The sights of the toys being give any adult a thrill to his toes and children will be ready to pop with envy over the thoughts of all the poor little kiddies of Big Spring who are on good terms with Ensign and Mrs. Grief-they are that attractive.

And what piles of them. Not only heavy-duty trucks, autos, wagons, but all kinds of doll furniture and animals and such! It looks as though Santy himself had a branch office there. in fact most youngsters about own will be constantly looking out for him there. Hasn't anyone a red suit and some cotton patting to lend Olie Corwill? It would go swell with the rest of the red paint on the fire wagon, anyway

As it was, Ed went to work in the bocker, C. A. Brewer, Earl Glase office with his father. The family and J. A. Coffey. moved to Mingus soon after he graduated. He showed his ability in everything he did; ability with a smile from Lady Luck at the proper time, that is Ed's formula for success.

From Mingus he went to San An gelo where he was treasurer for the Orient Railroad before Harold Robb discovered him and formed that partnership which led to the blazing of R. & R. signs over the most successful moviehouses of West Texas.

The story of Ed's life since that date has been a steady climb up the financial ladder, He was a certified accountant and the finncial interests of the theatres individually an llectively kept him busy.

Ed was born in Chicago, but came to Texas at the age of 3 and moved to Big Spring at the age of 5. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Rowley (Mr. Rowley passed away this summer) lived on the vacant corner near the Chevrolet garage. When Ed first went to school, it was in that old wooden schoolhouse that preceded the building of the erstwhile Cen-tral Ward, now torn down for the new Post Office. B. thing about the published interviews with the young man is that he seems to have had a very hard time giving an intimate, realistic account of his adventures.

To be sure, he told in detail just where he went and what he did. He entioned an attack by pirates in the Red Sea, a sojourn in the South Sea Islands, an incident in which a steamer nearly ran him down, a first-hand glimpse at such things as whales and frigate birds and volcanoes and water-spouts, and the like; but somehow the things we would really like to know-how it feels to be alone in mid-Pacific, what a tropic dawn looks like in amon, what a man thinks about on a trip of that kind—they were left out.

If you are at all familiar with travelogues of this kind, you will realize at once that that is the way it usually is. These chaps who make speakably romantic trips to far places never, or almost never, seem

The Old Time Family DOCTOR

In the rush of so called modern methods of living, the traditions of the Old Time Family Doctor have been very largely lost sight of. The Doctor of your grandfather's day was always looked to as one of the foremost men of the community. He was next to the minister or priest in the minds and hearts of his people.

His knowledge was largely obtained through study by lamp light in his own home. The diseases in his day were classified in a comparatively small group but honored as he was in his day, his methods would not endure today.

The physician of today who is qualified to advise, counsel and serve you must be one who is thoroughly informed on many phases of modern medicine and science. He frequently attends special clinics. He devotes much time to special research and observation work. He is qualified to do much more than the Old Time Family Doctor.

Naturally, it costs the physician a great deal of money to keep abreast of the times in his profession. It follows that he must make his collections fairly promptly. It is usually true that the more attention a physician gives to study and research, the less attention he gives to making collections.

Statistics prove that modern medical science has materially lengthened the span of life. Show your ap-, preciation of the very great service the medical profession is performing for humanity by paying your physician's bills when they are due.
