

Senate Defeats Plan To Pay Off Bonus Jail Threatened For Roeser And Two Others Figuring In Fight

Appearance Of Men Asked By Committee

Men Would Show Cause Why Contempt Action Should Be Quashed

AUSTIN (AP)—A house committee that investigated a fight in which Rep. Gordon Burns of Huntsville was injured Friday recommended three alleged participants appear before the house and show reason why they should not be adjudged in contempt. The committee named Charles F. Roeser of Fort Worth, Bryan Payne of Tyler and W. C. Strouble of Corsicana in its complaint, and suggested that if the three should fail to show why they should not be held in contempt they be "committed to imprisonment in the county jail of Travis county for a period of 48 hours to purge themselves of said contempt."

MacDonald

Underneath all the ballyhoo on the Roosevelt-MacDonald conferences was an unfortunate situation which prevented Mr. Roosevelt getting what he wanted. Our officials found out early in the game that Premier MacDonald is no longer the leader of Britain. He was far from being the bold Labor Party Premier who came here four years ago with his Government staunchly behind him. He looked the same. The only difference was that his eye trouble seemed to bother him. He wore double-thick lenses on his glasses. He seemed very tired. That probably would have made no difference if he felt he had a government behind him at home.

The whisper in the best British circles was that if Mr. Roosevelt wanted to consult the British government he should have called over three other men: Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade and Stanley Baldwin, president of the Privy Council. These men are all conservatives. Their views usually differ from MacDonald's.

The Conservatives are clearly taking charge of Republican affairs in Congress. The first breakthrough from Roosevelt was led by Senator Reed. He Congratulations to the Big Spring school board for not making further reductions in teachers' salaries for the 1933-34 session!

The teachers never were paid very well and the heavy reductions made in the past two years here and in most every other place have knocked the general level of "salary" pay to such a low point that it will be years before they again receive reasonable salaries.

Big Spring Red And White Stores Observing Second Anniversary

Dakota Queen

The Red and White Stores of Big Spring observing their second anniversary, Friday issued a statement of appreciation to the public: It is with pride and satisfaction that the Red & White merchants of Big Spring look back upon the two years of successful merchandising, two years of serving their community with high grade food products since their organization in 1931. Their loyal service and co-operation has helped solve an international problem that threatened the nation some twelve years ago, when the independent merchant had to cope with the highly organized chain stores, who, establishing their stores in every town, buying their products from foreign markets and sending their earnings out of the home town, almost brought ruin to the independent merchant and doing the community no service.

30 Apply For Enlistment In Civilian Army

None Accept As Yet By Relief Officer Homer McNew

More than thirty men between the ages of 18 and 25 had applied through Relief Officer Homer McNew Friday for enlistment in the reforestation corps. None had been accepted. Big Spring will be allowed to recruit forty-seven men for the work, according to McNew. Only four will be selected immediately. They will be sent to Fort Bliss for training before going to the woods. Relief headquarters had not received any regular application blanks and merely received young men who are already qualified under the relief work program.

Presiding Elder To Preach Here Sunday

Rev. O. P. Clark, presiding elder of this district, will fill the pulpit of the First Methodist church here Sunday morning and Sunday evening in the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. R. Spann, who is attending a Board of Education meeting of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, in Nashville, Tenn. Members of the men's Bible Class taught by Rev. Spann will visit the Fellowship class of the First Baptist church Sunday morning.

Historical Association Meets Here For Convention Saturday

Plans have been perfected for the entertainment of the West Texas Historical Society which meets in Big Spring tomorrow in an all day session. The Museum Association, the City Federation and Chamber of Commerce will tender a steak barbecue at the City Park at noon. Bill Olsen, famous throughout Howard county for his barbecuing, will be in charge of that part of the program. Wendell Bedelchek will give a welcoming address at the opening session.

Beer Bill Amended

Local Option Votes May Be Held In July

Amendment Must Be Approved By House After Reconsideration

AUSTIN (AP)—The senate Friday reconsidered a vote by which the beer bill was passed Thursday, in order to adopt an amendment to permit local option elections to be held before or at the time of the state-wide election of legalization of 3.2 per cent brew. As the bill was amended Friday county commissioners courts could call a local option election any time after July 1.

Motorecade To Be Given Welcome Here

Highway Promoters To Arrive Late Saturday En Route To El Paso

Big Spring is ready to entertain the eastern wing of the Broadway of America motorecade here Saturday evening. Meeting the motor caravan at the Coeden refinery soon after 8 p. m., local citizens will accompany the motorecade on a tour through the scenic section, then directing delegates to scenic Mountain where refreshments will be served. Following this a program featuring a concert by the Colorado Gold Medal band, vocal numbers by Mrs. C. A. Wilkins Colorado, and the McMinville, Tennessee, quartet will be held from the municipal auditorium.

Gettin' Ready For Power To Pay Is Not Given To President

Amendment To Inflation Bill Would Have Made Payment Optional

WASHINGTON (AP)—The senate Friday rejected an amendment to the inflation bill to give President Roosevelt optional power to pay the soldier's bonus with new money if he desires.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warning That President Roosevelt Opposed Cash Payment of the Soldier's Bonus Was Voiced in the Senate Friday by Democratic Leader Robinson in Advance of a Vote on the Issue. He Said If Discretionary Power Were Placed in the Bill for the President to Pay the Bonus the President Would Not Exercise It.

Associated Press will have full coverage of the West Texas chamber convention, Harry Montgomery, manager of the Amarillo bureau of the news agency, will be assigned to the Big Spring gathering.

Material for registration is being printed and workers will begin the task of assembling it Monday. Coupon books entitling the buyer admission to all entertainment features, a badge, program and other literature will be inserted in a special envelope.

"We are rearing to go," said Tom Ashley, who will head a group seeking 1,200 registrations locally. Fee for ten dollar entertainment will be for $1 beginning Wednesday.

Sox Defeat Tiger Team

Yankees On Home Run Spree; Rookie Pitches For Senators

CHICAGO—Chicago's White Sox hammered Fred Marberry and Whitlow Wyatt Thursday for 16 hits, concentrated in the seventh and eighth innings, to defeat Detroit, 10-4, and get an even break in the series.
After Gerald Walker's home run with a man on had tied it for Detroit in the sixth, the Sox batted Marberry out in the seventh and continued their assault on Wyatt. Luke Appling paced the batsmen with a triple, a double and two singles. The three former Philadelphia stars, Al Simmons, George Haas and Jimmy Dykes, accounted for half the Chicago hits.

Double Steal Helps Pirates

Hubbell Wins Third of Season, Giants To First Place

PITTSBURGH—The championship Chicago Cubs, scoring all their runs in the fourth inning, trounced Pittsburgh, 3 to 2, Thursday and blasted the Pirates out of first place in the National league.
A double steal by Stephenson and Grimm while Pitcher Swift was winding up, was a large factor in the invader's triumph over Swift's five hit pitching.
Babe Herman scored the first run in the fourth for the Cubs. Then with Stephenson and Grimm on first and second, Swift took a big windup. Both Cub runners advanced.
Koenig then scored Stephenson with a long fly and Hartnett followed with a single to send Grimm home.
Swift, who checked the Chicago artillery in the other frames, was lifted for a pinch hitter in the eighth.

Dainty Garments stay young when washed with WHITE KING

THE one best way to preserve the delicate dainty "newness" of things you cherish is to cleanse them in lukewarm White King Granulated suds.
Most soaps rob fabrics of their life and charm—they require hot water to produce suds and hot water fades colors—breaks down silken fabrics
White King Granulated contains only pure vegetable oils that dissolve out the soil in lukewarm water, completely renewing the original beauty of soft, filmy materials. White King rinses out completely leaving no soapy residue.
You will be pleased with the added wearing qualities of dainty things washed the easy, economical White King Way.

For soap economy, for soap satisfaction, for soap efficiency, there is no substitute for White King Granulated.

President Sees Notice Payments Of War Debt Installment Expected Of Europeans When Due On June 15

By RAYMOND CLAFFIER
WASHINGTON (UP)—Notice was served by President Roosevelt on European war debtors that they will be expected to make their regular June 15 payments.
These total $144,000,000.
This word, issued at the White House, was interpreted here as indicating President Roosevelt is determined to hold out America's control over the debt situation to insure real results at the world economic conference.
It was explained that after the conference, the debt matter would be gone into in an extended way. Although debts have been discussed at the international economic conferences here, the White House reiterated today no agreements have been reached. In other words, President Roosevelt is holding his case in the hole until later in the game.
The White House said it was possible the president would send to congress resolutions asking authority to deal with war debts and tariffs. This would be done in advance of the economic conference to facilitate negotiations.
Simultaneously the state department indicated the United States would be prepared to sign a tariff truce for the duration of the proposed conference, if one were proposed and agreed to by other powers.
This would peg the situation as it stands and outlaw sudden levies of tariffs and import restrictions which might otherwise be made for bargaining purposes in anticipation of the world conference.
The "tariff truce" was a probable subject of discussion between former Premier Herriot of France and the American experts, who met at the state department today for further discussion of economic problems.
President Roosevelt, following the debt announcement, opened his economic discussions with Prime Minister Bennett of Canada.
Democratic senate leaders have proposed the inflation bill be amended to permit the United States to accept the entire June 15 debt installments in silver. This would be equivalent to probably a 30 per cent reduction in the gold value of the payments due. That is because the debtors could buy silver at approximately 36 cents an ounce and turn it over to the United States at the rate of 50 cents.
White House attitude toward this proposal was not made known.
Today's warning that the debt payments would be expected as usual followed reports emanating from foreign sources that a moratorium was expected from the United States. Anticipating an outbreak of protest in congress on this point, the White House stepped in quickly to smash any false hopes instantly.

Hale Drives In Six Runs For Tulsa; Santone Wins

GALVESTON—Refusing to leave the game after being badly spiked during a play at first base during the fourth inning, Big Chief Moore, Galveston right hander, returned to the mound and let the Dallas Steers down with five hits to give the Galveston Bucs a 5-2 victory here Thursday night. Moore allowed only one hit until the seventh and after Jenkins tripled in that frame, shut the Steers off until the ninth, when two doubles and a single counted another run.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN
Points in the Debate

It is a nice question whether Senator Thomas of Oklahoma, who has undertaken to expound the Inflation Bill, or Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, who has undertaken to oppose it, has less understanding of what it is all about. There have been moments in the debate when Senator Thomas seemed to have broken the record for bluntness but Senator Reed has on the whole succeeded in running neck and neck with him. As for debating the issues, these two gentlemen are obviously as incapable of coming to grips as an angry whale and an enraged elephant. It is too bad. It is a great consequence both parties are represented by spokesmen who, whatever their other virtues, do not know what they are talking about.

Let us begin with Senator Thomas. According to his notions, the bill which bears his name will transfer "two hundred billion dollars of wealth and buying power" from those "who own the bank deposits and fixed investments, bonds and mortgages" to "the debtor class of the republic." Where the Senator got these figures, how he made the calculations is a complete mystery. The premise of his argument, which is that there are two distinct classes in the republic, the debtors and the creditors, is obviously absurd. For the fact is that it would be difficult to find a debtor who is not also a creditor. The only class of persons who are really exceptions are those who are wholly unemployed and totally penniless. The debtor farmers do not belong to this class, even those who have no insurance and no bank account and insufficient money to meet the mortgage. For they still have produce to sell and in relation to the buyer of their produce they are in a creditor position.

The overwhelming majority of the American people are both debtors and creditors in innumerable different ways. Take, for example, the Chicago school teachers who can not collect their pay. They are creditors as against the city. Any man with a bank deposit, insurance, on his life, his house, his automobile, is in the creditor position. Bankers are both creditors and debtors, creditors in relation to those to whom they have made loans, debtors in relation to their depositors and often debtors to the Federal Reserve Banks. Debtors and creditors are inextricably entangled each other.

Some notion of the real situation may be obtained by a case which a lawyer, who is a friend of mine, recently described to me. He is the attorney for a mortgage company. This company had a mortgage on an apartment house in New York City, and as the rents did not meet the fixed charges, the apartment house is now owned by the mortgage company. The other day a reputable widow who leases one of the apartments came to the lawyer and said she could no longer pay her rent. Why should she not pay her rent? Because her fortune was invested in mortgage bonds which had stopped paying interest. The bonds turned out to be the bonds of the attorney's company. So the widow had to default on her lease because the company could not pay its bonds, and by defaulting she reduced the value of the bonds on which she depended for paying her rent. This is the vicious circle of deflation.

In seeking to break that circle the government is in all truth acting in the interest of the creditor as well as the debtor. For the creditor, though theoretically his money will buy more, is actually threatened as greatly as the debtor, because he is threatened with getting no money at all. The notion that the creditor class is profiting by deflation has long since ceased to be true. The proof is to be found in the plight of those who own bonds which are selling at bankruptcy levels, who own mortgages that are in default, who have bank deposits frozen or lost in closed banks. An uncontrolled deflation will destroy the creditor just as ruthlessly as an uncontrolled inflation on the German model.

On the other hand, we have Senator Reed, who has pointed with alarm to the fact that "as prices rise . . . each savings bank deposit, each person with money in the bank . . . loses money daily by simply keeping his money on deposit." He cried out that if this happened many boys and girls would be denied an education, and "marriages will continue to be deferred." Mr. Reed said this on Friday on the floor of the Senate. That same day he joined the Republican leaders in sending a statement to the press agreeing in "the recognized need for an advance in all commodity prices." This puts Mr. Reed in the position of being tremendously alarmed at the terrible results which would follow from meeting a recognized need. Such reasoning does not qualify as adequate debate.

The most serious question raised by the bill is centered in the paragraph which authorizes the President to issue United States notes up to three billion dollars to purchase and retire maturing Federal obligations. On the ground that this provision involves no increase in the obligations of the government, I argued yesterday that it was not a currency inflation. It has been pointed out to me that this would be true if the Federal budget were in balance, but that to meet its needs, the government under this provision would be borrowing or paying taxes to pay off a part of its obligations. I am inclined to think that the point is well taken and that as long as the budget is out of balance, this section of the bill does authorize a currency inflation.

But even with the budget in balance this section of the bill would, I now recognize, permit an uncontrolled type of inflation. The reason is that it provides no method of reversing the process. When Federal Reserve banks buy securities, you can reverse the operation by selling the securities. That is why the so-called "open market operation" is a controlled inflation. But if the government buys securities with United States notes and creates them, it can not reverse the process by throwing the securities back on the market and drawing in the currency it has issued.

This provision of the bill is, therefore, seriously defective. It in fact contradicts the policy of monetary control which the Administration has adopted, and it should be amended. As it stands, it fails to give the Administration the power to contract as well as to expand, and unless it has both powers it is not fully equipped to control the whole undertaking. Under the bill, assuming this section were used, the administration would have to go back to Congress for additional authority when the inflation had reached the point where stablization was necessary and desirable. In the midst of a boom such authority might be difficult to obtain, and the President ought to take no chances.

Head and Back Quit Hurting
"Last winter, I did not feel good. I did not seem to have any strength. I was tired all the time. I had a headache and my back hurt. I had taken Cardui about seven years ago. I decided to take it again. I took five bottles of Cardui. My head and back quit hurting. I am lots stronger. Women who suffer from weakness often have many aches and pains which a stronger state of health would prevent. If you are in this condition, take Cardui, a purely vegetable tonic that has been in use for over 20 years. Sold at drug stores here. CARDUI"

TOOK PILLS FOR 30 YEARS, THEN CEREAL BROUGHT RELIEF

Mr. Forsythe Endorses ALL-BRAN for Constipation

If you suffer from headaches, loss of appetite and energy or any other of the frequent effects of constipation, read this voluntary letter: "After taking pills and tablets for about thirty years for constipation, I started to take your ALL-BRAN three times a day according to directions. Today I can eat cheese, and that is binding, and certainly feel fine."—Mr. Ed. Forsythe, Box 219, Youngstown, N. Y.

Science says ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further aid regular habits. In addition, ALL-BRAN is rich in blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of leafy vegetables. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass which gently clears the intestines of wastes. Isn't this pleasant "cereal way" far more healthful than using patent medicines—so often habit-forming? Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. In serious cases use with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

CHAPTER XLVI

Betty Carlyle set off for Reno three days after the return of her pearl necklace. She wore a smart brown suit and a tiny, sudsack hat as she boarded the train. Her lips were a bright scarlet and her lashes carefully mascaraed. There were half a dozen pieces of luggage to be carried on and stowed in the compartment. Betty kissed her mother and joked in an extremely modern fashion but her laughter was brittle and slightly high-pitched.

On the day before her departure she had annoyed Janet by apologizing for suspecting her of taking the necklace. Janet was rather sorry for Betty. She was carrying on, trying to take the matter of her divorce in a flippant, sophisticated manner but her pride had been deeply wounded. For the first time Betty Carlyle had known humiliation and it was a bitter blow.

A real estate company began showing Betty's apartment to prospective renters at a "sacrifice price." As early as within a few hours, life had become a hideous turmoil. It drifted again into quiet routine in Mrs. Curtis' home. Still there was a difference.

Mrs. Curtis showed it most. She tried to be philosophical and trust the situation with unconcern. There were only two persons to whom she talked about what had happened—Rachel Thornton, who had been her confidante for years, and Janet.

"It's a dreadful thing to have happen," Mrs. Curtis told Janet, "and yet in a way I'm glad. Betty was too young to marry. And of course she couldn't know what that man was. I never liked him. I couldn't tell Betty that, but I've known all along he'd make her unhappy."

"That man" was Rolf. It was the only way in which Mrs. Curtis ever referred to him from that day on.

To Mrs. Thornton she said, "It's not as though people look at divorce nowadays the way they did when you and I were girls. But to think this could happen to Betty—"

She refused to accept invitations and much of the time kept to her room. Janet found her there one afternoon sitting before a chest of drawers. The lower drawer had been pulled out, revealing stacks of old photographs, a pile of garments and children's toys. In her lap was something white.

Mrs. Curtis held it up. "It's the dress Betty wore for her christening," she said. "And here is her first little pair of shoes. Aren't they tiny? Here's a photograph of her wearing this same dress—"

The photograph showed an infant with a fuzz of dark hair and a pair of solemn eyes. The handsome baby dress was decked with ruffles and lace and one tiny hand had caught at the full skirt.

"What a pretty baby!" Janet exclaimed.

Mrs. Curtis nodded. "She was," she said. "I suppose it's foolish of me to save all these things but sometimes I like to look at them. There's another picture here I like better—" She leaned forward, sorting through the pile. "It was taken when Betty was four years old. Her hair always curled naturally you know. I combed it around my finger. Oh, here's the picture!"

For half an hour longer she revealed her treasures—pictures of Betty as a school girl, dressed for her first party, snapshots at the beach and riding a Shetland pony. She showed Janet the woolly dog that had been Betty's favorite companion in her baby days and a battered doll. There was a picture of Mrs. Curtis herself with a tall young man standing beside her—the picture made on the day she married Betty's father.

Later when Mrs. Curtis came down stairs Janet noticed that her eyes were red-lined. They had been red-lined frequently during the past week. The following morning she was ill and Doctor Roberts was called to the house.

"It's just as I've told you before," he said warningly. "You can't overdo, Mrs. Curtis, and keep your health. You mustn't worry and you must have plenty of rest. The condition is nothing to become alarmed over if you'll take care of yourself. Otherwise these spells will continue."

He left with instructions that Mrs. Curtis was to spend the rest of the week in bed. Janet came back from seeing him to the door and sank into a chair at the bedside.

"Mrs. Curtis," she said, "I've been thinking you won't need me here after Betty comes back."

"Of course we'll need you," said Janet firmly. "There are lots of girls who could do the work as well as I can—or better. You won't be lonely with Betty here. I told you several days ago I wanted to go away. To some other town. I'd like to get a job in an advertising office again. I think that's where I belong, Mrs. Curtis. Maybe some day I could work up from a secretarial job to something better. That's what I want to do."

"But, my dear, I'd like to have you stay."

"That's what I was going to say," Janet went on. "I'll stay until Betty comes back. Of course I couldn't go away and leave you when you're not feeling well but I thought I should tell you now."

"You're sure?" Janet said quickly. "I've been thinking about it quite a lot." She arose, "If I might be able to sleep? Dr. Roberts said you must rest, you know."

Mrs. Curtis agreed to try to take a nap and Janet tip-toed from the room.

Waiting on Mrs. Curtis, reading to her, seeing that she took her medicine and that the affairs of the household ran smoothly kept Janet from thinking too much about herself during the days that followed. Her mind was a curious mixture of hope and despair. Rolf was going to be free now. In a few more weeks Betty's divorce would be granted. Janet had understood from Mrs. Curtis that the suit was to be uncontested. Rolf was to be free—but she had had no word from him.

Did it mean he didn't want to see her? Janet thought of that night only a few weeks ago in the moonlight. Rolf had kissed her, had hinted then that all was not well between him and Betty but she had refused to listen. Of course he couldn't come to the house but he could have sent a note or telephoned.

Rolf was in town, she knew. The only conclusion was that he did not want to see her.

Two weeks passed and Janet spent most of them in the brick house, sitting with Mrs. Curtis, occasionally going out for a brief shopping trip. Jeff telephoned to say he had been granted an unexpected vacation. Only a week and it was really a business trip that he was to make. A few days in the New York office and a few days at one of the plants. He promised to call her as soon as he returned.

She answered the telephone one afternoon, expecting to hear Jeff's voice. It was not. Janet gripped the instrument tightly and lowered her own voice as she replied.

Rolf Carlyle said: "Maybe you think I have a lot of nerve to ask this but—would you go to dinner with me tomorrow night?"

Janet's throat felt hot and tight. "Why, yes," she said. "I think I can."

"We'll go to Reigan's. I can't very well come out and call for you. There was a slight pause. "How about meeting me at the old places? Tracy's corner. Is that all right?"

"You're sure?" Janet said.

"Yes, I'm sure," Janet said quickly. "I've been thinking about it quite a lot." She arose, "If I might be able to sleep? Dr. Roberts said you must rest, you know."

Mrs. Curtis agreed to try to take a nap and Janet tip-toed from the room.

Park Being Cleaned Up For May Day And Children's Dances

E. V. Spence has announced that the official opening of the City Park will be scheduled for May first. This is just as early as spring comes to West Texas and as early as pluckers can be assured of proper picnic weather.

The chief feature of this May Day opening will be a May Day and children's dances to be given by the members of the Child Study Club, under the direction of Mrs. R. W. Henry, president. The Fete will be held to raise funds for the Children's Department of the Public Library.

The park is being especially groomed for the occasion. Winter trash, papers and dust blown in from the neighboring counties by the March and April winds are being cleaned out. A thorough watering is bringing out the glossy green of the shrubbery. The yellow climbing roses are in bloom. The park itself will greet the children of the May Fete and their parents and visitors with its most sparkling manners and its Sunday-go-to-meeting dress on.

An invitation is extended to everyone to see the park on May day, whether or not he or she can take in the May fete.

Chicago Manual Training Teacher Commits Suicide

CHICAGO (UPI)—Paul Schneider, 44, manual training teacher in the Chicago public schools who had been without pay since last July, shot himself to death in his home.

The story of the tragedy was revealed by his wife and three young daughters in the home in which taxes are long past due.

"My husband had been worried sick for months," said Mrs. Schneider. "He had had no pay since last July and it was getting harder and harder to make both ends meet."

"This morning he rose early and went to the basement. A short time later we heard a shot. I rushed to the basement and found he had shot himself."

"Little Red School House" With One Teacher May Be On Last Peg

Significant Change In Rural Education Under Way, Says Eilers; Consolidation Provide Rural High Schools

By W. WINSTON COPELAND
AUSTIN (UP)—The "Little Red School" house may be considered as virtually on its last leg in Texas.

A significant change in rural education is spreading over Texas with the subsequent result that the small one-room school is disappearing, according to William Eilers of the State Department of Education.

Four years ago a law was passed authorizing county board of trustees to group county schools for high school consolidation purposes. Wise county, which took the lead, within two years had consolidated so that most of its rural children had access to high schools.

Other counties have followed the example set by Wise county. "Consolidation with transportation reduced the number of smaller schools," Eilers pointed out. "In 1917-1918, for instance, there were 6,174 one-teacher schools; in 1922-1923 there were 4,165; in 1931-1932, there were 2,001, a reduction of over one-half in six years."

The consolidations, encouraged by state aid, and with increased facilities have grown to such proportions that one out of every 12 white school children enrolled in Texas are transported to high schools, thus bringing high school education literally to the rural child's front door.

In 1931-32, Eilers said, reports of county and city superintendents showed that 95,641 children were transported, at a cost of $1,403,313. Figures compiled by the Department of Education reveal that 44,677 children were transported during 1925-1926, at a cost of $329,970.

This represented an increase of nearly 81,000, or approximately a seven-fold increase for the six years.

The state aid fund in 1931-1932 paid $196,444 for part of the transportation cost of 50,120 school children. The cost of the remaining 35,441 was paid from local sources.

McLennan county was credited with transporting more rural children to school during 1931-1932 than any other county. It transported 2,437.

Seventy-nine independent school districts each transported more than 200 children daily while several transported more than 500.

These were: Edinburg, 1,948; Houston, 1,944; Gladewater, 825; Pampa, 682; Weslaco, 682; Olton, 600; Littlefield, 534; Rio Hondo, 520; Sour Lake, 519; Donna, 500; Sudan, 500.

DALLAS (UP)—Van D. Stone, 30, night watchman for the Southern Transportation Company here, was shot from ambush and slightly wounded early today while investigating a prowling.

Stone received a minor flesh wound. He returned the fire, emptying his pistol at his assailant.

Baseball, belligerent all season, was made more belligerent (pronounced baume-bay) on Tuesday when the Washington Senators and the New York Yankees came to blows almost in the shadow of the nation's capitol. This pitched battle left the following feuds in its wake:

President Roosevelt vs. Mayor John Patrick O'Brien; Ben Chapman vs. Buddy Myer; Ben Chapman vs. Earl Whitehill; Joe McCarthy vs. Joe Cronin; Walter Brown vs. officer 123 of the Washington police force, whose lodge he nabs; Griffith Stadium vs. Yankee Stadium and Empire Moriarthy vs. all concerned.

Another interesting feud is that between the Phillies and the Robins, or rather, Dick Bartell and the Robins. The Robins have it in for Bartell on two counts. He put Joe Judge out of commission with a neatly placed spike and roughed Lefty O'Doul up on the basepaths. Bartell is also on the outs with the Giants for whamming into little 200-pound Bill Terry.
