THE COUNTY SEAT NEWSPAPER

Short Course Draws Large County Group

Approximately 75 Women, Girls, Men and Boys Leave Saturday for A. & M.

One of Wheeler county's largest representative groups of club members plan to leave Saturday morning for the annual Farmers Short Course at A. & M. college, College Station, Texas. The group consists of 28 women members of home demonstration clubs, 18 girls from 4-H clubs, and 19 men and boys, the latter members of county 4-H clubs. They will make the trip this year.

Transportation plans have been worked out and the following arrangement announced by Miss Viola Jones, home demonstration agent. The bus will load up for the north side of the county at Wheeler. Those who plan to go are notified to assemble at the court house by 7 o'clock Saturday morning. The bus will stop at Twitty and pick up those from the central part of the county. Delegates from the south side of the county are requested to meet at the north end filling station, Shamrock, at the junction of Highways 66 and 101. The party expects to return Monday, August 4.

In addition to the buses, several private cars are also expected to make the trip, conveying members of the delegation.

Since the names of club women and girls who are going appeared in a paper last week, it is considered unnecessary to repeat them here.

Jake Tarter, county agent, has compiled the following list of men and boys who expect to go:

Gold Star Boys—Richard Lancaster, Mobeetie; James Passons, Wheeler; Bob Tatum, R. D. Purnell, Keller, and Lewis Ellison, Shamrock. Club Boys—Bernard Wilson, Hardy Dodd, Edgar Flynt, Herbert Thener, L. D. Whiteley, T. J. James, A. Tucker, Buck Ellibe, and Pillers, J. C. Erskine, Bonner and Floyd Seago.

Men—Terry Walker and J. H. Merrill. In addition to these, several other men of the county are planning to make the trip.

WHEELER PARTY RETURNED MONDAY FROM COLORADO TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. G. O. McCrohan and children, Geoffrey and Miss Jacqueline, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lee and his mother, Mrs. I. B. Lee, returned Monday evening from an auto trip through parts of New Mexico and Colorado where they visited places of historical interest. They spent several hours at Taos, N. Mex., visited for its art school; from there they went to Canon City, Colo., and crossed the bridge that spans the Royal Gorge, said to be the highest artificial bridge in the world. It is about 15 miles southwest of the city. While in Canon City they visited the state penitentiary.

The party spent several days at Lake City, Colo., fishing and report an unusually pleasant trip.

Johnson Purchases Oklahoma Grocery

Member of City Market & Grocery Firm Disposes of Interest to Partners

Something of a surprise to his many Wheeler friends was the announcement early this week that Ed Johnson, member of the City Market & Grocery firm since its organization three years ago, had sold his interest to the partners and was leaving the city. Johnson has purchased a grocery and meat market at Taloga, Okla., taking charge of the business Monday. He is expected in Wheeler today or tomorrow to move his family to the new home.

The Johnsons have many friends throughout the community who will regret to learn of their leaving. Good wishes accompany him and his family for success and prosperity in the new location.

The City Market & Grocery, Wheeler, is now owned and managed by the Bolton brothers, Loyse and Ed Bolton, who have been associated with Johnson. Messrs. Bolton are, therefore, thoroughly familiar with the conduct of the business and expect to maintain the same high standard of merchandising as has prevailed in the past.

For the present, they expect to handle the business, planning to add extra help on Saturdays and whenever demand justifies.

Miss Claudie Johnston, who has been ill at her home in Mobeetie, was able to resume her duties Monday at the county clerk's office. She is staying with Mrs. E. M. Clay.

WATSON BURGESS IS FIRST TO REPORT COTTON BLOOMS

First report of cotton blooms in this community was made Saturday by Watson Burgess, who has a crop on the J. M. Burgess farm, one mile south and a half east of Wheeler. According to records of the past two or three years, this is 16 days later than usual for the first bloom. In both preceding years, blossoms were first noticed on July 4. The date this year was the 20th.

PILLERS CALLED TO WASHINGTON

M. A. Pillers of Twitty, member of the state cotton advisory board, today received a call to join the other members of the committee in a trip to Washington at once. He expects to leave tomorrow for the capital, where a conference will be held Monday, July 29. Exact nature of the meeting has not been disclosed, but it is thought to be in connection with the AAA program and preparation of plans for its continuance.

Canning Plant Opens Monday at Shamrock

Will Operate Under Same Plan as Last Year—Wheeler Opening Delayed

Operating under the same plan as last year, which includes canning on the shares for those who furnish the material, the relief canning plant at Shamrock opened Monday morning. This is according to information obtained at the relief office here.

It is said that only four women will be employed until more produce becomes available. Miss Louise Risian is plant supervisor. Mrs. C. B. Witt of Wheeler is county supervisor.

According to Charley Wells, county relief administrator, the canning plant in Wheeler will not be in operation until some time after August 1. Certain changes, including location in a building not now available, has caused the delay.

Constitutional Amendments In Brief Outline

(Editor's Note: Seven constitutional amendments are to be voted on in a state-wide election August 24. Believing a summary of the several amendments—without any comment for or against—will be of interest to Times readers, one or more such summaries will be published each week between now and August 24.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT NO. 2 Temporary Commitment of Insane

Proposition No. 2 on the August 24 special election ballot has to do with the temporary commitment of insane persons, preliminary to a trial by jury.

Under the present constitution whereby everyone is guaranteed a jury trial, it is impossible to commit a mentally ill person to an institution for treatment or observation without the necessity of a jury trial. It has been pointed out that this is often very inconvenient and embarrassing.

The proposal, according to Secretary of State Gerald C. Mann, if passed, would authorize the legislature to pass such laws as would permit mentally ill persons to be confined by county courts in institutions, presumably, or under the care of physicians or experts for a period of 90 days prior to a jury trial. It is presumed that the 90 day period of confinement would be for the purpose of observing such person.

The provisions would apply only to persons not charged with a criminal offense.

The amendment sets out that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, but that in the particular case of insane persons a confinement period of 90 days for observation may be prescribed without the necessity of a jury trial. At the end of that time a jury trial would be had.

MISSIS SCOTT ENTERTAIN AT PICNIC-BRIDGE PARTY

Misses Eddie Mae and Ina Scott entertained a group of their Wheeler friends with a bridge party at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Scott, at Mobeetie, Wednesday evening.

A swim and picnic supper was enjoyed earlier in the evening. Guests were Misses Juanita Stone, Marie Orr, Leet Womack, Helen Houston, Samantha Stanley and Clara Finsterwald.

County Men Attend Amarillo Meeting

Hear Plans for Works Progress Program in Area—Many Projects Expected

Representing Wheeler county at a works progress administration gathering in Amarillo Wednesday for the Panhandle area, were County Judge W. O. Puett and Supt. J. L. Gilmore of Wheeler and Bedford Harrison, chamber of commerce secretary, and G. C. Berkley of Shamrock. Delegations were present from 20 Panhandle counties.

Principal speaker at the meeting was A. A. Meredith, district director, who explained the object and purposes of the works program. Detailed instructions were set forth relative to presentation of projects by counties and political subdivisions.

Describing the situation in the Panhandle as one of "extreme emergency," Meredith advised the conferees that "we must end the dole," as he spoke at the morning conference.

"The quicker we can end direct relief, the more funds we will have remaining for relief aid to unemployed clients," he declared. "Funds set aside for that purpose already are dwindling rapidly."

"Speed is now our main purpose," he urged project sponsors, issuing an appeal for immediate turning in of applications, with detailed specifications for each project.

Requisites for approval of works programs, he advised, are: Need for the work, available labor, and benefit to the community. "And the degree to which each unit will benefit is up to each community and the speed with which it acts in submitting applications," he declared. "Naturally we want the Panhandle served first."

Law Forbids Loose Stock On Highways

Statute Becomes Effective August 10—Division Engineer Issues Warning

This office is in receipt of a letter from W. J. Van London, Amarillo, highway division engineer, requesting that attention of the public be called to a new law prohibiting loose stock on the highway, and warning against violation of the statute.

The following interpretation of the law, as rendered by a member of the legal investigations, is given.

"The legislature of the State of Texas this year passed a law providing that any person owning or controlling livestock who permits the same to run at large unattended on that portion of any designated state highway which is enclosed by fences on both sides shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Each day of such violation shall constitute a separate offense. Punishment for each offense shall be a fine in any sum of not more than $200. The law further provides that state highway patrolmen as well as local officers shall have power to enforce said law.

This law will become effective on August 10, 1935, and thereafter will be strictly enforced upon the complaint of any citizen of Texas.

"During the past few years livestock roaming at large on state highways have become a dangerous menace to the traveling public. Because of the carelessness and neglect of those who own or control such livestock, numerous accidents have resulted by reason of collision with such livestock by automobiles lawfully operated upon the highways, and a large number of people have been killed and others have been so seriously injured as to be maimed for life. In addition, untold property damage has resulted.

"The state highway department asks every citizen in this locality to co-operate with the department, with local peace officers and with the state highway patrol in enforcement of this law to the end that the state highways in this locality may be made safer for the traveling public."

LIGHT COMPANY EMPLOYEES ENJOY PICNIC AND SUPPER

Members of the Jowett station force of the Panhandle Power & Light company, together with their families, were hosts to a similar group from the Riverview station, Borger, at the annual employees get-together picnic, held on Gageby creek together picnic, July 21. Sunday afternoon, July 21.

More than 50 persons attended the affair. Games and various amusements afforded entertainment, concluding with a picnic supper.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Coleman and daughter made a trip Thursday to Palo Duro park to get Mrs. C. J. Meek and her troop of Girl Scouts.

Pioneer County Man Dies Last Saturday

R. L. Martin, Corn Valley Farmer, Succumbs to Heart Attack After Brief Illness

R. L. Martin, 59, a pioneer living six miles southwest of Wheeler, died late Saturday, July 20, at his home from heart trouble, following a brief illness. He had been in failing health for several years and in a serious condition for the past month.

Mr. Martin moved his family from Hollis, Okla., to Wheeler in 1908, and had lived on the farm home in Corn Valley 27 years, where he has many friends.

Robert Lee Martin was born in Kentucky, Sept. 2, 1875, and died July 20, 1935, at Wheeler, Texas, at the age of 59 years, 10 months and 18 days. He was converted in 1908 and joined the Baptist church at Hollis, Okla. At the time of his death he was a member of the Baptist church at Corn Valley.

He was married to Zettie Mae Fulton in 1897. To them were born four children, two of whom preceded the father in death.

Martin, Saint Jo; Will Martin, Wheeler; John Martin, Gageby; Walter Martin, Arnett, Okla., and three sisters, Mrs. Anna Phy, Wellington; Mrs. Mollie Huckaby, Bakersfield, Calif., and Mrs. Lola Reed, Bartlesville, Okla., also four grandchildren and a number of other relatives and friends.

4-H Boys and Girls Encampment Friday

Interesting Program Presented by Various Clubs—Twitty Girls First in Contest

By CLEVEL LAYMAN
County Council Reporter for Boys' and Girls' Clubs.

Approximately 350 happy and peppy 4-H club boys and girls assembled at the John Cornelius farm, northeast of Wheeler, July 19 at 5 o'clock for the purpose of holding their annual encampment.

The assembly was called to order by the council president, Floyd Seago of Plainview. After the motto and pledge were repeated, the group joined in singing "Beautiful Texas," "Ole Faithful," and "Home on the Range." Before supper, recreation led by Floyd Seago and Lynn Gott, consisted of spoke tag, lanes and allies, and back to back. Each girls club chose a member to represent them in a chicken calling contest; the boys did likewise in selecting their representative in the hog calling contest. Faye Wilson won first place in chicken calling and Bonner Frostle first in hog calling. They were awarded suckers.

At 6:30 o'clock the group spread lunch in the grove west of the house. Everyone brought well-filled baskets, and the table was adorned with many wholesome and delicious edibles. Iced tea was served by Miss Jones and Mr. Tarter. "Let us be so polite, well-mannered and kind that Mr. Cornelius would be glad to have us come again," stated Jake Tarter, when speaking to the boys and girls before supper. This was well observed, and the grounds were left in good order.

While a special committee burnt the trash and put the tables in order, the others practiced on their stunts.

Then came the contest for all the clubs. Each club gave a historical stunt. Twitty girls won first prize, $2.00. Title of their stunt was "The Marriage of Texas;" their main point was that Mexico once wanted Texas to marry her and after a cold refusal, she turned away and a love affair between Texas and the United States ensued, and they were married. Dixon girls won second, $1.50, with "The Voice in the Wilderness." It represented the first preacher that came to Texas and his difficulties. The Wheeler girls and boys won third, $1.00, with a stunt called "Pioneer Amusement." It showed Colonel Charles Goodnight and his family as they went to church and while they were there.

Twitty boys gave jokes comparing the size of Texas with that of other

TRAYLER BRINGS SAMPLE OF FINE PEACHES TO TOWN

Some of the nicest peaches of the current season made up a sample lot brought to this office Saturday by U. B. Trayler, who lives four miles northeast of Wheeler. They were of the Mamie Ross variety and were large and of excellent flavor.

McLEAN VOTES NO ON SALE OF BEER

At an election held Saturday in that community, the voters of McLean decisively turned down continued sale of 3.2 beer by a vote of 221 to 59. It is reported that sales of the beverage will become illegal after the expiration of 30 days following the election.

The election was a very quiet affair, and brought out about half the usual city election number.

Gray county towns appear to be joining the "dry" column with regularity. Alarreed having recently voted out beer by a heavy majority.

Kathryn Bowers Weds Trinidad Young Man

Nuptial Rites Said at Methodist Parsonage, Denton, Last Friday Evening

News of the marriage, last Friday, of Miss Margaret Kathryn Bowers of Wheeler, to Mr. Lawrence F. Johnston of Trinidad, Texas, will come as something of a surprise to the many friends of the young lady throughout this community.

In a letter written by Mrs. Johnston under date of July 23 and addressed to The Times, she states that the wedding occurred at 6 o'clock, Friday evening, July 19, at the Methodist parsonage in Denton. Rev. E. V. White, pastor of the church, read the beautiful ring ceremony. Miss Ruth Ewing of Rio Vista, was bridesmaid and Johnnie Toffet of Trinidad, was best man. Jim Charles Johnston of Trinidad, brother of the groom, was the only other out-of-town guest.

The bride wore a costume of white chiffon, with pink crepe picture hat and pink satin slippers. Miss Ewing wore a pink chiffon dress with white accessories. The groom was appropriately garbed for the occasion.

Shortly after the ceremony the newly-weds left on a short tour of points in southern Texas, returning Monday to Trinidad, where they will make their home.

Mrs. Johnston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bowers of Wheeler is well and favorably known throughout the county. After graduation from the Shamrock high school in 1929, she attended C. I. A. at Denton two years. She has taught three terms in the Wheeler schools and had been employed for this winter, but recently tendered her resignation.

Mr. Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Johnston of Trinidad, is not known here. But his good judgment is evidenced by the selection of so talented and charming a young lady as his companion. He is connected with the Texas Power & Light company of Trinidad.

Congratulations and well wishes of scores of Wheeler friends go out to Mr. and Mrs. Johnston for a long and happy life together.

Birthday Surprise Sunday at Goad Home

Friends and relatives gathered at the W. A. Goad home Sunday night, July 21, and prepared a surprise dinner honoring the birthdays of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Goad, E. D. Guynes and Miss Florine Guynes.

Those attending the occasion, besides the honorees, were Mr. and Mrs. Mattie Goad and daughter and son, Miss Berga and Oshel, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rowe, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Rowe and children, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Williams and children and Mrs. E. D. Guynes and children.

LOVELY FLOWERS FOR WHEELER TIMES LADY

Mrs. C. G. Miller, member of The Wheeler Times office force, has learned within the past few days that some people still believe in "flowers for the living." On Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Pettit, residents of the Corn Valley community, presented Mrs. Miller with as lovely a bouquet of gladioli as could be found anywhere. These beautiful blossoms, in a range of joyous colors, remained bright and fresh for several days, much to the pleasure and appreciation of the recipient.

Methodist Revival Will Start Sunday

Rev. H. C. Smith, Tahoka, to Preach During Two Weeks Series of Meetings

"Next Sunday morning we will begin a series of revival services at the Methodist church here," announces Rev. J. Edmund Kirby, pastor, "with Rev. H. C. Smith, pastor of the First Methodist church at Tahoka, Texas, doing the preaching."

Rev. Smith, it is stated, will speak each morning at 10 o'clock and each evening at 8:30. Morning services will be held in the church auditorium and evening services will be held on the back lawn. Everyone is invited to make plans to be present at all of the services and to co-operate in every way possible to make the meeting a success.

Rev. Adrian Rea, pastor of the M. E. church at Briscoe, will have charge of the music during the revival. Rev. Rea has had several years experience in evangelistic singing. He asks your co-operation in making the singing and music during the revival a success.

The plan is to have three choirs and an orchestra. There will be a choir for adults, one for young people and one for children.

During the meeting there will be five prayer groups—children, young people, two women's groups, and the men. Mrs. H. M. Wiley will have charge of the children, and they will meet in the auditorium for their service. Rev. H. C. Smith will have charge of the men, and they will meet on the lawn north of the parsonage. The Rev. J. Edmund Kirby will have charge of the young people and they will meet in the basement of the church. Mrs. J. M. Porter will have charge of the elderly ladies service. They will meet in Mrs. Adams Sunday school room. Miss Beulah Hubbard will have charge of the young women's prayer group. They will meet in the living room of the parsonage.

Speaking of the revival campaign, Rev. Kirby concluded his remarks with the following observation: "A sure way to encourage attendance at the meeting is for all Methodists to talk about the church, and the meeting during these two weeks. Invite everyone you see to the services. Tell them about the many things that are going on. Tell them about the sermons and the singing. The minister and the singer and your pastor are going to put their best into these services. We will appreciate it if you will help us by encouraging your friends and acquaintances to attend."

SHOWERS FALL IN PARTS OF COUNTY

Varying from light sprinkles to real downpours, and covering areas in streaks and spots, rains have fallen in Wheeler county nearly every day since Sunday. Only a sprinkle visited this immediate vicinity Sunday afternoon. On Monday a fall of a quarter inch was noted in Wheeler. Tuesday afternoon and evening, showers more or less county-wide refreshed growing crops and brought lower temperatures.

In the S. T. Rodgers community, southwest of town, Tuesday's precipitation totaled from three to four inches, according to Mr. Rodgers' report Wednesday. The same evening heavy rain near Magic City washed out a small strip of track on the Fort Worth & Denver. The south end of the county got only .13 of inch, while McLean reports a half inch.

GIVE INDUSTRY A CHANCE

"The power of government to improve conditions is not a drop in the bucket compared to the enormous prosperity-making capacity that lies in the natural tendency of business and industry to make better products at lower cost, to distribute them widely, and in the process to create more jobs and higher wages," said Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel corporation, recently. "This natural capacity has been impotent recently because of the fear and uncertainty engendered among business men by governmental interference."

It is an often expressed belief that government can neither create nor prevent recovery—but it can retard it for a discouragingly long time. By stifling investments with taxation, by destroying confidence through bureaucratic domination, and by standing in the way of industrial expansion through threats of more and increasingly stringent regimentation of the nation's productive machinery, politics can become prosperity's worst enemy.

Give industry a fair chance, and it will do its part to bring back good times.

ICKES, HOPKINS, & CO.

On April 8, Congress, at the request of the President, passed a bill appropriating $4,880,000,000 for work relief.

At that time, Mr. Roosevelt stated that by July 1 all the nation's unemployed who were able to work, would have federal jobs, and would be off the local relief rolls.

July 1 came and passed. More than $400,000,000 had been approved for 474 projects, yet not a single man had been put to work.

The reason is two-fold: First, and most important, the works program is supposed to employ 3,500,000 men for one year. If that is done, the cost per worker, including materials, must be held down to the very low figure of $1.143.

Second, there has been constant disagreement between Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Relief Administrator Hopkins. Ickes is the head of the Public Works administration, and Hopkins guides the Works Progress administration. The two bureaus inevitably overlap—and both executives claim jurisdiction over the same projects.

Ickes is of the opinion that relief money should be spent for projects of permanent benefit—grade crossing elimination, river and harbor developments, road work, etc. Hopkins, on the other hand, is concerned only with putting men to work, and he knows that the adoption of projects in which material costs are high will defeat that purpose. As a result, he favors projects which require only labor, and demand few or no materials—woodland clearance, malaria control, repairs to public buildings, etc. The two men are so diametrically opposed in their views that it seemed no compromise was possible.

A fortnight ago the president stepped in and provided a partial settlement to the problem. He decided the question of jurisdiction by outlining which projects are to be controlled by Hopkins, which by Ickes. Result: All projects involving the expenditure of less than $25,000 are to be handled by Hopkins; all those costing more, by Ickes. For example: If the president approves the building of a canal, Ickes will handle it—if he says yes to a ditch, it will be done by Hopkins. Ickes will build highways, while Hopkins builds trails. Ickes will erect public buildings, and Hopkins will landscape the grounds surrounding them. And so it goes.

The works relief program is at last swinging into actual operation—and the question that remains to be answered is whether or not it can find useful and productive jobs for the 3,500,000 heads of families who are still out of work.

YOUTH AT THE WHEEL

An insurance publication points to the fact that an "astounding percentage" of the growing automobile death toll is caused by cars operated by boys and girls—many of them below the legal age at which they can obtain drivers' licenses.

Most parents readily agree that the average 12 or 13 year-old is incapable of safely and prudently operating anything as potentially murderous as an automobile—but they too often make an exception when it comes to their own Jimmie or Sally. It is one of the human frailties to regard one's own children as being brighter than one's neighbors—and that attitude, harmless as it is in most cases, is directly responsible for a vast and horrible waste of life.

Overly youthful drivers not only cause more accidents than their elders—they cause more serious accidents. They usually drive at extreme speeds. The hazards of passing on curves, of driving on the wrong side of the road, of weaving in and out of traffic, of "jumping" stop signals and "gunning her" along busy streets, mean little or nothing to them. Taking chances is a game to them—a game at which innocent persons are often the losers.

Every parent should make it his business to see that his children are not permitted to drive until they have reached the legal age—and, even then, that they are carefully supervised and forced to be careful. The authorities should likewise carry on a continuous and insistent campaign to bar under-age drivers from streets and highways. If that is done, thousands of our automobile accidents will be eliminated.

CENTENNIAL PUBLICITY

Lieutenant Walter Woodul, chief gummer-up of the Centennial, has named an "advertising advisory committee." The members are a department store manager, a railroad executive and a lobbyist for the sulphur trust.

This committee was selected outside the publishing profession to avoid "frittering away" the appropriation of $500,000,000 set aside for publicity.

Publishers will be asked to print "accurate and attractive news of the Centennial free" as has been done for the past year. The committee evidently thinks the "free" scheme will work since an "expert press agent of San Diego" has been employed to get out the free dope.

Publishers will likely return the "free" copy with a rate card and ask that a reasonable fee be paid for the service. Especially since the press agents and others in the Dallas office will be of the high-salaried class.

This is a mighty fine time for the publishers of Texas to stick up for their rights and make their influence felt.—Donley County Leader.

WE THINK OTHERWISE

Appearing in last week's Floyd County Hesperian under the heading "Newton's Discoveries," by Charles Newton, was the following:

"Negroes are widely misunderstood by some West Texans. They look upon them as a race that should not be permitted to live with white people."

"If these same people had ever lived with negroes, been taken to negro 'baptizings' by an old negro mammy and listened to their souls being poured out in music, their attitude would be changed. They don't know the negro race and therefore they are prejudiced. In the portions of the United States where negroes and whites live in the same community or town, there are seldom any race problems induced by proximity."

"White people should not lose sight of the fact, when considering the negro, that, besides the difference in color, there is little difference in a white man and a black man. No one knows what makes a negro black and a white person white. Environment has played its part in making the black race a subservient race."

That, we consider, is some pronouncement for a newspaper anywhere outside of a negro settlement, and especially in West Texas. With all respect to the esteemed Hesperian, we regret such "rot." Nor does it seem possible that the Floyd county publication can knowingly endorse the misinformation and profound ignorance shown in the "discovery." If only the beautiful things ascribed by the writer to his evidently-beloved black race were true, it would not be so bad. But they are not.

Where, one wonders, would race problems "by proximity" be induced except in communities or towns lived in by whites and negroes?

Then, reaching the climax of profundity, Newton asserts that "besides the difference in color, there is little difference in a white man and a black man." With apologies to the jackass, we see as much difference between a white man and a negro as between a thoroughbred race horse and a jackass. But, more seriously speaking, any fifth grade school boy knows there is a biological difference between the races that accounts for the color.

Many crimes can be laid at the door of environment, but certainly not that of making the negro race what it is.

Aside from the direct insult to every member of the white race, the viciousness of Newton's article lies in its tendency to arouse the brutal lust of the negro and mislead an ignorant, inferior race to visions of equality that can never be realized. Wonder how he would like to have a negro daughter-in-law or a buck nigger seek the hand of his daughter in marriage, unless perchance, he is of that race himself?

Our Exchanges

Several county treasurers had their quarterly reports published in their home papers last week. It has been a long time since the law requiring such publications has been observed in Gray county; yet our citizens are entitled to know how their money is being spent, and publication in a county newspaper is the only way to reach the people in matters of this kind.—McLean News.

Too much talk about dry weather does damage that will take years to live down. The other day The Herald was told that farm land at Dalhart, Dumas, Guymon, Boise City and other places would be sold much cheaper than it should because of the excessive adverse publicity about drouth. Row crops in all those sections, we are told, are better than they are at Pahandle, but our land is valued higher. It's probably like the old story, "You can't have your cake and eat it, too." Those communities have raised such a big howl for big relief appropriations that the value of the farm land has suffered out of proportion to the damage done by drouth.—Panhandle Herald.

The human animal is a wonderful affair, but one often wonders how we survive. We have depressions, political scandal, drouth, New Deal, threat of war, insects, hot winds, jazz bands, cellophane skirts, section 7a-2, floods, fanatics, scandal mongers, egotists and—wow Almee is about to get married the third time.—Donley County Leader.

The only way we can see to stop a large part of the increasing number of automobile accidents is to prohibit the manufacturers from building cars which will travel more than 45 or 50 miles per hour. Most of them advertise 75 miles per hour cars, and too many folks are convinced that they have to drive that fast.—Canyon News.

Many local men are being given employment in the erection of the CCC camp for the soil erosion workers. This camp is located on the tract of land owned by the county, adjoining the city limits on the west. Approximately 50 to 73 men are on the pay roll. On Wednesday, 17 carpenters and 39 laborers were working. The carpenters are paid 75c per hour and the laborers draw 50c per hour. The workers are restricted to 40 hours of work each week. In addition to the workmen, several are given employment as watchmen.—Ochiltree County Herald.

SIDELIGHTS
By
HON. MARVIN JONES

Just now a tremendous fight is being made by processors and industrial groups against the Agricultural Adjustment act. Hundreds of suits are being filed to contest the validity of the act and to prevent the collection of the processing fees from which funds are obtained for carrying on the farm program.

The recent decision of the United States supreme court has given encouragement to the hope of these groups that they may be able to stop the collection of these fees and thus destroy the farm program.

We are all hoping that they may not succeed.

It has been my privilege to handle in its passage through the house practically all the farm legislation of the administration.

As a result of this legislation, not only have farm prices been materially increased but hundreds of millions of dollars have been paid to farmers in rental and benefit payments as a means of restoring price parity. More than one hundred million dollars have been restored to the farmers of Texas.

In my judgment, this has been of great advantage to the entire country in tending to restore balanced conditions.

Soon after the court decision referred to, we introduced in the house a measure ratifying the entire previous agricultural program and changing the original act in such a way as to remove, in so far as possible, any question of the legality of the act in the future. This measure has already passed the house and is now undergoing a fight in the senate. Before this is printed, we hope it may have passed the senate and will be in conference between the two houses.

I believe it is all-important that the farm program be continued in the interest of the entire country. The united manner in which the farmers have stood by this legislation has been encouraging to all those who have had a part in its enactment.

We have come a long way from the fear, uncertainty and distressed farm conditions that prevailed at the beginning of the program. We cannot afford to surrender what has already been accomplished.

Farms and ranches alongside of Texas highways will keynote Centennial visitors' impressions of the state.

Feed Conservation and Uses Program
Extension Director Predicts Big Crop Will Afford 18 Months' Supply If Conserved

In direct contrast with last year's food and feed shortage, a record feed crop will be harvested this season throughout Texas that will give an 18 months' supply if conserved, H. H. Williamson, director of the Texas Extension service, predicted last week.

In view of unusual food and feed crops this year, Williamson announced a 90-day state-wide educational program to emphasize to Texas farmers the importance and methods of harvesting, storing and utilizing this season's food and feed crop.

In announcing the eight-point feed conservation and utilization program, Williamson said that, along with the extension forces, the Texas Experiment stations, the A. & M. college teaching staff, various farm and commercial organizations, newspapers and farm magazines will all co-operate in this movement to prevent wastage of the extra food and feed crops.

The eight points as outlined by the extension director are as follows: to dig trench silos or build up ground silos for storage of feed; to repair barns, bins, and storage places for the harvested grains, orchard and field crops for home consumption; to use the best practical means of protecting stored grain and field crops from weevil and rat damage; to stack hay in the best known methods to prevent deterioration; to increase the number of milk cows, hogs and poultry for home use; to offer for slaughter only well fed and finished animals; to finish all Texas cattle and other livestock for market on Texas grown feed; and to feed work stock and breeding animals well during the winter months.

FOREST SERVICE AND AAA CO-OPERATE TO GET LAND
Retired Crop Acreage May Be Used for Shelterbelt Plantings Under New Plan

A co-operative arrangement has recently been made between Chester Davis, AAA administrator, and F. A. Silcox, chief of the forest service, to use lands included in crop-reduction contracts for strip-planting by the forest service, whenever an agreement may be reached with the landowner for the planting of trees and shrubs under the Shelterbelt Project.

Under the above arrangement and agreement with the land-owner, the trees may be planted on either contracted acreage or on other lands selected in lieu of such acreage, if soil types, location, or for other reasons the selected lands are better suited for shelterbelt planting than the original contracted areas. The forest service will at the same time enter into a separate lease or option agreement with the land-owner, which will provide for immediate occupancy by the forest service, and will insure control of the land used for shelterbelt purposes after the expiration of the crop-reduction contract. This agreement, with the owner, will further provide for purchase or extension of the lease of the selected land at a stipulated price, should the government later wish to take this course.

During the life of the AAA contract, no rental will be paid the farmer by the forest service for use of the lands, since he is compensated for that period by the AAA. It is believed by local officials in charge of the shelterbelt project that all land needed for next year's planting can be secured in this manner, and it is proposed largely to confine acquisition to this method.

Lands for shelterbelt strip-planting may also be secured under the present procedure; that is, by donations or by leases, with an option for an extension of the lease or to purchase later at an agreed price. Because of the recognized value of shelterbelt plantings to the individual farm-owner, it is expected that many of the strips will be secured by donations.

J. C. PENNEY STORES PREFER NEWSPAPERS

Regarding advertising with handbills, the manager of a J. C. Penney store says:

"In recent years we have issued no more than two handbills each year, and I believe it is now two years since we issued one. I have learned that the housewife thinks little of handbills, circulars, guttersnipes, etc., and does not like them cluttering up her porch because she does not want them and has no possible use for them."

Penney stores are successful stores and are thoroughly sold on the merits of advertising in the home town newspaper, wherever they happen to be located.

CLUB NOTES

Happenings of Interest by and for Home Demonstration Club Women of the County.

"Being highly elated over my first year's work as a Class I Wardrobe Demonstrator, I resolved to enter a second year with stronger determination of achievement," said Mrs. Frank Westmoreland of the Home Demonstration Club. When she was a Class I demonstrator, Mrs. Westmoreland built a wardrobe, equipped with 18 shelves, a shoe rack, extension rod, umbrella rack, door pockets and hat racks. Besides this she also built a storage for quilts on the top of her chiffonier.

In the second year's work she took inventory of her families entire wardrobe; cleaned, pressed and made over clothing, providing adequately for their needs. "By this time I really had begun like building closets," said Mrs. Westmoreland, "so I just made one in my kitchen." This closet is 42 inches and reaches to the ceiling. It has a storage space for coats, sweaters, boots, overshoes, and chopper and canning facilities. During this two years demonstration wardrobe work Mrs. Westmoreland has cut 92 foundation patterns, patterns for children, two slacks, one glove, 11 slip, two nightshirt, one collar, 42 sleeve and one shirt pattern. She has made 49 cotton dresses, eight silk dresses, three suits and one boys short coat, knitted one tam and three wool gloves and helped 12 women plan their wardrobe space.

"Because my bedroom is so very small it is necessary to plan it close and have a place for everything," said Mrs. Mount Tipps, of the Home Demonstration Club.

When she began the bedroom demonstration she did not have a clothes closet. She had some shelves in a corner for her folded garments and her dresses were hung on nails where they were exposed to sunlight and dust. Mrs. Tipps first tore down the shelves and built a closet with eight feet of shelving and shoe and hat racks. She then repapered the room, refinshed the floor, wood-work and dresser and enameled the tub.

"When the new bedspread and curtains were added and everything was in its proper place the room seemed to be comfortable, and adequate for the needs," said Mrs. Mount Tipps.

Mrs. C. H. Candler, chairman of the Home Demonstration Club, gave the following announcements to the council, Tuesday afternoon, July 16, at the Riley rooming pool, at their regular monthly meeting.

That a tour of inspection will be made on achievement day in November to all previous demonstrators of the club and demonstrators are asked to be ready for the tour.

A demonstration on tile-siderrigging and storage place for food will be held August 19 by Mr. Rosenberg of Texas A. & M. college; each club in the county to send two delegates to the demonstration; place of demonstration to be announced later.

Those to have windbreaks planted in Wheeler county are: Mrs. Bob Greenhouse in commissioner's precinct No. 1; Mrs. Queenie Vise, No. 2; Mrs. Paul Risner, No. 3, and Mrs. O. King, No. 4.

Mrs. Jess Clay, Shamrock, reported $12.24 made at the food sale in Shamrock, Saturday, July 13. Mrs. Jim Trout, Wheeler, reported $7.01 made at the food sale in Wheeler, Saturday, June 22.

Miss Viola Jones, Wheeler county home demonstration agent, gave several changes that have been made in the list for the club fair in September.

The council voted to send two members to the Farmer's Short Course at A. & M. Mrs. C. H. Candler will represent the county council and Mrs. Zura Bullock will represent the county reporter's association.

Those present were: Delegates and members of the following clubs—Shamrock, Wheeler, Twitty, China Flat, Bethel, Davis, Allison, Kelton, Briscoe, Busy Bee and Magic City; Misses Viola Jones, Cleary Douglas, Edith Ashley, Leona Crossland, Wheeler, and Miss Anna Mae Donaghey, Collingsworth county home demonstration agent and Mrs. Dee Coleman, Wellington, who acted as judges for the historical stunts presented at the club encampment.

The Mobeetie 4-H club met July 23 in the home of their sponsor, Mrs. N. J. Tyson. Miss Jones gave a lecture on canned vegetables and the proper way to can them.

Later the club made a sandwich spread by the following recipe: 10 carrots, 3 green peppers, 3 red peppers, 2 teaspoons salt, 3 eggs beaten, 2 teaspoons flour, 1 cup vinegar, 1 cup sour cream, 10 sweet pickles. Run vegetables through food chopper. Sprinkle with salt. Add water. Cover and let stand over night. In the morning drain. Add water and cook until tender. Meanwhile make a dressing of the rest of ingredients (except pickles) and cool until thick. Add pickles and hot drained vegetables.

Those present were: Margaret Seedig, Delora Ferguson, Cleveland Lamon, Bulah Brewer, Dora Goodnight and Mrs. N. J. Tyson.—MARGARET SEEDIG, Reporter.

An interesting historical program was presented to a large number of members and guests at the regular meeting of the Wheeler Home Demonstration club Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Lula Mae Farley was leader for the occasion.

Graphic discussions of the early days in the Panhandle were presented by Mrs. J. H. Watts, Miss Viola Jones, Mrs. J. M. Porter and Mrs. W. I. Joss. Patriotic songs were sung by the group before adjournment.

After a game, refreshments were served by Mrs. W. O. Puett and Mrs. W. W. Jenkins to the following members: Mesdames Minnie Farmer, O. Nations, T. C. Newkirk, R. J. Carver, Jim Trout, J. H. Watts, W. I. Joss, M. C. Jaco, J. M. Porter, C. R. Flynt and Lula Mae Farley, and the following guests: Mrs. J. M. Tilley, Miss Viola Jones, and Helen Flynt, Aline Coleman and Elsie Newkirk.

The Mobeetie Home Demonstration club met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. N. J. Tyson. After singing some songs, an interesting program on the AAA was given.

Miss Viola Jones presented a demonstration lecture on Nutrition Standards and Classification of Foods. She said in part: "We are not born with taste; we develop our likes and dislikes. If we had been born in China we would be eating rice with chop sticks. We are responsible for our children's health and should train them to like what is good for them."

Nanette Tyson read "Ten Little Niggers."

Those present were Misses Viola Jones and Cleary Douglas, Mrs. J. L. Brewster, Mrs. Tiry Hardin and children, Mrs. J. W. Brothers, and the hostess.

The club will meet next at the home of Mrs. C. C. Elder, Aug. 13, at 3 p. m.—Reporter.

A model luncheon, cooked and served by the members formed a demonstration at the meeting of the Wheeler 4-H club girls in the C. R. Flynt home, Wednesday, July 24.

After the business session at 9:30, the girls began preparing the lunch. Correct table setting and ways of serving were demonstrated by the members who were assigned parts at the beginning of the meeting. The meal consisted of new potatoes, green beans, chicken, gravy, lettuce and tomatoes, salad, and ice cream and cookies.

Those present for the luncheon were: Ruth Faust, Helena Jones, Elsie Newkirk, Alene Coleman, Helen Flynt, Mrs. Jim Trout, sponsor; Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Flynt, Edgar and Walter Flynt, Mrs. Amasa Flynt and daughter, Jean, Mrs. T. C. Newkirk and daughter, Betty, and Misses Cleary Douglas, Viola Jones and Edith Ashley.

GOD AND HIS HIGH HATS

by
MRS. WOODBEE UMBLE

"Mother, I am tired. I am SO tired I can not go further."

"There, there, be brave and I will see if I can get them to let you ride on one of the carts on top of the things. Wouldn't that be great?"

The brave mother spoke cheerfully even when her own heart was almost too heavy for words. Her first duty was to find some way for her child to ride which was finally accomplished, not only for her child but for every other small child and their mothers also. As they jolted along over the rough road she often felt it would be most as easy to walk as to try to keep her place and that of her child but the road was not all rough and during those many days of march she had time for much thought. Why could men never learn that God must be obeyed? If they had only listened to the prophets! They had tried to tell them that if they would be loyal to Him he would fight for them. Had not the northern kingdom, Israel, been more disobedient than they, up to that time, had been, and been carried away captive 150 years before?

"The sad part of it is the innocent must suffer, too. Our thoughtlessness is bad enough, for instance when the good king Hezekiah showed the violators from Babylon all our treasures. The prophet told him they would come back and take it all and they have done so but that was not half as bad and for his son Manasseh to become as evil as Ahab and provoke God to punish us with captivity like the northern kingdom, Israel, I firmly believe this captivity could have been averted if the people had only truly repented and lived as Josiah wanted them to do for Josiah turned to the Lord with all his heart, Kings 23:25, but his sons were evil and Judah was attacked from all sides and we paid tribute and paid tribute and finally all Jerusalem or 10,000 of them were carried captive into Babylon and Zedekiah was made king.

"If he had only been good like his father, Josiah, even at that late date we might have been spared but he was evil, too, like his three other brothers who had been kings before him. When he rebelled against Nebuchadnezzar and they besieged Jerusalem until we were starving the men slipped away through the garden and on the plains. They were overtaken and the Babylonians killed the sons of Zedekiah in his sight so that it would be the last thing he could remember seeing, for they put out his eyes afterward.

"Oh, if the people had only listened to Jeremiah, the prophet. He tried to tell us not to trust in an alliance with Egypt or any other except Jehovah. I am so glad, so glad, the captain let him go, at Ramah. It was grand to see his chains fall off, remembering that he had been kept in a boggy dungeon by his own countrymen because he dared tell them of their mistakes and wickedness.

"Jehovah, help me to remain true to Thee in the land of my captivity. Help me teach my sons Thy law and may they always obey Thee and some day may they help lead Thy people back to their own land."

"I was at the citadel of Susa when one of my kinsmen came to me along with some from Judah. I asked about our countrymen still living in Jerusalem. He answered they are in great misery. When I heard this I sat down and wept. Then I remembered God's promise to Moses, that after we had sinned and been scattered far and wide among the nations, if we would return to Him and keep His commandments He would gather them in and bring them to the place I have chosen to fix My presence.' Neh. 1:9 (Moffatt). My mother had trained me and told me all the stories of the kings of my people, both good and bad. How the law had been given to Moses and the promise that if his people hearkened and obeyed Him blessed should be their basket and store, the fruit of their land and their cattle, their going out and their coming in forever, but the warning had also been given that if they forgot and went aside to do evil they would cause their blessings to be turned into a curse that would destroy them.

"She told how He had led His people until they demanded a king so they could be like other nations. How they married idol worshipping women of other nations against His will and worshipped idols themselves. How the people listened not to the priests and prophets but followed the example of these evil kings until at last He let Jerusalem and the temple be destroyed and His people be carried away captive. She taught me to commune with and trust Jehovah and to hope some day to return and help build again my beloved Jerusalem.

"By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yes, we wept, when we remembered Zion. We hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof. For there they that carried us away captive required of us a song; and they that wasted us required of us mirth, saying, 'Sing us one of the songs of Zion.' How can we sing the Lord's song in a strange land? Ps. 137."

And thus the nation who thought they were God's chosen people and that rightly, but not licensed to do evil, learned that nations—no more than individuals—can ever reach a place they can do without God, their maker and friend, and a High Hat nation is as helpless and miserable as a High Hat individual.

POINTS FOR JUDGING ENTRIES IN CENTENNIAL FARM-HOME CONTEST

As mentioned in The Times in its issue of June 27, plans for establishing demonstrations on certain highways in honor of the Centennial have been perfected. Considerable additional interest is assured through the contest phase of the beautification program. Any Texas family living on a farm or ranch, or in a town or village of a population of not more than 2,500, on a designated state or federal highway, may enter the contest by registering with the county farm and home demonstration agents and working under their supervision.

A county judging committee, appointed by the farm and home agent, will score entries at the close of the contest, which must be by June 1, 1936. District judging will begin immediately after June 1, when the district agents will judge the first place winner in each county to select the district winners. After the winning contestants in each district have been selected, the state committee will decide on the state winners. Each contestant will have a story of activity and farm record and a simple plan of the farmstead. Pictures will aid the judges.

In each of the nine districts, the first prize will be $75, second prize $50, third prize $25, fourth prize $25, fifth prize $25. Prizes in the state are: first $250, second $175, third $125; fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth prizes are $25.00 each. Each county will have to furnish its own prizes.

Points to be considered are:

The Building and Equipment

Family dwelling and service buildings to be judged on location; state of repair, including paint; adequacy for occupants; permanent equipment and furnishings. Water supply judged on source; quantity; and availability where needed. Fencing and gates on sufficiency for type of farm; quality; and state of repair, including paint. Farm machinery to be judged on relation to farming needs, and state of repair.

The Grounds

Judged on arrangement of entire layout; arrangement of plantings; choice of plant material; and maintenance.

The Soil

Judged on erosion prevention; drainage; water conservation; crop rotation, including legumes and winter cover crops; utilization of available manures; use of commercial fertilizer; and condition of fields.

The Crops

Judged on land utilization by balancing cash, feed, pasture and wood crops; adaption of the crops to the region and the farm; and to distribution of labor; market quality of crops; cultural methods; insect control; and production records.

The Livestock

Dairy and beef cattle, hogs, sheep and goats, poultry and work stock judged on quantity in proportion to other farm operations, quality; care and management.

Food Supply and Other Resources

Judged on sufficient amount and variety of fresh, canned, brined, cured, and stored products from garden, orchard, fields, and live stock to meet the nutrition needs of the family; and the processing of surpluses and by-products such as vegetables, fruits, meats, hides, wool, cotton, wood and scrap metal for home use and for sale.

THE STORY THUS FAR

CHAPTER I—Kentucky Jones, veteran cowboy, attends the inquest, in the little town of Waterman, into the death of John Mason, banker and financial mainstay of the district, which was supposed to have been accidental. The daughter of Campo Ragland, owner of the Bar Hook ranch, where the murder met death, to Kentucky's mystification surreptitiously passes to him the bullet which had killed Mason, she being abstracted it from the evidence during the inquest. Kentucky goes to the Bar Hook ranch.

CHAPTER II—The verdict is accidental death. Sheriff Hopper, apparently dissatisfied, invited Jones, known for his shrewdness, to investigate the case. Jones has decided to do that on his own hook and refuses to work with the sheriff, Bob Elliot, owner of the "88" ranch, adjoining the Bar Hook, apparently saw Jean pass the night to Jones, and starts an altercation. Jones knocks him out.

CHAPTER III—Bob Elliot, with a lawyer of legal right, drives his cattle on the Bar Hook range. Lee Bishop, Ragland's ranch boss, expostulates, and McCord, Elliot's foreman, insults Jones.

CHAPTER IV—Reporting Elliot's driving his cattle onto the Bar Hook range, Bishop and Jones are astounded by Ragland's indifference. Bishop urges Kentucky to try to influence Jean to leave her father.

CHAPTER V—Sheriff Hopper, investigating Sanders' death, announces to Jones that Mason also was murdered. Circumstances would seem to involve Kentucky Jones in the crime. Jean Ragland shows evidence of the strain she is under, but despite their increasing affection for each other, she hesitates to give Kentucky her confidence.

CHAPTER VI—Ragland continues to refuse to take action against Elliot. Jones seeks to trace the owner of a gun found on Zack Sanders, which he is confident has a bearing on the mystery. Jones sells him her share in the Bar Hook ranch, thus giving him a free hand in any controversy with Elliot. Jones warns Elliot that the Bar Hook will defend its rights, but Elliot makes no threat.

CHAPTER VII—In a gun fight with the "88" ranch Jim Humphreys, young Bar Hook cowboy, is wounded, and Billy Peterson, his partner, is killed. Jones sends for fighting cowmen but Ragland countermands the order. Kentucky and Jean are drawn closer together though he still feels the sting of concealing something. He is unable to understand McCord's evident deadly animosity toward Bishop.

CHAPTER VIII—Kentucky, disgusted, straightening his cramped knees, takes a long step from the window stood by Ragland's bed. He sat down on it, careful to avoid a creaking of the springs. His bed was still warm to his feet, where Jean had lain and tried to sleep; and for a moment he marveled that the toss of circumstances could have brought him so near to the girl, even for so little time. Then he noticed something else. Something was wrong with the mattress upon which he sat. Unmistakably, there was something about that mattress that had nothing to do with sleep. Suddenly Kentucky dropped to one knee beside the bed and thrust his hand between the mattress and the sheet. Buried in the mattress his fingers found the polished wood of a rifle barrel; and beside it, dismounted, the smooth steel of the barrel. For a moment his hand rested on these things, something turned over in the folds of his stomach and refused to go into place. He withdrew his hand, and sat down limply on the edge of the bed. He was not ready to say what the discovery meant; he knew instantly that Jean was supposed—perhaps far more deeply than G—d, he whispered, "what are we here? What have we here?" The murmur of Jean's voice within the house had ceased; he heard the faint stir of the door as she came into the room. He stood up, overwhelmed with such pity for this ill-situated girl that he was the victim of an unaccustomed timidity. She came close to him and her hand touched his arm.

"That shadow was a misdeal," he whispered. "There isn't anybody in that shadow. I don't believe there's anybody out there any more." She said, "Oh."

He felt infinitely gentle toward her, and compassionate. Presently he knew that he would have to ask her why that gun was concealed in her mattress. He was unable to ask her yet. "What was the phone call?" he asked.

"That was for you," she told him. It was Mark Ferris, that gunsmith at Waterman. He's still trying to trace Zack Sanders' gun for you."

"Yes? Quick! What did he say?" "He said—" Jean was shivering so violently that she could hardly control the chattering of her teeth.

"Wait a minute," Kentucky picked her up, sweeping her off her feet with an arm under her knees, and laid her on the bed; then pulled the blankets over her, and pressed the edges close about her throat. "Now go on," he said.

"He said that he has a record of such a gun. He sold it second-hand about a year ago."

"In G—d's name, woman, who did he sell it to?"

"To Joe St. Marie."

For perhaps half a moment Kentucky Jones was completely still. Then he sucked in a deep breath and began to swear through his teeth with the vicious intonation of a man who puts his whole heart into it. He had suddenly become aware that he had perhaps put off the formation of one theory for a little bit too long.

Suddenly he whirled to the window, crouched low to avoid the sash, and vaulted the sill. He heard Jean speak his name behind him, but he was racing for the bunk house. A match was already in his hand as he thrust open the door; he struck it on the logs and with quick efficient motions lighted one of the hanging lamps.

"St. Marie—" he said aloud.

Joe St. Marie's bunk was empty. Kentucky swore again, blew out the light, and left the bunk house on the dead run. He headed now for the corral nearest the pump house, and sprang half way up the corral fence.

The half dozen horses in the corral were huddled together near the empty feed box. The ponies moved and shifted, but by the time he had counted them Kentucky knew which horse was gone. This information only verified, however, what Kentucky had already guessed. Joe St. Marie, leaving stealthily, as Kentucky now knew Jean had seen him leave, was certain to take the best-conditioned horse upon the place, in this case a raw-boned claybank. Kentucky leaned against the fence and pressed the palms of his hands against his eyes. He was picturing to himself the lay of the country, and the probable intricacies of Joe St. Marie's mind. Immediately he came to a conclusion which he had no reason to be certain was sound, but which was the best he could form from what information he had.

Once more he drove through the clogging snow at the run, this time to the house; here he got his hat and his coat, his gloves and his spurs. After that he went to the stable, and put a loop upon the pony which he believed would come the nearest to matching the claybank's performance tonight—a wiry, almost under-sized steel-dust pony, strong with the markings of Indian blood. Kentucky had the blanket on and was swinging his fifty-pound saddle aboard by the horn as Jean, coming out from the house, reached his side. "What—where are you going? What's happened?"

A sudden crazy anger came into Kentucky, like a stroke of white lightning. At its impact all the compassion, all the tenderness he had felt for this girl seemed to vanish, as if she had held him under a hypnosis, the spell of which had snapped. He turned on her furiously.

"What is it to you where I go or what I do? Men put their hands in the lion's mouth for you, and you tell them nothing—not even enough so that they can take care of their own lives!"

She stared at him a moment in utter bewilderment, and one hand went to her throat. "Why, Kentucky—why, Kentucky—I've told you more—more than—"

He said, "You trust no one, you work with no one; everyone trusts you, and you let us all ride blind."

He turned furiously to his horse and drew the latigo up with a snap that jerked a grunt out of the animal. And he set his teeth in his lip lest he utter the belief which had overwhelmed him; that Jim Humphreys had died because of the reticence of this slim girl, now standing beside him in the snow.

"But—but—" Jean Ragland's eyes looked enormous in her white face. She shivered; the untrampled snow beyond the corral poles was no whiter than her blue-veined ankles, or her knuckles as she held the robe close at her throat. Kentucky Jones loomed above her like a tree, so that even in his anger he saw that she was a pitiful and isolated figure. Yet he was seeing Jim Humphreys' face as he had seen it last, staring with unseeing eyes at the first stars; and, believing that Jim Humphreys' death could have been prevented, had Kentucky known what this girl must know, he could not forgive her. His low, uncompromising voice cut hers down.

"I've been taken for a fool and used as a fool," he said. "But I tell you this: I'm going to ride this thing out. I'm going to ride this thing clear through to the end, regardless of what the end is. You hear me? And when that's done I'm through."

Jean Ragland's face contorted tragically, exactly as if he had cut her with his quirt. She managed to say, "What are you going to do?"

"I'm going to try to cut off St. Marie at Hightman's gap. If I don't get him there, I may or may not go on. I haven't decided yet."

"You think—you think he—"

"The man who put the gun into Zack's hand is the man responsible for the death, just as surely as if he shot Zack himself—and that gun was St. Marie's. I'm going to have me that man. When I've got him, I'm going to turn and get me the man that killed Mason. And I don't care who it is, or how close to home, or if it splits the rimrock wide open when he's caught."

It had been on his tongue to tell her that she might shield whom she wanted to, lie to whom she wanted to, conceal what evidence she wanted to, but he would see the killer of Mason hung in the end; but he bit this back. Still jerky and explosive with his anger, he vaulted into the saddle.

He did not look back; but as he slammed out of the Bar Hook layout, he somehow knew that she was still standing there in the snow, as she watched him as far as he could be seen. And he wondered if it was impossible for this girl to go to pieces, like other women, and lose herself in tears.

For four miles he held steadily northward, then turned and swung a broad circle, seeking to cut a trail which would verify the supposed direction of St. Marie. He was far to the eastward when he at last cut a straightdrawn track made within the hour. He judged that the bronc rider was pushing northeast at a trot, trying—as Jones had guessed—for Hightman's gap.

The hours passed and the pony tired, and it seemed to Kentucky Jones that that ride was perhaps the longest and loneliest he had ever made in his life. He could not keep Jean Ragland out of his mind.

He remembered the strong sharp pressure of her fingers, and the touch of her cheek, and the pliant, yielded curve of her body in his arms; he could see the stir and drift of her loose hair as they had stood in the corral. This girl had become the center of all living, as a water-hole is the center of a range, or a fire the center of a camp. He had never been called upon to admit this to himself, until suddenly circumstances had asked him to accept also the certainty that she had betrayed them all.

For he could not avoid recognition that Jean's concealment of the rifle had a different meaning than had that extraordinary feat of hers at the inquest, when she had lifted the bullet that killed Mason from under the very nose of the sheriff. Her concern with the bullet had told him that she was shielding someone—if not the killer, then at least someone who might otherwise have been open to an unfair suspicion. Although, in the case of the bullet, she had availed herself of his help, he had been able to understand that he remained an outsider here, who could not expect to be told in what sort of thing he had assisted her. But in spite of Old Man Coffee he had assumed that she was at least co-operating with the interest of her father and her father's brand.

But the discovery of the hidden rifle told him at once that she was co-operating with no one; that, incredibly, she was playing an utterly lone hand—at least, he reflected bitterly, as far as the Bar Hook was concerned. For certainly no man had had anything to do with hiding a rifle in a bed. Only a woman would select a cache so close under the light.

She was acting, then, without co-operation with her father, or any other of the Bar Hook personnel. The association of this fact with the circumstances of Jean's rendezvous with her father's enemy was unavoidable.

To this unhappy situation the revelation of St. Marie's connection added a sharp immediacy. He believed now that the materials for solution had been under their hands; and were now perhaps lost to them because Jean had concealed the very signs that would have shown the trail. Because of her concealment of evidence, the Bar Hook had moved uncertainly, helpless in the dark; and the result was that a good tail boy was dead, and others would perhaps join him before it was through.

In his present state of disillusionment and the dregs of anger, he was supported by no particle of faith. He could not put her out of his mind. But she seemed to him to be like a mirage, which lures all the sanity out of a thirsty man, yet contains nothing of honesty, nor sincerity, nor faithfulness, when finally it is reached.

He pushed on steadily, counting upon the toughness of his pony. His hope that he would be able to make Hightman's Gap before St. Marie was very like a prayer. Until now the smash of six-guns had never been associated in his mind with anything more desirable than the raw, sickly smell of blood. But now, for once in his life, he had a stubborn ugly urge to throw bullets into something alive, and blow it off the face of the earth. He hoped fervently not only that he would head Joe St. Marie, but that St. Marie would fight.

Then, unexpectedly, he found that he was in country that he knew; and in three hundred yards more he recognized the trail into Hightman's gap. He approached with caution, stopped his horse and swung deep out of the saddle, not daring to set foot to the ground. Carefully, with ungloved hand, he explored a section of the trail inch by inch, until he was satisfied that no man had passed this way before him in the last twenty-four hours.

He proceeded into the gap, ice crackling under foot where the snow had been crushed by passing hoofs. A little way above the trail, in a twisted bunch of junipers, he easily found cover for a man and a horse. Kentucky Jones brushed the snow off a bit of rock, rolled himself a cigarette, and listened to the quiet.

He had time for a second cigarette, and a third, leisurely smoked, with long waits between. He presently began to think that he had misread Joe St. Marie's purpose, and that the man had taken some other way. But there was nothing to do but wait, his brain tired out with its own running, like the horse.

When at last he heard an approaching horse it startled him, it had come so close before he heard it at all. He rose cautiously, freed his gun in its leather and put his left arm around the pony's head to hold down its nose, preventing its whinny to the stranger.

Around a shoulder of rock seventy-five yards away the rider appeared; and he recognized the broad-banded black and white Mackinaw that Joe St. Marie wore.

Kentucky Jones could see now why he had been so late in hearing St. Marie's approach. St. Marie was riding not in the center of the trail but in the rougher going at the side, avoiding the ice formed by the hoof-crushed snow in the trail itself. Even then, Kentucky had a moment of admiration for the horsemanship of this man. Under Joe St. Marie's saddle the sleepest old plug always looked alertly awake, and spoiled horses, with mouths tougher to the bit than the grip of a man's hand, took on an unexpectedly decent sensitivity. It was as if something about St. Marie put into horses the fear of God.

St. Marie was now within the twenty-five yards; he was leaning a little sideways in the saddle, peering into the junipers so directly that Kentucky thought the bronc rider was looking him straight in the face. Yet St. Marie came on. Kentucky drew his gun, and waited until St. Marie was almost below him.

His voice was low as he spoke, but coming unexpectedly out of the quiet from within ten yards it lifted St. Marie like a fired gun. "Just a minute, Joe!"

The result was as if Kentucky had snapped a strip of hide from St. Marie's horse with a bull whip. The animal snorted and went forward in a great bound as St. Marie's spur struck. Joe St. Marie himself in the same instant flung himself half out of the saddle and behind his horse. He had hooked his spur on the side nearest Kentucky into the cantle of his saddle and was riding low on the far stirrup, but the effect from where Kentucky stood was as if he had disappeared.

Kentucky's horse, startled by the other's stampede, half freed itself with a great stamping of feet, throwing Kentucky off balance as he fired; but the shot caught St. Marie's horse in its third jump. As the gun spoke the horse went down on its knees, nose into the snow, as if it had hit the end of a rope.

Kentucky, gun in hand, sprang across St. Marie's downed horse to where the rider lay.

St. Marie lay on his back, his hands above his head, one of them still holding his gun, cocked but unfired. Kentucky took the gun with his left hand. He would have eased the hammer down, but St. Marie's horse, shot through the shoulders, was trying to get up, straining its neck toward its withers. Using St. Marie's gun, Kentucky put a bullet through its head.

The bronc rider was breathing heavily, but except that he had been knocked out by the throw, Kentucky could not find anything wrong with him. When he had satisfied himself that St. Marie had no other weapon of any account, he unfastened St. Marie's bed-roll from the fallen horse, kicked it out flat, and dragged St. Marie onto it. Then he sat down on the horse to await results.

CHAPTER IX

It was a quarter of an hour before St. Marie propped himself up on an elbow and looked at Kentucky with comprehension. Kentucky saw the bronc rider stealthily ascertain that he was no longer armed.

"Go ahead," Kentucky said, reading his mind, "pick up a rock. But when you do I'm going to blow your arm right off at the wrist."

St. Marie sat up and rubbed his head with both hands. Once more he stared at Kentucky Jones.

Kentucky smoked, and idly twirled his gun by the trigger guard; but he did not open conversation. He wanted St. Marie to begin that.

"I suppose," said St. Marie at last, "you're waiting for the others to come up."

"I'm waiting for you to talk."

"I got nothing to say."

"If you don't want to talk," said Kentucky, "I'm not a d—n bit interested in trying to make you. Just keep your mouth shut tight enough and long enough and you're through—and that suits me."

St. Marie studied him again. "Listen," he said at last, "listen. You guys got no call to rub me out. It'll only make it worse for you in the end—Mack ought to know that. Just as likely as not, gunning me will be the one thing that turns around and hangs all the rest of it on him, before he's through."

"You're mixed up," Kentucky grunted. "I've got no doubt you'll be rubbed out all right. But it won't be by me. You're going up the chimney by due process of law, Joe."

St. Marie seemed mystified. "You think you're having a lot of fun with me, don't you?" he said at last. "But don't you think for a minute that I don't know what you're here for, and why you were sent, just as well as you do."

St. Marie leaned forward, hitching nearer Kentucky. "Listen—"

"Stay where you are" Kentucky warned him.

"All right, I'm not trying anything funny. Listen—who's with you?"

"How many of me do you think it takes to take you where you're going?"

The quarter-blood seemed to take a flying grip on hope. "Look here," he said. "Look here! Campo Ragland's got me wrong. I know you don't know me very good—but Nombre de Dios, Kentucky—I swear before God I'm telling you the truth. I've shot square with Campo all along, and all the way. He's got no more reason to send you to get me, than as if he sent me to get you. Listen, Kentucky—if I hadn't meant to shoot square with Campo Ragland, do you think I'd have stayed at the Bar Hook as long as I did? And I'd have stuck with him right on through it, too; I'd have backed his play any way he wanted. Yes, by G—d, I will yet! Campo Ragland had no call on earth to be afraid of me."

"Afraid of you?" Kentucky repeated.

"That's what's gone haywire with the Godforsaken outfit," St. Marie said. "There was a fanatic intensity in the stare which he held upon Kentucky's face. 'That man has gone to pieces,' he insisted. 'That man isn't right any more. I wouldn't have left the Bar Hook at all, only pretty soon I seen that Campo was getting scared, and scared of me. That man has gone to pieces,' St. Marie reiterated, Kentucky perceived that the man believed himself to be talking for his life. 'Nobody that knows anything about this is safe in the same country with him any more. Maybe you're not safe yourself, for all you know. But look, Kentucky, I swear to G—d Ragland had no call to worry about me, even if I stayed in the rimrock; and he has a thousand times less reason to put me out of business, and head me off from what I'm trying to do now—or was trying to do, when you shot my horse out from under me.'

"And just what is this you're trying to do?"

"All I want is to get out of this country. Where I made my mistake, I was saving the d—n horse. I should have pushed through this here gap two hours ago. All I want of this business is out."

"I expect you do," said Kentucky. "But you're too deep in this business, Joe."

"What difference does it make how deep I'm in, so long as I can keep my mouth shut, and disappear out of here? I—"

"A lot of difference," Kentucky told him. "I d—n well mean to take you back."

St. Marie appeared to be dumbfounded. "Take me back?" he repeated.

"What did you think I was going to do, murder you?"

St. Marie stared at him again. "Yeh," he said at last.

Kentucky rolled a cigarette and considered. "We don't seem to see eye to eye in this, St. Marie," he said. "In the first place, I wasn't sent after you by Campo Ragland. Campo doesn't even know you've left the Bar Hook—so far as I know. I've come out here to take you back on my own hook. I guess I'll ask you a couple of questions for a change."

St. Marie shivered, but appeared to take heart. "And what if I give you the wrong answers?" he said, his tone altering subtly.

"Then," said Kentucky, "I suppose you'll go right along and hang. Don't let me stop you."

"Hang? For what?"

"For the killing of Zack Sanders."

For an instant St. Marie did not move. Then he drew a deep breath and let it go again. "I sure as h—l don't know what you're talking about," he said. "Give me a cigarette."

Kentucky tossed him the makings. "I'm going to describe a gun to you," he said. "The gun I'm thinking of is a blue-barreled .45. There's a little piece split off the wooden part of the grip. The serial number looks like it begins with a 3, but it's really an 8." Kentucky told him the rest of the number.

"That's my gun," said St. Marie. "Or anyway, it was my gun once."

"I know that," said Kentucky. "I found that out from the gunsmith in Waterman. Now I want to know exactly when and why you shoved that gun into the hand of Zack Sanders."

"I never did give it to Zack Sanders," said St. Marie. "Kentucky Jones lost patience. 'Get yourself ready to walk,' he said. 'I got no time to listen to you lie!'

"Tell me just this one thing," St. Marie pleaded. "Where did you get track of this gun?"

"The gun we're talking about," Kentucky said, "was in Zack Sanders' hand as he lay dead near the Bar Hook pump house."

The bronc rider swore softly. "If you're trying to hook me into something by way of that," he said, "you're up the wrong coulee. I lost that gun in a crap game in Waterman four months back. I can name you every man that was in that crap game, and they'll swear to what I say; and Ted Balyor will tell you that gun is the one he won from me that night."

"Ted Balyor in a crap game with a bunch of saddle bums? That's a hot one!"

"He was drunk, and he just stopped for one pass as he went through," Joe St. Marie insisted. "The lucky stiff got my gun on that one pass."

"If that's so," Kentucky said, "that can be checked up later. For the time being I'm taking you back."

"If you aim to take me back, I can just as well kiss myself good-by right now. I ain't got a chinaman's chance of living to see trial—and well you know it! I thought you swung with Campo Ragland. I even thought you were thick with Ragland's girl. You sure had me fooled."

Girl Scouts Take
Palo Duro Outing

By BEATRICE MILLER

A group of 10 Girl Scouts, Members of Troop 1, Wheeler, and Scoutmistresses Meek and Merriman left Monday morning, July 15, for a four-day encampment in Palo Duro park. We arrived at the entrance of the canyon at 2 o'clock after having been rained on from Amarillo. We had planned to use a large tent and camp out, but rain clouds were still scudding across the sky in a threatening manner, therefore we rented a cabin for the first night, at least. However, the cabin was so convenient we remained in it the other two nights, also.

Cabin No. 6 in Cow camp is constructed of native rock, with a roof of cedar slabs, supported by cedar logs. The cabin was conveniently built against a bluff, thus making the roof an easily accessible place to sleep.

After we had unloaded our equipment we divided into groups and went hiking. One group followed a trail up the side of the canyon and found a temporary camp, probably a CCC camp, among some trees.

Monday evening we held a twilight vesper service and followed this custom the other evenings, also. Rain clouds that had induced us to take a cabin, had cleared away by the time the moon rose and we were able to view the eclipse to good advantage.

Tuesday, Miss Merriman and a number of girls drove to Canyon. Coming back they arranged to have our water hauled to us by a CCC truck. Tuesday afternoon, Lee Neeley, archeologist for the museum located at the entrance to the canyon, acted as guide and showed the Scouts some supposedly Indian signs—the only ones in the canyon and the origin of which is unknown. Neeley pointed out a rock with deeply rounded holes in it, used by the Indians in grinding corn. He also enticed a rattlesnake out of its hole, killed and skinned it.

Wednesday morning, as had been our custom, we took a swim, followed by another in the afternoon. The rest of the day was spent in hiking. That evening, at vesper service, Mrs. C. J. Meek, who has been Scout leader for nearly three years, offered her resignation. All the Scouts deeply regret losing her, but are glad to have had her splendid services.

Thursday morning was spent making preparations to break camp. H. M. Wiley sent his truck in charge of Bill Coleman to bring us home. We packed and were ready to leave the park at noon. We stopped in Amarillo and shopped awhile, reaching Wheeler at 7 o'clock that evening, a badly sunburned bunch with the usual "Gee, but it's good to get home."

Those making the trip were Mrs. C. J. Meek, Misses Florence Merriman, Martha Alice Wiley, Bonnie Adams, Orveta Puett, Beatrice Miller, Louise Craig, Lavell Jaco, Ferrol Ficke, Naomi Johnson, Annie Ruth Denham, Irene Hunt and Dorothy Tolliver of Wheeler, and two nieces of Mrs. Meek from Amarillo.

4-H BOYS AND GIRLS
ENCAMPMENT FRIDAY

states. Briscoe girls gave a play, "4-H Pioneers," written by their sponsor, Mrs. Queenie Vise. Plainview boys and girls gave a stunt called "John Smith." Mobeetie girls gave the "Development of 4-H Club Work in Wheeler County." Lela boys demonstrated the benefit of the county agent by saving a cow which was at the point of death.

Judges of the stunts were Miss Sadie Lee Oliver, Mrs. Lula Mae Farley and Judge W. O. Puett. They complimented all stunts highly.

When the stunts were over the group again assembled east of the house, and played until 11:30. Then the whistle blew for everyone to get their beds ready and get in them. The boys slept on the west side of the house and the girls slept on the east side of the house. At 12:00 another whistle blew and silence and solitude reigned in the camp.

At 4:30 a. m. the party arose, and the boys from each club got wood to cook breakfast for their club. Then, with the assistance of the girls, breakfast was cooked.

At 6:45 the group was called to order, and engaged in repeating the motto and pledge and singing. Directions were given to the Short Course delegates, and then achievement reports were given by each individual club. Miss Sadie Lee Oliver, county demonstrator from Hemphill county, gave a very interesting and educational talk on wild flowers. H. M. Cantrell, county agent from Hemphill county, said many complimentary things in regard to the work of Wheeler county boys and girls and their agent and demonstrator. The group was honored by having the grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. John Cornelius sing and read.

Then came the part that made the boys and girls happier than anything else. Miss Oliver and Mr. Cantrell and especially Mr. Cornelius complimented them on the extraordinary order they had maintained. "In order to show you how I appreciate your conduct, I am going to give each of you a nice peach," stated Mr. Cornelius. Nothing could have made the band feel better.

A tired but happy squad adjourned at 8:30 a. m., July 20.

Among non-club members present were Mrs. Lula Mae Farley, Miss Sadie Lee Oliver and little niece, Elizabeth Ann of Belton, and H. M. Cantrell. Ex-clubsters present were Leila Oneal, Neva Flowers, Susie Sims, Exie Creekmore, Elizabeth Joss, Iris Tubbs and Lynn Gott.
