Long Urges Legislation To Stop Cotton Planting

Huey Long says Louisiana is going to pass a law preventing the planting of cotton next year. Usually what Huey says goes down there.

A farmer in The Herald office today said he believed the plan recommended by the New Orleans cotton conference. He was the proper one to remedy the situation.

He said that "you can't get a south-wide program of voluntary acreage reduction to work. If the states would pass a law prohibiting the planting of cotton one year the market would be revived."

Such a program could be put through in all cotton states. The fact would be far better than any result of the farm board's "plot-it-up" suggestion, which was suggested by this newspaper two weeks ago. At that time our legislature had just killed the Cunningham acreage reduction bill, and the government report had served to knock the price further toward zero.

And the waste of labor necessary to plow up a third of the crop also must be taken into consideration.

If the Long suggestion should go through the south would emerge from the cotton holiday a far happier, more prosperous region. Families that for generations have been one-crop tenants would be freed from the servitude of the system.

Landlords, especially in the black land belts, who now either refuse or hesitate to allow tenants enough space to plant a little garden and have other things that would reduce the grocery bill and raise the standard of living, would have to let them plant more diversified crops.

Many a family that today bow under a burden of back loans and overdue food and clothing bills would be surprised to find that there are a lot of other things worth money, or its equivalent, besides cotton.

Tens of thousands of children would, for one year at least, have the opportunity of attending school a full season, without the annual lapse for cotton picking. Many a tired mother, who in past seasons has labored from sun to sun and down the rows, with the baby waiting on a pallet at the fence row, would have succored from physical suffering.

See where Alvin Owsley says he's going to make a speech at Tyler this week protesting martial law whether General Wolters likes it or not.

Lil Alvin would say something like that. Being an ex-colonel in the army and an ex-national commander of the American Legion won't make him immune to arrest. Might be a good idea if he did try the stunt, so he could be taught a lesson. At making pretty words Alvin is a cutter. At getting votes he hasn't been so hot. At breaking out of the guard house he might not shine either.

Magnolia posted 68 cents for East Texas crude. If the boys down there hadn't been so all-fired foolish they could have been getting that much a long time ago. They had to have their boom. It made 'em as all poor as the farmers down there were land poor.

Ten cents per barrel more for Howard and Glasscock county oil means about $3,600 more daily income from the field. The many local people holding royalties will be materially benefited. Thirty-five cents is an awful price but the advance of a dime at least indicates the trend is upward.

Award Fund Gets New Donation

R. A. Eubank added his name to the list of donors to the award fund being raised by the Junior Chamber of Commerce through The Herald, to be presented to the family of Henry F. Howie, local policeman who recently was slain while on duty.

Those wishing to give something to this fund should mail or bring their checks or cash to The Herald. Names of all donors will be published, although the amounts they give will not be. The Junior Chamber soon will announce a closing date for receiving gifts and the amount raised will be presented by that organization to Mrs. Howie.

Enforcement Of Truck Law Is Obstructed

AUSTIN, Aug. 22 (UP)—Enforcement of the state's new law regulating motor trucks operating on the highways, supposedly have begun at midnight Friday, will be difficult and slow because of several legal obstructions set up by carriers. L. G. Phares, chief of the state highway patrol, said today.

As Phares prepared instructions for his patrolmen's use in enforcing the law, he said new protest lodged in federal court at Houston may suspend enforcement for some time. One protest is against a provision of the dimension fixing bill which forbids hauling of more than 13 packages the size and weight of uncompressible bales of cotton.

Patrol Chief Mentions Suits Filed By Motor Carriers

Phares has already been enjoined against enforcement of a separate-law dealing with hauling of cotton, and temporarily enjoined from enforcing a provision of the law effective tonight which limits length of trucks to 55 feet and combinations to 45 feet.

He said he is considering the injunction to protect only trucks of the Sproule Motor Freight Line, to whom it was granted, and that the length provisions will be enforced against other truck operators.

Lindberghs Again Down

NEMURO, Japan, Aug. 22 (UP)—Heavy fog forced the Lindberghs to land in a lagoon near the village of Shana on the mountainous island of Huru in the Kuriles. They started from Shimousira island to Nemuro at 2:10 p. m. 11 1/2 a. m. central standard time, but encountered fog. They accepted advice radiated from the Ochikichi station, to land at Shana. The colonel had spent the earlier part of the day working on the plane's motor. He declined a railroad offer of help from Japanese mechanics.

Fog Stops Flight After Colonel Repairs Ship's Motor

He said his office staff is still grading-examination papers of 1,400 applicants for the 50 new policemen. The new patrolmen have been selected, they must come to Austin for a seven-week training school at Camp Mabey before they can be placed on the highways for duty.

Whisenhunt Bond Fixed

Bond for Louis Whisenhunt, 22, hold in connection with the death of Policeman H. F. Howie was set at $10,000, following a hearing on his application for writ of habeas corpus. Whisenhunt had waived examining trial and was held without bond by the justice court. Bond was made returnable to the November term of district court.

Habeas Corpus Writ Granted: $10,000 Bail Required

Whisenhunt had not made bail late Saturday afternoon. L. M. Whisenhunt, father of the alleged youthful slayer, left for his home in Odessa following the hearing. Attorneys Sullivan and Sullivan of Big Spring and Beale and Beale of Sweetwater have been engaged to defend Whisenhunt. G. A. Woodward, Thomas J. Coffey and C. F. Rogers have been engaged as special prosecutors to assist District Attorney Mahon and County Attorney Little.

Gold Flow Into U. S. Continues

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23 (UP)—Banking devices have failed to check the surging flow of gold to the United States, it was evident today when stocks in this country mounted to a new record for all time, close to five billion dollars. Gold stocks of $1,983,000,000 (billions), as reported today by the Federal Reserve board, represent nearly half the world's supply. Only half the world's supply, $1,000,000,000 (billions), France has $2,000,000,000 (billions). Some economists say gold will begin to move outward until other countries are able to sell gold here, again on a large scale, if there can not be a redistribution until they can exchange goods for the gold.

Marie Dressler And Polly Moran Star In "Politics"

Woman Runs For Mayor In Typical Town

A complete city hall and an entire town street, one of the largest single exterior buildings constructed since the coming of the talkies, were erected to usher Marie Dressler into film stardom.

This is the big city hall set where the torchlight processions, rallies and other demonstrations are staged by Marie in "Politics," her new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture which will come to the Ritz Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday. It is her first appearance since recently being promoted to full stardom.

Blonde Sophisticate Of Office Wife's Lair Does Business Bride

Dorothy Mackaill, whose dazzling blonde beauty and sophisticated manner so dominated "Office Wife" is to be seen at the Queen Theatre Monday in "Party Husband," the first National comedy drama, an ultra-modern bride who believes with her husband that marriage should be only an experiment.

Peterson, the versatile young actress who was so moving as the mother in "Milk and Honey"—as the woman who, while not so modern as the bride and groom, thinks it just too bad to have a good-looking young husband running around loose, without any apparent regard for his wife.

Joe Donahue, brother of the late Jack Donahue of "Sunny" fame, does amusing work as the inebricated best man. Helen Ware is the bride's mother, who keeps an eye on proceedings and gets her innings before the last fade-out.

Three Songs Hits In Show 'Hot Heiress'

"The Hot Heiress" latest First National production to be at the Queen Theatre Wednesday and Thursday is one of the most hilarious and human comedies of the year. The story is an original by Herbert Fields, Rodgers and Hart, famous Broadway song-hit writers.

The red-hot rivet sets her rag and the roughneck hooch it across the high girder to her window and swings in. Then and there the belle of Park Avenue decides that her one object in life is to capture the hunky youth, even if it means changing pate de fois gras to corn beef and cabbage. How she does it, is the story. Come and laugh at 'em and with 'em.

American tourists spent almost a billion dollars abroad in 1930, according to Dr. Julius Klein of the Department of Commerce.

Yield Off Three Acres Of Wheat Needed to Buy One Pair Of Cowboy Boots, Will Says

By WILL ROGERS Well all I know is just what I read in the papers. Let me state you all some figures: 2 bushels of wheat buys 1 bushel of Potatoes. It takes 2 bu. of Potatoes to buy one bu. of Potatoes and mind you potatoes ain't high either, they are only worth about 80 cents a bushel.

All we got to do is see two more Pictures, and we can do it as good as the Gangsters. Bob-Custer Thrills In Role of Reformed Desperado At Queen

A story that fairly sizzles with action, a brilliant cast, splendid photography, scenery of the rarest beauty, and daredevil heroism—these are some of the features of Syndicate's new all-talking western drama, "The Law of the Rio Grande," starring Bob Custer, coming to the Queen Theatre next Friday, to remain there for two days.

Ten Camera Angles Shown In One Shot

Ten different camera angles in one continuous shot was the difficult photographic feat accomplished by Olyver Marsh, chief cinematographer on "The Man in Possession," Robert Montgomery's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle which will open Tuesday at the Ritz Theatre.

In order to keep Miss Greenwood in constant focus it was necessary for a special camera platform on wheels to travel in four different half-circles in the very small room. On the camera platform were perched Marsh and an assistant. When difficult sharp turns were necessary, Marsh swung the camera around by means of an extension handle, his assistant changing focus almost constantly by a dial system marked with the various "moves" charted out in an hour of rehearsal with Director Sam Wood.

'Huckleberry Finn' Opening Today At Ritz

Crowdups, as well as children, will be fascinated by the simplicity and genuine entertainment found in Mark Twain's immortal story, "Huckleberry Finn," coming to the Ritz for two days, starting today.

The "gang" of clever junior stars who made Twain's "Tom Sawyer" a box office success are back to give an excellent presentation of "Huckleberry Finn." Mitzi Green as Becky Thatcher, Jackie Coogan as the idealistic, but nevertheless shrewd Tom Sawyer, Junior Durkin as the outcast, big hearted "Huck," and Jackie Seal as cry-baby Sidney Sawyer.

Aunt Polly with her exacting manners lives again to make life miserable for the devilish Tom and Huck—Nigger Jim, the superstitious old dorky keeps the boys on their nerve's edge—and Pap, Huck's drunkard father, spices the story. It is interesting from beginning to finish.

In Informal Reception At Presbyterian Church, Many Pay High Tributes of Praise to Minister and His Wife Who Are Leaving for Longview

A large crowd, appreciative speeches, and attractive musical numbers featured the hospitable but sad farewell reception held Friday evening at the Presbyterian church for Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Owen, who are moving to Longview in the near future.

Members of the church and pastor-friends from other churches made many talks concerning the unselfishness and the spirit of cooperation which have characterized Mr. Owen's part in all the community activities.

The short informal program was opened with a prayer by Rev. D. R. Lindley, pastor of the Christian Church. This was followed by a talk by Mrs. W. C. Barnett, president of the Auxiliary, expressing the sincere regrets of the membership in losing their minister.

Mr. John Thorn, of the Coahoma Presbyterian Church, talked on what Mr. Owen had meant to the El Paso Presbytery. Nancy Dawes played two solos, Chopin's "Valse" and "Mighty Lak a Rose." E. A. Kelley then talked on what Mr. Owen had meant to the church and the community.

Mrs. J. B. Litter spoke of the good work Mrs. Owen had done in the Sunday School, the Auxiliary and the church as a whole. Other ministers, including the Rev. W. H. Martin, S. E. Hughes and Mr. Lindley, also gave short talks in appreciation of Mr. Owen's work.

Howard County Honor Roll

One of a series of sketches on careers of former residents of Big Spring and Howard county who have gained success in their chosen professions.

This is the story of a little girl whose mother never had to tell her to practice. When she grew up to be a big girl, she played over the radio. Elsie Willis refuses to be called a child prodigy however. She began her music lessons in London, England, at nine; one may suspect her of sitting at the piano as soon as she could spread her little fingers over the keys, but the details Elsie keeps a deep, dark secret.

When she moved to America with her mother, Mrs. Aaron Taylor, and her brother, Cyril, she took lessons from Mrs. M. H. Brasher, wife of the school superintendent. Then she went to T.C.U. to study. Little did she dream that in a very few years she would be asked to her alma mater as assistant professor of piano and theory. That happened, however; and for the last four years she has been teaching in T.C.U.

That would have been goal enough for many music-lovers but not for Elsie. Playing over WBAP and during the woman's hour at KTAT was merely incidental. In between times she was studying.

Her teachers included some of the best instructors in music in the United States, such as Edwin Hughes, in New York City, Olga Steeb in Los Angeles and that famous eccentric seventy-year-old Finnish teacher in Dallas, Harold Von Mickwitz who is a friend of

The guests were, Mrs. Lee Hansen, of Lamesa, Nebbett Brown, of Ft. Worth, Victor Behrens, of Abilene, R. C. Strain, Albert Fisher and Miss Drusba Torbett, of Marlin.

The members were Mrs. J. B. Young, V. Van Gleason, Homer McNew, J. D. Biles, Shins Phillips and W. W. Inkman.

Mrs. Young will be the next hostess.

Paderewski and who is of such artistic temperament that he does not take you for a pupil unless he is sure of your ability and then doesn't give you lessons for any price unless he feels like it.

Elsie is not returning to T.C.U. this fall. She is leaving in October for New York City to study for a year. She plans to enter the Institute of Musical Arts, a branch of the Juilliard School of Music of which the well-known novelist and music-lover, John Erskine, is the head.

So it will be another year at least before her Big Spring friends can tune in on their radios and listen to her playing and appreciate her remarkable technique.

Elsie's friends say that she can take a simple hymn and give it life and individuality and a charm its notes would never appear to possess. She says herself that she can not remember the time when she did not enjoy picking up a strange piece of music and discovering what was in it.

White Shasta daisies and a profusion of ferns and foliage provided the color accents of the rooms. Mrs. Kuykendall made high score and was presented with a dainty hand-made pillow. Mrs. Orenbaum was consoled for making low score with a lovely bridge set.

The guests were Mrs. Wm. F. Cushing, Victor Martin, E. O. Ellington, J. E. Kuykendall, E. M. La Boff, J. H. Hodges, W. G. Orenbaum, Emil Fahrnkamp, C. S. Blomsheld, E. H. Happel and W. M. Paul.

HOW'S your HEALTH

Edited by Dr. Eugene Galanos, Academy of Medicine

It has been estimated that there are from 2000 to 3000 cases of bites by poisonous snakes in the United States every year, and more than 100 deaths yearly result therefrom.

Those who are obliged to go about in regions where poisonous snakes abide should pay attention to the advice of Dr. Dittmars, curator of reptiles at the New York City zoological park.

"My advice," says Dr. Dittmars, "to the boy scout, camper and hiker is to wear stout shoes reaching at least to a point above the ankle, or heavy leggings. Never pitch camp near a ledge or swampy ground.

"If bitten, keep cool. Before going into a snake-infested area, a camper should provide himself with a rubber ligature, sharp scalpels or a razor, antiseptic gauze, and permanganate of potassium crystals, also tubes of the antitoxin, if available.

"Promptitude—everything depends on it. Apply the ligature above the bite. Enlarge the punctures by cutting into them, make two cuts over each puncture, the cuts crossing each other.

"It is not dangerous to suck the blood away, provided there are no cuts or fresh abrasions in the mouth or on the lips. Keep the wound open and draining, well saturated with the antiseptic solution.

"Most important of all, perhaps, if there is no serum available where you are, get in touch with the nearest point where it can be found.

One of the marvels of modern medicine is the snake venom antitoxin, which may be bought through practically every drug store in the country and which when properly administered confers immunity against the poisonous bites of native snakes.

This snake venom antitoxin comes in a small packet, ready for immediate use. It is potent against a variety of snake poisons, hence it can and should be carried by those liable to be bitten by venomous snakes.

Barring Salacious Books

AN OFFICIAL in a large publishing house recently called on his fellow publishers to keep salacious books off the market. Insisting that he opposed any form of censorship, he urged the publishers to "clean up" of their own accord, and suggested that if any publisher fails to do so a delegation from the National Association of Book Publishers and the American Book Sellers be sent to put pressure on him.

A publisher remaining adamant in the face of such an appeal would then be reported, by those two organizations, to the proper authorities.

All of this would probably keep the wrong kind of book off the market; nevertheless, it sounds remarkably like substituting an unofficial kind of censorship for the official kind, and it is a bit hard to see how it would improve matters much. The number of harmful books on sale today is extremely small, and every city has laws under which it may deal with them. Is any further action really needed?

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

Monday—Ready For School

WASHINGTON—On the top floor of one of Washington's tallest office buildings sits a 75-year-old southern gentleman with a little white whisker beard, a white hair and a white mustache. His name is Joseph E. Ransdell, of Louisiana. For 18 years a member of congress, he is now a representative of a district in Louisiana. Last year he lost his senate seat to the youthful Huey Long, but he said out of politics into what seems like a happy ending for a long career.

Unlike some voted out of office, Ransdell did not retire to his plantation on the banks of the Mississippi to spend his remaining years in bitterness and obscurity.

He chose to stay on in Washington, not as a "lame duck" appointee or a high powered lobbyist, but to promote a cause which for years has been his hobby.

His title is executive director of the conference board of the National Institute of Health.

HEALTH INSTITUTE SPONSOR

It was Ransdell's bill, passed in the closing days of the last congress, which created the National Institute of Health. And at 75, his job is to promote the idea and to interest philanthropists and congress and the whole nation.

The aim of the institute is to study the cause, prevention and cure of every disease of man. The institute is the old hygienic laboratory of the U. S. Public Health Service, with a present research staff of 150 persons, financed both federally and privately.

Ransdell talks with the enthusiasm of an excited boy about the project. He calls it his life's work and is emphatic in his declaration that he is through with politics forever.

He sees the day when Washington will become the world's greatest health and medical research center and will command of the surgeon general a great army of experts will labor for human happiness, longevity and comfort.

In his last senate speech, Ransdell urged congress to be generous and described the institute as "the greatest altruistic institution the world has ever known."

CATTLE TICK ENEMY

He hopes to live long enough to see the institute endowed to the extent of $50,000,000. While he makes no solicitations for funds, he does get the word-out in every possible way that here is the worst of public health.

Public health has been his hobby for the last 25 years.

His first activity along this line was to introduce a bill providing for eradication of the cattle tick. In 1917 he sponsored a bill which led to the establishment of the national leprosy center at Carville. He worked five years to effect

MOON OF DELIGHT by Margaret Bell Houston

Chapter 12

KIRK RETURNS A CALL

LOOKS like you didn't find out much," Divitt remarked, donning the modernistic pyjamas Molly had selected for him. "Not very communicative, I take it."

Molly was in bed, her small face looking weary on the great pillow. "No, she don't talk much," said Molly.

"She ought to know the geography of the house. Naturally, she's not expected to discover the location of the safe on one visit—but we ought to get something out of her. All we know is, they've asked her back. That's the biggest part of the business, but it's not all."

"Divitt, beautiful, what you want to do this thing for? What you want to go in with Umberto—? He'll get us all in trouble yet."

"Oh, no, he won't. Umberto's my right hand. How much reforming you want to do in one year? I've got rid of the hooch, haven't I?"

"Divitt, you know Umberto's funnier than any man I've ever met—stricter now—you say so yourself—and if you're mixed up with Umberto, ain't and abetting him—you'll go when he goes—and what's goner become of me and the baby?"

"So that's why you aren't more enterprising in pumping Juanita? You ought to know that people expect a family are keener than ever to feather their nest. You didn't need to look at things this way."

"I've always hated your connection with Umberto. Oh, Divitt, I'm so afraid—"

"You're so afraid you're holding out on me where Juanita's concerned?"

"Think what, you please, Divitt. You know the girl don't talk much."

"I know well enough I can get on without her," Divitt answered. He got into his bath robe. Molly was looking at him hopefully.

"You mean you don't intend to use Juanita?"

"Use her, of course. But differently."

"Divitt, we've got money. Let's go somewhere and start all over in something that's not dangerous."

"Many things are dangerous," remarked Divitt. "Aviators take chances. So do miners and soldiers. A man must follow his bent. That's the first thing women have to learn." He went over and patted Molly's shoulder. "Go to sleep, kid. You're not going to have any more to do with this."

"I suppose you don't trust me," The thought wrung her heart.

"It's not that. Pick out the clothes for Juanita, and look after her."

passage of his bill creating the National Institute of Health.

far as getting into trouble is concerned, I won't. When it comes I'll be gone—you with me."

He opened a door beside the armoire, went up a narrow stair to his office. There he set down a big disordered desk and wrote:

"Marquesa Carlota de Luz y Cabrera
"8 Michel Street
"New Orleans
"Dear Marquesa:
"Will you kindly call at my office tomorrow—Thursday—night at nine o'clock?"

He opened the other door and dropped the letter down the mail chute of the Tison hotel.

Kirk Sanard telephoned the Tison on Thursday afternoon, desiring to call on Senorita Flores. In touch presently with an agreeable female voice—not the senorita's—she was told that Senorita Flores would see him that evening from eight till nine o'clock. She would be in the parlor.

It was on an errand for Nelly that Kirk was calling, or he allowed himself to call it that. Mrs. Belaise told him that Senorita Flores looked like Delphine, his mother, and when Kirk confessed to the feeling of having seen the senorita before, she added, "That is it." Kirk could not see Juanita's resemblance to his mother's pictures, yet he would not dispute Nelly's mind of a thing that seemed to fill in with such comfort. She was prattling about the senorita's refusal to choose something from the casket, had in the end chosen something herself, a ring that had been Delphine's bidding Kirk give it to Senorita Flores. "Not as a reward, tell her. Just to make me happy."

Kirk was glad of the mission. From eight to nine. Rather limited, that. Yet he could not expect to find the senorita without engagements.

Night was settling when Kirk arrived. The Tison parlor was filled with dusk and a soft blossoming of lights. The tables were deserted except for a man and woman drinking from ice-filled glasses, close to the verandah. Ah, yonder! Yonder at a far table. Kirk could not mistake the dim figure. He crossed the parlor quickly.

"Senorita!" . . . I thought you had forgotten.

She smiled, all in white, diaphanous stuff that fell away from her arms and about her feet. Kirk saw her parted hair, drawn over her ears, knotted on her neck.

"I never forget," she answered. Kirk sat down on the bench beside her.

He looked at her, white and lovely, wondered about her. Why was she here? Who was with her? What eyes were watching from the upper windows, even now? She had called alone yesterday—yet one sensed—particularly here—that she was invisibly guarded. He would meet her protectors, no doubt, before the evening was over.

"Do you like New Orleans, Senorita?"

Very much. A little warm, but she was accustomed to that.

"Is it so warm in Spain?"

She turned slightly from him.

"There is the music!" he said as the Mexican band began again. The dusk was full of La Paloma. The couple near the verandah began dancing.

Kirk thought suddenly of a white bird an old sailor had brought him once. "It has a song," the sailor said, "a song that will break your heart." But the bird did not sing. Surely no song could have been more heart-breaking than his loneliness, day after day. Kirk had wanted to set it free, but Nelly had said that it would only starve. Yet it had got free. Odd he should think of this now.

The music had stopped. The couple who had danced went out. Then almost at once the music began again. Over the Waves. The senorita's eyes met Kirk's. They rose and began to dance. She was fragrant and soft in his arms, moving lightly, at one with the music, at one with him. . . .

"You dance beautifully, Senorita. . . . and you speak English with such little accent—you just sort of kiss the words, I mean."

"I had an American tutor."

"And he taught you to kiss the words?"

She laughed. He had never heard her laugh before. A ripple of bright sound.

"If you could have known him! He didn't know the meaning of kisses."

The music had stopped. They went back to the bench.

"Senorita, I have something for you."

Kirk seemed to know her better now that they had danced together. "And you must take it, or else."

"Or else what?" softly.

"Or else some one will be very sad. My grandmother has sent you this ring. It belonged to my mother. My grandmother thinks you look like her. She died when she was twenty-one—when I was born."

Juanita was looking at him with dark soft eyes. Kirk felt that she was seeking words in which to refuse him. Instead she held out her ringless left hand. Slowly Kirk slipped the ring over her third finger. She drew the hand back, looking at the single white pearl in the moonlight. They were both silent as if a sacrament had been performed.

"Tell her I shall keep it always," Juanita said softly.

"I will tell her. She wanted you to remember her. But I will tell her that you don't forget."

The music had begun again and Kirk heard the old cathedral-clock striking nine. He wondered if she would let him stay longer—if she would dance with him again.

And as the last clockstroke died, a woman, entering the Tison lobby, went up the stair and knocked on the door of Divitt's office. She was dressed in black, with scarlet slippers and a mantilla about her hair. (Copyright, Dodd, Mead & Co.)

SOON NO LAND UNKNOWN

NEW YORK (INS)—Land unknown to explorers will be a thing of the past in the next decade, according to Professor Alfred R. Radcliffe-Brown of the department of anthropology, University of Sydney, Australia, who is teaching in the Columbia University summer session. The author of "The Adaman Islanders," and editor of the quarterly journal "Oceania," holds that there are just a few small areas remaining in which the natives have never seen a white man, but that airplane exploration is rapidly changing this situation.

Redistricting Fails

Houston Post-Dispatch.

IN THE HURRY and bustle which marked the closing hours of the special legislative session, efforts to bring an acceptable congressional redistricting bill out of a free conference committee failed. This means that the three additional congressmen gained by Texas under the 1930 census must be elected at large.

It is not surprising that our hurried legislators were unable to agree on the distribution of the additional congressional seats. Large population gains have been recorded in South Texas, East Texas and West Texas. Both senate and house bills included an additional congressman for the Panhandle and for the coastal section. The differences arose over disposition of the remaining seat, the house bill placing the district in West Texas and the senate bill in East Texas. The committee refused to yield so redistricting died with the close of the special session.

The second failure of the legislature to pass a redistricting bill probably was due to the fact that any rearrangement of existing districts was certain to meet with strong local opposition in counties affected by the changes. Counties where strong rivalry exists naturally are opposed to being placed in the same congressional district, thus becoming in a sense political enemies.

The local opposition appeared at the surface of the legislative discussion, effectively preventing an agreement.

Now Texas faces the prospect of a spirited state-wide campaign. All candidates with congressional ambitions will be able to enter the sweepstakes, with the three entries going to Washington.

PYROIL Heat-proof Liquefied Graphite for Airplanes, Automobiles and All Internal Combustion Motors 25 MILES WITHOUT OIL IN OFFICIAL TEST Motor "troubles" are due to wear, and wear occurs when oil films, thinned and broken by disintegration and firing chamber heat, break down and burn up, leaving naked, unprotected metal surfaces to rub together and wear out. PYROIL lubricated motors cannot be injured by broken oil films. In OFFICIAL TESTS conducted by representative engineers from Boston to Chicago, over 300 cars of all makes which had been lubricated with PYROIL were run 20 to 25 miles after every drop of oil had been drained from the base, and in every case were found in perfect condition with no sign of heating or wear, proving conclusively that even though ordinary lubricating oil should fall entirely over a considerable period NO DAMAGE WILL RESULT where PYROIL is used. PYROIL POSITIVELY Stops wear—stops noise—cuts repair bills—free valves—seals rings—ends carbon. Doubles miles per gallon crank-case oil. Reduces gas consumption up to 20 to 40%. Withstands heat up to 7500 degrees F.—(sufficient to melt iron). Cannot freeze, cannot wash off bearings. Passes any filter—even chamomile skin. Gives instant starting and safe lubrication at 40 degrees below zero. Enjoys patent protection. Is guaranteed 100% satisfaction or money back. Actual results in connection with the use of PYROIL in airplane motors while in flight are so amazing that every motor owner should be forcibly impressed. Airplane motors in operation are subjected to tremendous strain, yet PYROIL, under test in a standard transport plane at Park's Airport, E. St. Louis, Ill., proved itself superior on all claims made for it: saved 5 gallons of gasoline per hour and doubled the air hours of the motor. (450 hours!) PYROIL is also under official test by the U. S. Army and Navy Aero and motorized transport services, and by other governmental departments and leading aero and automotive manufacturers. PYROIL has been adopted by many leading distributors of Packard, Chrysler, Nash, Willys-Overland, Chevrolet and others. Words alone cannot begin to tell the amazing story of what PYROIL actually accomplishes—but performance does! Here is further proof that PYROIL is the greatest scientific achievement since the inception of the internal combustion motor: In a recent endurance test, held at Tallahassee, Fla., O. E. Essison and L. F. Walker smashed the world's motor endurance record by driving a Elyrade Outboard Motor Boat for 682 hours—27 1/2 days—without stopping, winning a prize of $1500. HERE'S PROOF— The Pyroil Company positively guarantees that all claims and statements made in any correspondence or advertising are backed by 100% proof on file in the home office, La Crosse, Wis. J. M. Fraser, Manhattan, Kansas, recently conditioned a 1925 Essex Automobile with PYROIL, then drained all oil from the crankcase and actually drove this car 206.3 miles with no lubricating oil whatever. At the end of this remarkable run, the motor was taken down and showed, with the exception of one connecting rod, absolutely no wear nor harmful results. Official tests of PYROIL are in progress at leading technical institutes, universities and manufacturers throughout the country. Leading fleet owners of Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Los Angeles and other centers are adopting PYROIL. Every test made by users proves 100% successful. The majority say PYROIL does more than we claim. Russel Boardman, famous trans-Atlantic flier who made non-stop flight from New York to Turkey, used PYROIL in both oil and gasoline after exciting preliminary tests before start. Once a user always a user. Just as well commence using PYROIL now, you eventually will. Oil and gasoline dealers, automobile dealers, garage men, fleet truck owners and gin men, investigate this wonderful super-lubricant and anti-friction product. Smokers Stock Up On Fags; Many Buy Pipes; Stamps Here

Just what effect the newly imposed three-cent tax on a twenty fag package of cigarettes would have on the market was still speculative Saturday, and indications were here that nothing definite could be known for some time.

More than a score of dealers told a Herald representative that an enormous run on cigarettes Friday lowered their stock until only negligible amount remained. Because customers stock up so heavily on the fags, it will be days before the effect of the tax could be correctly judged. One dealer had only eight cartons of the ready rolled fags left on hand following a run which consumed a huge stock of cigarettes on display.

The tax has had its effect, however—many smokers are shifting to pipe and cigars. Others are learning to "roll their own." Clumsy fingers that heretofore pulled cigarettes out of a package are finding a new vocation with a fancy pipe and paper with a fancy tip. One merchant had a "roll your own" sign in the window. "It rolls easier. With the enforcement of the new tax, roll your own tobacco companies were increasing advertising in Texas Friday and Saturday saw a heavy sale of pipes also, merchants declared.

The wholesale concern in the city outside the city limits is making the sale of a ready rolled cigarette legal. One declined to distribute except to customers while Wooten Grocery Co. announced that any dealer wishing stamps could obtain them at their office at three cents for the standard package stamp. One wholesale house announced the discontinuance of cigarette trade.

TAKE NOTICE—

Now is the time to cut Winter Gas Bills

Now while the sun is shining its hottest, is the time to assure yourself of lower gas bills for the coming winter. In all probability, the reason for your high gas bills last winter was the waste of heat in your own home or office. We suggest that you make certain all your gas appliances are properly adjusted. We offer such service free.

Too many stoves, too large a stove, bad ventilation, faulty flues and other reasons cause heat to be wasted. Measure your space to be heated and equip your home or store with the right type and size of stove. It will lower your gas bills, produce better heat, and safeguard your personal health.

Books

Books were like in those days in this unknown land. Written to give a graphic and complete picture of life in the Austin colony, in its day it played a historic part in bringing the best class of settlers to Texas. Today it is a priceless volume of Texas, so rare to be practically unknown except to collectors and scholars.

Pioneer Traveler
Mrs. Holley was not only a fascinating writer, but a picturesque personality. Recently 125 of her private letters have been discovered which give a delightful picture of her travels across pioneer America. Mattie Austin Hatcher, Archivist of the University of Texas, has woven these letters into a biographical sketch which will be included with the reprint of "Texas."

Frank Dobie Has New Book
J. Frank Dobie will add another volume to his now famous series on the real outdoors of the Southwest. This time he calls his book "On the Open Range" and tells stories of his own adventures in the West.

or before written down) about wild life, famous rides and riders, cattle brands, Indians, and kindred subjects. The book is said to have been written especially for young people, but those who have seen the manuscript say it is conceived with that characteristic simplicity and vividness which will make it of interest to grown-ups as well.

Ben Carlton Mead, who was so successful in illustrating "Coronado's Children," will again be the illustrator, and this time Mr. Mead will include a number of illustrations in full color.

French Opera
One of the most significant books which the Southwest Press has ever published will be "The French Opera at New Orleans" by J. B. Kendall, professor at Tulane University. For sixty years French Opera at New Orleans was one of the most important musical institutions in the United States. Practically nothing has been told of its history until Mr. Kendall made this comprehensive chronicle. The book will be profusely illustrated with old photographs, playbills and other rare souvenirs of the opera, and will be a unique contribution to the library of the American Theater.

"Tall Tales from Texas"
In "Tall Tales from Texas" Mody C. Donbright has collected some of the most entertaining stories which have kept going the rounds of campfires and ranch-houses for years—but which have been as short as a breath.

as a herd of mustangs about finding their way into the civilized confines of a book. He has recounted legendary feats of speed, of vagaries of wind and weather, of marvelous beasts and birds, and he has introduced that surprising character of the Texas Plains, Pecos Bill.

Texas in Canada
Stella Hutcheson Dabney (Mrs. Lewis M. Dabney) of Dallas in "Two on the Island" will tell the story of her present-day efforts to colonize a virgin island in one of the small lakes in Ontario—which Canada will still bestow upon individuals willing to fulfill government conditions. Her book has been described as a diverting chronicle of casual confessions which brings out the amusing experiences that awaited two native Texans in a Northern Canadian wilderness.

The Southwest Press which was founded three years ago in Dallas by P. L. Turner which has already published more than fifty books, is the only general publishing house within a thousand miles of Texas.
