

Identity Of Suicide Victim Is Established

CITIZEN OF BIG SPRING.

ALBERT B. (PAT) ALLEN

When Albert B. (Pat) Allen went into the grocery business at his present location, his was the first grocery store to be located more than a block from Main Street. As short a distance as it was, he had landed right in the heart of one of the oldest and most closely settled neighborhoods in the city. Mrs. L. D. Eddins, Mrs. E. L. Barrick, Mrs. J. B. Nall, Mrs. Lamar and Mrs. McDonald need to run over in the morning with their kitchen aprons on. They liked to shop in his nice "suburban grocery."

Pat felt perfectly at home. He had worked in a grocery store ever since he was 10 and he had been born and reared on that very block. He was now selling groceries on the spot where he and his sister, Mary, used to make mud pies.

Young as Pat is (he was born Dec. 15, 1904) his grocery experience goes farther back than many Big Spring people can remember. It goes back to the pre-percolator days when he ground coffee for Popl Bros. and sacked potatoes and did odd jobs of that kind for the magnificent salary of a dime a day, getting paid annually at the start—at his own request.

During his high school days he worked for Sam Hathcock, later running a store for him in Midland. Then he branched out for himself as manager of one of the Pacific Cooperative Stores, finally going into business for himself in March, 1928. His father, J. W. Allen, joined him as proprietor of the Allen Grocery, a few months later.

Pat's grandfather, Dr. J. W. Barnett, was one of the city's most loved pioneers. The Barnett home, at East Third and Runnels, was bought from the original owner and never changed nor removed until it was torn down in 1929 to make way for the Allen business building. Even today, the corner remains Pat's home. He lives there with his father, mother and sister in an apartment in the second story, looking out on a court where his mother grows flowers and that are the despair of Big Spring women with plenty of soil in which to dig.

Even though kitchen aprons seem a little incongruous with West Texas' tallest hotel building just across the street, the women who were Pat's first customers still like to run in for this and that. The cluttered air which the hotel gives the street has not crept inside the grocery store. Pat and Mr. Allen continue to look on Big Spring people as good and friendly neighbors.

S. S. Attendance Good in Winter

The Sunday Schools of the city who reported their attendance Sunday show that uncertain skies were not a great hindrance to their pupils.

Their reports were as follows: First Methodist, 350; First Baptist, 317; Presbyterian, 63; Church of Christ, 185.

Co-Ed Class Hears Mrs. Weathers' Talk

The members of the Co-Ed Sunday School Class of the Presbyterian Church did not brave the wintry blasts in great numbers Sunday evening. Only 11 heard the splendid lecture given by Mrs. Lee Weathers.

They were Misses Agnes Currie, Virginia True, Irene Knaus, Ione Drake, Margaret Moore, Jeanette Barnett, Messrs. Lee Porter and A. S. Lucas and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Boatler.

Fred Stephens, E. O. Price and Calvin Boykin were named as a committee to tabulate votes cast the past ten days by members of the Chamber of Commerce for election of ten new directors to two year terms. They were counting the votes Monday afternoon.

Receipts For Car Licenses Are Received

January 31 Last Day To Pay 1932 Registration Fees

Receipts for payment of registration fees on passenger automobiles have been received by Loy Acuff, county tax collector, and all owners of private cars are now urged to pay the license fee for 1932.

The dead line for payment without penalty is midnight, January 31.

The Democrats took the saddle in the house of representatives. John Garner became speaker. E. Thomanon, our own congressman presented him with a message gavel sent by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. And the congressional circus is now on.

'Happy Jack' Garner, the craftiest politician in Washington, will have a great opportunity. You never can tell—the race for the Democratic presidential nomination may have an entirely different complexion after he has served one term as speaker.

Garner's leadership already has been used to keep the house Democrats together without an attack of our good old Democratic habit of splitting up over something.

He was nominated unanimously as the Democratic candidate for the speakership. He succeeded in getting several other southerners to withdraw their candidacies for the Democratic floor leadership, allowing Rainey of Illinois to be nominated—thus balancing party control between the north and south.

Garner conferred with John Curry, Tammany boss, and further welded the whole Democratic strength into a unit. He succeeded in showing Curry why his Tammany candidate for the floor leadership—John J. O'Connor of New York—should not be considered.

Garner, speaking for the party, said that "if Hoover wants to vote with me I'll be much obliged to him. If you'll tell me what he stands for I'll tell you whether I'll cooperate with him. I've been asked repeatedly whether the Democrats would enter a political truce. My questioners seem oblivious to the rather insulting character of such an inquiry, for it amounts to the implication that our representatives are capable of sacrificing the welfare of the country to political expediency. I don't anticipate that any Democrat will oppose a measure plainly necessary for the industrial health of our people but the Democrats will insist that they shall be the judge of the wisdom and expediency of the enactments. We have no reason to assume the infallibility of the administration. Experience of the past two years pretty clearly demonstrates no such assumption is possible. When the President offers a recommendation to accomplish a given result, the Democrats may have their own and what they consider a better process for bringing this about. But my fellow congressmen have in mind no policy of mere obstruction. If there is political advantage in demonstrating our ability to exhibit the president's impotence, we'll forego that advantage."

"We're on the eve of a presidential campaign. Naturally every time we oppose the White House incumbent and candidate for reelection we'll be accused by his supporters of playing politics. If we are interested in bringing about the election of a Democratic successor to Mr. Hoover, he and his party are no less interested in accomplishing his re-election. There is no more justification for the contention that Democratic votes against the administration measures are dictated by partisanship than that the president's own recommendations are actuated by an equally selfish motive."

The Democrats have, in view of the many very important problems facing the new congress, a wonderful opportunity. Upon their record in this session of congress will depend largely the chances of naming a Democrat as the next president.

State Party Convention To Be Colorful

Stumpers May Oppose Instructing Texas Delegation

By RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN, Tex., Dec. 7.—Triumphant passages of a victorious democratic faction echoed through the Texas capitol five years ago in the last democratic state convention held in Austin.

There may be a stump campaign in Texas early in the year for or against instructing the national delegates in favor of a particular favorite son or other candidate for presidential nomination. Former Gov. Pat M. Neff, while in office, carried out such a campaign against both Alfred E. Smith and William G. McAdoo.

Among the list of other formidable candidates will be found B. F. Stambull, who made the first quad in 1930, and who should repeat to threaten someone's berth this year. Stambull is out for a fourth year. Frank Martin, Orville Hildreth and Vivian Harris are three other football men seeking places.

Body Is Sent To Old Home By Relatives

Ruby McKnight, Formerly Mrs. I. Hunt, A West Texas Girl

Ruby McKnight will be laid to rest in the family burying ground at Kamey, McCulloch county, near Mason.

She is the woman who came from Dallas to Big Spring Friday evening and was found dead—a suicide by poisoning—in her hotel room Saturday morning.

The woman was identified positively late Sunday night by her father, A. B. McKnight, and brother, O. McKnight of Kamey.

The body was started by rail to the family home at noon Monday. Identification of Miss McKnight was established by Sheriff Jess Slaughter with assistance of Dallas and El Paso officers.

Dallas officers, checking court records there, learned that Mrs. I. Hunt had obtained a divorce in September and that the court restored her maiden name, Ruby McKnight.

She registered at the hotel here as "Mrs. I. Hunt, Chicago, Ill." On her belongings were found the laundry mark "McK" and names of Dallas and El Paso stores.

A member of the El Paso detective squad happened to know Ruby McKnight. When a description of the dead woman was sent there, with the registry name "I. Hunt" and the laundry mark "McK" he called the sheriff's department and asked for a description of rings worn by the woman. They talked with those she wore when he knew her.

Sheriff Slaughter got in touch with the woman's aged father by telephone Sunday afternoon and with his son he arrived here at midnight Sunday.

The father said his daughter and her husband had become separated more than a year ago. She was employed in Dallas store and had a good steady job, when she died.

the identical cases which recently were brought before the public with the filing of these suits. While here on a brief visit several months before the primaries of 1930, Robert Lee Bobbitt, then Attorney General, discussed with this newspaper the practices against which Mr. Alford complains in his suits, and stated that he and his department had been busily engaged in gathering evidence upon which to base anti-trust prosecution. In all likelihood, if the facts were known, Mr. Alford picked up the work Mr. Bobbitt had inaugurated and carried it on to its conclusion in the pending litigation.

Gas Poisoning
 There is never a winter that passes without an appalling number of deaths due to carbon monoxide poisoning.
 The most common sources of this poison are the automobile and illuminating gas.
 Carbon monoxide is a colorless, tasteless and practically odorless gas.
 The crews of the bureau of mines when entering a region in which it is suspected that there may be carbon monoxide, carry with them canary birds.
 Small animals, such as birds and mice have a relatively large respiratory exchange, and are more quickly affected by the gas than men.
 By the exercise of some little caution and ordinary "horse sense" the vast majority of accidental carbon monoxide poisonings could be avoided.
 Thus, one should never start an automobile motor in a small garage when the doors are closed.
 The automobile exhaust is rich in carbon monoxide and the air soon becomes saturated with the poisonous gas.
 All gas tubing should be of the approved type.
 It is not safe to fall asleep while water is left to boil, or food allowed to cook on a gas stove.
 Should they boil over, the flame may be extinguished and unburned gas escape.
 Gas heaters not infrequently are a source of carbon monoxide.
 Whenever used the windows should be kept open wide enough to provide safe ventilation. Special care should be exercised when using gas heaters to warm bath rooms.
 The room being usually small, a so-called instantaneous heater may generate enough carbon monoxide gas in 15 minutes to asphyxiate the bather.
 Improper ventilation when gas heaters are used may lead to chronic carbon monoxide poisoning.

LADY with a PAST
 BY HARRIET HENRY
Chapter 25 HEADLINES
 The next day was a horrible succession of dragging hours during which Venice, Rosemary, Mrs. Coates and Guy wandered unhappily about the villa while in little boats drifted about the surrounding water, hunting for Rene's body with grapping hooks.
 The servants were unpleasantly excited and distrust, watching continually from the windows until some one would notice them and send them back to work. But the sea was like a magnet. They would inevitably be drawn back to the windows again. Once every short while one of them would let out a sharp exclamation.
 "Regardez, Voila!" Then there would be a scribe business of crossing themselves.
 With these sudden cries Venice, Rosemary, Mrs. Coates and Guy would reluctantly go to a window only to see a man in one of the small boats pull aboard a great mass of seaweed.
 By afternoon every one felt exhausted. Mrs. Coates repaired to her room. Rosemary fell asleep on the parlor sofa and Venice and Guy sank wearily into big chairs on the veranda, their backs to the sea.
 "I can't understand it," said Venice. "He didn't really love me, Guy."
 "I can't explain now, I didn't want to before, with the others hovering around. It was the letter."
 "Did you see it?"
 "Yes. It was from Marie Lataste—that's the married woman I spoke of in my letter. He did undoubtedly love her, passionately. She loved him too apparently but it was all in her heart. She was true to her husband."
 "But the letter, Guy?"
 "It seems that the de Thenardiers have become absolutely penniless. Rene speculated for his mother with what was left some months ago and lost it all. He, himself, owed thousands all over Paris. When Mrs. Coates asked him here he didn't have money for the railroad fare or anything else. Marie Lataste has been begging him to make a wealthy match. She lent him money for the trip including a good deal more, as I understand it, than she should have done."
 "What was it all about?"
 "In a minute. He lost the entire fortune on Marie Lataste had lent him. He Casino the other night. Yesterday that letter from Marie Lataste begged him for some money as soon as possible. She needed it for an immediate operation. Her husband is not wealthy. Rene was desperate. His came to my room and told me. What should he do? He walked the floor. You know the rest."
 "But why didn't he try Rosemary after my refusal?"
 "That's what I've wondered about. I can't understand it."
 "Mrs. Coates and Rosemary think he killed himself because I wouldn't marry him," Venice said.
 "Do you object to that? It's a nice touch for your past."
 "But I do object. It's not fair to any one concerned, most of all Rene and Marie Lataste."
 Guy reflected. "I'm going to explain to Mrs. Coates and Rosemary. I'm finally decided, that he had a better intention of me than I do. That's what I told the baying reporters who were here at crack of dawn. And now I'm going to send a long telegram to his mother and one to Marie Lataste."
 "Look here," Venice cried. "I'm going to give you the money to send her. Let her think it came from me."
 "You're a good girl, Venice. It's her throat. He told me she was ill when we came away."
 "Do that then. Oh, God!" She passed a hand across her forehead.
 After Guy had left her she sat miserably thinking over the last twenty-four hours. It was unreal in its exaggerated quality of melodrama.
 Jacques, the chauffeur, came discreetly onto the veranda with the evening papers. Venice tried to visualize Rene. Her eyes went to the papers.
MARQUIS DE THENARDIER KILLS HIMSELF
 Unrequited Love For Helens Causes Him To Jump From Window
 Venice sat as though stunned. She wished Guy would hurry back. She must show him. She avidly read through the account in two different papers. Her name was mentioned. She was beautiful and people who would truly like her. That she suddenly realized, was what she actually craved. People being fond of her. The invitations, the attention at parties, taking an important role in gaiety were only stepping stones to this gratification. Her heart sang as the train hit the rails. "They like me if they know me, they like me if they know me."

 Back at the Louis-LeGrand the next day she telephoned Guy. She had promised to let him know as soon as she returned to Paris.
 "Hello, Guy."
 "Venice! Good girl, when did you get back?"
 "This morning."
 "And are you dining together tonight? I have something particularly uncomfortable to tell you."
 (Copyright, Harriet Henry)
 Guy has kept a secret from Venice. When she learns it, tomorrow, she is indignant.

College "Professionalism"
 HARVARD University athletic authorities have barred from Harvard Stadium a radio announcer who recently referred to the playing of a Harvard football star as "putrid." In making public this action, the authorities pointed out that college football players, after all, are young amateurs, and that it is quite out of place to comment on their performance as one would in the case of professionals.
 This is quite true; and yet the growing tendency on the part of announcers, sports writers and the general public to treat college football players as professionals seems to us to be at least as much the colleges' fault as anyone's. No law compels any college to build a million-dollar stadium, to retain a dozen coaches on its staff or to hire a press agent to get news about its team in the papers. When a college does these things, can it really profess very convincingly that an inflexible standard applies the standards of professionalism in judging the work of its athletes?

SPORTS ON PARADE
 By CURTIS BISHOP
 With the 21 to 6 defeat of the Sweetwater Mustangs by the Abilene Eagles Friday afternoon the gridiron season came definitely to an end in District 4 and beyond were the press accounts of the game digested by the many fans who had entertained hopes of seeing the reign of the Oil Belt in football come to inglorious end before plans were perfected for a six club basketball practice league.
 The S.M.U. Mustangs qualified as the "hard luck" team of the country Saturday on the Pacific Coast. For three consecutive times Morrison's "aerial circus" was nosed out in their biggest test of the season when victory had more than once been in their grasp. Twice long passes were completed and the runner drug down from the goal where a superior Galati line held stubbornly. Of course the ability of that forward wall was by no means a stroke of fortune, but then to have a runner brought down inches from the goal after a twenty or thirty yard advance is a break.
 In 1929 the Mustangs found themselves in possession of the ball in Army's territory and with the score 14 to 13 against them. Redman Hume dropped back to attempt a field goal, but the ball struck one of the uprights and bounded off to the side. Another instance when a few inches would have meant an important victory. In 1930 the Ponies were leading the Notre Dame Ramblers with two minutes to play as a result of a touchdown and a converted point. "Jumping Joe" Savoldi returned a kickoff almost the length of the field for a touchdown and the game went to Notre Dame 20 to 13. The Rockmen that year were compared with the best teams in football history.
 The Lubbock-Abilene game this week-end, the doubt not yet determined, will no doubt be the last line on the state schedule. Both clubs possess powerful lines that by comparison send their backfields deep into oblivion. A duel should take place that will be worth anyone's money when Captain Crawford of the Harvesters faces Stanley Smith of the Eagles. And from another angle Weldon Chapman again opposes Dewey Mayhew. The latter has been extraordinarily successful in the past. Corsicana is hoped to be the opponent of the winner in the state final.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS
The Anti-Trust Suits
 Sherman Democrat.
 SINCE the filing of his anti-trust suits against fifteen major oil companies and two marketing associations, Attorney General James V. Alford's political ambitions have been freely discussed, a number of observers professing to see in the young attorney's action an announcement of his candidacy for Governor. Such an inference may be distinctly unfair to Mr. Alford, because he is entitled at least to credit for somewhat more worthy intentions than that, but it is not at all impossible that the suits may eventually carry him to the Governor's office, if his prosecution proves successful.
 The historic Waters-Pierce oil suit, instigated by Attorney General Ben Looney is recalled in connection with Alford's attack upon the oil companies. Mr. Looney won the suit and enriched the state treasury thereby, but his effort to secure the Governorship was marked by failure. Even if the present Attorney General should succeed in his suits against the oil companies, it might mark him merely as a good attorney general and not as good material for the Governor's office.
 In this connection, we recall that prior to the election of Mr. Alford as Attorney General, his predecessor in that office was working on

West Texas National Bank
 "The Bank Where You Feel At Home"

Washington Daybook
 By HERBERT PLUMMER
 WASHINGTON—A young fellow around Washington pretty soon will be hanging up some sort of a record for "official sleuthing" if the senate persists in its fondness for investigations.
 His name is John Holland of Montana, a sort of "Doctor Watson" for the senate's foremost investigator—Thomas J. Walsh of Montana.
 Holland digs up the evidence. Walsh takes it together and flings it ruthlessly in the face of the witness before him at the moment.
 The two have been remarkably successful thus far. They worked together in the famous Teapot Dome investigation and what they accomplished there is history. They tackled together in the now almost-concluded lobby investigation where, too, they have made themselves felt.
 Holland has another job, but Walsh won't be with him on it. He so impressed Senator Blaine with his sleuthing that the Wisconsin man hired him to help uncover any fraud that may exist in postoffice leases.
 Started As Clerk
 It was Walsh who first brought young Holland to Washington from Montana. Barely past 30, he came to the capitol several years ago to be a clerk in the Montana senator's office.
 Walsh made him his right-hand man when he started on the Teapot Dome investigation and has pressed him into service since when he was in need of an evidence getter.
 In fact, Holland was working quietly in the prohibition bureau at its investigation of lobbying in the capitol. Immediately he sent for Holland and requested that he get to work.
 With the public praise of his work on Teapot Dome by Walsh still in his ears, Holland set to work.
 The late Senator Caraway of Arkansas was chairman of the lobby committee, but Walsh was just as active. When Holland appeared before the committee the other day and handed alleged paper sugar profits of several senators and others prominent in public life, it was to Walsh, acting chairman, that he told his story.
 Persistent
 He has the reputation of being one of the government's more particularly the senate's—leading investigators. He has been recognized both by those who have employed him and those whom he has investigated.
 Quiet, modest and congenial, he has little about him to suggest the "sleuth." Perhaps his outstanding qualities are persistence and thoroughness. He seems to overlook nothing in his quest for evidence. For more than two years he has been investigating lobbying. The evidence he gave the committee the other day was the result of a search started last May.
 He is unmarried, and when not sleuthing in Washington he lives at home with his mother in New York.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA
 Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified croceote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.
 Of all known drugs, croceote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to croceote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membrane and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the croceote goes on to the stomach, the emulsified croceote attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.
 Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory disease, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Prizes Offered By Frigidaire

Prizes of $3500 in cash and ten electric refrigerators valued at more than $2500 are posted in the nation-wide Christmas contest now being conducted by Frigidaire Corporation.

First prize will be $1000 in cash, there will be fifty prizes of $50 in cash and the ten awards of Frigidaire household electric refrigerators. Details of the contest will be broadcast every Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday over a coast-to-coast network of 50 stations on the NBC-WJZ chain in connection with a musical program. The program will begin at 6:15 p. m. eastern standard time on Fridays and at 4:45 p. m. eastern standard time on the other days of the week. The contest will close at midnight December 24th.

The contest involves the coining of a nine word sentence, using the letters of the word "Christmas" to begin each of the words. Contest blanks it was announced, are available at Frigidaire showrooms everywhere.

Koch, German Physician, Started Tuberculosis Fight, Says President

"Advances in the fight against tuberculosis—a great life-saving adventure financed by Christmas seals—would be impossible today except for the work of one man," said Mrs. R. E. Blount, president of the Child Study Club. "The man was Robert Koch, a German physician, who announced this discovery almost fifty years ago."

"I have just received an announcement," continued Mrs. Blount "that there is to be a nation-wide commemoration of this event March 24, 1931. The information comes from Dr. Kendall Emerson, managing director of the National Tuberculosis Association, of which our local organization is a part. In all there are 2084 tuberculosis associations and committee now engaged in the Christmas seal sale who will participate in appropriate ceremonies everywhere to honor the name of the man who first made it possible to begin the fight against tuberculosis."

New Congressman Is Among State's Finest Golfers

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 2. (AP)—Richard M. Kieberg (pronounced Clayberg), of Corpus Christi, recently elected congressman from the fourteenth congressional district of Texas, is one of the state's best amateur golfers. Despite the fact that the new congressman was virtually "raised on a horse" on the famous King ranch, he often doffs his boots and dons the attire of the golfer, knickerbocker and all. He is a well known figure in Texas golfing circles and shoots consistently in the low 70s. He is a steady tournament player.

The new congressman, born in 1887, was reared on the King ranch, which was founded by his maternal grandfather in 1852. Kieberg entered the University of Texas, received a law degree there, and returned to Corpus Christi, where he put up his "shingle."

His paternal grandfather, Robert J. Kieberg, came to Texas in 1833 and participated in the Texas revolution. His maternal grandfather, Richard King, came to Nueces county after piloting ferries on the Rio Grande and purchased the block of land which was nucleus for the famed King ranch.

In 1885, when King died, the ranch consisted of 750,000 acres; today it is a domain of 1,250,000 acres.

Robert J. Kieberg, father of the new congressman, was a hunter here from being charged with a violation of the state game laws in Justice of the Peace John F. Onion's court here recently.

The "bearded lady" in this instance happened to be a wild turkey hen with a beard similar to those of gobblers. Judge Onion released the man when the turkey was brought into court. The judge ruled the hunter could easily have mistaken the hen for a gobbler.

Record Crowd Personally Attends City Federation

Mrs. Schmidley Gives Instructive Talk On Art

About forty women attended the lecture given at the City Federation Saturday afternoon by Mrs. James Schmidley on "Art in Everyday Life"—a large crowd for Federation meetings.

Mrs. Joyce Fisher, president opened the meeting with a business session. Mrs. C. P. Rogers, delegate from the Federation to the state convention of T. F. W. C. at Lubbock, reported the convention sessions which she attended.

Mrs. Schmidley presented her topic from several angles, beginning with the elements of artistic principles, in architecture, costumes and interior decoration.

She illustrated these with views from the office of Peters Strange and Eradshaw, costume designs from the department stores and many illustrations of home interiors, pointing out the good and bad in each, the ideals for which the builder or artist was striving.

The Junior Hyperion Club dismissed its meeting and attended the lecture in a body.
