Cabinet

The inner whys and wherefores of the Roosevelt cabinet selections, and the private reactions they aroused, might fairly be thumbed as follows: State Secretary Hull—His appointment developed from a close political friendship with the President...

Reaction—Splendid in navy and shipping circles but not in the peep societies. War Secretary Dern—Repayment for pre-convention political aid; moved from Interior because of Senator Hiram Johnson's objections to his Boulder Dam record.

Reaction—Business men know little about him; Congressional reaction not generally favorable. Agriculture Secretary Wallace—A progressive Republican who fits Mr. Roosevelt's allotment plan requirements.

Reaction—Almost unknown here except as a 1920 campaign friend of Hiram Johnson. Labor Secretary Frances Perkins—Labor had no candidate for peace who could surpass her in Mr. Roosevelt's opinion; very capable and efficient but likely to have a hard time because of bitter resentment among union labor officials.

Reaction—Very unfavorable among union men but splendid among women's organizations. There has been considerable private grumbling about the cabinet. You always get that. There would have been mouning even if ten of the original apostles had been

Kuykendall, Cunningham Are Speakers

Rotarians Hear Comments On Politics And Business

Joe Kuykendall and J. M. Radford, Grocer company, and Grover Cunningham, attorney, were principal speakers before the Rotary club at its Tuesday meeting at the Settles on a program in charge of Victor Fiewellen.

In introducing the speakers, Fiewellen said that the United States would have a "new deal" on March 4 with the inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt, as president, and he had asked these two gentlemen to address the club, giving a slant on the business and political trends of the nation, especially during the past two years.

Mr. Kuykendall outlined certain influences which have served to break down various business structures during the past two years over the country, and stated he believed the entire business world today was on a better basis than two years ago.

Mr. Cunningham said that never before in the political history of the United States had there been a more pronounced acclaim for Roosevelt for a "new deal," which was registered most emphatically at both the national convention and the election.

Morgan got 12 points, tying Carrigan, Brock forward, for scoring honors. Brock put out on fouls in the fourth quarter. He was withdrawn in the second period after accumulating three. He fouled out immediately after reentering the game in the next half.

Fashion Tea Showing Newest Spring Styles Well Attended

Popularity Of Events Decides Auxiliary Members To Repeat Fashion Show Annually, Says Mrs. Spence, Organization Head

More than two hundred women crowded the ballroom of the Settles Hotel Tuesday afternoon to attend the Fashion Tea sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary of the St. Mary's Episcopal Church.

Mrs. V. Van Gieson, wearing a green lace evening dress and a corsage of pink flowers, greeted the guests, assisted by Mrs. C. S. Blomshield and Mrs. Frank Johnson, also in evening gowns. The women were seated at tables and served tea, sandwiches and iced cakes while waiting for the mannequins to make their appearance.

The ballroom and tables were attractively decorated with flowers from the Couch Nursery. Two little girls in white satin suits blew trumpets to announce the beginning of the two showings. These were Roberta Henry and Louise Ann Bennett. Ray Simmons announced the arrival of the models, naming the type of costume and the store represented.

The showing of the dresses was in two divisions. Sports costumes, including morning frocks and afternoon sports, riding costumes, were shown in the first division. Bridal and tea costumes, evening and Sunday night frocks were shown in the second division.

The models entered the ballroom at the north end, paraded through the center of the room, pausing in the center to display their dresses, pausing again at the platform at the south end, and left the room through the main entrance. This gave most of the women a good opportunity to see all details at close hand.

The Program
The pause between the divisions was devoted to a short program. Miss Elsie Willis and Mrs. O. L. Thomas rendered several piano numbers while the guests assembled. Miss Willis played several enjoyable numbers. Miss Martha Louise Robertson, accompanied at the piano by Miss Mary Vance Keneaster, gave a ballet number attired in a very becoming full-skirted costume of pink net. Robert Riegel and Minnie Belle Williamson concluded the number with a well-applauded clog dance, accompanied by Miss Helen Duley.

Meat's Party
An unexpected number was Elmo Watson's display of correct women's wear for spring. E. F. Waller assisted in modeling a young man's suit. Mr. Watson himself appeared in a light-colored suit and made one of the hits of the afternoon when he stopped to take off his hat and make a sweeping bow to his wife.

The Fashion
The three mannequins for The Fashion were Misses Lola Belle Stewart, Maxine Thomas and Alice Leeper. They wore well every costume selected for them and drew unusually heavy applause. The Fashion was joined by O'Rear's Bootery and the two shops selected their own accessories and hats, and sought to give the effect of well grooming above everything else.

Precedent To Denison Case Cited Senate

Withdrawal Of Federal Aid Threatened Because Of Trouble

AUSTIN (AP)—Claim of F. L. Denison of Temple to the chairmanship of the Texas highway commission still had not been challenged by court procedure, but a move to determine his status was expected momentarily.

W. R. Ely of Abilene and D. K. Martin of San Antonio, members of the commission, did not respond to a request from Denison to attend a conference with him. Denison said, however, that he would attempt to arrange a meeting with the commissioners soon.

He said that ordinarily the government withdrawal approval of any work until such disputed claims are settled.

Attorney General James V. Allred, asked by the state treasurer and comptroller if they should honor claims and warrants on highway funds not signed by Denison as chairman, said he probably would not take any action today with reference to the Denison matter. He was expected to contest Denison's right to the office backed by the senate's refusal on two occasions, to give him a two-thirds majority vote confirmation.

Governor Miriam A. Ferguson contended only a majority vote for confirmation was necessary in the Denison case.

Senator Walter Woodward of Coleman directed attention to a holding by E. F. Looney, former attorney general, while James E. Ferguson, husband of the present chief executive, was governor in 1917 in which it was ruled a two-thirds majority confirmation was necessary in the case of C. W. Woodman, proposed by Ferguson as commissioner of labor.

Woodward said that opinion later was confirmed by C. M. Cretton, now chief justice of the state supreme court, while Cretton was attorney general.

The Looney opinion said a vacancy existed when the senate refused to confirm and that when the regular term of a state officer expires and he is "holding over" there is a "vacancy" to be filled. Such cases require a two-thirds majority confirmation vote by the senate, the opinion stated, according to Woodward. Governor Ferguson claimed that there was no "vacancy" at the time of Denison's appointment, the term of C. M. Johnson of Tyler, commissioner who would be replaced by Denison, continuing until his successor had qualified.

Ma's Request Set
The senate set for 11 a. m. Tuesday consideration of a request by Governor Ferguson to divulge the standing of the vote taken in executive session on the Denison confirmation. The rules committee recommended that the information asked by the governor be furnished. Consideration of the matter will be in executive session. Under executive session, understanding of the vote on confirmation of an appointee never is made public. That the appointee was confirmed or rejected is the extent of the information given from such closed sessions.

Fear that the month's payroll of the commission might be held up pending disposition of the Denison controversy was dispelled today when George H. Sheppard, state comptroller, announced the claims had been approved by the commission before Denison took the oath of office last Friday.

CHAPTER XLIV

Dorothy's summer name found by water on the south side of Long Island. The estate had formerly belonged to a family prominent in New York society. When they removed to the more exclusive north shore Dorothy had bought the place.

The house stood about a mile back from the road. It was surrounded by trees that concealed stables for riding horses and kennels housing several aristocratic fox terriers. It would have been a lonely spot for a girl of 21 had Dorothy did not. She employed a companion and chaperon whose name was Mrs. Atwood. Scarcely a week-end passed at Travewood, as Dorothy called the place, without a number of guests. Dorothy's parties were always popular.

Though the sea was so close at hand a swimming pool had been built at the rear of the house. Across the glade smooth meadows had been converted into a golf course. There were carefully landscaped gardens. A little brook ambled through the estate, and on its surface placid swans glided lazily. A barn had been transformed into a recreation house with pool and billiard tables, a card room and gymnasium. There was everything at Travewood to provide a delightful holiday.

Sheila arrived late Friday afternoon, making the trip in Dorothy's huge town car. The butler met her at the door. Miss Dorothy, he said, was in the swimming pool where the other guests were. Sheila was to join them there.

A maid led the way to Sheila's room, a spacious apartment overlooking the shore and the ocean. The maid bustled herself with Sheila's luggage, opening it and hanging away the gowns. She slipped Sheila into the bathing suit of delicate green jersey that Dorothy had had laid out for her. There was a snug little black cap and cunning green and black bathing slippers to go with the suit. When Sheila was ready the maid showed her the way to the pool.

Half a dozen brightly garbed water sprites lolled about the rim of the pool or flashed from the diving board high over the clear blue-green water. Dorothy rose from a chair at the farther end of the pool and came toward Sheila, waving gayly.

"Darling!" she cried. "I would have come myself if I hadn't had to stay at the last minute. How are you? Not tired, I hope, after the drive?"

There were introductions to the other guests as they emerged, dripping from the pool. There were Mary Charlton, Cecelia Hoyt, Peggy Raymond, and others whose names Sheila did not remember. Two of them were recognized as girls whose pictures were seen frequently in newspaper photographs sections. Pictures of Mary Charlton at the horse show and tennis matches Peggy Raymond stroking along Fifth Avenue. All of these girls were deeply tanned. They looked like slim young athletes in their brief, brightly colored bathing suits.

Only two men had arrived—Wade and Tommy Moran. The others would come a little later. Mrs. Atwood, Dorothy's companion, proved to be an attractive woman whose youthful eyes completely belied her gray hair. She wore blue pajamas and a wide tan hat that was most becoming. Sheila could swim but she realized with a pang that these young people were experts. They dived and raced through the water with the skill one might expect from professionals. That, of course, was because they devoted themselves day after day to play, and in these days is largely hard work at sport.

Sheila could not compete with them but she could enjoy the beauty of the place, the scent of the woods, the roll of the sea, the white sails fluttering so far away against the deep blue water.

"Shall we swim," Dorothy was asking, "or sit here and talk?"

"Oh, yes," Dorothy smiled. "He should have been. Everyone here will admire you and your clothes, and Henri will profit by it. Of course I wanted you for yourself but I knew I had to appeal to Henri's business sense. And I'm so glad you're here! Oh, look—there's Dick."

She sprang to meet him and two other young men with him. Dick was already in his bathing suit. A moment later Dorothy was introducing the newcomers to Sheila. Other guests joined the group and those who were swimming waved gay greetings.

For a brief instant Sheila felt ill at ease and out of fun. "If I were playing in a show I wouldn't feel this way," she told herself. "But I'm only a model. I don't belong with all these people. I don't even know how to talk to them."

But the self-consciousness passed away after a few moments. Then she saw Dick making his way toward her.

"Sheila!" he said. "I'm so glad you're here. We'll have a great time together."

He eyed her approvingly. Dick himself looked handsome. Straight limbed, well built, he was like the statues of a Greek athlete. Sheila, feeling the approval in his glance, smiled shyly. They stood at the edge of the pool, making an attractive picture.

"I'll race you to the other end," Dick proposed suddenly.

"I don't swim very well," Sheila told him, but the protest was lost. Laughing, struggling, she felt herself borne along toward the diving board.

"Oh, Dick," she cried, "wait a minute! Honestly I don't swim very well. And I can't dive."

He seemed not to hear. The others hailed them with shouts of delight. All at once Sheila understood. She was one of them. It was all a game and she had exactly as much part in it as any of the others.

At the diving board, however, Dick dropped her wrist suddenly. "Didn't mean to rough-house you," he said, lowering his voice. "We won't swim if you'd rather not. I wouldn't let anything hurt you for the world!"

His voice, so low that even near at hand no one else could hear, struck Sheila with its deep note of sincerity. Two girls and a man, rushing past them, pushed them to one side. The trio plunged off the diving board and caught the attention of the crowd. Sheila and Dick were forgotten.

The two stood in the midst of the splashing, shrieking through and to Sheila it seemed as though they were on a desert island. Dick was looking at her. His eyes held hers so that she could not look away.

"Sheila!" he whispered her name softly.

A girl in a scarlet suit called out "Gangway!" and came running toward the spring board. "Are you two going to dive or aren't you?" she cried.

Sheila and Dick stepped to one side. "Let's get out of this," he said. "I want to talk to you about so many things."

They moved off toward two beach chairs at the other end of the pool. The chairs were shaded by a gigantic orange and black striped sun umbrella. Behind them the crowd was laughing at the antics of a clumsy diver. Sheila turned and saw a tall, blond-haired youth catch Dorothy's hand and leap with her into the water.

"Idiot!" Dick growled.

Sheila's heart was beating rapidly. She sat down in the low chair and Dick dropped beside her on the ground. A servant came toward them bearing a tray with tall glasses of tinkling drinks. Dick waved the man away.

"Listen Sheila," he said abruptly, "maybe you don't want to hear all this again but I can't help it. You've got to listen to me. I love you! I love you and I won't take no for an answer this time. I'll get a job digging ditches if that's what you want. I'll prove to you I can earn a living. I'll give my money away, do anything? You can have a home in the country if you want it with a kitchen and gingham curtains and red geraniums in the windows. But, Sheila, you've got to marry me. You've got to!"

National City Bank Advanced Large Sums To Brokers To Finance Trading In Own Stocks, Investigation Shows

By Lyle C. Wilson, United Press Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, (UP)—The National City Bank of New York was shown in the Senate stock market investigation to have advanced millions of dollars to New York brokers to finance operations of the National City Company in stock of the bank.

The revelation brought from Senator Brookhart, Rep., Iowa, the charge that the bank was trading in its own stock.

"I know nothing about it," replied Hugh B. Baker, president of the National City Company, who was testifying.

Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel had moved abruptly from questions regarding aid Baker to the company's National City Bank stock flotation. Baker said the company sold 1,200,000 shares of the bank stock in 1929. He testified he received $676,929.41 in bonuses in two and one-half years—1927, 1928 and the first six months of 1929.

Pecora inquired whether the stock was handled through brokers, Baker said 73 per cent of it was. Pecora then introduced Correspondence from Schullister and Co., Brokerage House, One letter Dated Oct. 11, 1929, said, "We, having to deliver to the National City Company 2,100 shares of National City Bank stock hereby ask you for an additional certification of $1,000,000."

"What do you know about that," asked Pecora.

"Nothing," replied Baker.

Pressed further for an explanation, Baker said "They're evidently applying for a loan. Later, Baker said the National City Bank evidently was "facilitating" the sale of its stock to the National City Company.

"In the light of what we can now see backward, do you approve of continuing these practices?" asked Senator Couzens, Rep., Mich.

"I don't see my bank taking the slightest risk," Baker replied and added he knew "nothing about the relation of the bank with the brokers at all."

Couzens complained Baker was evading his questions.

News to Him?

"This is the first time I ever heard of them," Baker said as the brokers numerous loan requests were read into the record.

"You are hearing other things about your company for the first time, aren't you, Mr. Baker?" Pecora suggested, but Baker did not commit himself.

Pecora recalled Charles E. Mitchell, Chairman of the Board of the Bank and Company, to the stand to "explain these transactions" in which the bank advanced funds to brokers.

"Wasn't that a species of trading in which the bank was dealing in its own stock?" Pecora asked Mitchell.

"I don't think you could say that at all," Mitchell replied.

Mitchell insisted the transactions were legitimate and not contrary to the law which forbids National Banks to deal in their own stocks.

Compromise is out of the question. Two of Mr. Roosevelt's secretaries will have black braids. One will not. That's final.

Notes

Nearly everyone except the Communists is represented in the Roosevelt Cabinet. The best Virginia political source says ex-Gov. Harry Byrd would have run against Swanson and defeated him next year had matters come to that. One of the reasons why Senator Glass wanted to hold the chairmanship of the Senate Appropriations Committee instead of going into the Cabinet was to prevent Senator McKellar of Tennessee getting that job. Glass does not share McKellar's unorthodox views on cutting government expenses. Mrs. Caraway called a local newspaperman to thank him when he wrote that her husband was missed in the Mitchell hearing because he is a knacker of putting big people in their little places and the Senatorial investigators of today were unwilling or unable to do that.

NEW YORK By James McMullin

'Bonus'

The senate committee discovered that National City employees still owe more for stock in the bank than the stock itself is now worth. They did not discover that the stock happens to be so widely held within the organization. In the good old days the bank used at times to pay generous Christmas bonuses in stock instead of in cash. But the stock distributed as a bonus was not paid up and the balance has been coming out of the employees' checks ever since. Most of the employees thought they were getting something good when they got the stock. Now of course they have no choice except to keep on shelling out or give up their jobs and their claim to the stock.

Employees of other banks in New York are also still in lock for the purchase of stock in their own organizations. Usually the subscription was a bit more voluntary.

Investigation

All Wall Street knew that Mitchell and his associates had this showdown coming to them and no tears of sympathy are shed. But bankers think a more opportune moment could have been chosen. The political motif for bringing the subject up now is not lost on New York. In this way the Republicans can claim credit for opening up the matter and thus deprive the Democrats of future campaign ammunition. By picking the dying hours of the Republican regime it is also possible to shut off more elaborate exposures and make it difficult to revive them later.

The savagery of the attack was there a surprise here. The answer seems to be a personal snipe. Mitchell has been known to call certain Senators harsh names in the past. The senators in question knew about it and took care to have a Big Stick handy when the suitable moment came. Wall Street notes that Mitchell's well known impetuosity led him to reveal a good deal more than would have been necessary if he had stuck to answering questions.

The unanimous reaction here is that the disclosures sound the death knell for security affiliates of banks. It is believed that prospective legislation will be wident to the investment banking business. The big question now is whether the private banks will get all their old gray back or whether a new form of organization will spring up.

The designation of Roper will give you an idea of what Mr. Roosevelt intends to do with the commerce department. It will be sited down to a mere matchstick. Foreign trade functions will be given to the State Department. That idea more than the McAldoo endorsement furnished the background for Roper's appointment.

Chase

Winthrop Aldrich of the Case National is given credit for a very astute job in his appearance before the Harrison Committee. His careful preparation (in which E. M. Anderson—Chase Bank economist—played a large part) was in marked contrast to the casualness of earlier witnesses. The Chase is overlooking no bet in improving its public relations with political authorities. This is the second shrewd move along that line within a month.

Aldrich is rated as a sincere advocate of his proposals. The most significant part of his testimony was the sharp though veiled attack on the credit expansion policy of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Resentment against Harrison and other Federal Reserve officials has been smoldering for some time but Aldrich is the first big bank official to have the nerve to speak his mind.

Banks

The New York banks did some drastic cleaning last week to get themselves for any emergency which may develop. They liquidated 269 million dollars of loans and investments—70 million of which was government securities.

Theodor's Black-Draught "Good for Constipation"

"We have used Theodor's Black-Draught in our home for about 20 years and have found it to be a reliable medicine," writes Mrs. Joe G. Roberts, of Portersville, Ala. "A friend recommended it to me a long time ago and it has proved its worth to me. Black-Draught is good for constipation and to rid the system of bodily poison. I find that taking Black-Draught gives me a pleasant feeling. It gives me a headache which I used to have. I take a dose of Black-Draught, dry, as I need it."

Thousands of men and women have found how well Black-Draught works in the relief of many little common disorders due to constipation. Costs only 1 cent or less a dose.

and most of the rest bankers' acceptances. This enabled them to meet heavy withdrawals from interior banks and increase their own reserves at the same time. Withdrawals by banks were partly offset by large deposits from several big corporations.

Bonds

This liquidation accounts for the continuing weakness in Federal bond the prices and shows up the fallacy of assuming governments to be liquid at par. If the situation continues it may cause the new Treasury head some anxious moments when refinancing is necessary. Federal credit is not itself involved.

Japan

Commercial connections in New York understand that the consent of all factions in Japanese inner circles to withdrawal from the League of Nations was obtained only on the promise that national isolation would be avoided. This is to be done by starting immediately after withdrawal individual diplomatic discussions with the powers separately on questions lately occupying the League.

Following the withdrawal a new Japanese policy not yet generally foreseen probably will be shown in a strong attempt to cultivate the friendship of China by undercover diplomatic means. These will look toward the eventual organization of all alliances between China, Japan and Manchukuo.

Banking Holidays Start In Two States

McAllister said bank holidays "in states with which people of Tennessee daily have business transactions" prompted his action.
