To Promote Understanding

Nazi propagandists have utilized temperamental difference between English and Americans to sow seeds of distrust which sometimes fall on fertile ground on both sides of the Atlantic.

Now, for the second time in a generation, Americans and British are fighting side by side against an aggressor Germany, to preserve for democracy the right to exist in this world.

When World War I ended, the nationalistic jealousies of the allies resulted in our losing the "peace," and set forces in movement which made World War II inevitable.

The English and the Americans must come to an understanding between now and the writing of the next peace treaty, if 1919 history is not to be repeated—if, this time democracy is to have a real chance, so that we shall not have to fight another ideological war within 20 or 25 years.

It is not necessary or desirable that Americans become Anglophiles. All we need to do is to educate such of our Anglophobes as we can, and ignore the rest. Across the water, men of good will have a similar task to persuade their intolerant fellows that Americans are not the selfish, money grabbing, half-savage creatures we have been painted.

Maurice Dreicher has laid down his idea of a 10-point program by which mutual understanding could be promoted. His first point typifies the spirit of the program and, if observed, would put an end to the traditional mistrust between the two peoples.

"Remember," he suggests, "neither side is perfect. In past differences between Britain and America, there were usually three sides to the argument—the side of the United States, the side of Great Britain, and the right side.

"This is not a war to preserve the British Empire," says Dreicher, we think correctly, "but to preserve the free way of life of a group of independent countries."

England, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, the United States—none of these is fighting so much for the others as for its own right to exist free of German domination and totalitarian ideology.

Each is as near a true democracy as mankind has been able to evolve in practice. Each recognizes that its right to democracy is linked indissolubly with the preservation of the others. Why, then, should any of us hate any other, when our likeness is so fundamental and our difference so superficial?

The England that we fought no longer exists.
Can we risk the world's future security on phobias arising from purely temperamental differences?

Horsepower can be very dangerous if not mixed with the proper amount of horse sense.

A man often takes a day off on his birthday but a woman isn't satisfied with anything less than a year.

FIGURES from the Iowa Pre-Flight School show how carefully the Navy is selecting its new flyers.

The result is a minimum loss of time.

No fewer than 238 of the original 242 who entered pre-flight training at Iowa, May 28, moved to flight training.

Only four were dropped from pre-flight training. Four were ordered to prolonged pre-flight training. Four were advanced with less than three months training to accompany the first battalion as it moved to seven Naval Reserve air bases.

Physical measurements and achievement tests give you a rough idea of what the young men go through. Largely attributed to posture improvements, the average height increased 4 inches. Average weight increased 73 pounds. Chest-abdomen differential increased .76 inches.

CADETS on the average could do 608 more push-ups than they could upon entering, 3.09 more chin-ups. Their Sargent jump rating, a test of co-ordination, improved more than 7.5 per cent.

Original Iowa group contained 46 who were unable to swim at all. There were 44 who could not meet elementary requirements for self-sustenance in deep water for five minutes, for swimming 150 yards without stop or float and for swimming 20 feet under water.

Of that group of 90 none who moved to flight training was unable to pass the elementary test. They'll keep 'em flying.

Miss Mary Frances Hardwick spent the week-end in Stephenville.

Misses Joyce Wadley and Aneta Wallace, teachers of Carbon school, spent the week-end at their homes in Arlington.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Eberhart and daughters of Rising Star were guests Sunday of Mrs. Mae Spear.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Tinsley Wilson announce the birth of twin boys at the Gorman Hospital Saturday. Mrs. Wilson was the former Edith Greer of Carbon. Mr. Wilson is in a U. S. Training camp at present.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Morton a baby boy at the Gorman Hospital Tuesday. Mrs. Morton is the former Billie Green of Carbon. Mr. Morton is also at a Training Post but is visiting his wife and infant at this time.

Misses Martha Gray and Christene Gilbert of Tarleton spent the week-end in Carbon.

Sam Stone and Melbourne Clark were up from Dallas for a week-end visit.

HERB KOPF further discusses his new QT formation, which he is using in addition to Manhattan's regular unbalanced line box with the tail and fullbacks spinning.

"It embodies the strength of the T-quick-opening strength from tackle to tackle," asserts Coach Kopf, "but by keeping a wing-back in position, it also maintains good pass-receiving power and blocking angle for the off-tackle play. Like the Manhattan box, it is run from an unbalanced line, and merely by shifting the quarterback out a half man to the strong side from center, we can move from the T to the box as the ball is snapped."

Strategist Kopf may truthfully tell his noble young athletes that the opposition will never understand the half of that.

Women's Economics, Even To Saving Bobbie Pins, Can Help To Win War

By BETTY PRYOR
United Press Staff Correspondent
CHICAGO, Ill. (AP) —The bobbie pins which held American women's curls in place during 1941 would produce 18,000 one-ton aerial bombs, according to Jo Ford Adamson, clothing analyst for the War Production Board.

Pette Mrs. Adamson has a big job—teaching women that their petty economies such as saving bobbie pins, will help win the war. "If women would realize how valuable are their small savings, when totaled, they wouldn't throw out one thing," she exclaimed.

As clothing analyst, Mrs. Adamson, 32 and blonde, educates consumers and informs retailers manufacturers and wholesalers about WPB's wartime restrictions. "It's a tough job telling people they can't do what they've done before," she said. "Most people want to comply with WPB orders. The problem is making them understand."

"If women knew that costume jewelry is made of catalin, which uses phenol needed in explosives, they would be glad to wear wood substitutes," Mrs. Adamson said. WPB order L-85, which prohibits cuffs, wide skirts, patch pockets and other big users of cloth in feminine outerwear, is the guiding principle of Mrs. Adamson's job.

"But we have lots of other items to drive for scrap metal and other things," she smiled. "There's L-118, war materials; L-116, lingerie; M-176, steel; which affects zip-pers; L-90, corsets, which also command of the English language come under the rubber classification, and L171, cosmetics."

From her desk drawer she produced a pair of slacks with turned up cuffs cunningly devised from the three inches of cloth L-85 permits to be turned under. The slacks, under appeal, are typical of cases which Mrs. Adamson analyzes.

"They show American ingenuity. I think the economies which L-85 demands will help us achieve the famous characteristic of Paris styles—simplicity," she declared.

The WPB, she explained, tries to keep people happy by imposing only the necessary restrictions.

"But we must impress people with the importance of saving every scrap," she said.

Two George Butlers Prove Confusing

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—Two George Butlers of about the same age, both attorneys, are in the Texas limelight now, and are being confused by many people.

George A. Butler of Houston is chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee. George R. Butler of Austin is executive secretary of the Texas Salvage Committee, directing the state's war materials.

Sometimes the finest kind of confusion is complete silence.

Watch Out For School Kids Is Safety Warning

AUSTIN, Tex. —Watch out for those school kids!

You'd forgotten about that school crossing during the summer, hadn't you? The kids are coming back now, and you'll have to watch out for them.

"Let's be thankful," State Police Director Homer Garrison said today, "that we still have schools to send our children to. Even with the benefit of education, which now is denied many peoples of the world, our kids are growing up into a world that's going to be pretty rough on them. Let's give them a break by not breaking their arms and legs and heads with our automobiles."

JUDITH'S NEW JOB

CHAPTER XII

JUDITH opened her eyes and stared dazedly about the hospital room. At the foot of the bed a doctor and nurse watched her anxiously. She had slept for 24 hours, a sleep of exhaustion encouraged by a sedative the doctor had given her.
She rose slowly to the surface of consciousness. Then suddenly all the events of the night on the boat came back to her.
"Let me out of here," she cried, and started to get out of bed. But the nurse stepped forward and firmly forced her back under the covers.
"You must be very careful," she insisted.
"You are a sick girl," put in the physician, bending over her attentively.
Judith pressed her lips together and pulled herself back against the pillows. She looked at the doctor defiantly.
"I want to know if I look like a crazy person?"
The doctor shook his head quickly and smiled at her. "Of course not, my dear, you're just a sick young lady."
"Alright then. Listen to me. Call up the Watson Airplane factory and ask for Mr. Mathews and tell him to come after Miss Kingsly at once. Will you do that? Promise?"
He nodded. "I'll do it right away, Miss Kingsly. Now you rest and have some food. You haven't eaten in the last 24 hours, you know."
"That isn't the half of it. I haven't eaten in two days. You had better tell Mr. Mathews to bring me some clothes too." She eyed him suspiciously. "You did promise to call?"
The nurse and doctor went out together.
"Are you really going to call, Doctor Martin?" the girl whispered.
"Of course. What harm can it do? I don't like to lie. Besides, there might be some truth in her words. It's a clever to work on, you know. But I am afraid it is just a mental case."
Judith was given food and after she had finished her hair was combed and curled and tied up. One of the student nurses brought some powder and rouge. But there were no clothes for her, so she stayed in bed obediently.
She was beginning to think her message had not been delivered or that Mathews had deserted her when the door of her room was pushed open and in came the manager of the factory, weighed down with boxes of clothing and followed by the doctor and nurse.

"Miss Kingsly!" he cried. "I've never been so glad to see a person in my life." He dropped the boxes on the floor and reached to kiss her cheek as if he were an old friend. "We've been crazy Mr. Watson is flying out here—should be in here in a few hours now."
Judith smiled, her eyes glowing. But before she could speak, the doctor was saying apologetically: "I'm so sorry about all this, Miss Kingsly."
She accepted the apology with a wave of her bandaged hand. "Mr. Mathews—what happened to Tom? Did the detec—" Her eyes were cloudy with tears.
He smiled and nodded his head. "The detectives reached the boat right after you jumped overboard. There was some shooting but all the men were captured and Burke was unharmed. Even the ones at the house were caught. That's why the detectives were a little slow in catching up with you."
"Then Tom is all right?" Gladness rang in her voice and the tears spilled over her lashes. She wiped at them with the corner of the sheet.
"Will be in a little while," grinned the manager knowingly. "Just as soon as I get you out of here. I have him out at my place. We'll go there immediately."
Two nurses came to help Judith dress in the lovely things Mathews had brought for her. The bandages were removed from her hands and Judith found that the scratches had healed nicely.
"I had no idea you were so lovely, Miss Kingsly," said one of the nurses, as she stood off to have a better look.
"Quite remarkable how a little fixing up helps," smiled Judith. "Think I'll do now?"
"If he doesn't say he loves you, something is wrong with his eyesight."
Mathews was waiting for her in the hall. He tucked her arm through his and led her away.
"I just called home and found out Burke is in the garden. I told them to keep him there. It's a pretty setting for the reunion of lovers."
Judith blushed but made no comment.
The car pulled into the driveway and Mathews pointed in the direction of the swimming pool.
"Follow the walk around there and you'll find him somewhere nearby."
Judith slipped from the car and hurried down the flagstones. She had never been so happy in her life. She rounded a shrub and ran smack into someone. She bounced back, breathless, as the

"Judith!"
For a moment, Tom Burke could not believe his eyes. He wiped a hand across them to clear his vision.
"Oh, Tom!" she cried and reached hands towards him. "I'm not a ghost!"
That was all she needed to say at the moment.
Much later Mathews came out to say that Watson was there and wanting to see them. Judith's eyes were bright with the happiness of love as she and Tom slowly followed him to the house.
"Miss Kingsly!"
Watson hurried across the room and took her into his arms. Judith, astonished by his sudden action, was mute and wide-eyed. He kissed the top of her head.
"My dear girl—I have been frantic over your disappearance. I'm taking you back east with me—at once."
"Just a minute," put in Tom. "Miss Kingsly doesn't work for you any more."
"Who do you mean?" Watson almost shouted the question; then he subsided and smiled. "I see," he said. "I suppose you are taking over the job of her future?"
Judith blushed as Tom's arm went around her waist and pulled her to his side.
"That's right, Mr. Watson," Burke answered. "Judith did a swell job for the company. She was responsible for rescuing me and capturing those spies. No man could have done better. But I never want her life put in danger again, and it isn't going to be," he added determinedly. "From now on she's going to lead a sheltered life."
There was a twinkle in his eyes as he kissed her.
Watson was beaming at them as he reached for Tom's hand; then he turned to Judith.
"I'll miss seeing that red head of yours every day, Miss Kingsly. But, frankly, I sent you out here because I hated to see you and Burke separated. I thought you two might patch things up if I threw you together." He sighed. "I had no idea I was letting you in for such an experience. I trumped up that excuse of a leak in the organization just to send you out here. It's a good thing I did."
"Isn't it a good thing for both of us," said Tom.
Judith turned glowing eyes to the man she loved.
"And for me too," she smiled. Mathews suddenly reassessed himself as host. "Well, seeing that the future is taken care of, suppose you two explore the garden again. I'll entertain Mr. Watson."

MORNING WORSHIP

"Men of Good-will United" is the pastor's sermon topic in the first service of worship at eleven o'clock Sunday morning.

SPECIAL SERVICE

Sunday evening at eight our worship service will be attended by Rotarians as our special guests.

M. Y. F.

The Methodist Youth Fellowship will meet in the basement of the church following the worship service.

on week night's have been suspended.

WOMAN'S SOCIETY

The Woman's Society of Christian Service will meet at the church Monday afternoon at 3:30.

WORLDS SERVICE

Many are sending their annual offerings to World Service. This church contributes $751 this year to benevolent enterprises in the Central Texas Conference and the work represented in the general benevolence of The Methodist Church.

BUDGET AGAIN

Sunday will conclude the tenth month of the Conference year. The church this year has kept its accounts paid month by month.

appreciated. You have been good; keep it up.

NEW CHOIRS

The new choir sang last Sunday and more likely will sing again next Sunday. In the morning service the Junior Choir sang splendidly and in the evening service the Juvenile Choir did likewise.

SENIOR CHOIR

The senior choir will meet one evening next week for rehearsal and will resume its regular work in the morning service of September 20.

ORGAN TUNED

To the tune of $50 the organ was tuned last week! (Drop in an extra half-dollar Sunday if you like the sound of the organ).

RALLY DAY

Church-school Rally Day is September 20. Why not have 300 in attendance that day? Were each class and department to set out to do its best, that goal could be reached.

ORGANIZATIONS

September is organization month in the church school. We need new officers and teachers in several places. Some have indicated their willingness to help in this work.

SALUTE TO CISCO

The Cisco Methodist Church soon will install an organ. Last year it paid of its indebtedness. This year it took second place in the district in class of appointment.

NEW MEMBERS

Have you invited that person living near you who ought to be a member of this church to unite with it? If not, why not do so today?

BOARD OF STEWARDS MEETS

The Board of Stewards will meet at eight o'clock Monday evening. A short business session will be held.

A SUGGESTION

Some churches have regular monthly meetings of those who have nearest of kin in the military services. They do many things helpful to themselves and their loved ones.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE

We never leave for a great while the matter of church attendance. Years of working with people have shown how indispensable it is to a growing Christian.

W. C. Hammon Opens Eastland Sewing Machine Agency

A new business is being established in Eastland.

W. C. Hammon, who for many years has been associated with the home appliance business in this section representing many of the better-known companies, announces the opening of his own business which will be known as the Hammon Sewing Machine Exchange.

Mr. Hammon stated that the firm would buy, sell, rent and service sewing machines of all makes. Hammon recently purchased from Eastland county a large number of used sewing machines formerly used in the County's sewing rooms and these are being renovated and will be offered for sale.

3 simple ways TO GET THE MOST LIGHT FROM YOUR LAMPS and help your eyesight, too!

Here are three simple and economical ways to get more light from your electric table and floor lamps. Follow these suggestions, and you'll help your eyesight, too.

1. Keep lamps clean... dust-free. Reflector bowls and lamp bulbs gather more dust than you think. The dust collected on them in from one to three months can deprive you of much of the light your eyes need. Cleaning them with a damp rag, or washing will give you from 25 to 30% more light. Remove bulbs and reflector bowls before washing or cleaning with damp rag.

2. Replace dark shades. If your lamps have dark shades or shades now turned yellow inside, you are losing light that your eyes need for easier seeing, less eyestrain. You may be losing as much as 50%. Clean them regularly, or if they're too bad, replace them with fresh shades and you'll get a lot more light. (Even light-colored silk shades will give you more light if brushed weekly.)

3. Place lamps to make light more useful. Put them where they give eyes most help. Often, two or more of the family can use the same lamp when furniture is properly arranged. (One suggestion is shown above.) And don't get too far away from the lamp; a difference of twelve inches can cut your light as much as 50%.

KEEP SPARE FUSES on hand to save you time and trouble if a fuse blows. First, turn off the main switch and pull the cords-out of wall outlets. Then replace the blown fuse, but don't reconnect any lamps or appliances suspected of having caused the fuse to blow out until they've been fixed.
