Encephalomyelitis

Viral encephalomyelitis was observed and described in horses as early as 1831. The symptoms of the disease prompted the name of "Blind Staggers" by the early horsemen. Today, the common name for this virus condition is Sleeping Sickness. Discussions of the American Association of Equine Practitioners indicate that the public is misinformed about this disease in that the equine family has been blamed for the perpetuation of the disease from year to year. The actual host of the infective virus is the fowl infective virus is the fowl in general, principally small birds. Although these infected birds show no symptoms, they carry a high concentration of the virus in their blood stream. One might wonder, then, how the horse as well as man, becomes infected. The mosquito is the vector that transmits the virus and since encephalomyelitis is a disease of birds rather than horses, it is easy for the mosquito to transmit the infection from bird to bird, bird to horse or bird to man. It is possible that other blood sucking insects may be involved, but most outbreaks on record also recorded a high mosquito population. The horse, like man, is merely an accidental dead-end host or victim where the virus is concerned because the virus does not spread from either horse or man. That the horse is not a public health menace nor a source of infection for man is emphasized through research.

There are two different types of encephalomyelitis viruses that produce the diseases here in Texas. The most dreaded of the two is the Eastern virus which produces 90% mortality, and permanent brain damage is common in those animals that survive. Occasionally, however, affected horses make a complete recovery. In the Texas region the Western type virus is the most prevalent because each was named for the geographical area in which the causative virus was first identified and where, incidentally, the disease still predominates. Western viral encephalomyelitis has been investigated rather extensively and is better understood than the Eastern type. It is well established that the mosquito, Culex tarsalis, is the chief vector and that wild birds are the chief reservoirs of the Western virus. Virologists consider this virus a greater public health problem because Western viral outbreaks in man have been more numerous than those caused by the Eastern type.

Death occurs in about 20% to 50% of the horses affected with Western virus, thus a greater effort in treatment is justified. Since the mosquito is considered to be the principal vector, these two types of Sleeping Sickness occur in horses in the time of high mosquito population during the summer months, especially in July, August and September.

Symptoms of both types of the disease consist of lack of co-ordination, paralysis of the throat (with inability to eat or swallow), loss of spirit, plus a distinctly abnormal attitude and behavior. Most horses stand in a peculiar, unnatural stance with the head and neck drooped in a sleepy manner. Death occurs in about three days in animals lost from the Eastern type, whereas death by the Western type occurs several days to two weeks after infection.

Because the Eastern and Western types of Sleeping Sickness viruses have been carried beyond their geographic regions, a bivalent vaccine containing both types has been developed. Single type virus vaccines are available commercially, but the bivalent type is recommended to be administered in two injections at seven to ten day intervals. Annual spring-time immunization of horses and other equine species is recommended in all areas having a history of the disease or a high mosquito population.

The survival and perpetuation of the viruses of Eastern and Western Sleeping Sickness is dependent on the type and number of insect reservoirs. Therefore, disease prevention and control includes mosquito control measures and protection by insect vectors during an outbreak.

To repeat, the horse is not a source of Western Sleeping Sickness and plays no part in perpetuating the disease; protective measures are designed for its well being.

Eastern Star Installation

Mrs. Ina Riley was installed as the Worthy Matron of the Eastern Star No. 942, Tuesday evening June 9, The Masonic Hall was decorated with wicker baskets of garden flowers, which were her chosen flowers and colors for the year. "Which is God's favorite flower? None knows. The lily or the June time rose. Or brightening some secluded spot. The tender pale forget-me-nots. With a differing leaf and bloom and stem. With differing charms he fastened them. No two of them alike from spring till fall. It must have been He loves them all."

The theme for her year will be "Living to Make a Life," and her chosen emblem will be "The Golden Chain." Other officers installed with Mrs. Riley were: Mr. Elmer Lowrie, Worthy Patron; Mrs. Ruby Blackburn, Associate Matron; J.N. Tucker, Associate Patron; Mrs. Pauline Lowrie, Secretary; Mrs. Inis Walker, Treasurer; Mrs. Willie Mae Stevens, Conductress; Mrs. Jerry Jackson, Associate Conductress; Mrs. Clara Childress, Chaplain; Mrs. Lula Jo Davis, Marshal; Mrs. Hazel Davidson, Organist; Mesdames, Polly Tucker, Opal Smith, Lucille Walser, Odessa Whitener, and Bertha Fisher to represent the five points of the emblematic Star. Mrs. Etta Crowder, Warder, and Frank D. Walker, Sentinel. Mrs. Inis Walker was the installing officer and she was assisted by Mesdames, Sally Harris, Etta Johnston, Gazelle Patterson of Mebeetie and Etta Crowder of Wheeler. Mrs. Mary Louise Mitchell sang a beautiful solo dedicated to her mother and gifts were presented to the new Worthy Matron and to the retiring Worthy Matron and Worthy Patron, Mrs. Joe Ann Millet and Mr. George Porter. The Past Matrons were hostesses for a reception in the banquet hall after the meeting.

Historical Report: Suffering of Civil War Soldiers Brought Progress in Medicine

Being a combat soldier during time of war is a danger few men relish. But during our Civil War, a century ago, the odds against soldiers surviving disease were far worse than the odds against surviving combat. Of the 364,511 Union men who perished during the war years of 1861-1865, approximately two-thirds succumbed to diseases—most of which could have been prevented, and many of which could have been cured—had the physicians of the day been well trained and knowledgeable about the drugs then available.

At the time the Southern states seceded, in April, 1861, there were only 90 regular medical officers in the army. With this medical backing, which included little ambulance service, no organized stretcher bearers, and a pharmacopoeia strongest in whiskey and calomel, the Union forces marched off to Bull Run in July from whence they soon retreated to Washington, leaving many of the wounded behind.

To serve the casualties of this engagement (some 2,000 dead and wounded), the army had only six hospitals scattered around Washington. The largest of these had only 40 beds.

So began a medical story so grim in its details that the wonder is that any who were unfortunate enough to become sick or wounded could survive at all. Before the war ended some four years after it began, there would be almost seven million reports of casualties through sickness or battle. One out of every 33 casualties would die.

Inadequately Trained Doctors. The dismal medical record that characterized most of the war was the result of many factors aside from the relatively undeveloped state of medical art at that time. To begin with, many doctors of that day were poorly trained and ill-equipped to cope with the diseases of epidemic proportions they soon saw . . . to say nothing of the enormous medical problems relating purely to battle wounds and their aftermath. Then too, there was little agreement among even the best medical minds as to what techniques should be followed regarding surgical or other medical procedures.

Adulterated Drugs. In the area of drugs, there were effective medications available at that time . . . but lack of understanding regarding their use . . . and the widespread adulteration and misrepresentation of such products contributed heavily to their being ineffectively used. Whisky remained the "medication of choice" throughout the war, although "modern" drugs such as quinine, opium derivatives, chloroform, paregoric, tannic acid, zinc sulfate and others were included in surgeons' field kits.

Last, but by no means least, was the generally horrible level of sanitation that prevailed wherever the soldiery was congregated. Silt trenches, when they were used at all, frequently drained into the drinking water supply. And as for bathing, well, it was bad enough getting rained on from time to time.

Beans, Beans, Beans. Add to all this inadequate shelter, inadequate clothing, and a diet of indigestible food with little vitamin value but great dysentery-provoking quality, and the reasons for field commanders having difficulty in mustering effective fighting forces come into sharp focus.

To compound these gigantic problems, the medical officers in the early days also had to cope with huge levies of men that had been improperly screened for military duty. Boys of 14 were not uncommon, and men in their fifties and sixties were among the volunteers filling regiments. In addition, defectives of all sorts were in the ranks, including epileptics, mental defectives, carriers of venereal disease, tuberculosis and "children's" diseases such as mumps, measles and chickenpox. Though smallpox inoculations had been introduced several decades before the war, few men had had them . . . even though they were supposed to be immunized by the army after they reported for duty. In some cases, this was done by the men themselves with pocket knives or bayonets . . . using scabs as the immunity source. (In one instance, syphilis scabs were used by mistake . . . with dire consequences.)

ONE OF THE "WONDERFUL" HOSPITALS

Role of Pharmacists. From the beginning, pharmacists assumed an important role in the care of the sick and wounded, particularly in the hospitals that were constructed as the war progressed. In the field, in the early days, these men, usually designated Stewards, were the only men permanently assigned to the surgeons and assistant surgeons attached to the various regiments. In addition to their duties in the care and dispensing of drugs, these men were required to perform minor surgery, bandage, extract teeth, use cups and leeches as required, and supervise cooking. When trained pharmacists were not available for these tasks, medical students or premed students were employed.

But it was in the semipermanent hospitals that pharmacists made their major contribution, running the wards, and directing the activities of convalescents with the help of volunteer female nurses from the civilian-run Sanitary Commission plus wounded veteran soldiers enlisted in an "Invalid Corps." Hospital Stewards, as they were called, had a rank comparable to that of Warrant Officers and were thus able to order recalcitrant sergeants about with little difficulty.

The Army Laboratories. By 1863, as casualties mounted and sickness decimated the ranks of the Union forces, Congress was persuaded that the army should establish its own laboratories to produce the drugs needed to treat the sick and wounded. This decision was made, in part, because of the difficulty of private entrepreneurs to provide medications of consistent quality in the quantities needed by the heavily suffering army. Two laboratories established for this purpose, one on Long Island in New York, and the other in Philadelphia, eventually were supplying almost half the medical needs of the Union armies.

In the government laboratories, as in hospitals and in the field, trained pharmacists proved invaluable.

In Philadelphia, John M. Maisch, a German immigrant who learned chemistry in his native country and studied pharmacy at the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, became the chief architect of the new government facility and its working head throughout the period of its service. But even then, the entrenched medical authorities refused to accord proper recognition of pharmacists' roles and repeated requests to Washington for an officer's rank for Maisch and other pharmacists were denied.

Progress . . . and a Legacy. By the time the war ended at Appomattox in April, 1865, substantial progress had been made regarding medical treatment of the troops. A series of hospitals considered marvels of the day had been established, a trained ambulance corps had been organized, inadequate doctors and defective soldiers had been weeded out, drugs of known quality were widely available, and the slovenly condition of the troops had been almost eliminated.

Withal, the medical treatment accorded Union soldiers during these trying years leaves little for the medical professions to feel proud about. But this much can be said about the health legacy of the war: From it emerged a large number of physicians who learned, while doing many lessons they would never otherwise have had; the problems of sanitation and the necessity for asepsis in medical procedures gained greater acceptance; and the necessity for drugs of known efficacy and purity led to the establishment of a pharmaceutical industry that has known no peer to this day.

HOSPITAL STEWARDS, 1864

Pharmacists were the army's choice for men appointed as Hospital Stewards. These men were attached to 2nd Division, 9th Corps, during the siege of Petersburg, Virginia. City was finally starved into submission.

Prescriptions and Doctor Bills may seem expensive, but comparing what they do, they are the biggest bargain in history

Midland Bermuda grass has been sprigged on many places in Wheeler County this year. The most successful plantings so far have proven to be either on sub-irrigated or irrigated land.

R.D. Mills and J. B. Bass have sprigged some sub-irrigated land. The Blakmore brothers of Shamrock have sprigged an upland area. The Blakmores plan to irrigate this area.

Harold Williams has completed some critical area shapings. Mr. Williams also seeded some Weeping Lovegrass.

Good kills have been reported from this year's brush control efforts. Spraying is continuing this week.

CO. AGENT REPORTS

BY CHARLES D. JACKSON

Steer feeding, one of the most popular 4-H club projects, is off to a fast pace this year again with 30 calves being fed for the various shows to be held in late 1964 and early 1965. Fifty percent of the calves at the state fair of Texas in Dallas during October. The state fair is the most popular show with most of the 4-H members due to the added educational attractions found at the big Texas State Fair. The financial support given the Dallas steer show by the commercial division is becoming popular with a great many feeders.

Our local calf shows in the county lend much encouragement to our youth that are preparing for the bigger shows ahead. The calf show at the Wheeler County fair will be the next show and it will be held August 29th. The Shamrock Calf Show will be held in January, and it is sponsored by the Shamrock Chamber of Commerce.

Four-H members that are feeding calves this year are John and Rich Meadows of Frisco; Tommy Puryear, Lewis Britt, David Britt and Mike Bryant of Kelton; Mike Goad, Fred Goad, Brenda and Terry McCasland of Wheeler; Billy Don Rives and Doug Rives of Twitty; Champ Davis, Richard, Jim and Randy Williams, Cindy Sherrod, David Yarbrough, and Danny Yarbrough of Shamrock; Phyllis and Sammy Pagan of the Pagan Community.

With school being out these boys and girls will have much more time to spend developing their projects during the summer months. Anyone interested in developing youth as well as these boys and girls a little encouragement as you make contact with them during the year. A little encouragement often goes a long way towards developing a boy or girl into a more useful citizen.

To keep a lawn attractive throughout the summer, proper fertilization, watering and mowing are very important. Fertilization should continue throughout the growing season. Nitrogen is the key element in turf growth and should be applied every eight to ten weeks at the rate of one to two pounds of actual nitrogen per 1000 square feet. It increases the deep green color that homeowners desire. Lawns should never be watered until the grass shows a definite need. When watering, the soil should be soaked to a depth of six inches or more. Water should be applied only as fast as the soil can absorb it.

Deep watering encourages a deep root system that is capable of utilizing plant nutrients more efficiently and is more resistant to diseases. The lawn should be watered for a healthy root system during excessively dry periods in the winter since the root system is still alive. Improper mowing results in the deterioration of many lawns. Mowing too close encourages thinning if the turf, shallow rooting, soil drying and heat damage to grass during the dry summer. Clipping too high results in many of the same problems. Bermuda should be mowed at a height of 1 to 1 1/2 inches while St. Augustine requires mowing at 1 1/2 to 2 inches. It is a good practice to cut only one inch off St. Augustine lawns at each mowing.

CARD OF THANKS

I want to say Thank You to all my friends for the flowers, cards, visits, calls and many other courtesies extended to my family and I during my recent illness.

METHODIST MISSIONARIES

Rev. and Mrs. W.L. Armstrong, Methodist Missionaries to Samatra will be guests of The Methodist Church on Monday night, June 22 at 7:30 p.m. for a Missionary Rally.

Rev. Armstrong will speak and following his presentation, there will be a coffee hour for informal visitation with the Armstrongs.

The meeting is under the direction of the church's Commission on Missions, Mrs. Frank Walker, chairman. The Armstrongs are natives of West Texas and until recently served as the pastor of the Methodist Church of Lorenzo. During the past months they have been at school in New York. The family will be sailing for Samatra about July 15 for a four year term on the mission field.

Visitors who might be interested would be welcome.

CARD OF THANKS

We would like to express to our friends and neighbors our thanks and appreciation for all the kind deeds they have done to help us before, during and on my return home from the hospital.

Thanks for the flowers, visits, prayers, thoughts, food and every kindness shown to us. Especially thank you for that wonderful meal, call every morning as I just looked forward to all the cards I got everyday.

As we have thought so many times and still say, "healer is the best little City in the SA!"

Because of faith in God and our wonderful friends I am doing marvelous.

"LET'S GO!" ... to a hidden world in General Telephone Country

Carlsbad Caverns National Park

Renowned throughout the Nation, Carlsbad Caverns is proclaimed by millions to be the world's first natural wonder. Created through countless centuries by giant earth upheavals and water erosion, the Caverns have rooms as big as 14 football fields and ceilings as high as a 22-story building. Several tours are offered visitors. There is even elevator service, to a lunchroom deep in the heart of the cave. Overnight accommodations in hotels, motels and trailer courts are nearby. Shops, restaurant, nursery and kennels are at the service of visitors. Situated in Southwestern New Mexico, open the year 'round, Carlsbad Caverns is readily accessible by major highways from any point. It is an underground fairyland — one of the truly great places to go and things to see in General Telephone Country.
