Place Of Al's Imprisonment To Be Secret

Granted Leave To Remain In County Jail For Thirty Days

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sanford Bates, director general of the prison bureau, said the place where Al Capone would serve his sentence, would be a secret until he starts serving his sentence.

Capone was taken to county jail in Chicago yesterday being granted leave to remain there thirty days while his attorneys attempt to bring the case before the supreme court.

He was sentenced to eleven years for evading income tax.

We never have been able to understand why any one would oppose proper inspection of fruits, vegetables, dairy products and meats brought into the city for sale.

We've heard good, honest, sincere men make such ridiculous statements as that they didn't believe any milk that was pure when it came from the cow's udder would be impure when it reached a milk bottle, and later some baby's mouth.

We've heard a few argue that it is better to leave off all inspection and regulation of food products offered for sale because some folks might get their food cheaper.

How cheap, yes how cheap is a piece of meat or a vegetable if it in fact is unfit for human consumption?

An example—but not the first to be discovered, not to speak of those not discovered—happened Thursday morning.

A grocer bought a quarter of a beef from a man residing near here. When it was cut in half outside of the meat was found to be discolored. Maybe it was just a bruise? Several expressed the opinion the meat was alright except one spot, which could be 'trimmed out.'

Oh, yes, the meat looked nice but when specimens of it were put under a microscope it was found to be just plain tuberculosis.

The other three quarters had been sold somewhere around here. Wonder who ate it?

Farmers hereabouts in the past have done everything from talk to stage parades against an ordinance requiring that dairy cows be tested for tuberculosis.

We believe they allowed prejudice against what they looked upon as 'foolish new-fangled' ideas overpower their good judgment.

This prejudice business causes most of our troubles anyway.

The farmer naturally expected a market nearby for his products. He is entitled to it. He ought, then, to be as careful to offer pure, palatable products as possible.

If the man who unwittingly sold tubercular meat had spent a small sum and had the animal tested for tuberculosis a lot of trouble would have been prevented.

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce tax and government cost committee certainly put its foot in something when it declared its self against payment of the soldier's bonus.

Regardless of what you think about the bonus, it is perfectly plain that the W. T. C. C. committee could have thought of a lot of things that would have raised less opposition to the organization.

First this, after the W.T.C.C. statement was published a fellow says 'saw, aren't you a member of this Chamber of Commerce?' 'Sure, why?' we answered. 'Well, what's gone wrong with you about this bonus business?' he said.

There you are, Boy, the way folks get things mixed up when his or of handy to get 'em mixed up anyway when you're not in such good humor with the world at large—it's a sight.

It is just as ridiculous to say that the West Texas Chamber's action speaks for every local chamber, including that of Big Spring, as to say that the president of the T & P says must be obeyed by the president of the Southern Pacific or the City or the Washaw even.

The Common Man Gets A Break

THE COMMON man does get a break, now and then. Sometimes he has to wait a long time for it but it always comes sooner or later.

this is, you must cast a glance or two back at the long history of organized labor. In the old days before steam engines and large-scale factory employment, of course, there was no need for a labor union.

So workers began to organize—and the law came down on them. For a time labor unions were highly illegal. Organizers in England were treated as criminals and deported to Australia along with murderers and highway robbers.

By and by times got hard. You need higher wages and the boss won't give them to you. You and your fellow workers decide to strike.

BOY CRAZY by GRACE PERKINS

SYNOPSIS: Once a young social leader—now a business woman—young Hope Ross tries to forget the unhappy ending of her marriage to Dickey Dale. Her father told her, when he had the marriage annulled, that Dickey did not attempt to see her. She does not know her father kept him from doing so.

Chapter 27 WEARING A RING All that winter Hope totted with a ceaseless energy. For only six weeks did she run away during the summer for a rest on the old ranch with Mrs. Manly; and then back again she tramped to relieve Judy and carry on the shop single-handed. The double work was more exciting and sweet than her own vacation.

For Judy went to Chicago on her time off, only to find, to her utter, thunderstruck amazement, that Tom was making good—not as a saxophone player but as a singer. A singer! A crooner they called him, as they handed him three hundred a week with an option at a bulkier sum!

Quite calm and radiant, she attended Dickey's opening that night with Rusty Crandall by her side. Attended it and dusted off the last obscure corners of the theater with her keenest glances for some sight of Dickey—or Hickey! Went home and cried herself to sleep because she hadn't seen eight of them, because the show was so beautiful, and because it meant Dickey would have a brilliant start with his career. (Oh, please do write a play about Dickey, because they make so much money...)

Put shortly after Christmas came the crash to all her hard-earned hopes. Just one little item in a newspaper! Just a paragraph or two of black words—announcing the engagement of one Eileen Arps to Richard J. Hickson Dale!

Not one of the townfolk's prophecies came true. Hope did not find and give it up as a whim. So little did she lose interest, that in the fall she announced the decision to open a shop on Madison Avenue, New York. Delighted that she had

No need of keeping the clipping for every word was turned into thoughts to haunt her waking or sleeping.

But Hope didn't cry. She didn't even feel like crying. She went down to New York shoes and sent out bloomers without dresses, eight-ounce bottles instead of booties, and confused the entire day's sales with calm and thoughtful inaccuracy.

All the long spring months she plodded through her work and her life. Conscious of only one ceaseless, undecurrent of "thought" Dickey was not only gone—but lost! Dickey loved someone else, and held her close, and kissed her... A good girl, no doubt, who didn't get into scandals, who wasn't an outrageous flirt.

But if she could let him know about her inheritance that was soon to come and set her free, she would have no pride about it.

Quiet, calm, subdued, Hope absorbed all that went on about her. Judy's happy engagement to the boy she truly loved; Tom Post come into his own at last—a hit on the radio as a crooner at seven hundred a week. And Frisky really married that he was through, Betty married in May, and Flora returned in June... Everyone falling in love, getting engaged, planning for marriage...

Why did she want a marriage in the autumn with Venice, and Christmas in Rome—why was she waiting for her grandmother's inheritance that would come so soon now? No. What difference did the money make? Was she still unable to give up Dickey? Still unable to forget him, when obviously he had cut her out completely?

How could Hope know as she stared out her window till the stars faded, and the sky became a dull, departing gray, that hung heavy over the earth until the soft colors of early morning sifted through to cheer the world—how could she know that another girl only two miles from her, on the other side of the track, was soaked by her pillow with heavy tears and tossing fitfully as she beat the mattress with crunched fists—all because she had heard of Rusty's engagement?

Rusty's father had told Angel in the office that afternoon, his eyes lighted, a complacent smile on his lips as he asked her not to tell anyone yet. How she had hated the senior Crandall at that moment. Oh yes, she was his secretary now—the secretary to the boss of the whole works—secretary to God—for seventy-five a week. That's how she had made good in business!

Unlucky in love... If only she and her mother didn't need the money, and she could resign, resign to go away, and let Rusty kiss Hope and waste his love on her...

No, Hope couldn't know that. She never thought of Angel any more except to be sweet when they met, which was seldom. How could she know that her own headache was agonizing another—(Copyright, Grace Perkins) the most handy organizations in the world; because they have been subjected to more unwarranted, unfounded and sometimes malicious criticism than any other type of organizations—and have lived through it.

Swift surprise, tomorrow, and Hope forms a startling plan. Secret preparations end—with Hope facing Dickey.

When you're looking for something to criticize an organization for you can always find it. Remember that.

Now, you ex-service boys, don't go off hay-wire because one committee of the West Texas Chamber spoke out of turn, or at least, unwisely, and condemn the whole cock-eyed world, including every organization in every town that happens to be known as a Chamber of Commerce.

Sometimes we think that if you changed the names of chambers of commerce to something else—say "board of trade" or something like that most of this unfounded criticism would vanish; it is that flimsy.

Human kind has to have something to take out its gripes on. Hereabouts among a lot of fellows that thing happens to be the chamber of commerce.

Why, we heard of one guy who called up the manager and told him his wife was sick, because there was a chamber of commerce in town.

Girl Born in Dallas Meets Father, Opera Star, For First Time

By COLLIER FORD
United Press Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK (UP)—Louise Rousseau, French tenor, met his 21-year-old daughter for the first time yesterday shortly after she stood on the rain-swept pier of the Cunard line gazing across the foggy Hudson toward the decks of the liner Mauritania which brought him to America.

The girl was Louise Rousseau, daughter of the opera singer, born in Dallas, Texas in 1911, a few weeks after the separation and divorce of her parents. Her mother was the daughter of a wealthy Dallas and New York lawyer.

Louise never had heard of her father and had no idea where he was until a year ago when she was a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Then she found her father's address in a Paris directory of the opera.

Letter.

She wrote to Rousseau, disclaiming any "legal hold on his property" as he laughingly explained yesterday, but asked him to correspond with her if he were her father.

He replied.

"My dear child: Legally nothing. Whatever I have is yours. That you want your father makes me the happiest man in the world."

A few weeks later Rousseau sailed for New York only to find his daughter had changed her address. The letter telling him of the change had not reached him. For several weeks he lived here and finally returned to France disheartened.

He learned later he had been living all the time within calling distance of his daughter's home. She had walked by his doorway every morning and evening on her way from work.

The singer said he was a poor bank clerk in New York when he met his wife.

Secret

"All these years I have never spoken a word of this story to any one. I have never complained. I have never married again; but my family, my own mother, does not know that I was married to a prominent American girl, nor does she know I have a grown young daughter whom I never saw until today.

"I can understand it. I was a bank clerk, with some promise in the future, but I wanted to follow art. When I left the bank, Mrs. Rousseau's family objected, but I was determined to sing. One day when I went home they were all gone.

"I never saw them again, but received a letter a few weeks later notifying me our child had been named Louise."

The Next Pitfall in the Orient

GENEVA, March 26.—A committee is now in labor and expected to produce a resolution which the Assembly can adopt on Thursday. It is safe to assume, first, that the Assembly will not declare that Japan has violated the covenant that is the foundation of the League of Nations, and secondly, that the Assembly will accept the American principle and declare that the new rights cannot be established by violating existing obligations. Where does this leave us in respect to the Oriental war?

It clarifies the matter to recognize that there have been two Sino-Japanese wars in the last five months. The first war was waged by Japan against the more or less autonomous Chinese authorities in Manchuria. In this war Japan is completely victorious having exterminated Chinese independence in a territory about as large as France and Germany combined. The second war is that waged by Japan at Shanghai. Here the Japanese have won a tactical but not a strategic victory and there is at the moment a cessation of hostilities. Whether the Japanese army really intends to have an armistice and to withdraw, or whether the present moment is merely one of those pauses before another stroke, which Japanese military diplomacy has resorted to so often in the last five months, no one seems to know. It is said in Geneva that the Japanese civilian delegates have told Tokyo they would resign if once again the army breaks faith. But that is a fact. The fact is that nobody can speak for the army or make agreements that bind it.

In respect to the Manchurian war, the diplomatic position is this: The League has a commission of five in the East which is to make a recommendation at a final and fundamental solution by the governments of the question of the League between them; the United States has declared, and presumably the nations of the League will follow suit, that no solution will be recognized by it which violates the general treaties. Thus there is in prospect a very long and elaborate diplomatic negotiation in which the Western powers will in some measure exercise a veto power. They will have reserved the right to disapprove, and their disapproval should have sufficient weight to keep the money markets of the world closed to Japan until a recognized legal order has been re-established in Manchuria.

In respect to the Shanghai war, everything is uncertain because the Japanese objectives are not clear. In the Manchurian war the objective plainly has been Japanese domination of the whole country; in the Shanghai war there are half a dozen different aims which may be imputed. But this much at least emerges: Should Japan be acting in good faith as to cessation of hostilities, the so-called ground table conference proposed at Shanghai, nevertheless, presents enormous dangers to the whole moral and legal position of the British, the French, the Italian, and ourselves.

The danger is that the Western powers will seek or will accept advantages in Shanghai which will compromise them fatally in the vastly more important negotiations later about Manchuria.

No doubt each of the Western nations having a stake in Shanghai has grievances or claims against China. This would be a convenient moment to clear them up. The obvious tactics for the Japanese diplomacy is to try to make a common front of the "foreigners" against the Chinese and to entangle the Western nations as much as possible in the pursuit of advantages. Yet if any of the Western powers improves its position in Shanghai as against China in any respect, all our guns are spiked for the Manchurian negotiations. Therefore it is of the utmost importance that before entering any conference at Shanghai the Western powers should in some way or other take self-denying pledges and commit themselves to the restoration of the status quo ante.

This seems to be the next important move to be made. For it must be said frankly that none of the great powers has a very good record in China and several of them obviously do not care much about having to risk the high moral horse in this affair. The British attitude as conveyed by Sir John Simon has not been impressively candid and the French attitude, in spite of the French fervor to have Germany respect treaties, has been singularly complacent about treaty breaking in Asia. The great powers are, to put it plainly, suspect; they give the impression of being moved by consideration which they do not avow, and therefore nothing can be taken very confidently for granted that is not clearly agreed to.

SPORTS ON PARADE

By CURTIS BISHOP

We have on hand a letter from a Mr. Lawrence Robinson of San Angelo, who announces that he is negotiating for formation of a Sunday semi-professional baseball league, composed of the following towns: Abilene, Big Spring, Midland, Brownwood, Terrell, Sweetwater, and San Angelo, and that he would be very pleased to hear from any Big Spring diamond enthusiast. Mr. Robinson indicates that there will be a meeting of those interested in the near future to draw up a schedule and perform the other rites necessary for the organization of any form of a league.

It is a very good idea and one that we believe will find a response in Big Spring. The information will be given to Mr. Spike Henninger of Coeden Refinery, a real he-man who specializes upon baseball and basketball and who is more successful in the latter. Mr. Henninger however, will find himself swamped with applications for positions on such a team, provided the Coeden Refinery desires to enter one, and out of the prospects he should be able to produce a winning nine in Skeet West, Baker, Potter, and one or two other refinery employees he has men that might perhaps stand the threat of the outsiders, provided Mr. Henninger has such a team and allows outsiders to play on it. Which he should and probably will, all of course providing he decides to organize such a team. Perhaps we should drop the subject, somehow we aren't doing very well by it.

East Ward threw the city gridiron league into confusion yesterday afternoon by defeating the West Warders, or the Western Outlaws we should have said, 7 to 0. "Casey" Jones, Hopper's little black-haired quarterback, scored the only touchdown of the game with a 15 yard dash around right end, Tack Dennis' team missed the presence of Captain Marvin House, who was injured on about the fourth play of the game and was forced to retire from the game.

Oble Bristow, so we learn in the sport pages of the San Angelo daily, wants to coach San Angelo high school. He nursed such an ambition last year, so Blondy Cross informs us, but refused to apply for the job for fear that some people would believe that he was trying to "run under" his friend, Bill Bissett. Therefore Mr. Bristow moved "away from civilization", coming to Big Spring, where he produced winning teams in four sports, better clubs in all divisions than San Angelo has ever produced, commanding track honors to the Bobcat clubs of yesterday.

Which may or may not be the case, we think maybe not. Bristow nourished a desire to coach a high school club some two or three years before he put in his application for a job, but conversations with the former University of Oklahoma star have always led us to believe that Big Spring was the city he was watching with secret ambitions in his heart. Obie was well-acquainted with the unfortunate athletic situation here, more than once he relaxed in a comfortable chair and commented upon the policy he would adopt were he entrusted with the coaching position here. He made good those boasts in a fair way, which even Mr. Cross will admit. And why he should want to go to San Angelo we can not understand.

Whether we have realized it or not Big Spring athletics this year has reached a pinnacle that we do not believe any other school in the state has attained. Of course Abilene had the state football race all her own way, and Temple came through to the championship of the state basketball classic, but for all-around proficiency we nominate the local athletes. Three hundred and ninety-eight points to their opponents' 7 in football, over twenty-six consecutive victories in basketball and a district championship included, a one-sided victory in the only invitational track and field meet entered this season, 61 points to 36 for Lamesa, 21 for Midland, and then the local letters hung up a record for endurance and consistent winning that will be shot at for many a day before it is equalled by defeating three schools and one college, and tying a university.

The Big Spring cinder artists will be on hand for the San Angelo invitational track and field meet on April 2. Coaches Bristow and Brown announced yesterday, and will no doubt have something to say about the disposal of numerous first, second and third place medals, which the San Angelo school is donating. Abilene is also expected to enter the carnival to be staged on the banks of the Concho, as is Midland, McCamoy, and a host of other West Texas schools. San Angelo is not expected to be so strong this season, with only George Delker back from last year's team.

Should the locals uncover a sprint man or so they will present a well-balanced squad for such meets this year. Dennis, as those entered in the Midland meet can testify, can handle the weights and the hurdles as those events have not been handled in West Texas in a long, long time, but there the Big Spring scoring threat is and Henry Richbourg may clear over twenty-two feet in the broad jump this season, and will be ably seconded in the event by Lloyd Forrester and Carleton Coburn, who may come a foot or so behind. R. P. Curry makes a nice running mate for Tack in the high hurdles, Forrester is not at all bad in the pole vault, and he and Coburn do fairly well in the high jump, but there is no man in the dashes or the distance runs. Habisen stands out as the best in the running events, with Cecil Phillips groomed as a 220 candidate.

All the dainty charms of the little girl breathes from this frock. It is just the thing for Little Daughter to wear to that party. Nothing could show her off more adorably than this. The wavy puffs for sleeves and the tiny Pan-like collar frame her head and shoulders. And the skirt which begins at a high yoke, flares into beautiful fullness. A great wide contrasting sash, drawn through smocked tabs, ties at one side. A contrasting color or fabric is suggested to trim the skirt. Designed in sizes 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, and 12. Size 6 requires 2 1-2 yards of 36-inch fabric, 2 3-8 yards of 39-inch fabric.

To get a pattern of this model send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in to the Herald office. Please write very plainly your NAME AND ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER AND SIZE of each pattern ordered. PATTERN NO. 238 Size..... NAME (Please Print)..... ADDRESS.....

as Centennial exposition in 1933, to the people of the state as a whole, could be put a negligible fraction of a 10 year total of the two annual sessions. Yet the benefits of a centennial will be returned to Texas in an economic way for far more than 10 years.

An effort this year in behalf of the Centennial, regardless of the scope and form that Texas exposition may take in 1936, will be a service toward the future greatness of Texas as a whole.

The little city of Pecos deeply worried in the fear that it is to be left off the main through state highway No. 1 east and west, was made happy by a visit of Governor Ross S. Sterling there recently. It isn't every day that a chief executive of Texas gets that far out into the western country.

We renew suggestion that if the legislature is concerned in saving the people a quarter of a million dollars a year that it now forces them to waste it, will at its next session repeal the compulsory 25-cent headlight license fee every time a car is registered.

Business men of Texas during the past few weeks have taken independent and active interest in the new proposal of Rep. Walter Beck of Fort Worth that got so much further along than he had hoped at the last legislative session. That proposal is to let the people of counties containing cities of 50,000 or more, combine their county and city governments, when they choose, thus cutting off at least half their local governmental costs; and where they choose to write such an effective modern charter as the manager system, to install it in county government.

The classic example is a Rio Grande valley county which has, including school, drainage, city, irrigation and reclamation districts, 43 different sets of tax collectors, all of which could be combined into one office by the people by a simple election under the county home rule amendment.

The state of Texas pays small and weak school districts to unite into larger and stronger and more populous districts. In many cases this is a distinct improvement, and the system is a definite asset both to economy and to education.

With safe, bonded school buses operated over paved highways, a 10-mile journey to school now is not near so long as the two mile daily trudge through the mud many remember as incident to their schooling much less than a generation ago.

Raymond Mauk, the newly-appointed state fire insurance commissioner is one of the youngest officials Texas has had. In his first week on the job, he has convinced his associates in the government, and the business with which his department deals that he knows his business fundamentally, and that he is going to run his branch of the commission in a manner fully upholding the fine standard

To the Editor:
I see your good friends, the West Texas Chamber of Commerce have come on against the payments of the Soldier's Bonus certificates. I wonder how many of these distinguished economists have ever seen a German helmet or a German soldier?
The boys who hold these bonus certificates all saw service in the World War. They were poor then and are poorer now and live in every nook and corner of this nation. The money paid them would go into immediate circulation among the plain people without having to trickle down from the big banks to the smaller ones and finally a little of it reach the little banks and a little of that loaned to the little fellows at home.
They put their objections on the ground of economy. All the soldier boys want economy, but they want a little money along with it.

'Slain With Slander' To Be Sermon Topic

Interest Continues In First Christian Revival

The revival at the First Christian church continued last night with the evangelist, Rev. D. R. Lindley, bringing a message on the subject "Scourged By The Hands That Wouldn't Come Clean" before the largest crowd yet in attendance at the services. Preceding the sermon Mr. E. W. Potter stirred the congregation with a bass solo.

The subject of the sermon announced for tonight was "Slain With Slander." Special music will be given by the Ladies' quartette of the church composed of Mesdames Eubanks, Smith, Lindley, and Earnest.

Choosing his text from the 27th chapter of Matthew "Seeing that he prevailed nothing but that rather a tumult was arising, he took water and washed his hands before them all" the evangelist said: "Pilate washed his hands, but they would not come clean. They were stained with the blood of an innocent man. Pilate crucified Jesus with the sin of shifting his responsibility. Pilate was the judge and Jesus was the prisoner at the bar, and Pilate could not shift the responsibility of his decision to any other man. There are some things which you do for men and there are some things which I can do for you, but every man is charged with some responsibilities which no other man on earth can discharge for him. No man nor organization on earth can relieve you of your responsibilities regarding the proper training of your children. Neither can any person living answer for you the question 'What shall I do with Jesus?' Jesus is on trial before you tonight. You can crucify him afresh by washing your hands of the responsibility of an honest judgment or you can accept him as your Lord. But someday the scene will be reversed and Jesus will be the judge. Your answer now will determine His answer then."

Very truly yours,
J. F. CUNNINGHAM

Dallas Man Charged With Killing Couple

TYLER, (UP)—Barney Blackshear, said to be from Dallas, was charged with murder in connection with the fatal slaying of George Brimberry and his wife.

The suspect was arrested late Tuesday after a blood spattered pair of trousers and some shoes were found where he lived.

The bodies of Brimberry and his wife were found late Monday night in their small cabin camp near Arp. Mrs. Brimberry's head had been smashed with a flatiron, while a monkey wrench that was found later is believed by officers to have been used to batter Brimberry to death.

Robbery is believed to have been the motive for the double killing. Officers said Blackshear admitted wearing the blood stained trousers the night of the murders. Shoes that were found in his cabin also were said to fit footprints leading from the Brimberry home, officers declare.

'Garner For President' Plate Sales Stopped

DALLAS, (UP)—The sale of "Garner for President" automobile plates was stopped today on orders issued from state headquarters by State Senator Walter Woodul, of Houston, state chairman of the Garner for President organization.

Complaints by business men that salesmen were soliciting them for the purchase of large quantities of the plates resulted in leaders of the Garner movement meeting at San Antonio to order the sales halted. It was feared that this method of raising funds to finance the Garner organization would injure the cause.

"I agree with my Husband..."

● "He says Chesterfields are milder... and he's right! They're so mild I can smoke as many as I like without bothering to keep track. "And I find I never get tired of the taste. Probably that's because they're not really what you would call sweet... Chesterfields are just natural flavored... if you know what I mean.

"And have you ever noticed the paper?... Well, neither have I! "That's certainly a compliment... to be able to say you can't taste or smell the cigarette paper. "I think that's about as good a test for purity as anyone could possibly ask for. Chesterfields satisfy... that's one thing my husband and I agree on!"
