

A Century Ago, Sam Houston Was Negotiating For An Armistice With Indian Tribes Of Texas

DALLAS, Nov. 14 (AP)—As Texas joined the nation in the observance of Armistice Day this year, it might have been recalled that a century ago Sam Houston was maneuvering for an armistice with the Indians.

Houston's overtures of Nov. 11, 1836, and of Nov. 12, 1838, made in language the Indians could understand, were intended primarily for the tribes along the Trinity. Any time a few white were scalped in that area, the land-grabbers cried for vengeance.

President Houston's acting secretary of war instructed the republic's commissioners, Kelsey, H. Douglas, Nathaniel Robbins and Henry Millard, to obtain treaties of amity and perpetual friendship, stipulating that no hostilities or thefts shall be committed by the people of Texas against them (the Indians) or their properties.

Houston's communication of November 11 to the chiefs of the various tribes and "all other Indians wishing to be friendly," saluted them as "brothers," and opened thus:

"I have heard that you wish to talk with your white brother and to smoke the pipe of peace."

"Bad men have stolen horses and made war and brought trouble upon the white and red people. It is now time to be at peace with each other and bury the tomahawk forever. The great chief of Mexico, Santa Anna, is our prisoner and he cannot help you to make war any more upon us. He's my words and walk in the white path and you shall be happy. You shall have such things as you wish to swap for. We will pay you for what you have to sell. If you come to see me I will give you presents that you may remember my talk. x x x"

That document, buried for many years among the papers left by Dr. James H. Starr, the republic's secretary of the treasury and administrator of the Kelsey H. Douglas estate, is worth study. Broken down, the document is an indictment of the two peoples, a plea for peace, a polite threat, perhaps a little bribery, and a proposed treaty of peace—all in two paragraphs. As a contrast, read the full text of almost any international communication today.

Houston's "talk," as he termed it, of Nov. 12, 1838, was in the same manner. He addressed the Indians not merely as "brothers," but as "my brothers."

"There has been much talk of war. It is useless. There is no sense in it. I know my brethren, the Alabamias and Coosatics, will not deceive me. A few bad men may have gone from among you and been killed with the enemy. This shall not destroy your bands. Remember the words which I have spoken to you. The little chiefs of the Texian nation shall not hurt you. My words have been spoken and the winds shall not scatter them. Remember me and be happy with your women and children. Winter is coming on and cold weather and you must be unhappy unless with your women and children. Stay with them until the spring and you shall receive a talk from the chief of this nation. You must not take up the tomahawk, nor will I allow other men to raise it against you."

Houston went on to counsel: "Tell your young men to stay at home, that they may not bring their nations to trouble. Old men speak wisdom and young men should pursue their counsel. x x x He that stops his ear against instruction is a fool and the wise men of his nation should punish him. There is light from the countenance of the Great Spirit upon the good men when he walketh in the straight path. But brush and darkness falleth in the path of him that walketh in the path of crookedness."

Sam Houston's other correspondence indicates that he frequently was conscious that his words would go down in history. These documents with the flourish; signature of Houston, were discovered some years ago among some 75,000 documents and letters in the Starr papers at Marshall. They have been turned over to the University of Texas, where these two letters to the Indians remain as curios while war-frightened peoples exchange notes which require expert "interpretation."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann (Mr. Lippmann's column is published as an informational and news feature. His views are personal and are not to be construed as necessarily reflecting the editorial opinion of The Herald—Editor's Note.)

THE ASTONISHING NORMALITY OF THE AMERICAN VOTERS

So many things in the world are in turbulent change that it is something of a surprise to discover how altogether normal was the behavior of the American electorate Tuesday.

The innovating mood, which expresses itself as the New Deal, became dominant in the mid-term elections of 1930. This is 1938 and it has run its course. It was preceded by a conservative phase, known as "normalcy."

Judging by past experience, one may say that the conservative phase can be prolonged a little by prosperity and by adopting progressive policies. And it is possible that the innovators could prolong their tenure a bit if we in advance of their sixth year in national office, they took an essentially conservative line.

But these things rarely happen. Theodore Roosevelt was a conservative who adopted progressive policies. But Taft was a conservative who ran the other way. Wilson was running to believe the election returns of 1918 and his last two years were a disaster. Hoover made the same political mistake. He tried to swim against the tide, not realizing that the tide was bound to change.

In the United States there is a great middle class comprising farmers, a considerable part of the wage workers, shopkeepers, business men and professional people. They are still indisputably predominant. They are still able to assert themselves easily and normally as soon as they feel that innovation impairs what they regard as the foundations of the American social order.

THE ARMY POST MURDERS

By Virginia Hanson. Chapter 10 IN OFFICIAL CHARGE. For a moment I thought Mrs. Flower had something to show me. But instead she began to chatter again. "You know what keeps running through my head? It must be an old song, or something, about the shooting of Anne Carewe. Isn't that funny? But you know I'm kind of psychic that way. I seem to know things. But the oddest thing — it keeps running through my mind. About how the lady who shot her and pinched her nose was the lady whose name was Lou. What do you suppose I could get a thing like that unless it was a sort of spiritual revelation? After what we were saying awhile ago, too..."

Red Raiders To New Mex.

Tech Eleven Records 236 Points In Its Eight Games

LUBBOCK, Nov. 14 (AP)—Out here on the South Plains there's a world of loose territory and Texas Tech's Red Raiders have covered plenty of it in their last two victories.

In their 55 to 0 decision over Loyola of the South, and their Friday's 7 to 0 verdict over Gonzaga, the undefeated Red Raiders gained 465 yards rushing and 251 yards through the air, for a combined 716 yards on the ground and in the ozone.

In eight consecutive victories, the Raiders have completed 14 of their 29 pass attempts against six completions out of 33 tries by their opponents. They scored 23 first downs against Loyola and Gonzaga's nine. In 20 punts the Raiders have collected a total of 644 yards. But what the Raiders are proud of is their penalty record: they have suffered only 51 yards in penalties in their last two games, and practically all this loss was on off-side maneuvers. Having stacked up 236 to their opponents 26 points, the Raiders will invade Albuquerque, N. M., Saturday to play New Mexico university.

CANAL BUILDER IS CLAIMED BY DEATH

NE WORLEANS, Nov. 14 (AP)—Captain Horace Hale Harvey, 78, who had devoted his life to inland waters development, died yesterday at his home across the Mississippi river in Harvey, La.

He was largely instrumental in completion of the intraoceanic canal from New Orleans to Corpus Christi.

The last link in the intraoceanic system, connecting with the Mississippi river, was the Harvey canal, which Capt. Harvey sold to the federal government in 1924 for $500,000.

Billie Newgent has left for his home in Greencastle, Ind., after a six weeks visit with his aunt, Mrs. Lad Couble.
