American People Are Capable Of Facing Up To The Austere Facts

Almost certainly the slogan that enabled Woodrow Wilson to win the 1918 election (by a hair) was, "He kept us out of war." Quite possibly this left the impression with the then German government that America would not go to war, an impression that had been heightened by Mr. Wilson's mis-understanding "too proud to fight" remark. Thus emboldened, the Germans went ahead to commit more and more offenses against U. S. shipping, and to spread sabotage and nameless terror throughout the country.

That did it. America finally went to war. The U. S. took a lot of abuse from the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo Axis before Pearl Harbor finally pulled us into war. That incident unified the country and prepared our people psychologically for war. Even so, we were not then prepared for war on the physical side, thanks to pre-war Harbor bickering, the incessant activities of the isolationists and the pacifists, and the historic reluctance of America to deliver the first blow.

Revising Of Codes Would Raise Effectiveness Of The Committees

Although some Republicans—including their Senate leader, William Knowland—have commented lately on the need for tightening the rules governing activities of investigating committees, it does not necessarily follow that anything will be done about it. Action was perhaps delayed or killed by proposals for a new code introduced in the Senate Thursday. It was introduced by 19 senators, all Democrats except Morse of Oregon, classified as an Independent. If the GOP leadership ever had any intention of asking for revision, they daltied too long and the Democrats beat them to the punch. This may mean no action at this time, since the Republicans are in firm control of committees.

Senator Kefauver (D-Tenn.), whose investigation into crime created a national sensation, but few complaints of high-handed methods—almost altogether from the investigated—was one of the 19 signers of the proposals introduced this week. He asserted that "sensational investigations... have given vast numbers of the American people a completely mistaken impression" of Congress and that rules of fair play should be set up. Among the suggested changes: a ban on one-man secret hearings, assurance that witnesses have the right to counsel, and requiring advance notice of charges. Supporters of Senator McCarthy claim that ordinary methods cannot get results in exposing Communists and fellow-travelers. They also say the ends justify the means, which merely echoes what the Communists themselves often argue.

Communists Try To Worm Way Back Into Hollywood's Studios

Since April, 1951, a two-phase program developed in Hollywood, which is probably the best example of cleansing an industry of a heavy Communist infiltration. This effort was initiated by certain members of motion picture management and by a group of self-appointed anti-Communists who believed that the problems of Hollywood could be solved without hatred, without vindictiveness, even with an anxiety to win back to constructive Americanism those who had wandered away.

break known to the world. Psychologically this is one of the most difficult tasks any person can face. It sometimes takes years of self-examination, of confession and contrition before that step can be taken. Anyone who has had experience with this problem knows this to be true. Of some 300 persons with which this group dealt, possibly only one is generally regarded as a backslider and nobody is sure about him.

The turnover among Communists, particularly among intellectuals and talented persons, has been enormous since 1949, but many who have left the party fear that one of the consequences of confession is ridicule and rejection, and sensitive people dread both reactions. The problem then was to find a formula for restoring those who were sincere in their conversion to usefulness in their professions, so that they could serve their country as ardently as they once served its enemy.

The first break in this particular effort was when Roy Brewer of the IATSE ceased to be a labor leader. He went into management; he remained president of the Motion Picture Alliance, the most effective anti-Communist organization in Hollywood. Brewer's value to the anti-Communist cause was the fact that his attitude was related to saving an industry, in which the members of his union worked, not only from Communist infiltration but from popular resistance, arising out of such infiltration, which meant loss of jobs. Most of the others in this activity had different reasons, strictly ideological reasons, but Brewer's was a position that management had to take seriously.

The second phase was the effort to bring back to positive Americanism and to make effective in every way men and women who had once been Communists or who had been associated with Communist activities. This phase of the work has often been misunderstood. It gave the entirely erroneous impression that a group of self-appointed anti-Communists were "clearing" former Communists. No one can "clear" another person; it can only be done by the individual himself as an act of conscience. After the program got going, some persons set themselves up as "clearers" commercially. This did not seriously affect the program.

talented and sensitive men and women were encouraged to move through that profoundly emotional period between breaking with the Communist Party and making the

McCarthy Leaves Some Questions Not Answered On Commies In Defense Plants

WASHINGTON (AP)—The public will have a muddier idea of what is meant unless the senators and principals in the Army-McCarthy hearings get more specific on Communists in defense plants. Sen. McCarthy repeatedly throughout the hearing has said there were Communists in defense plants. He has put the number at 130, and said they are in "dangerous positions."

Department were asked last night to explain just what the Defense Department can and cannot do about Communists in defense plants and this was the reply: There is no law giving the Defense Department the power to order a Communist fired from a plant where it has a contract. It can only tell an employer doing secret work for the government that an employe, considered a security risk, cannot work on the secret project.

For the sake of my offspring, I'm thinking about changing my name—to something like Aabbe, for instance. I've stood at my share of the tail-ends of lines, which always seem to be formed alphabetically. And I don't see any justice in two generations of the same family having to go through with that.

When this happened, some second job in a jeep would drive by hollering "Close up, close up, you look like a bunch of cattle spread out thisaway!" So they started closing up the gaps, and by the time all the slack was taken out the people on the back had run a mile just to catch up. Then it all started over again. My theory was that all the hikers ought to have jeeps and let the lieutenant walk.

McCarthy, Mundt 'Game' Would Lead To Anarchy In Government

After the hearings were resumed last week, the crucial issue became more sharply defined. Sen. McCarthy had said on Thursday that it was the "duty" of Federal employes to give him secret information, even though it was against the law or contrary to the orders of the President. On Friday the Attorney General, on the express authority of the President, declared that this was an attempt to usurp the obligations and duties of the Executive. Sen. McCarthy replied the same day by inviting all Federal employes to disregard what the President had said, to violate the law secretly and to disobey the orders of the President as classified information: He, Sen. McCarthy would protect them against the consequences of violating the law and of disobeying orders.

ble members of Congress a refusal or an incapacity in the Executive to perform its task, should a Congressional investigation be authorized. That is not, so it would seem, Sen. Mundt's view. He seems to think that the first and very nearly the only way to deal with wrong-doing is to institute an investigation. It is not the first and it is not the only way. Only when all else fails, and there is no remedy in the Executive branch, is there any cause and ground for an investigation by Congress into the administration of an Executive department.
