Williams is regularly assigned to the 56th Artillery's Battery D in Pirmasens. He entered the Army in September 1958 and arrived overseas in August 1959.

The 20-year-old soldier is a 1958 graduate of Lamosa High School.

BIG DIFFERENCE—There is a big difference between the peanuts Hezzie Dean, left, president of the newly organized Southwest Peanut Research Foundation, holds and those held by Angus Dickson, Comanche County agricultural agent. Dean is showing Dickson a vine from the 1960 crop affected with fungus disease, "Southern Blight." The vine Dickson holds is not affected. Southern Blight has been described as the "number one peanut disease problem in the West Cross Timbers peanut area." The new research foundation hopes to find the answer to stamping out the disease.

MARIE BONEY SAYS

Listening Habits Of Americans Bad

How well do you listen to what you hear?

There is a story told of the man who decided to test the actual listening being done by those in the receiving line of a wedding reception.

He shook each hand, murmuring, "My grandmother was buried this afternoon."

"Just wonderful, thank you", beamed the bride's mother.

"Oh, thank you", gushed the bride.

"So glad you could come", said the groom.

The groom patted his shoulder and advised him to marry soon himself.

Of course, husbands are the world's worst listeners. One wife of several decades declares her husband's hearing fails when the garbage needs to be taken out, she needs a loaf of bread from the store, or wants to tell him how serious overweight can be she elaborated, "The only words he understands me to say are "go shopping" or "plan to buy" and he picks them up perfectly from a distance of 20 feet".

She may have gone into detail as to his reactions to those words, but I didn't hear the rest of it.

It is dangerous to half-listen to children. A mother may murmur assent just to stop the questioning only to discover later that Junior is swinging the cat by the tail because he has her express permission to do so.

Thinking he said the cat under the swing had a tail, his mother naturally felt safe in agreeing to anything that likely.

You often hear stories such as the one where one woman rushed up to another and exclaimed: "John Doe just fell dead with a heart attack" and the second woman gasped, "Oh, no! Did it kill him?"

Therefore, you have a choice of letting your own children grow up to be half-listeners or perfect listeners.

We started out as firm believers in the latter practice. Practically every hour, we shook at least one child by his shoulders, threatening dire consequences if he didn't immediately change his habits.

"You listen to every word I say to you and then do exactly as I tell you to do", one of us was saying all the time. Our neighbors will be happy to have this explained, I'm sure, as they must have wondered why we continued to play a broken record of a tune not even on the hit parade.

Anyway, Carla grew not only in height but also in pure contrariness as three-year-olds are wont to do. One hectic Sunday morning at our house, I repeatedly told her to put on her shoes and socks as she was a big

Plan Is Approved by Commission to Light Courthouse at Night

An Eastland Chamber of Commerce committee headed by Virgil Seaberry Jr. has completed details with the County Commission to light up the courthouse at night.

FB Members to Attend Abilene Meat Meeting

A number of Eastland County Farm Bureau members plan to attend a meat promotional meeting Sept. 27 in Abilene, according to Glenn Justice, president of the local county farm organization.

Those who have indicated they will attend include: Henry Fry, Cisco, R. L. Ricks, Cisco, and John Love, Ranger.

Sponsored by the Texas Meat Industry Committee, the Abilene meeting is one of 10 being held over the state to stimulate interest in meat promotion and to explain the work being done by the National Livestock and Meat Board in this field. The state committee was organized last year to advise and assist the national board in promotional activities in Texas.

B. J. Gist, Texas Farm Bureau, will be chairman of the meeting in Abilene which will begin at 10 a. m. and be concluded by about 3 p. m.

Participating in the area educational meeting will be representatives of the state committee, national board and the Texas Extension Service. A film, "Meat Cookery," produced and distributed by the NLSMB will be shown. Representatives of the national board will discuss industry-wide promotional and research activities. Extension officials will explain the educational and promotional work being done in Texas.

The Texas Meat Industry Committee is comprised of representatives of the following Texas organizations and agencies: Farm Bureau, Sheep & Goat Raisers, Independent Meat Packers, Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers, Short-horn Breeders, Beef Council, Swine Breeders, Livestock Marketing, Livestock Auction Marketing, Restaurant Association, Extension Service, Retail Grocers, State Department of Agriculture.

James H. Phillips Qualifies as M-1 Expert in Germany

Army Specialist Four James H. Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas O. Phillips, Route 1, Eastland, recently qualified as an expert in firing the M-1 rifle while serving with the 37th Artillery in Germany.

Specialist Phillips, a welder in the artillery's Service Battery in Dachau, entered the Army in April 1958, completed basic training at Fort Carson, Colo., and arrived overseas the following December.

The 21-year-old soldier is a 1957 graduate of Eastland High School, and was associated with Phillips Welding and Blacksmithing, Eastland, before entering the Army.

Commissioners, in a split vote approved a plan offered by the Eastland C-C whereby Eastland citizens will end up paying half of the cost of the lights.

The county agreed to help pay for installing the lights, provided they could do so out of the permanent improvement fund, and providing that the county's cost does not exceed $600.

Seaberry told the court that the Chamber of Commerce is willing to raise $270 in Eastland funds, and he reasoned that Eastland taxpayers are paying an additional amount of the tax load to push their quota up to 50 percent of the cost of the project.

Three commissioners, J. B. (Tip) Arther of Eastland, B. M. Bennett of Gorman and Bob Carter of Rising Star, voted in favor of the plan. Carl Lamb of Cisco voted against the plan and County Judge John Hart declined to vote on the issue.

Plans call for placing mercury vapor spot lights around the courthouse so that it can be seen for miles around at night. The courthouse was originally lighter at night, but during the depression years the lights were not used. Since then the old equipment and wiring has been ruined.

World War I Vets Set Eastland Meet

Veterans of World War One are now on the march to build a district-wide membership campaign throughout Congressional District 17 and will hold their first county-wide rally in Eastland on Sept. 15, at 7:30 p.m. in the commissioners courtroom at the courthouse, stated District Commander H. The 1961 program of the Veterans of World War One calls for a pension of $100.00 per month exempting social security as income in figuring the needs of a veteran for pension purposes, along with better hospital services for the aging veterans and their widows, stated Commander Evans.

However, State Commander Evans stated the non-serviced connected veterans of World War One secured the passage in the last

Can Eastland Afford A Piano for Joyce?

Can you look back in your life and remember a time when you wanted something very badly and you were willing to save for it and work for it, but it seemed a hopeless task at times? Just when it seemed most hopeless, someone stepped forward to offer help. Can you feel again the warm glow that enveloped you at that moment? Not only were you grateful for the help, but the knowledge that people are kind and loving and willing to help sustained you.

There is a girl in our area who has a dream. She is working and saving to fulfill it and she expects no help. Can you imagine what help from a completely unexpected source would give this girl?

Joyce is a nine-year-old, straight-A student. Her home is broken; not by death or divorce, but by a tragedy which any day could rend your own home asunder: mental illness.

Mental illness is striking more people in the United States today than ever before and the highest rate of emotional trouble is found in women between twenty and forty.

Her mother was a typical busy wife and mother until two years ago. No one can say exactly what triggered her breakdown, but psychoanalysts are agreed that what happened to her could happen to anyone—meaning you—if not to the same extent, at least to some degree.

This girl has been kept neat, clean, and well-mannered by a bevy of aunts and friends who immediately formed a protective, loving circle around her.

But her mother is confined to a hospital for an indefinite period. Her too-small-for-school brother and sister are with relatives in another town. Her father must work to support the children, pay an ever-mounting medical bill, go to visit his wife, go to visit his babies. There is no lack of love for his oldest daughter, just a lack of time occasionally. His life, which was normal and happy prior to this trouble, is now heart-rendering and back-breaking.

This girl attends school and church, where her musical talent is evidenced by her singing, without self pity. There are brief moments, however, when her wall of control crumbles and the young heart outraces the mind to pour forth the loneliness.

She receives a dress from a friend. Happiness shines in her eyes, then dims, as she explains, "My mother used to make me lots of new dresses".

Spending the night in the home of a school-mate, at bedtime, she looks shyly up at the mother of the home, asking, "Will you kiss me goodnight?"

And then there is the money. At church one day a woman gave Joyce 50 cents to buy whatever she wanted. Remember that school is expensive, illness of any kind is more so. Trips to other towns cost money. Fifty cents: so many needed things; over a year since her father could afford to hand this child 50 cents and say "do as you like with it."

Joyce chose a piano. Her parents had promised her one "when you are older". But they didn't know their world was to be torn apart before she was older. She put the 50 cents away and has added to it until now she has almost $6.

A piano is normally not a necessity. Thousands of children reach maturity without ever having one. For this one child, however it is a necessity. Normally, her parents would have provided her with one; under the circumstances, it is out of the realm of possibility. There is no chance that at the present rate, she can save enough to buy one.

Each time a friend gives her any chance, she regards it gravely, wondering, "Now let's see, how much will this make me? How long until I can buy my piano?"

Who will tell her? Who will say to her, "It won't make you much. You'll be a much older girl before you ever get a piano?"

Will you do it? Maybe you could do it this way: "Now, look, child, I know you have to come home each day to a house which screams out at you 'don't run in to see Mother—she isn't here'". I know you want to cry each time you see some toy to remind you your little brother and sister can't be here now. I know how you feel when your friends get that mother's kiss at bedtime.

"Yes, I see all this. Furthermore, I know none of your problems are of making, nor of your parents' making. If educated adults, doctors, can't understand all this, I realize you can't. But don't you turn to music for comfort. Oh, you can sing to vent emotions, to keep from crying when you're alone. Just don't expect a piano at your house, because it can't be.

"Be realistic. After all, you're nine years old".

Bringing Joyce's mother home fully recovered is not within your power. Creating again for this family a normal happy home is beyond your reach. The only thing you can do is join with others to hand a small girl a dream.

A second hand piano—too expensive for one little child—could be purchased and delivered by a town full of people who are kind and loving and willing to help. This girl could, in later years, remember again the warm glow which flooded her when she realized people were interested in her.

To the Editor:

Seldom do I write a public letter; but when I saw the death of hundreds of birds out in Eastland Cemetery I just had to come to their defense.

There are literally hundreds of dead birds out there, victims of poisoned grain that the city has put out for the control of gophers and ground squirrels. In a two block area in the old section I counted 94 dead bodies of birds. Among them were mocking birds, doves and a rare bird, the beautiful golden-headed blackbird, of which I counted eight.

Too often people discuss mental illness in lowered voices, forgetting it is a common thing and no respecter of persons. This child could always remember that her fellow citizens were far too intelligent to do that. Would you call Main 9-1707 if you have a piano you would sell; or if you would be able to deliver it? And if you could give any amount of money to help pay for it mark it "A PIANO FOR JOYCE" and either send or bring it to the Eastland Telegram office. While thus helping create wonderful memories for Joyce, you would automatically come buy one for yourself: of the time you sent music into her suddenly-solemn life of a girl who needed a piano. Just a piano to stand there and look solid in her shaken world. A piano whose keys could be caressed by fingers which haven't lately grasped a mother's hand. A piano to give forth notes to blend with her childish voice—notes to fill a girl's mind and heart.
