THE COUNTY SEAT NEWSPAPER

County Club Fair Dated at Wheeler, September 11-12

Interesting Event to Be Held in Gymnasium-Auditorium

LARGE PRIZE LIST

Home Demonstration Club Women and 4-H Girls Exhibitors—Committees Named

Meeting at the club room in the court house here Saturday, the County Home Demonstration council discussed a number of subjects. Most important of these, perhaps, was fixing a date for the annual club fair of women's home demonstration and 4-H club members.

Friday and Saturday, Sept. 11 and 12, was the two-day period chosen for the big county-wide event. On those days club women and girls will compete in their respective classes for choice awards in a large prize list, consisting of money and ribbons. Sept. 11-12 are the latest week-end dates upon which the county contest can be held and leave time in which to prepare exhibits for the Tri-State fair in Amarillo shortly thereafter.

Club Year Highlight

This county fair is the principal highlight of the year for women and girl club members. It marks the time when products of the year's work are exhibited, when achievements are measured by keen but friendly competition, when friends may view results of long hours of painstaking labor, and when club members may see tangible evidence of other members' accomplishments.

Committees Appointed

The exhibit committee, consisting of Mrs. John Henry Watts, Mrs. Cantrell and Mrs. Bob Greenhouse, will meet on the morning of Sept. 10 to prepare the Wheeler gymnasium-auditorium for reception of the products to arrive the next morning, Friday, Sept. 11. While the women are arranging their exhibits Friday morning, the girls' work will be judged and put on display that afternoon. Two women from the Allison and Shamrock clubs will help the judges Friday afternoon, and two from Briscoe and Center will assist Saturday morning. Other helpers will be appointed later.

An educational committee, composed of two women from each county commissioner's precinct was also appointed. Its personnel is:

Precinct 1—Mrs. John McCarroll and Mrs. N. J. Tyson; Precinct 2—Mrs. Clarence Zybach and Mrs. Edna Richardson; Precinct 3—Mrs. T. C. Harless and Mrs. Ruby Johnson; Precinct 4—Mrs. C. C. Collingsworth and Mrs. J. R. Jackson.

Labels—Canning Contest

Labels for canned products at the fair have been ordered and each club will pay for what its members use. Exhibitors are urged to apply labels strictly according to directions, for it takes time to soak them off and put on new ones, as well as being expensive.

Each 4-H club girl and demonstration club woman is asked to prepare a quart of vegetables and one of fruit for entry in the Ball Canning contest at the fair. These should be in Ball jars.

Antique Booth a New Feature

The council voted to have an antique booth this year. Mrs. J. R. Jackson was appointed chairman of the department. All persons wishing to exhibit antiques are requested to communicate with Mrs. Jackson. Because it is Centennial year in Texas, more than passing interest is expected in the antique division, where relics and curios of historical connection may be shown.

Other Council Business

Among other matters of business appearing at Saturday's council meeting was a report on Short Course, by Mrs. Jim Trout, council chairman. Letters of appreciation were received and read from Mrs. Bert Keiper and Mrs. Lee Kiker for their Centennial prizes. Because of revival meetings in progress and the absence of several people away on vacations, it was decided to postpone the Recreation association meeting from Friday, August 14, to Friday, August 28. After directions for making beaded purses were distributed, council adjourned.

Baptist Services Sunday

The Baptist church will have regular services Sunday morning, followed by a church conference. Rev. Taft Holloway has returned from a 10-days revival meeting at the Fairview Baptist church. He also visited his mother, Mrs. J. H. Holloway of Jonesboro.

Revival Begins Sunday At Church of Christ

Just An Old-Time "Protracted Meeting"—Lessons Mainly from Book of Romans

The annual revival at the Church of Christ will begin Sunday morning. The day services will be held at 10 o'clock each morning and the evening services at 8:30. The evening services will be held on the church lawn.

Bro. Merritt wishes to express his appreciation to the people of this community for their kind consideration of his efforts to give the Gospel of God unto those who hear. "I cannot even begin to express in words," says he, "the wonders of the message of God's love to the lost as it is manifested in Christ."

The greater part of the lessons during this revival will be from the Book of Romans. If you have had the impression that this book is so very hard and that it does not have a message except for the learned clergyman, then you have, in some way received the wrong impression of the book which has been considered the greatest of Paul's writings.

In the morning services there will be eight sermons on the first two verses of the 12th chapter of Romans.

The first eight chapters will be studied during the evening services. Some such subjects as these will be discussed: "Behold, the Goodness of God," "Law and Grace," "Love Flooded Hearts," "Righteousness that Avails," "According to My Gospel," "It Is God that Justifieth," "God's Revelation Concerning the Three-fold State of Man," "Peace With God," and others.

You are, one and all, invited to these services.

Buildings Going Up at Wheeler Schools

New Vocational Agriculture-Manual Training Unit and Bus Sheds Nearing Completion

Construction work on the new vocational agriculture and manual training unit of the Wheeler high school is scheduled for completion in about two weeks. As soon as doors are hung on the bus garage, also situated on the school grounds, that improvement will be finished.

Costing About $5,000

Located just west of the grammar school and to the rear of the home ec. cottage erected last year, the vocational agriculture and manual training unit is 54 by 48 feet in dimensions. It will contain two large class rooms and several smaller rooms. One of the large class rooms will also be used as a laboratory in connection with class work. The administration office will occupy one of the smaller rooms, the others to be used as supply and storage spaces.

The roof has been finished and electric wiring is in progress. The present rough-boxed sidewalls are to be stucco finish outside, with plaster inside. This work is ready to start soon. Approximate cost of the unit is $5,000, according to Dr. H. E. Nicholson, president of the school board.

Bus Garage Costs $1,000

The bus garage, situated toward the northwest corner of the school grounds, is 72 feet long and 30 feet wide. It is divided into six compartments, one for each of the local buses. One stall contains equipment and fixtures for service on the vehicles.

Constructed of sheetiron, with concrete floor, cost of the garage is estimated at $1,000.

Waiting on PWA

School officials are waiting to learn the outcome of pleas by state leaders for modification of the recently announced PWA program which left Texas (along with less than a dozen other states) out of consideration. Action of the federal relief organization, from which substantial assistance was expected in the erection of a new high school building, will have much bearing on the matter.

Late reports from a conference at Washington between state officials and the chief executive, indicate the possibility of some Texas projects being included in a modified program.

MELTONS DRIVE NEW CAR HOME FROM FLINT, MICH.

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Melton and son, Billy, Jr., arrived home Tuesday night from an extended trip which took them as far as Flint, Mich., where they obtained at the Chevrolet factory a new town sedan. Purchase was made through the Wheeler Motor Co., local Chevrolet dealers.

The Meltons crossed over into Canada for a brief sightseeing trip, visited Niagra Falls and toured 12 states, returning by way of Dallas for a short stay at the Centennial.

County Admitted to Full Drouth Rating

Ruling Released August 7 Gives Full Relief Privileges to Local Agriculture

An Agricultural Conservation memorandum issued July 27 and released August 7 gives to Wheeler county all the privileges enjoyed by any other part of the state under the drouth relief program. This is according to Jake Tarter, county agent. Additional latitude is granted farmers in planting and saving feedstuffs under the late ruling.

Under the new order, any and all acres may be planted to feed or food. However fall planting will be contingent upon sufficient moisture to germinate the seed.

Any land on which cotton was destroyed by insects, or dried out and did not come up, may be planted in feed or hay, without reducing the conservation payment.

All sudan may be cut or grazed. However, no advices have been received concerning the $1.00 per acre allowance if grazing is done. But if the growth is worth more than $1.00 per acre for grazing purposes or hay, the farmer can so decide for himself. Naturally, if it will make more than a dollar's worth of hay per acre (and since cutting is permissible) the grower can lose the $1.00 conservation payment and still be ahead.

Some drouth feed is available in the county and may be obtained without cost by those in need of feed and who are unable to buy it. Persons who wish to share in this program are advised to see the county agent at once, or leave names with the chamber of commerce. Such names will be delivered to Tarter, who will turn them in to the proper authorities for investigation.

Those in need of this service may leave their names at Tarter's office whether he happens to be in at the moment or not, and the same prompt attention will be given in every instance.

Drouth relief freight rates have not been extended to this area as yet, but such action is expected soon, says Tarter.

New Produce House Opening This Week

Leasing the Ernest Lee building, across the street from the Royal Drug where Dr. F. N. Reynolds maintained a dental office for some months, Baumgardner's are installing a cream and produce house this week. Styled "independent cream buyers," a bid for the patronage of those who have produce to sell is made through an advertisement on another page of The Times.

Roy Esslinger, formerly in the grocery and produce business here, is helping to get fixtures installed and preparations made to open for business this week. R. L. McClain, Jr., is making some alterations in the building.

CITIZENS STATE BANK OBSERVES 28TH ANNIVERSARY ON TUESDAY

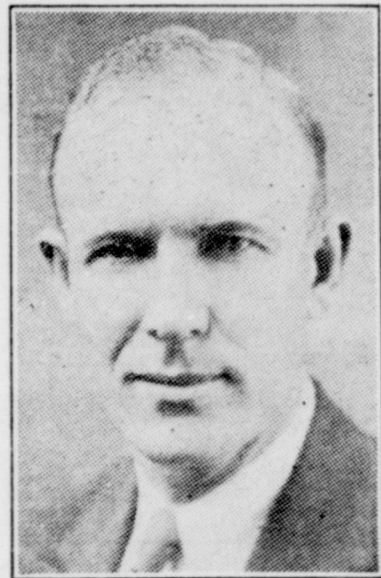

Twenty-eight years ago on Tuesday of this week, August 11, 1908, the Citizens State Bank of Wheeler first opened its doors for business. The charter and certain other preliminary arrangements had previously been made. E. E. Holt of Wheeler was its principal organizer and first president of the bank.

On the day before the bank opened, D. E. Holt, a nephew of E. E. Holt, and president of the institution at this time, arrived from Kansas. He was accompanied by Mrs. Holt and their three older children, Maud (Mrs. Buck Britt), R. J. and Raymond D. Holt, all of Wheeler. The late L. E. Holt of Uniontown, a brother of D. E. Holt, helped to organize the bank.

The institution was first located in the northeast corner of an old wooden court house, since replaced by the modern brick building. Remaining there only six months, the bank was moved to its own building, a frame structure on the lot now occupied by Pollard's cafe, immediately west of the bank's present brick home, which was erected and occupied in 1918.

The Citizens bank has the distinction of being open, during regular banking hours, every day since its founding, except when the national moratorium was in effect. Originally capitalized at $10,000, its responsibilities today total a certified capital and surplus of $40,000. Its first officers were E. E. Holt, president; J. E. Stanley, vice president, and D. E. Holt, cashier. Other charter members and stockholders included J. M. Porter, G. W. Porter, Blake Lee, Clarence Lee, P. H. Higgins and R. B. Holt. Of that group,

C. H. Candler Is Chosen Commander of Wheeler Unit In Annual Session, Aug. 6

Holding its annual election of officers in the hall here Thursday night, August 6, West Post No. 138 American Legion, chose C. H. Candler as commander for the ensuing year.

MURPHEY BRINGS IN ENORMOUS HEN'S EGG—PROVES TWO-IN-ONE

Determination of even Old Bidy to uphold Wheeler county's reputation for doing things in a "big way" is seen in an exhibit brought to The Times office Friday by W. L. Murphey. It was an enormous hen's egg from the Murphey flock in the northeast part of town. The specimen measured 9 1/4 inches in circumference the long way and 7 1/2 inches around the middle, and weighed 5 ounces on the Pennington & Son scales. Floyd Pennington later found that three ordinary eggs were required to equal it by weight. Mrs. C. G. Miller opened the big egg Wednesday morning by perforating the shell and found it to be a real freak. Surrounded only by egg white without a yolk, was found an ordinary-sized perfect egg, shell and all, containing the usual white and yolk. Both shells were emptied through small openings and may be seen in The Times window.

Briscoe School to Start Next Monday

Public Invited to Brief Program—Swinburn Heads Faculty—Improvements Made

Opening the school year Monday morning, August 17, with a brief assembly program starting at 9 a. m., the Briscoe school will begin its 1936-37 term. The public is invited to attend the opening exercises. Numbers will include short talks by County Superintendent B. T. Rucker and others.

The coming year gives promise of being one of the most successful the Briscoe school has known, it is said. The complete faculty, headed by Superintendent Swinburn, contains several new teachers from that of last year.

W. V. (Vance) Swinburn, beginning his first year as superintendent of the Briscoe school, comes to Wheeler county from Dodsonville, in southeastern Collingsworth county, where he held a similar position for six years. His work there and the results attained are spoken of in the highest terms.

The faculty, together with the probable subjects of each instructor, are:

High School

W. V. Swinburn—World history, commercial geography, economics; Elmo Scott, principal—General science, algebra I and II, plane geometry; Miss Lavelle Coney—Home ec. dept.; James Coney, coach—manual training, social science; Miss Edith Stubbs—High school English.

Grades

O. C. Evans, principal—History, mathematics; Miss Ima Scott—Geography, reading; Miss Ruby Lee Williams—English, art; Miss Beulah Hubbard—Second and third grades; Miss Glennis Wiseman, primary.

Other Employees

Custodian—W. F. McNeill, whose duties are to care for the buildings and grounds. Bus Drivers—Sam Standlee, Floyd Morris, Alvin Richardson, Henry Lee and James Funston.

Trustees—W. D. Douthit, president; B. F. Crossland, secretary; C. H. Candler, W. L. Taylor, J. L. Herley, Milton Wilson and Wm. Lohberger, members.

Plant Improvements

Improvements and additions to the school plant, completed or in process, comprise installation of a water system wholly for school use; remodeling of the bus sheds and addition of one bus; moving a portion of the old Dixon building to the campus, remodeled and fitted up for use of the manual training department. Stucco finish outside will provide complete harmony of the new unit with present buildings.

ATTRACTIVE FIRESTONE PRICES APPEAR IN ADV.

With the Wheeler Auto Supply & Electric company as local dealers, the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. advertises a list of attractively priced merchandise on another page of this paper. Motorists will find real news in this advertisement, and their careful perusal and comparison is suggested.

Inconvenience of trips to other towns or possible disappointment in mail order service can easily be obviated through patronage of the Wheeler Auto Supply in buying tires and kindred lines.

Again Making Hole Local Oil Test Well

Pulled 8 1/4-inch Casing Last Week—Drilling Out Hole With 10-inch Tools

Although drillers succeeded largely in overcoming obstacles encountered in the Porter No. 1 test well, 6 1/2 miles south of Wheeler, it was decided last week to pull the 8 1/4-inch pipe and straight-ream or drill with 10-inch tools.

To straighten the hole and strengthen the side walls, a quantity of granite rubble rock was dumped in to a depth of 112 feet above the rubbish created while underreaming.

Reports from the well yesterday stated that steady progress was being made. The bit was 127 feet from the "shoulder," or point where the 8 1/4-inch underreaming was halted. This is approximately 180 feet above bottom. Consequently, about 307 feet is yet to be dug to reach the 4,800 foot level or greatest depth reached so far.

Most of the 8 1/4-inch pipe was taken to machine shops in Pampa for reconditioning or exchange for new casing. It is to be returned within the next few days, according to report.

SOCIALISTIC MEDICINE BITTER

Press dispatches announce that the Public Works administration has decided to push municipal power plant construction under its $300,000,000 building program. It is stated that it can finance up to 141 such projects costing around $100,000,000. The question as to the government's right to so spend public funds and make an outright donation of government money to a few favored communities, will be decided by the United States supreme court next fall.

It is difficult to discuss a question of this kind from the standpoint of the principle involved without being accused of political bias, but nevertheless the principle involved in such a program is the real point at issue and of infinitely greater importance to the citizens of the United States than the party or public official holding the temporary power to levy and assess taxes for such expenditures.

Senator Carter Glass, one of the outstanding statesmen of the nation, in a recent speech at the Patrick Henry celebration in Ashland, Va., at Randolph-Macon college, made a clear statement that every citizen and taxpayer can understand, when he said of government spending:

"It was not proper to take money of taxpayers of Virginia and appropriate it to pay off mortgages that had been made by thriftless and unwise individuals. That is just what we are doing in this country today. The government's nose is in all sorts of business."

If Patrick Henry were living, said the veteran senator, "he would not cure one evil with a multitude of other evils."

Just why millions and millions of dollars of public funds taken from all the people of the nation should be dumped into power development for a few favored localities which already have private power development, is hard to understand. While the remarks of Senator Glass did not refer specifically to power, they discussed the principle involved under which such a public program is carried out.

Sooner or later the people and taxpayers will awaken to the fact that this issue involves the question of whether they wish to change the United States form of government to a Socialistic form of government. All political parties are involved because members of both parties have been flirting with the Socialistic idea.

If the majority of the people want Socialism and want to do away with private enterprise, they will ultimately so express their wish. But when they vote for such a change in government, they should vote on it knowing what they are going to get. They should not permit such a change to be thrust upon them under any one of the numerous camouflages that are used to hide the real intent of putting government into business to the destruction of the private line of endeavor with which government competes.

It means just the same to a Republican or to a Democrat to see his business wiped out with tax funds which he helps furnish, under a governmental policy of competing with the business from which he has made a livelihood. The effect of such a dose of Socialistic medicine will be no sweeter for the recipient, regardless of who holds the spoon.

ONE REAL ISSUE

Said Governor Alfred M. Landon of Kansas in his presidential nomination acceptance speech: "We must recognize that a government does not have an unlimited supply of money to spend. It must husband its resources, just as truly as does the head of a family. While spending billions of dollars of borrowed money may create temporary appearance of prosperity, we and our children have yet to pay the bill."

Here is concisely the most telling argument of the Republican campaign. There is no dodging a question like this. On this point the G. O. P. has the Democrats on the spot. It will be interesting to note the Democratic answer: whether it be a direct one, or a begging of the question. The spending of billions that have at best afforded only temporary relief and have not solved the problem is the weakest link in the Democratic campaign.—Pampa Advocate.

PAINT ROSY PICTURES

In New Mexico and other neighboring states, as well as in states further distant, the sales tax is in effect and in them is painted a rosy picture of (one thing for instance) teachers being well paid and in cash at the end of every month, and other functions of the state government moving along with cash surpluses.

One thing that isn't mentioned is the myriad army of collectors and checkers and spies, who parade up and down the state to see that every man pays off, and to see that he collected off of every customer.

Theoretically, the sales tax is a good thing. Actually, it is bad.

But folks are not dealing in actualities now, any more than they can avoid, and the sales tax will continue to be pushed as a panacea for the state's fiscal condition.—Floyd County Hesperian.

Aye, there's the rub. Many good plans for benefit of the public fail miserably because of the inexcusable and unbusinesslike manner in which they are administered. Each new plan must have, apparently, an army of employes to execute its provisions. Each one offers a chance for passing out some more political pie. Evidently it has never occurred to the "powers that be" to delegate the functions of a new governmental set-up to any one or more of the innumerable groups of office-holders already lugging at the public pap.

Recent shining examples of such abuses are seen in the national relief program, largely a memory, and the present PWA and WPA.

If private enterprise of the nation, lacking the inexhaustible source of income available to political schemes, were conducted on the same extravagant scale as many of the beautiful official bureaus, the country would be bankrupt in 24 hours.

DROUGHTS COME IN CYCLES

It seems that a study of the history of the past reveals that droughts come in cycles, and we can do nothing about it. Neither reforestation nor reseedling can beat a cycle. However this is not saying at all that we cannot find ways to mitigate their effects when they do come.

There was a great drought cycle from 1886 through 1895. Such records as exist suggest that there was another about 100 years ago. Tree rings indicate severe drought in 1755—1780. So it is possible although J. B. Kincer of the Weather Bureau, who dug up all these dates, doesn't say so, that we have three or more dry years ahead of us. The present cycle began in 1930.—Tulia Herald.

Donley county crops seem to be holding up well, considering the lack of rainfall. Feed is suffering to a certain extent, but cotton is heavily fruited and has a good color. The reason why so many men do not care to work and would rather remain idle is often due to the fact in many instances they were not trained to work when they were young. Voice of the People

A Banking Incident

Dear Mr. Editor:
Since you have opened your columns for publication of "tall" stories, I herewith submit one for your consternation, or I mean consideration, that is of sufficient rarity as to merit the blue ribbon—except for the fact it happens to be so. To prove that it is a fact, I herewith exhibit documentary evidence, in the shape of a deposit slip pinned to this letter, and as further proof of its genuineness I submit that no finite mind could conceive of a banker being guilty of this action unless such were really a fact.

I have a note due (that is, one of them) some time this month at one of the local banks. This week finding the banker in an excellent humor, I seized the opportunity, though the due date of the note had not arrived, to beg for a renewal. I found that my optimism yielded returns and said banker agreed to the renewal.

I was so pleased with my good judgment in selecting the psychological time for my request that I unthoughtfully became bold and in that mood I banteringly asked the banker, since he had not sent me a notice of the note coming due (you see it was too far in advance of the due date) and therefore had not yet spent any money for a stamp, to give credit for three cents on my note. His humor was so imperishable that he laughingly agreed and I walked away forgetting the good joke (according to me) that I had gotten off on the banker, happy in the thought that I was to have my note come due at some far distant date.

But (and here's the point to my unbelievable story) this morning in the mail I received from the said banker a drop letter with a one-cent stamp on it and inside was the deposit slip, which I am attaching hereto, showing a credit for two cents.

As every story has its moral, I am sure that you will agree with me in announcing that the moral to this story is that some bankers have a sense of humor—even if it does cost TWO cents.—A Reader.

Watch Your Eggs

The days are warm and more than ordinary care should be taken of your eggs. Not only should you gather your eggs frequently, but you should keep them in a cool place and bring them frequently to Wheeler Poultry & Egg Co., where you will get highest cash prices.

It is seldom that poor quality eggs are brought to Wheeler, but this has happened in recent weeks during the extremely warm weather.

As cream and eggs are equivalent to cash, it should be to the farmer's interest to keep them in proper condition so that they will bring the best cash prices.

Cream prices are good and the better you take care of the cream, the better prices you will receive.

We urge all cream producers and poultry raisers to handle their products with the best of care, regardless of whether they are customers or not of this store.

Beloved Local Woman Passes Away Sunday

Mrs. A. H. Dyson, Resident Here for Many Years, Dies in Hospital at Wheeler

Mrs. A. H. Dyson, a resident of Mobeetie since 1920, died Sunday night at a hospital in Wheeler following an illness of several days.

Thelma Brandon was born June 7, 1901, at Mangum, Okla., and died Aug. 10, 1936, at Wheeler, Texas, at the age of 35 years, two months and three days.

In 1917 she was married to A. H. Dyson. To this union four children were born, Eunice Mae, Varne, Jack and Bert.

Besides the faithful husband and loving children, she is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Brandon of Mineral Wells; five sisters, Mrs. V. W. Smith, Mangum, Okla.; Mrs. E. J. Ware and Mrs. Clyde Hull, Mineral Wells; Mrs. Willard Godwin and Mrs. J. R. Patterson, Mobeetie; and a number of other relatives and a host of friends in Mobeetie and Wheeler who mourn her untimely death.

Mrs. Dyson was a faithful and active member of the Baptist church and taught a class in Sunday school. She had been a member of that faith since the age of 12.

Funeral services were spoken at the Baptist church in Mobeetie by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Burkham, Monday evening at 6 o'clock. Pallbearers were John Love, Homer Bartram, Clyde Patterson, Charley Lowery and Ross Hogan.

The flower girls were members of her Sunday school class: Misses Laverne Dysart, Adelee Love, Evelyn Rush, Pauline Oswald, Beulah Brewer, Lillie Cupples, Jewell Compton, Mildred Eubanks, Edith and Ethel Tarvin and Annie Lee Compton. Interment was in Mobeetie cemetery, with Hunt Funeral home of Wheeler in charge.

Our Motto: "A Position for Every Graduate"

Get your business training in a nationally known school in the Centennial City, Dallas—the city of employment. Byrne College places more graduates than any other two schools in the Southwest.

There is no higher or nobler career than that of a well trained successful business man or woman. A business education will start you on the immediate road to success with good pay, while a college education will slowly start you on a professional career with two years of small earnings.

The famous Byrne System of shorthand, typing, and bookkeeping, which we own and control, together with our original individual advancement method enables us to give you a thorough training in half the time required elsewhere, therefore we are the only school in which you can enroll now and be on a payroll in from three to five months. (Post graduate work given in any system of shorthand or bookkeeping).

Reasonable terms given on tuition. Board and room $5.50 per week or spare time work to earn room and board.

Fill in name and address and receive our literature describing our employment service, our sixteen business courses, the time required to complete, cost, etc.

Delegates to Short Course Submit Reports of Things Seen and Heard

The Textile Mills

By MRS. JIM TROUT

Do you make memoranda on the back of an envelope or piece of loose scratch paper; do you have much trouble trying to assemble these notes to where the simplest solution can be found—especially on a textile mill—when you don't know the name of this thing or that and yet it seems simple to stand and watch the different processes, from a bale of cotton through to a finished product, or we might say a pretty piece of material all woven in pretty design? The superintendent was standing idly by waiting with a smile to answer all questions asked by the many observers.

When you first enter the textile mill the lint from the cotton almost takes your breath. The humming of the machinery is so great that a person can hardly be heard while talking.

From the bale of cotton which we might say has already gone through one process of being picked and ginned, it is then taken through another process of cleaning. There are three different machines for this purpose. After going through these it is perfectly clean of all trash and dirt and ready for the comb or cards.

There are about five of these machines each of them more fine until it comes out in a sheet so thin and fine it reminds one of mist and is gradually rolled into a loose soft rope of cotton which is about as large in diameter as a quarter, and into a container where it goes round and round, coming out of another drawing frame a longer and smaller rope. This process continues until it becomes about the size of wrapping twine and so on down into a mere thread.

After ascending to the second floor, the noise is not so great. This is where we find the looms, or weaving machines, of different sizes producing materials, in width from toweling up to table Damask.

On one side of the loom we find a huge spool of numerous threads, depending on the thread count of the material and the color usually white or the foundation color. Each of these threads are carried up and over the top where they are attached to a needle or peg, which when the machine is in operation, go up and down through a sheet of perforated metal, all punched full of little holes until it reminds one of a honeycomb, which makes the design, and coming on down where a large shuttle similar to one on a sewing machine working back and forth carries the colored thread. As the material is woven it is taken up on a wooden roller. A person may observe one of these machines in operation for some time and still not have much conception as to how it is done. Yet students who desire to learn this trade of weaving, dying and designing may do so in the textile mills at College Station, Texas.

Midget City

By HELEN FLYNT
Wheeler 4-H Club

One of the many interesting sights on the Centennial grounds was a building called "Midget City," where the smallest people in the world live.

In the center of "Midget City," was a house. You could look into the window and see their living room which consists of a very small divan, two chairs, table and other things. In the bedroom there was a very small bed which was not over one and one half yards in length, dressing table and chest of drawers. In the bathroom the bathtub was very shallow and built down into the floor. Out on the porch was a very small porch set of green.

For our entertainment there was an outside show. For some of their characters they had, Will Rogers, a small man up in years pulling wise cracks and tying knots as he talked; Mae West, a beautiful little lady wearing a black dress and black hat with a large feather in it, and other dancers and singers.

For the center of attraction they had a man, 21 years old that you could almost hold in the palm of your hand; about a third the size of an ordinary midget.

Recreation

By MRS. LULA BOX
Center H. D. Club

Mixing work and play is as good as a dip in the "Fountain of Youth," so says Mrs. L. L. Bradley, state chairman of recreation, who had charge of an hour of folk games during Short Course at College Station.

There is one crowd of people who play and pleasure hunt all the time; another crowd who never play, and a crowd who never work or play. To belong to either class brings to thought "an idle mind is the devil's work shop," also that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," so the safe and sound thing for everybody to do is to mix plenty of work with plenty of play and plenty of rest and sleep so you can meet each new day with a smile.

Recreation in your home, your neighborhood and your community makes the world a better, healthier and happier place in which to live. As long as you are any good to the world you can still learn things, and one of the best things to learn is how to play "interesting, healthy and wholesome games. So let's all learn to play some, so we can work better."

Four Wishes

By MRS. DUD McMILLIN
Allison H. D. Club

One of the lectures which impressed me most at the Short Course was one given by Miss Mildred Horton, state home demonstration agent, College Station. The topic of her lecture was "Four Wishes."

These are the everyday wishes that are in the hearts and minds of every human:

(1) Our Wish for Security:
We wish for a home—not just for a day, but for the future. We desire possessions. Possessions bring pride and pride brings permanence.
(2) Our Wish for Response:
We want happy associations and love. A response is an answer to something. We want something to come back. The force that brings us an answer is within us—what we think, what we are and what we do. We should sit down and analyze ourselves. "What are my assets as a woman? What are the things that make people love me?" Liabilities: "What are the qualities in me that make people shrink from me and dislike me?"

Our greatest assets are: "Are you happy? Are you considerate and thoughtful? Are you sympathetic? Are you patient? Are you open-minded and loath to judge? Get prejudice out of your mind and heart and get to know people. Be slow to judge, because you seldom know circumstances. Are you tactful?"

We hurt ourselves more when we hurt the other person. Do not be sensitive. We give a part of ourselves to our friends and we get something from our friends that becomes a part of us.
(3) Our Wish for Recognition and Appreciation:
Everyone wants commendation. We wish to hear from our friends that we have done a good job well. Commendation, unless given sincerely, does not help anyone. If, at the end of a hard working day, the family comes together, where there is love and appreciation, all is well.

We do not always recognize ourselves enough. An amendment to the Golden Rule should be "Do unto thyself as thou would have others do unto you." Be generous to yourself. Too many mothers sacrifice too much for their families. Let us give ourselves some of the joys and pleasures of living. Think well of yourself. Sometimes we do not judge ourselves as fairly as we do our friends.
(4) Our Wish for New Experiences:
In this day and time we have our greatest opportunity to get new worthwhile experiences. If we get new experiences we must have "an open mind, an open hand and an open heart."

Song of the Trail

And now comes Kermit Maynard, the kid brother of Ken, to make his first appearance on the screen at the Rogue. The picture is taken from the story, Song of the Trail, by a popular writer. You have always liked Ken Maynard and we feel sure that you will give his brother a big hand. So come out and see Kermit in a good western story. Evelyn Brent plays the female lead. El Brendel will be there with one of his two reel comedies which will be worth your admission price alone. Friday and Saturday, Aug. 14-15.

The Prisoner of Shark Island
Dr. Samuel Alexander Mudd was a physician who administered to the wounds of the assassin of President Lincoln. For this crime he was confinied to a prison on Shark Island off the Florida Keys, where, with every means of escape barred, every means was taken to bring about death in the most tortuous way. Realistic fact, the horror of which has been a carefully guarded secret for more than 70 years, is the atmosphere of the production. Based on reports from government files, you will see the assassination in Ford's theatre, the execution of Booth's accomplices, the trial of Dr. Mudd, the suppression of the negro soldiers on America's Devil's Island. Monday and Tuesday is the date.

Barbary Coast

Edward G. Robinson, Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea will bring to you for Thursday, Aug. 20, none other than Barbary Coast. It's the story of early California's own Barbary coast and incidentally one of the best pictures produced in the last 12 months. For references on this picture, ask anyone with The Wheeler Times office. We will risk their judgment.

It's A Good Time to Buy!

When prices and conditions similar to the present exist, it is a good time to buy real estate; especially farm land. At this time prices are exceptionally favorable for the purchaser, whether he buys for a home or for investment purposes. Comparison of present prices with those of recent years shows definitely that now is the time to buy. Judging the future by the past, all indications point toward higher trends in farm land values.

Wheeler county offers especially attractive propositions for the man of modest means to acquire a homestead, or for those with larger means who seek a safe and dependable investment where prospects for profit-taking looks good. All these advantages—in addition to absolute security—prevail in real estate purchases.

Only two of the many choice offerings from our listings are mentioned here; details of others cheerfully furnished to interested parties.

No. 79—160 acres, near Kelton; 100 acres in cultivation; no improvements. Only $7.00 per acre takes this one.

No. 33—320 acres, living water; 150 acres in cultivation; considerable timber. Improvements only fair, $10.00 per acre buys it.

Some choice listings in both oil leases and royalties. These are attractively priced and should be a good buy.

PATTERNS OF WOLFPEN

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—A century later, in the spring of 1885, we find Cynthia Pattern perched on the pinnacle from which her great-great-grandfather had first viewed Wolfpen Bottoms. The valleys, heretofore untouched by the waves of change sweeping the Republic, are at last beginning to feel that restless surge. Her dad, Sparrel, and her brothers, Jesse, Jasper and Abrah, have been busy converting the old water-wheel mill to steam power. Surrounded by neighbors, mostly skeptical, Sparrel's triumph is complete when the golden stream of meal pours forth at the turning on of the steam. Cynthia feels that something out of the past has been buried with Saul. Cynthia is a pretty and imaginative miss in her late teens, who often re-created Saul and her other forebears, and fancied them still living.

CHAPTER II.—Sparrel proudly brings home the first meal out of the steam mill, and Julia, his wife, is pleased. Generation after generation has added comforts and conveniences to Saul's homestead, and Sparrel has not shirked. He plans his spring work. Julia favors sending Cynthia to Pikeville institute. Sparrel does not fully agree.

CHAPTER III.—The family goes easily into the work of the new season, due to the simplicity of life designed long ago on the Wolfpen. The men are busy in the field, Julia in her garden, and Cynthia in the house. Joy is abundant. Jesse tells Cynthia he plans to study law.

CHAPTER IV.—A stranger, Shellenberger by name, comes to Wolfpen, intent on buying timber land. Sparrel refuses his offer. Shellenberger tells of progress in the outside world.

CHAPTER V.—With the advent of Shellenberger some intangible disturbing alteration seems to affect the atmosphere of Wolfpen. Jasper, desiring to marry, and in need of money, urges his father to sell. Sparrel, after discussing the matter with Julia, makes a deal with Shellenberger. Jesse arranges to study law with Tandy Morgan.

CHAPTER VI.—Doug Mason, a neighbor, in love with Cynthia, calls to secure medicine for his sick mother. The feeling of disturbing suspense continues at Wolfpen.

CHAPTER VII.—Julia goes to visit her married daughter, Jenny, who lives on the Horsepen. Cynthia, in faded calico dress, splashed with biscuit batter, and her hair dangling, is surprised by a young and handsome stranger at the door, who proves to be Reuben Warren, a surveyor sent by Shellenberger. He arranges to stay at the Patterns.

CHAPTER VIII.—The surveying gets under way. Jesse and Abrah help. It is slow and hard work. Reuben loves the living things of the outdoors, and finds Cynthia a stunner.

CHAPTER IX.—Shellenberger returns with a colored man, Mullens, who is to supervise getting out the timber. They plan the camp and the work.

Then she heard his voice pitched to the oratorical tones of the Pikeville lawyers and reciting: "All children born before matrimony are bastards by our law; and so it is of all children born so long after the death of the husband, that, by the usual course of gestation, they could not be begotten by him. But this being a matter of some uncertainty, the law is not exact as to a few days, forty weeks being the time allowed."

"Now why in the world is Jesse saying all that for up here in the hollow with nobody around to hear him but the mule and it drowsing like a sleepy old judge on a bench. It must be Jesse's law book."

Jesse went on, stumbling over the unusual words:

"But if a man dies, and his widow soon after marries again, and a child is born within such a time, as that by the course of nature it might have been the child of either husband; in this case he is said to be more than ordinarily-legitimate; for he may, when he arrives to years of discretion, choose which of the fathers he pleases."

She could not see Jesse from where she sat. What would he look like in the role of orator? The impulse to lay eyes upon him overcame her. She went a little farther up the ridge over-looking the hollow and climbed down the rock behind a clump of redbud.

Jesse was standing under a pine tree before a moss-covered rock which had broken away from the cliff. He held the left hand, pointing with his right forefinger at the page, tapping it for emphasis, and making his voice vibrate with his imitation of a mountain lawyer citing a point of law:

"... restraints upon marriage, especially among the lower classes, are evidently detrimental to the public by hindering the increase of the people; and to religion and morality, by encouraging licentiousness and debauchery among the single of both sexes; and thereby destroying one end of society and government, which is concubitus prohibere vago."

She was fascinated by his zeal and the reality of the performance, but after he had halted in the passage, stumbling seriously over the Latin words, the illusion was broken and she felt ashamed at the thought of spying on Jesse from behind a bush and listening to something not meant for her ears. She would go down to him at once.

She Was Fascinated by His Zeal and the Reality of the Performance.

"But then he will see by my face and the direction I come from that I have been listening. I will go back and come across the field."

She climbed back up the rock, and went down the gully through the cleared space to the plowed field, and came down the young corn rows approaching Jesse directly face to face. He saw her coming, not displeased, and he sat on the rock with the book open face down over his knee. When she came up, he was composed.

"I looked for you at the sweet-potato patch," she said as a greeting.

"I was just giving the mule a rest and I got to looking at the picture of Blackstone here..."

He showed her the yellow-tinged engraving of the enormous-appearing man, solid and legal behind the ample contours of his ermine robe; under the careful twistings of the curled fleece wig stood out the bushy black eyebrows, the big eyes that had faced with the confidence of knowledge and experience, judges and juries.

"They wear funny clothes in England," Cynthia said.

He still kept his finger in the page where he was reading.

"Have you read over there?"

"Well, not exactly. Only I got tired of the chapters on the King's Titles, and the King's Prerogative, and his Revenue, and of the Clergy. It didn't seem like it meant anything in this country. So I kind of skipped to this part, 'Of Husband and Wife' and it's right interesting. It says a man has to stand good for his wife's debts as long as she buys necessary common supplies, but not for anything besides necessities."

"Is that what law is?" Cynthia asked.

"Well, that's just one little part. There are so many things here. It makes a body wonder if people really do all the things this book says they mustn't do, and how many people had to do an evil before a law was made about it. It takes a lot of study, and a man needs help on some of it."

"You're going to read with Tandy Morgan, Jesse?"

"That's what I aim to do this fall."

"We'll have ready money, too, and I can go to Pikeville, Mother says."

"The book lays down law on that. It says here, 'The last duty of parents to their children is that of giving them an education suitable to their station in life; a duty pointed out by reason, and of far the greatest importance of any. For... it is not easy to imagine or allow, that a parent has conferred any considerable benefit upon his child by bringing him into the world; if he afterwards entirely neglects his culture and education, and suffers him to grow up like a mere beast, to lead a life useless to others and shameful to himself.' This fellow talks straight words like a lawyer ought."

"You'll be a great lawyer yourself some day," Cynthia said.

"I aim to if I can."

They sat, each with his own thoughts, for a minute in silence.

"Is Reuben a great surveyor?" she asked, interrupting the silence.

"Why, yes. He seems to know a right smart."

"Is he as nice out in the woods as he is about the house?"

"I don't see any change in him."

"I like his way of talking about the Ohio river and things," she said.

Then, rousing from the dream in which he was still partly submerged, he said, "I guess you like him a right smart, don't you?"

The directness of it made her self-conscious and she blushed. She retreated into herself a little way in defense. "I think he's right nice."

"You're in love with him. You've been different since that night he came and you put flowers and a white cloth on the table."

"Why, Jesse, I... Why do you say that?"

"Oh, Reuben is a nice fellow. I don't blame you any."

Cynthia had not meant to speak to Jesse about Reuben. She had merely sat there with her own thoughts but they had moved so quietly and rapidly that the pressure of the under-surge had suddenly escaped into words. "What do you do or say about it to another person, anyway? Would even Jesse understand? A body doesn't do or say anything but lets it have its own way. It sparkles in your heart where no one sees, and it lights up the soul and changes the look of the whole world. You hold it there like it was star vapor from another world or the first green mist of leaves sifting between the willow limbs on Wolfpen and it trembles inside of you with wonder. Maybe if you let it alone and believe in it..."

Cynthia changed the subject skillfully back to Jesse.

"You've sure read a right smart in such a hard book."

"I guess I've been getting along right well."

"I came out to lay some of the potato vines up on the ridges for you."

"You don't need to do that; you got plenty to do. It don't look like we'd have much time for House Field this evening, anyway."

"There's never enough time in the day any more. Can I carry your book back with me if you're not going to use it?"

She took the book, and Jesse roused the mule. It was too late for Cynthia to help in the sweet-potato vines. She went on to the house and got the water bucket and went to the well as the sun slipped off to Saul's headstone, drawing after it a veil of dark. She saw Shellenberger and Mullens coming down the path from the Pinnacle.

It was almost dark when the other men came in. Cynthia could see them from the kitchen, a bustle of men around the wash rock rolling up their sleeves, opening their shirts, soaping and splashing and sputtering; thinking how funny menfolk were when they washed. Reuben had come into the kitchen.

"I hope we haven't put you out, Cynthia, being so late. I had this instrument set up and I wanted to finish off a line before I pulled it up."

"I isn't any trouble at all," she said.

"It was slow going and made us late."

The men were unusually talkative at the table and on the porch after supper. Cynthia sometimes listened.

"Yes, we got around all right," Shellenberger was saying. "We'll cut in through Dry creek and work back. We may have to put in a splash dam to give them a start down Gannon."

"Are you actually going to float logs down Gannon?" Abrah asked.

"We certainly are."

"In rafts?"

"Yes. Small ones."

"Can I take one down?" Abrah demanded.

"You certainly can," Shellenberger said. "But we have to cut the logs first. Do you think we can get good men along the creeks here?"

"There'll be plenty out of these hollows," Sparrel said. "The country is filling up fast and plenty of them have not land enough to keep them busy."

"We'll have to put up a camp there. If you'd rig up a saw on your mill we could rip out boards pretty quick."

"The saw ought to be in now any time," Sparrel said.

So the talk went on while Shellenberger explained about the superiority of oxen over mules in lumbering because they draw heavier loads, require no expensive harness, stand rougher treatment, eat less and cheaper foods and graze at night; and of the number of wedges and wooden mauls and cross-cut saws and axes and spike poles and adzes and peaveys required; and of blacksmithing and the hazards of logging and the carelessness of men even where their necks are in danger.

Cynthia had finished the dishes and was moving the lamp from the table. It flashed against the polished brass of Reuben's compass. "That was the first time he ever called me anything, Cynthia. He says it so nice. I hope we haven't put you out, Cynthia..."

I don't reckon many a man would say it about keeping a supper waiting for them. It was slow going and made us late. You're in love with him. You've been different since that night he came and you put on flowers and a white cloth... I guess things just happen to a body. They happen deep in you when you don't know it, and then one day, like this, suddenly they come out and there they are."

The coming of Shellenberger had not yet destroyed the singular distinction of mood the Sabbath brought to Wolfpen. Since the days of Saul Pattern it had been set apart by the ceremonial of peace and rest from daily toil and elevated above the other days by a touch of solemnity. Church services were rare. Possibly for that reason the Patterns had been at pains to keep alive in their isolation the sense of its difference. This weekly pause between periods of labor, when the mill was silent and the churn and the loom were still, gave to their life some of the ancient dignity which the religions of quiet self-discipline have always conferred upon pastoral peoples.

Sparrel would read in his books and ponder a passage from the Bible. He would go to the barn to look over his stock, or walk into his fields and lean over the topmost bar looking off into the hills which seemed to be affected by the day. Sometimes he would ride in the afternoon to another bottom to see a neighbor or visit the sick. Or he would go to his mill and sit by the pond above the wheel.

But today the thought of his new saw, which he had just brought over from the river on a mule's back, filled the place of a more quiet contemplation. He took Reuben and the boys down to the mill to look over the plan for the circular saw.

"You have seen them work?" he asked of Reuben.

"Yes. Many of them," Reuben said.

Sparrel's pride in his improvement was stimulated by the days of absence from it in the woods. He told Reuben of the earlier Pattern mills and of their gradual transformation into this modern power unit. Reuben listened with the attention of one who found in the recreation of earlier modes of life an enthralling realization of the continuity of the generations and the growth of a culture.

The sight of the old water-wheel and of the two small rough stones which Saul had hewn affected him, for his own people had moved about too often to accumulate these intimate reminders of a family tradition.

"There is something about a mill wheel that I like," he said. "But steam is coming in fast."

"Steam is quicker and works in dry weather," Sparrel said.

They examined the new saw and the shaft which turned the millstones.

"Why don't you put in a separate one for the saw?" Reuben said. "It would be simpler. Then you could just shift the belt over to its wheel and be ready to saw. And it ought to be smaller than the one for the mill because the saw should turn faster." He sketched his idea for the mill, complete from the smaller pulley to the location of the saw and the shuttle for the logs.

"That's it," Sparrel said. "That's it to a T. And I've got just the block of wood in the shop here." Although it was the Sabbath, they went to the shop and Sparrel marked with his pencil the dimensions for the new pulley.

They talked it over and over for a long time, adding nothing to it, but savoring it to the full by making and exchanging words about it.

Then the boys proposed that they go on into Dry Creek Hollow where Shellenberger and Mullens had gone, and see where the lumbering operations were to begin. Reuben excused himself with the plea that he wanted to go over his notes on the last lines of the survey and check them against the deeds to see where he was going before the party proceeded on Monday. He went back toward the house, leisurely, thinking of this place into which he had come, of the native refinement of the people who lived here, and of the fair-skinned girl who had weeks ago made him welcome under conditions so embarrassing to herself. He had said little to her, and she had said perhaps even less to him. But her few words were adequate symbols for revealing to him a dream-touched soul who clothed the commonplace with the radiance of poetry. He had seen this in her face, in the bend of her arm, in the play of her eyes and mouth when she looked at him. He had sensed it in the natural ease of manner which she carried in the presence of these men, and in the slight deference with which she greeted him. He thought of Julia, with her grace and quiet competence, as the beautiful portent of the future years of Cynthia. And so thinking, he came through the barnyard gate. His eyes were on the house, trying to see through it the kind of men whose foresight and energy had built it in this removed place.

Julia had just come to the porch on her way to her flower-beds.

"You are back early, Reuben."

"Yes. I wanted to have a look at the last lines we ran yesterday. The others all went to Dry Creek."

He sat at the table plotting the lines and sketching in the creeks they had crossed and the trees at the corners. Then he journeyed in his mind over the course he had run, contracting it again to the scale of the map and thinking how oddly the mind can get turned around, and be unhappy until its map and the one on paper coincide. He examined the yellowed deeds and drew lightly the course for the next day.

It was part of the fun to try to determine the lines first from the old deeds, and then plot them in as they actually were on the ground. Sometimes they would coincide.

Cynthia came into the kitchen. She was surprised to find herself looking immediately into his eyes.

"Oh! Excuse me," she said.

"Not at all."

"Surveying? And on Sunday?"

"There are so many things to be surveyed here, you have to use every day and Sunday too."

"It's a good day for surveying."

"It's too good to be long indoors. I have finished anyway. I was trying to get yesterday straight in my mind and projecting tomorrow."

Cynthia stood by the table looking at him and at his map, with an artless and unconfused silence, more becoming than speech. She had a way of lifting her head and offering a simple smile that flushed delicately over her face and into her eyes, and became radiant under the coil of rich dark hair.

In this isolated privacy he felt that he was seeing her for the first time. He thought quickly over the weeks he had been here. Always there had been other people, putting strains on relationships simply because they were physically present. When he had seen her and been affected by her, the consciousness of Sparrel or Julia, or the brothers, or the other men, had been there, too, and there was no telling what part of the completed effect was provoked by the graceful and sensitive young girl. Now, Julia was in the garden, beyond this new aura, and all the men were far away on Dry Creek, leaving this moment to Cynthia.

"Do you like it up here?" she asked. But even before she spoke, she felt how irrelevant to the rich and powerful underflow of feeling between them was the convention that nothing really exists until it has been dragged forth from its privacy and trimmed, distorted and then sewn up into words.

And there began two movements through time: the significant but unvoiced understandings and the commonplace of talk.

"I never liked a place better," he said. "Do you like it?"

"It's my home. A body just naturally likes home."

"Well, not for always. People do a lot of moving about. Do you ever wish to go out in the world?"

"I've been to Pikeville. And I'm going over there this fall to the Institute for the winter. Some day I'm to go down the river to the Ohio."

"My people live right on the Ohio river. You can see the mouth of Sandy and the big bend in the Ohio from our porch. And see the big steamboats come around it. In the night-time, when there is a moon, they look like a great swan with a black neck and a string of red and green beads around it. I guess that sounds kind of funny."

"Oh, no. I like to think that way about things."

They both felt suddenly confused. He put down the pencil he had been playing with, and arose from the smooth-worn hickory chair.

"It's a fine day," Reuben said. "Could we walk, or sit somewhere a while?"

"Let's do," she said.

They strolled across the yard to the path along Julia's garden fence. Julia was among her sweetpeas pulling off the faded blooms.

"You certainly have a fine garden, Mrs. Pattern," Reuben said.

"It's not quite so good this year," Julia replied.

The soft part of the afternoon lay quiet over the valley.

"We're going to sit a little while up there on the rock by the sycamore," Cynthia said.

"Well, don't go far," Julia said, following them with her eyes to the shaded spot by the creek in full view of the house and garden.

They felt strangely happy to be removed from all places where they had been in company with other people, and to be alone together in a new place whose only associations were those they were now making.

"We found some nice spots back in the woods," Reuben said. "I like the way the hollows fork off on each side of Wolfpen, like ribs on a wahoo leaf."

"Some parts of the place I have never been to," she said. "I like best the Pinnacle and Cranesnest and the hollows here by the house. I don't know whether they're best when the spicewood begins to bud and the white dogwood blooms, or in September when the wild touch-me-nots are waist high with yellow-and-red-spotted bags and two red-ears on each one, and bumblebees crowding down into them and shouldering the yellow dust."

"That sounds the best," Reuben said.

"It's right pretty when the creek freezes over and the bushes are glazed with ice and the snow hangs on the pine trees. I guess it is always a good place to be."

The white limbs of the sycamore tree caught in the light of the sun, and the ground and the creek were in movement with shadow splotches.

"You'll be getting the survey done soon now, I guess?"

"It won't be so very much longer now before it is finished, I'm afraid."

"Then what will you do?"

"I'll see if it closes on the map, and then I'll take it back home and my father will or maybe I will make the calculations and fix up the papers."

"Does that take a long time?"

"Not long like the field work."

"You don't have to come back any more after you've finished running it?"

"That depends. I might have to come back about the piece cut off for Shellenberger." There was a long pause. Then he added, "When do you go to Pikeville?"

"In September. Jesse's going too, but he hasn't told Daddy yet. He's to read law with Tandy Morgan."

"I think that will be fine."

"Are you going to follow surveying?"

"Yes. There's lots of work to do in this country. And the towns are growing, and the counties thinking about roads. I want to be the county surveyor some day."

"Oh, that would be a fine job for a man. As good as the law."

"I kind of hate to see a place like this go over to a man like Shellenberger to cut into. The Big Sandy slopes where the timber is cut off are awful looking things."

"It's just the part down the creek and you won't see it from here. But sometimes at night I can hear the trees talking about what's about to happen to them and it goes from one to another all over the hills and dies away in a sigh on our creek. Still, I reckon people need timber."

"I reckon."

They sat in silence, listening to the life all about them.

"Isn't all this cooking and boarding so many too hard on just you and your mother?" It came so suddenly and without preparation that she was startled. She lifted her hand from the moss, and dropped it into her lap, clasping the other.

"Why, no, Reuben. A body just don't think much about it."

"Your mother looks a little worn out. Don't you think so?"

"I guess I just hadn't thought of it."

"It's after washing and ironing, or something, I've noticed. And she likes to be out in her garden."

"She told Daddy she didn't need extra help."

"Are Shellenberger and Mullens staying on here while they lumber?"

"I don't know," Cynthia said, "I reckon so."

He had surprised her again by this kind of observation which menfolk did not make. She turned and looked full at him.

"You're different, Reuben."

He smiled at her, a singularly rare and engaging smile.

"Different how and from what?"

"I don't know how to say it. But you are."

"Well, so then are you."

He felt the thrill of these advances which came unwilled into being, and then as curiously retreated.

"Is Doug Mason what you call different?" he asked.

"No. Why him?"

"Oh, I have seen him look at you and watched him when you are around. Do you... Are you old friends?"

"He's a good boy and runs the place since his Daddy died. He's a... he's just a good neighbor and his mother's not well."

That brought another silence, Reuben wondering just why he said anything about Doug Mason, who came sometimes in the evening to visit the Patterns but said very little and looked often at Reuben. Cynthia turned the name over in her mind and wondered what thing lay so powerfully in her heart that she had said he was just a good neighbor.

"He has a big 'seng patch he's going to make a lot of money on." There was no way for Reuben to know that she was offering him the secret which Doug had laid with devotion before her. She glanced at him, her eyes turned down Wolfpen.

SOWING AND REAPING

Lesson Text: Galatians 6:1-10.
Devotional Reading: Gal. 5:16-24.

Approach

This lesson was selected that the great principle truth advocated in the text may have its bearing on the temperance question.

It is a grave question in the minds of many Christians whether a Christian should engage in the work of outlawing liquor.

It is not a question whether it is better from an outward standpoint or not. Surely anyone knows that alcohol makes a strong person weak and a weak person weaker. It destroys character because it destroys man physically. Who can gainsay it? Surely anyone can see that it is better for the world and better for any community that the law forbid the sale of any alcoholic drinks for any purpose.

God has commissioned the Christian. The work he is to do for the glory of God is a work that takes root in the heart of the ones benefited, directly. Good cannot be lawed in, neither can evil be lawed out. The will and choice of the man himself must be gained. He must have a work of God, wrought in his own heart, reshaping and putting a new purpose within it. When that work is done, there will be no need of law, for the one affected is "without law." He will neither kill, steal, falsify; nor will he need to be forced to do right.

The fundamental principles of Christianity, as stated in our lesson text are, therefore, very applicable.

Historical Setting

Paul wrote the letter to the Galatians about A. D. 57. Galatia is a province of Asia Minor and the churches there were composed of Gentile Christians.

THE HEART OF THE LESSON

Introduction

The basic principle of Christian fellowship is brotherhood. The basic principle of fellowship of the non-Christian is citizenship.

By making the Christian religion a state religion, Emperor Constantine strove to mix the two. This is confusing and the tap-root of apostasy. "The Brotherhood of Man and the Fatherhood of God," is a doctrine that does not emanate from God. No one is a brother to a Christian until he himself becomes a Christian. There is no such thing (in reality) as a Christian nation.

The worldly minded Christian may find consolation and comfort in the fact that he is a member of some religious society, or a citizen of a so-called Christian nation. But that does not change his nature. No one is a member of the Kingdom of God because of such things. One may be a member of any kind of an organization without being born again. But not one can be in the Kingdom of God without being a new creature (Jno. 3:3, 5).

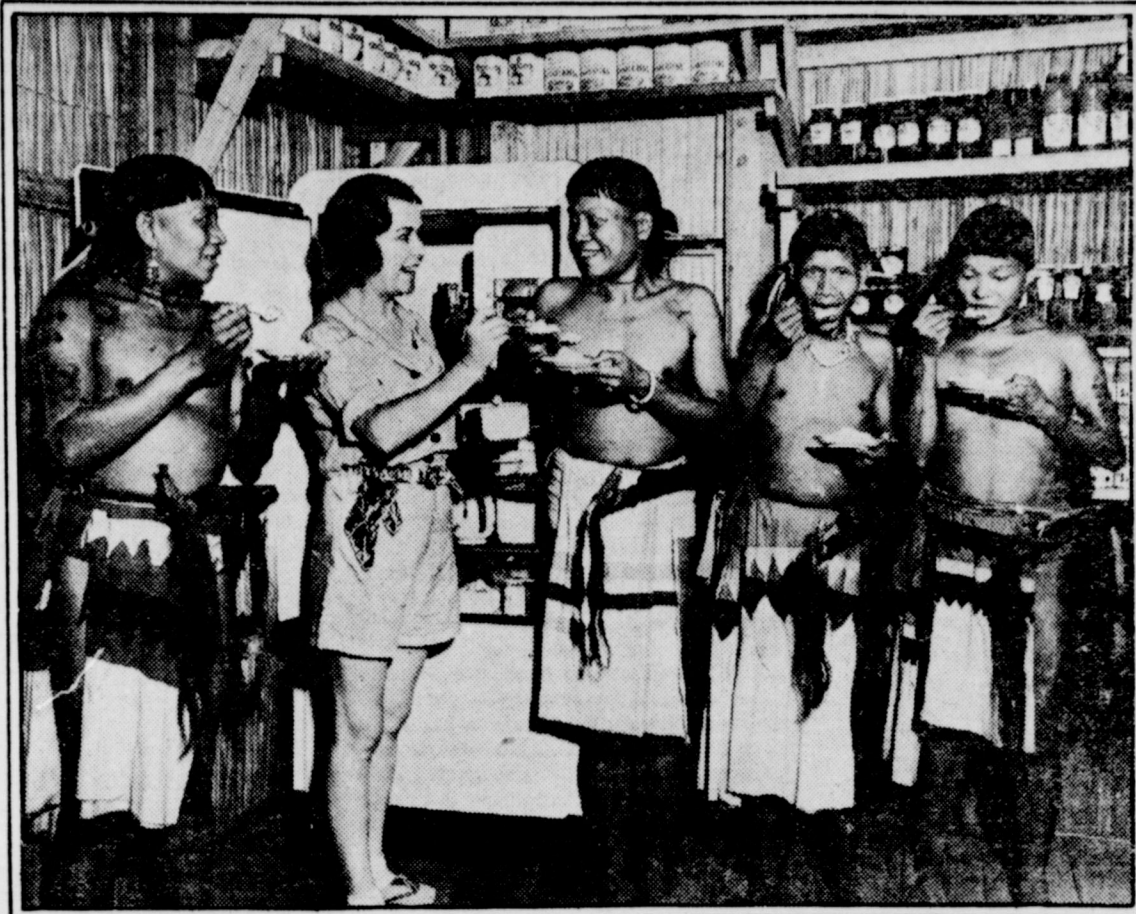

The Golden Text

(V. 7) "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Paul makes the application of this text in the next word: "For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."

Satan, "the god of this world" (2 Cor. 4:4), seeks to work confusion in the minds of men and women that they may not draw a clear-cut line between good and evil. There is a wide margin between in which all

Natives of Borneo Jungles Taste Their First Ice Cream... and Like It

Native workers around the camp of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson in the heart of the Borneo jungles like ice cream so much that Mrs. Johnson is probably going to have a time of it keeping up with the demand. One of Mrs. Johnson's pastimes, when she isn't busy helping Mr. Johnson film the sound pictures of wild animal life with which the Borneo jungles abound, is making frozen desserts for the white members of the expedition. A few weeks ago, she decided to treat the native helpers, and any one can see by looking at the accompanying picture what the effect on these Borneo natives was when they tasted ice cream for the first time. Mrs. Johnson looks as pleased as the natives.

Telling about her picturesque introduction of ice cream as an addition to the native diet in the jungles, Mrs. Johnson said: "They liked it very much, and like Oliver Twist, are always asking for more."

This ice cream feast in a dense tropical jungle where the temperature is perhaps hotter than anywhere else in the world, could not have been accomplished if the Johnsons had not taken with them to Borneo two kerosene-operated refrigerators as part of the scientific equipment of the expedition. These were made available by the manufacturers of Electrolux refrigerators at Evansville, Indiana.

The Johnson sound pictures are being made for the American Museum of Natural History, and are also to be shown in moving picture houses throughout the world. The explorers will remain in Borneo two years. This is the first time that modern refrigeration has been used in an exploration of this kind, and certainly the first time that "home-made" ice-cream has been fed to native tropical tribesmen.

Be Not Weary In Well Doing

The eternal law of God is that men will reap what they sow. This law holds just as truly in the sowing of good seed as it does in the sowing of the evil. We are admonished, therefore, not to give up in "well doing" for the harvest time is coming and we are fully assured that it will be wheat and not tares. "He that soweth to the flesh shall reap corruption," yes. But it is equally true that "he that soweth to the Spirit shall reap life everlasting." And God will not delay the harvest.

As We Have Opportunity

There are plenty of opportunities for a Christian to exercise himself in spirituality. Kindness and helpfulness towards others is "exercising thyself in godliness." See with what care he points out "especially towards them that are of the household of faith."

LESSON QUIZ

1. Do you believe the lesson is well selected? 2. Should we force Christianity upon others? 3. Should a Christian engage in law enforcement? 4. Should his efforts in this direction be restricted to helping them become Christians? 5. Is "restore such an one," "law enforcement?" 6. Is there any exception to the law of sowing and reaping? 7. Will the fact that one is a member of some religious organization mellow the judgment of God on a sinful life? 8. Is the "holier than thou" a Christian attitude towards the weak? 9. Quote the Golden Text. 10. What is the contrast made in verse 8?

PERMANENT SILENCE OF ELECTROLUX
REFRIGERATION

IT'S THE RESULT of the basically different method of Electrolux operation (no machinery at all!)... the key to every one of the famous Electrolux advantages:

- 1 No moving parts to wear
- 2 Lasting efficiency
- 3 Continued low operating cost
- 4 Fullest food protection
- 5 Savings that pay for it

THE silent operation of Electrolux amazes a lot of people until they learn how much more simply Electrolux works than any other refrigerator. In Electrolux, a tiny gas burner takes the place of all moving parts. That's why it's the only refrigerator that is able to offer the comfort of permanent freedom from noise... as well as all the other big, long-life advantages listed above.

See the new 1936 models on display at our showroom. Today, more than half a million Electrolux are serving faithfully, economically, in homes the country over. This year's Electrolux offers even more in efficiency, convenience, and beauty. Ask about our liberal purchase plan.

Good Amateur Fight Card Monday Night

Another fight card, made up of several bouts, was presented at the high school athletic field here Monday night. Headlining the program was a class 3-round tilt between Louis Cain of Briscoe and Allen Shewmaker, Shamrock. Declared a draw, Cain retains his undefeated record.

Lindsay Davis, Wheeler, lost to J. E. Shewmaker, Shamrock, in a 3-round go.

Morris Cook, Twitty negro, stopped his colored opponent, Smiling Jack, in the third frame of a proposed 4-round bout.

Hesper Young and Gene Matthews, both of Briscoe, mixed things vigorously if not scientifically in their three rounds of active endeavor. Young drew the decision.

Methodist Revival to Close Sunday Evening

"Jesus of Nazareth Is Passing By" Subject of Final Sermon in Two Weeks Series

Sunday evening's services, starting at 8:30, will bring to a close the two weeks revival series at the First Methodist church in Wheeler.

Rev. Webb has been bringing some forceful and heart searching sermons. Many members of the church have reconsecrated themselves to the Christian life and all who attended the services have been edified. Eight adults have given their names for church membership.

Sermon subjects: Friday morning—"The Conquest of Fear."

Friday night—"After Harvest." Saturday night—"Waiting for Ships that Never Come In."

Sunday morning—"Vagabonds from Home." Sunday night—"Jesus of Nazareth Is Passing By."

The public is encouraged to take advantage of these few remaining services.

Lamb Family Enjoys Reunion Last Sunday

First Time for D. B. Lamb Children to All Be With Parents at Same Time

(By MRS. CLAUDE LAMB)

Held at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Lamb in the Plainview community last Sunday, their family reunion was distinguished by an unusual incident. It was the first occasion in their lives when the Lamb children were all at home at the same time. The two younger children were born after the eldest son, Ernest, left home 23 years ago, and this was the first visit he had made with his parents and brothers and sisters since.

Seventy-four persons were present, 65 of them partaking of the picnic-style lunch. The day was spent visiting and talking over old times. Photographs and snap-shots were taken of the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Lamb have nine children and 22 grandchildren, all being present except one grandson who lives in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Those present for lunch included Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lamb and children, Cincinnati, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Archie Lamb and children, Dimmitt; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Lamb and daughter, Wynema, McLean; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Pepper and children, Magic City; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lamb and children, Plainview community; Mr. and Mrs. Theo Scott and daughter, Moetta, Ramsdell; Mr. and Mrs. Grover Lamb and son, Jimmie Don, Kings Mill; Mr. and Mrs. Claude Lamb, Plainview community; Mr. and Mrs. Guy Pharis and children, Magic City; children, and the honorees, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Lamb.

Mrs. G. W. Cates, Mr. and Mrs. Yuel Lamb and children, Pampa; Mr. and Mrs. David Lamb and Mr. and Mrs. Oren Mead and children, Reed, Okla.; Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Eller, Mr. and Mrs. W. Z. Baker and son, W. Z., and Mrs. Paul Cody and children, Plainview community; Mr. and Mrs. Leon Pike and children of near Shamrock and Mr. Addison, the photographer, of Shamrock, guests.

Those who called in the afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Anglin and Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Crowder of near Wheeler; Margaret Bones, Shamrock; Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Brown, Plainview community, and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Anglin, Wheeler.

Pension Applications Will Be Investigated

Rep. Eugene Worley Assured Early Action Certain on Old-Age Claims in District

Definite assurance that all applications for old-age pensions in the Amarillo district would be investigated before the end of the month was given State Representative Eugene Worley of Shamrock, by Orville S. Carpenter, executive director of the Texas Old-Age Assistance commission, in Austin last week.

Worley returned Sunday after making a trip to Austin to intercede in behalf of hundreds of needy and aged people whose applications for old-age pensions have not been acted upon.

"Out of a total of 4,173 applications from the 20 counties comprising the Panhandle district I found 3,046 had been investigated," said the state representative. "This percentage of 73 is much higher, I found than for the whole state, which is only 52 per cent."

"Carpenter gave me assurance all applications now pending are being investigated as rapidly as possible and that all of them will be acted on before the end of the month."

Representative Worley said cases had been called to his attention, where aged persons in dire circumstances are not getting their pensions while neighbors who are better off financially, are getting their checks. He said old-age assistance officials are rushing investigations in these cases and pointed out that as soon as an application is acted upon favorably, checks are mailed for past-due payments as well as for the current month. Each person qualifying will receive payments from July 1.

Special School Board Meeting Next Monday

A called meeting of the Wheeler County School board is dated for Monday, August 17, at 1 p. m., states an announcement issued by County Superintendent B. T. Rucker. Principal object of the meeting is to complete details of the school transportation program for the coming year.

Agreement on a 30-mile speed limit for buses was reached at the last meeting of the board. Strict regulations covering operation of the buses and conduct of drivers are contemplated.

The board has unanimously agreed that no person will be employed as driver of any school bus who has been a user of intoxicating liquors within recent years, if such fact is known to local trustees and patrons. If, after employment, such drivers are found to be drinkers, their services will terminate. Other irregularities of such employes will be treated in like manner.

H. M. Wiley, county board president, urges all trustees and patrons interested in the transportation system of county schools to attend Monday's meeting.

HIGHWAY MARKER RECORDS WHEELER COUNTY HISTORY

A Centennial highway marker has recently been erected at the edge of the slab on U. S. 83 a half mile north of town. Resting on a native stone foundation, an ashlar of pink and gray granite stands about 40 inches high by 36 inches wide and 30 inches deep.

On its slightly inclined top rests a bronze plaque with the following inscription:

"Wheeler county formed from Young and Bexar territories. Created August 21, 1876; organized April 12, 1879. Named in honor of Royal T. Wheeler, 1810-1864; associate justice supreme court of Texas, 1844-58; chief justice supreme court, 1858-64. "County seat, Mobettie, 1897-1906. Wheeler since the latter date."

On the front of the stone is attached an emblem, also fashioned of bronze. It consists of a star within a circle bearing the words: "Texas Highway Department, 1936."
