Lovely "Sweetheart of Texas"

To millions of people throughout the nation, who have read with interest the Texas Centennial's booklets describing the beauties of Texas, lovely Janice Jarratt was known simply as the "girl on the cover." But in response to a wide public demand Centennial officials revealed her identity as the San Antonio girl who won fame in New York as America's best-loved model and became ranked as one of the world's most beautiful women. Back to Texas she came last week, and in an elaborate ceremony attended by hundreds Governor James V. Allred bestowed upon her the official state commission as "Sweetheart of the Texas Centennial." It will be her duty to reign with charm and gracious distinction over many of the scores of Centennial celebrations being held throughout all Texas.

STORM CUTS ELECTRIC SERVICE; TIMES GOES TO PRESS RATHER LATE

Late this, Thursday, evening as this issue of The Times was nearing completion and about ready to be "put to bed," that wind and rain storm played havoc with plans when it knocked the electric current out of commission on our side of town for several hours. If, therefore, you fail to find some particular item that you expected, kindly bear with us this once.

Incidentally, highest words of appreciation and thanks are due the Panhandle Power & Light employes, both locally and from the Jowett plant, in doing everything they possibly could to make quick repairs and restore service. Every available man was called and scurried hither and yon to locate the source of the trouble.

Evidence of their courtesy to this paper was found in the ready willingness of R. P. Watts, superintendent of the Jowett plant, and Hobby Kirby, also employed there, to come to the office and do temporary wiring that permitted work to proceed on the publication of the paper.

Thanks, gentlemen of the P. P. & L. Co.

"The body of the housefly is easily loaded with germs," said Mrs. Warren, "causing the food it travels over to be germ infected also. They carry many varieties of germs such as typhoid, bracona, a disease of the eyes, and the germs that cause sleeping sickness. Because of the fact that they are such a germ breeder, they should be destroyed immediately so that they will not be allowed to multiply."

A demonstration of fly traps was given by the kitchen demonstrator, Edna Richardson. "Poison fly paper," she said, "is not recommended where there are children." She also demonstrated fly powder, spray, trap and swatter; each trap was discussed as to their efficiency or inefficiency to kill flies

PRELUDE

Viewed from the valleys of Virginia, the jagged line of the Cumberland mountains is a prodigious row of black dominoes toppled over on one another by the finger of God brushing about in the blue. This great wall of purple and green is neither inviting nor forbidding; it is just inescapably and beautifully there, removed from the ambitions and worries of men. In the morning the notched shadows crawl obliquely up its northern slope; they linger at noon on the faulted uplifts; and then hurry obliquely down the darkening south slopes in the early evening.

A hundred miles to the north lies the the Ohio valley, flat and fertile between its borders of lower hills. The willow-fringed river sweeps in a long leisurely curve around the southern-most tip of Ohio, receives the waters of the Big Sandy at the corner of West Virginia and Kentucky, and then bends languidly on toward the Mississippi. It is both inviting and forbidding; inescapably and beautifully there in the midst of the ambitions and worries of men. The spring rains swell it to the limits of its ample banks, and send it muddy and churning toward the west. The summer droughts relax it into a somnolent stream of limpid green tranquility.

Between the river and the mountain range lies the Big Sandy valley. Its hills rise slowly from the squat bluffs on the Ohio to the blue peaks of the Cumberlands; its valleys widen progressively from the precipitous canyons of the Breaks on the south to the sweeping flatlands on the Ohio to the north. And the Big Sandy river with its forks and its tributary creeks veins the whole region like the ribs in a pawpaw leaf.

Guarded on the south by the Cumberland ridge, protected on the north by the lure of the great river and its level bottoms, fenced in on the west and on the east by row upon row of rugged hills, the Big Sandy valley pocket preserved its isolation until the encircling territory was conquered and cleared. Traveling westward through the Eighteenth century, the immigrants started at the great barrier of the Cumberlands, and continued the easier road down the Clinch river into Tennessee, leaving the mysterious beyond to the desperate Indians, struggling against dispossession. Paddling down the Ohio, the pioneers peered up the

There was excitement in the crowd in the millyard as the boiler began to spank and sputter under the expansion. Then Sparrel tooted the whistle. She saw it first as a puff of vapor which melted instantly into a sound which roared in her ears. All the horses, mules and oxen jumped and cavorted about. One of the Darten boys splashed across the creek to safety. The crowd moved back from the mill.

Sparrel was full of a great pride as he turned the steam into the cylinder of his new engine. It hissed and spewed, the piston began to move; then the belt jerked, the new timbers creaked, the old millstones began to whirl twenty revolutions faster than ever before; a monster from the outside had finally got into the mountains.

bright highway of the Big Sandy, bending into the unknown, and continued down the easier road toward the rolling blue-grass country, leaving the legend-haunted pocket to the frightened wild game fleeing extinction

But its protection was not permanent. The solid-looking wall of the Cumberlands proved not to be unbroken when assaulted by a few daring men who were determined to explore it. One by one they spied out the four gateways to the north; the canyon-like water-gaps at the heads of the Tug river and Dry Fork; the thousand-foot gorge in the Breaks of Sandy; and the twenty-five hundred foot wind-gap in Pine mountain. Each gateway proved to be an Indian trail from north to south; a turnpike creek which led, fork by fork, to the full stream of the Big Sandy at Louisa, and then like a broad highway into the Ohio. Fork by forkthe Elkhorn to the Russell, the Russell into the Levisa, then the Levisa joins the Tug and becomes the Big Sandy. The mysterious pocket was open at both ends to those who would risk its perils.

The perils were menacing. The Shawnees held on to the Big Sandy valley after all other hunting grounds were captured from them. It was both a game preserve and a colossal fortification, with a moat on the north which they could strike at the whites on the Ohio and posterns on the south through which they could raid the rich settlements in Virginia. They held on until 1795, while the immigrants filled up the outside flats and encamped against the walls surrounding it. Then the Indians were trapped and defeated, and the valley was taken.

In a short time, Wheeler county veterans will be receiving their adjusted compensation baby bonds. How to invest these funds to give the greatest satisfaction to themselves and their families is being studied now by every ex-service man.

These baby bonds will last 40 years and more, if invested in an attractive new home. They will buy an enduring happiness for the family, when converted into a modern residence with all its comforts and conveniences.

They will not be frittered away; they will not depreciate in value. Wheeler property values are stable; homes built here in town or on surrounding farms represent sound investment.

Use your bonus money to start this fine investment program for the family. We'll assist with plans and construction information.

What Would You Do In a Case Like This?

A man comes to your door. You answer his knock. You don't know him, and he can't identify himself as a representative of one of the established firms you've come to know and trust.

QUESTION: Would you open the door?

ANSWER: No. Not if you're like most of the women who keep house and buy things for themselves and their families in this community.

REASON: Experience has taught them that the greatest danger in admitting strangers is the danger of being sold something without a reputation.

RESULT: Women who know that a value is as much a matter of "known reputation" as it is of dollars and cents, buy through the advertisements in The Wheeler Times. They know they get double protection when they do this.
