary Levendoski and John Morris (inset), a CCC camp officer. Christensen was critically wounded. Morris was hurt when shots were fired into a car in which he was riding. John Bolsosau, one of his companions, was killed. The men are shown in a hospital at Ironwood, Mich. (Associated Press Photos)

SOUGHT AS OUTLAW KILLERS

Two of the men sought with the John Dillinger band of killers are Tommy Carroll (left), St. Paul bank robber believed to be one of the latest recruits to the outlaw gang, and George "Baby Face" Nelson (right) Dillinger henchman who was identified as the gunman who shot and killed W. IN THE DERBY PADDOCK

Discovery, hand-picked by 21-year-old Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt at the cost of $20,000, jumped into the ranks of outstanding contenders for the Kentucky derby when he worked a mile in 1:37.8, a full second faster than the track record at Havre de Grace. Following that performance, his first since leaving the Sagamore farm at Worthington, Md., his odds were knocked down from 20 to 1 to 10 to 1. (Associated Press Photo)

US Eighty League Play Opens Today With Lamesa Here

Colorado To Play Coahoma

Henninger Assembles Strong Team For Opening Game

The U. S. Eighty league baseball season opens today with Lamesa playing the Coahoma Oilers here and the Coahoma Bulldogs playing Col-Tex at Colorado.

The Cosdenites have played six practice games to date, having lost three of them. The Lamesa club, managed by C. C. Peterson, will venture to Big Spring today for the first time this season with a well balanced hard hitting club.

The Oilers, in spite of some disappointing games this season, have been showing rapid improvement, and Managers Henninger and Barber have assembled for the opening fray—the strongest line-up possible.

Pap Paine, former Tiger hurler, will take the mound for Cosden with Patton behind the plate. Fowler will take first, P. Martin, second; in third, Moffett shortstop, L. Martin, leftfield, Harris centerfield, P. Berg, rightfield.

The game will be played on the West Third diamond, starting at 3 o'clock.

Rules and regulations passed for the league are: 1. The schedule shall consist of 20 games divided into two series of 10 games each. The first series shall begin April 29 and end July 1. Coach Edgar Hennig, so says the Sweetwater scribe, started last week the task of rebuilding a new football team for Sweetwater with 33 candidates reporting, ranging in size from little John Billings at about 100 pounds up to big Jim Tindale at about 175, the coaches will have numbers to pick from, even if green.

Continuing, the scribe says: "With only four letter men returning from last year's team, only one of which was a first string starter, the prospect is not promising to say the least. Fred Barnett, the letterman from last year's first string starters, Raymond Billings, Alvis Mundy and Charles Rosebrough, will of course be the mainstay of the '34 team, with from two to five out for each of the other positions."

Incidentally, this will be the first year that the entire squad, with the possible exception of Tindale, will be the product of the Hennig regime. With the graduation this year of John Holbert and some of the others, the last of Ben Daniel's old Roosters team and former Coach Lowe's Mustangs.

Johnny Holbert and big Bob Hall, former Fony stars, have been working-out with the new Nolan county club—just to keep in training for next fall, when they go off to college. Coach Harry Taylor, Blondy

CHAPTER 35 PACIFYING SCOGGINS

"Well, sir, then we looked in a store window and there was a dress shimmerin' like it had fish scales on it," Scoggins went on.

"Scoggins, they're called," said Judith, "little metal things that dovetail into each other."

"Well, this one was a green one and Mamie she looked at it and then she looked at me and her eyes were chock-full of tears, just bein' happy. 'Ain't it grand?' she says.

"Next mornin' I made like I was goin' up to buy me a cigar and I went to that store aimin' to buy that dress for Mamie if it took my roll. Whatcha think they asked for it? Two hundred and fifty dollars. I didn't get it."

Judith appeared to be as shocked as Scoggins had hoped she would be, but beneath her sympathetic expression was worry. What in the name of goodness was the man leading up to?

"Miss Judith, I got a chance to git them things for Mamie an' git Tommy a car and send him to college, without waitin' for trees to grow and him too old to go and Mamie too old to enjoy things. I got a chance right now.

"You know that piece a land I got that juts into your flood basin? There's oil there and I'm here to tell you, you can't use it for water."

One trick that Judith had learned during her years as secretary to Big Tom Bevins was to maintain silence in a crisis, to let the other person speak first.

Judith felt that the fate of the Rio Diablo Dam hung in precarious balance as she sat watching Scoggins. Without his land there could be no dam, it formed a queer shaped snake's figure jutting far out into the flood basin.

Big Tom's faith in Scoggins had been so complete he had neglected to gain his consent to it as usual in writing. Judith remembered calling his attention to it the night of their first vigil, but he had insisted such a procedure would be jeopardizing Scoggins' trust in him, after Scoggins had refused such a big price for his land.

"Don't reckon you understand, Miss Judy," he began again, troubled shame in his voice, "I'm going to git oil on my land and I can't if it's flooded, see?"

"What makes you thing there is oil on your land?" she inquired, with nothing but sympathetic interest in her voice.

"There's been a man there with a divin' rod working about the place. To tell you th' truth, Miss Judy," he leaned close and half aspered, "there's a great lake of oil underneath this here valley, yes sir, just like they've got up to Longview."

"Strange the man didn't want to purchase it from you," she mused.

"He did," was the quick answer, then loyally, "but I promised Big Tom I wouldn't sell to nobody."

Judith repressed a smile at the unintentioned satire of his remark—"and then what did he say?"

"That he'd sink a test well and take a percentage for the sinkin' if I'd see the place didn't get flooded."

"And how was that to be brought about?"

"He said he'd go to court for me and git an in-an in—"

"Injunction," offered Judith to whom the word was fast becoming a nemesis.

"Yes that's it, a court order he explained, keepin' you from going ahead with your work until we could prove there's oil there."

"Is he going to do that?" Judith asked, as calmly as she could.

"Not unless he has to."

"But Mr. Scoggins you know as well as I do that the construction of the dam as it is going along now won't harm your land. The gates will be kept open for the very sake of the dam until it's completed. There isn't much chance of having a flood like you had here last year and if you did your oil land would be flooded anyway, wouldn't it?"

"Yeh, but he says once you get it built we can't stop you, if we're goin' to do anything we got to do it now."

"Then what did you mean he wouldn't get out an injunction unless he had to?"

"Unless you'd agree to quit work without it."

Judith sat a few moments in silence. A crisis like this needed a man like Big Tom; not Justin Currier, Judge Morgan nor any man she knew could handle it.

She was Big Tom's stenographer, she repeated to herself and she was going to act as she had acted in his office when things came up she couldn't handle during his absence. She would pretend he was temporarily absent.

"Mr. Scoggins, have you signed any papers?" she asked.

"No, Miss Judith, they was eggging me on to do it, this man and Mamie, but I says no, I'm not signin' nothing."

"That's fine, Mr. Scoggins. I tried to talk Big Tom into getting you to sign an agreement for our use of your land in the flood basin and he wouldn't do it. He said he would bank everything he had on your word."

"He said that?" came the pleased, incredulous question.

"Yes."

"Miss Judy, I . . . I don't want to do this. It's just Tommy and Mamie and being able to give them things. I've got to let Miss Judy, I owe it to them, that fish-scale dress and a car for Tommy—"

"I know," Judith, like Big Tom was putting her trust in the man as she spoke. "I do understand how you feel, but I'm going to ask you to do something for Big Tom. No, not give up your oil. Mr. Bevins would never have asked you to sacrifice yourself for him, would he? And you could have depended upon him to play fair with you, always, couldn't you?"

"Yes, indeed, Miss Judith."

"Well, Mr. Scoggins, I'm acting as his secretary now and I'm going to carry out his orders, so think of yourself as dealing with him. Give me a few days to think this over. I want to explore an angle I've just thought about and then I'll meet you and give you my decision is that fair?"

"Yes it is."

"And you will give me your word that you will not sign anything until after I've talked with you, nor go ahead with any of the plans this man offers?"

"Supposin' he won't wait?"

"If he's honest and there is oil on your land, he will wait."

"Of course . . . yes, of course he will, won't he?"

They shook hands, Scoggins started to go but Judith had motioned Delphy and the old woman appeared with a coffee pot and a frosted cake. They talked of everything excepting oil and dams and when Scoggins left he had forgotten his dogged, half-shamed manner of the earlier evening.

After he had left, Judith slipped a light sweater over her head and trudged up to the "Ship Rock". Wearily she stretched out on the rock and looked out on the plains, a blue-black bowl topped by a blue-black sky.

Was it worth the heartache and worry, this building of Diablo Dam? Surely it seemed that of Diablo was at the bottom of it, something devilish seemed to dog her footsteps as she sought to carry out her instructions.

She had sacrificed her husband, her home, herself on the altar of Big Tom's ideal and for what? He had been building for the people and now they didn't want the project that had indirectly robbed him of his life.

She laughed, a broken catch in her voice as she realized it was memory of Scoggins' house being swept from its foundations in the storm, that had sent her away from Norman in the moment of her decision. And now Scoggins—she heard a noise and looked up. A huge figure was silhouetted against the milky glow of a million stars.

"Delphy," she cried, startled.

"Yessam," came the plaintive reply.

"What are you doing up here? I thought you were in bed."

"None."

Without words they went back to the house, Judith meekly accepting her bed-time drink and massage, which she suffered in an effort to repay Delphy for her devotion.

Morning brought Slim Sanford, and with him one of the foremost geologists of the country.

Young Women Cooped Up By Strict Rules

Tragedy Falls When Girl Oversteps Rules In Affair

With Dorothy Wilson, Kay Johnson, Douglas Montgomery and Walter Connolly in the leading roles and with eight beautiful girls, who were selected as winners in contests held in eight cities, "Eight Girls in a Boat," the Paramount picture coming Thursday to the Ritz theater, presents a story of young and beautiful, romance-hungry girls barred by the walls and strict rules of an exclusive boarding school.

The picture was directed by Richard Wallace from the screen play by Casey Robinson. The original story was written by Helmut Brandt.

Christa Storm, played by Dorothy Wilson, is one of the students at the school. Venturing outside the walls, she meets a young medical student, falls in love, is ecstatically happy. But tragedy is the inevitable result.

Christa tries to keep her secret hidden but her sweetheart falls for her and she finds herself unable to tell her father. It is only when one of the teachers at the school reveals sympathy and understanding that Christa's problem is solved.

CLINT SMALL, PANHANDLE'S FIRST MAJOR CONTENDER FOR GOVERNOR, AND FAMILY

Sen. Clint C. Small of Amarillo, candidate for governor, Mrs. Small, and their son, Clint Small Jr., and daughter, Miss Winifred Small.

(BY RAYMOND BROOKS)
AUSTIN—Senator Clint S. Small, the Panhandle's first major contender for the governorship of Texas, is a lawyer of varied public service through nearly all the years of his mature life. His career has included city and county attorney, county judge, mayor, district judge, president of a chamber of commerce, and state senator. His name is written into Texas law, as author of the famous Small and bill.

Senator Small began his law practice in Wellington, Collingsworth county, where he was located until after his election to the senate, since when his home has been in Amarillo, "capital of the Panhandle."

Small's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Small, came to Texas from Alabama, in 1891. They brought him with them, a baby three years old.

Small grew up in Texas, attending and she finds happiness and love at last.

ed the public schools and the University of Texas, taking his law degree from the same university his son, Clint Jr., is now attending.

When he received his law degree, Clint Small and a fellow-graduate opened a law office at Wellington. After a year, Small carried on alone. Soon the young lawyer was elected county attorney, then county judge. He served awhile as Wellington city attorney, then mayor of Wellington, president of the chamber of commerce, president of the county fair.

He was married to Miss Winifred Zoe O'Neal of Childress, Mr. and Mrs. Small have two children, Clint, Jr., student in the university, and Miss Winifred Small, high school student.

After a long service in his county and city offices, Small was elected district judge of the 100th district, comprising several Panhandle counties. Soon his people urged him to offer for the state senate and elected him. He is now serving his sixth year in the senate.

Four years ago he entered the governor's race, and placed third in the numerous field. This year he is back in the race again.

Such is a thumb-nail sketch of the personal side of Sen. Small's career.

Much more is told in terms of the

His name was linked with the policy legislation settling land title rights, such as the streambed bill, dealing with many thousands of land surveys throughout the state. Small shared the honors of authorship in many measures. He had a part in writing the state budget law, the bond assumption law, the relief legislation of the present and past legislatures, the penitentiary reform bill which kept the prison at Huntsville and modernized it. He supported and advocated the rural aid appropriations, and a long series of bills perfecting and stabilizing titles to land. He helped draft the legislation that added several thousand acres of disputed territory to the Texas public domain. He voted for and helped work out the emergency legislation of 1934, and the reduced appropriations bills, including appropriations which were held up so far as possible for adequate support of the colleges and state institutions.

At the recent session, Sen. Small, though not a proponent of the idea of postponing execution of contracts by the moratorium law, helped work out a moratorium bill that his experience as a trial judge led him to believe might be sustained by the courts.

Sen. Small's parents, who came to an almost-unsettled section of Texas in 1821, and who lived through the "dugout" days of the plains country, still live in the county where they settled—on a ranch homestead in Collingsworth county, where the senatorial candidate for governor grew up.

SCOUT NEWS

RED LETTER WEEK
This is a red letter week for scouts. Next to camp it carries more interest than any other week on the calendar. It is the week of council jamboree when more than 400 scouts annually vie in competition.

PREPARATIONS MADE
Dr. Lee O. Rogers, who each year has the big job of arranging details for entertaining the visitors, says that everything is about lined up for the big affair. One that's some arranging when you consider that several beavers, a hundred pounds of beans, a couple barrels of lemonade and other edible materials in like proportions disappear like the morning mist before hungry scouts.

LOCAL TROOPS HELP
Big Spring troops are helping to make the jamboree a success. One has agreed to fill up camp holes and level off the grounds over which the competition will be run. Another will erect needed improvements. Still another will clear out a hill side around the council fire site.

HOSCOE STRONG
Roscoe, under the unrivaled George Parks, will again present the serious threat of the jamboree. Big Spring troops, profiting by mistakes revealed in the city jamboree, hope to bolster up the weak points and head off the indicated Roscoe rout.

REAL TREAT
Scouts and scouters and other folks for that matter, have a real treat in store for Wednesday evening, William Tomkins, the world's outstanding authority on Indian sign language, will appear in the city auditorium for a demonstration Wednesday 8 p. m. He once taught 50,000 scouts, speaking 22 different languages, to understand each other by means of the Indian sign. A big crowd will probably hear him and there is not likely to be a scout in town absent.

Dr. Lee Rogers, Jack Cummings and Joe Pickle will go from here to join with delegations from other cities to inspect a prospective camp site at Merizon. Scouts will get a free show as a present from J. Y. Robb this year. Each of some 30 troops will present an original stunt Friday night at council fire. Three local troops, No. 2, 3 and 7 scored 100 on their rating last month. Court of Honor dates will be announced sometime this week.

TROOP MEETINGS
Troop No. 1—Fourteen scouts and one official were present at the troop's weekly meeting. The meeting was really just a hard practice for the jamboree. We are in big hopes for the coming jamboree as the boys made a good showing in the practice. The boys gradually had to leave and soon the rest left. Reported by Sam Atkins, scribe.

Troop No. 3—After successfully carrying off most of the honors of the city jamboree, troop three has been putting in some intensive practice in preparation for the council jamboree, to be held next week-end.

Tuesday night the troop met at the Methodist church for jamboree assignments and practice. Only 10 boys were present, the rest attending the board of review being held at the Baptist church. At this meeting Mr. Rance King presented to the troop the indoor baseball and bat that Montgomery Ward & company had offered as the trophy to the troop winning the city jamboree.

Thursday afternoon Mr. Cummings and Mr. Wheeler met the troop at the Jamboree Grounds for the purpose of practicing signaling, knot tying and scout pace. Next Tuesday the troop is to meet again at the park, with troop two, to prepare the stage and light stands for the council fire at the jamboree. Every scout in the troop had better be over or Mr. Wheeler might fall all over them like a ton of brick, at the next meeting.

SCHOOL CENSUS

Has Your Child Been Overlooked?

The enumerators have finished the canvas of the City. It is important that no scholastic be overlooked. A scholastic is a person who will be at least six years old by the first of September, but who will not be over seventeen years old on that date.

The patrons and prospective patrons of the Big Spring schools are urgently requested to and report any children who have not been enumerated. Children who will become six years old by September first, children who have finished high school and are still in the free school age, others who have dropped out of school to work, may have been overlooked. These should all be reported. For each child enumerated the school district receives $16.00 for the support of the schools.

Any person, who is over 6 years of age and who has not reached their 18th birthday on or before September 1, 1934, is a scholastic and should be enumerated whether they are married or single.

Your cooperation in securing a complete school census will be appreciated.
