Teachers Give Attractive Reception At High School

Members Of The Faculty And The School Board Stand In Receiving Line And Take Part In Evening's Enjoyable Festivities

The teachers of the school system were hosts and hostesses Monday evening in the reading room of the high school for a very attractive reception to which the parents and seniors of the school were invited.

Large baskets filled with purple larkspurs and a profusion of garden flowers furnished the decorative notes of the room.

In the receiving line were Supt. and Mrs. W. C. Blankenship, Principal and Mrs. Geo. Gentry, Dr. and Mrs. E. O. Ellington, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie White and Mrs. Fox Stripling and Miss Clara Cox, sponsor of the Senior Class.

Miss Mary McElroy presided over the lunch table.

The table was spread with a handsome lace cloth over yellow and centered with a beautiful punchbowl around which sprays of ivy and clusters of pink roses were artistically arranged. Yellow and pink tapers in crystal holders added lovely notes.

Assisting Miss McElroy in serving punch to the visitors were Jessie May Couch, Velma Scott, Virginia Sanders, Ella Neill, Edith Dow Cordill, and Katherine Happell.

The school radio furnished many musical selections for the evening. A large number of parents, pupils and teachers from the various schools, called during the evening.

The committee in charge of the reception, who put it over so successfully, was composed of Miss Clara Pool, J. A. Coffey and Mrs. H. A. Stegner.

Cemetery Collections Must Be Increased To Pay Men Properly

A plea is made for money to pay for meals for the men who have been cleaning up the cemetery, says John Wolcott. The collections are coming in but not fast enough.

DO YOU INHALE?

A frank discussion at last on a subject that has long been "taboo"

"LET sleeping dogs lie!" So said the cigarette trade when first we raised the subject of inhaling. But dodging an important issue is not Lucky Strike's policy!

Do you inhale? That question is vitally important... for every smoker inhales—knowingly or unknowingly. Every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette! And the delicate membranes of your throat demand that your smoke be pure, clean—free of certain impurities.

No wonder Lucky Strike dares to raise this vital question! For Luckies bring you the protection you want... because Luckies' famous purifying process removes certain impurities concealed in every tobacco leaf. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it!

So, whether you inhale knowingly or unknowingly, safeguard those delicate membranes!

Many Congressmen Go Contrary To Laws In Their Respective States By Employment Of Their Relatives

WASHINGTON, (UP)—Dozens of congressmen and some senators are going contrary to the spirit of laws in their respective states forbidding the employment of relatives.

They are able to do this legally because senators and congressmen have been held to be federal, not state officers. Congress has not only ignored anti-nepotism bills which have been occasionally introduced, but more than half the members carry wives, children, "in-laws" and other relatives on the payrolls as secretaries and clerks.

The extent of this practice may be disposed more fully with adoption of the Warren resolution to open up the house payrolls to public inspection. Rep. Warren, Democrat, planned to call up his resolution in the house soon. Speaker Garner and both the house leaders of both parties have endorsed it.

Congress years ago passed laws governing the civil service employees of the executive departments which provide not more than two members of the same family may be carried on the civil service

46 Employees Of T. & P. Placed On List For Pension

Forty-six employees of the Texas and Pacific Railway company were retired on account of permanent incapacity or having reached the age limit and sixteen on the rolls died during the calendar year ending December 31, 1932, according to the annual report of the company.

Since inauguration of the pension system April 1, 1926 319 employees have been retired, 84 of whom have died, one returned to service and one dropped from the roll. This left on December 31, 1932 receiving pensions averaging $54.74 per month each, involving monthly expenditure of $12,793.85 or $152,040.20 per year.

During last year additional industries were located on the Texas and Pacific system, of which 67 were located on existing trackage and 49 on newly constructed tracks aggregating 7.59 miles in length.

In addition, 67 industries were located in the vicinity of the company's facilities in the East Texas oil field territory. A total of $78,359.49 was received during the year from rents of miscellaneous property, principally industrial sites.

Diagnosis Of Cancer

(Sixth of a series of ten articles on cancer issued by the State Medical Association).

The discovery and recognition of beginning cancer is often very difficult. In some instances the type of cancer is such that it presents no early symptoms. In other cases it may be mistaken by the attending physician for something else. Cancer of the rectum, for example, is often treated for months as hemorrhoids or piles. Again, the cancer may be so deep seated or so obscure as to be diagnosed only by the use of special instruments and special procedure in the hands of specially skilled physicians.

As a general rule, the earlier cancer is found, the more difficult it is to recognize. When the diagnosis is easy, the disease is usually advanced.

The diagnosis of cancer is often delayed by failure of the patient to consult a physician regarding a condition which is thought to be of little importance. On the other hand, the physician sometimes fails to recognize the real significance of suggestive symptoms and neglects to make a thorough examination. In women, the delay is often due to hesitancy in submitting to a proper examination.

Whenever suspicious symptoms are present the advice of a physician should be obtained without delay. Any lump in the breast, for instance, demands a prompt investigation. The real cause of an abnormal discharge from any body orifice should immediately be sought. The sore on the nose or lip or face, which does not heal, should never be neglected. Any of these symptoms may mean beginning cancer; and it is therefore very urgent that their true nature be speedily established.

The early diagnosis of cancer is without exception, the most important single factor in successfully combating this disease. The most skillful treatment can not atone for the sin of delay. In early diagnosis lies the only hope for cure.

had so greatly speeded up our capacity to produce that markets had to be found for huge surpluses of peace-time products. Payment for these goods and for the interest on the debts due us involved intricate problems of international settlements and balances, calling for the most careful and delicate adjustment.

For ten years the real problem was postponed and at the same time greatly accentuated by the granting of large additional credits—many of them very unwisely granted—by the United States to the rest of the world. Obviously, this merely increased the annual interest charge which would eventually have to be paid to us.

By 1928 we had built up an enormous export trade amounting in that year to five billions of dollars, balanced by imported goods of four billions of dollars, and by credits to foreign countries of one billion dollars.

By 1928-29, our domestic financial situation compelled us suddenly to discontinue granting further foreign credits. Then in 1929, during a special session of congress called for farm relief, there was passed a new tariff law carrying the highest rates of duty on imported goods ever placed on our statute books. We would sell to the foreigner but not buy from him. He would have to pay us what he owed us, of course, but not in goods. Never! Never! Literally, one thousand economists joined in a petition to the President of the United States, pleading with him not to sign the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill and pointing out to him in prophetic language what would happen if he did so, although not even they could foresee events in their true devastating proportions. It has been said that never before in the history of the world have so many economists come together in agreement on any one thing!

Since the passage of this act, practically every nation in the world has taken a slap at our export trade. They are giving us a dose of our own medicine; and we find it very bitter.

Largely because the tariff, and our insistence on collecting the uncollectible war debts, our foreign trade is contracting at an alarming rate. For the first three months of 1932, our exports have shrunk 68 per cent in value as compared with the same period in 1928. One class in our exports has increased heavily, however, and that is the export of branch factories to Canada and England and other countries. In order to operate behind their tariff walls, and incidentally make more work for foreign labor and less for American labor.

The cotton trade properly denounces the federal agricultural marketing act as being extremely unwise and un-American, but how many of us realize that the agricultural marketing act and the farm board are legitimate progeny of the tariff?

Indeed, once having adopted the principle of the use of the power of government to provide economic shelter for one group of its citizens at the expense of other groups, and having followed that principle to the end of the chapter as we have done, it was inevitable that the time would come when those groups who were penalized by this process would make insistent demand for removal of their economic inequality. This demand could only be met by repudiation of the protective principle or by tapping the Federal treasury. The latter, being the easier and more agreeable method, was adopted.

The agricultural marketing act had its origin in an agrarian revolt against the inequality of the cotton and wheat farmers in the economic scale. This inequality owed its origin and its preservation to the tariff.

The act itself was conceived in deceit; its sponsors knew perfectly well what was wrong with agriculture; they knew that the interests of the cotton and wheat farmers had not the remotest connection with the machinery of distribution; they knew that the farmer's submergence in the economic scale was due to the use of the power of government in licensing one group of its citizens to put their hands deep into the pockets of another group. They knew also that they were not going to require those hands to be withdrawn. But something had to be done. Do you recall that stupid, meaningless phrase which we heard from nearly every political stump in 1929: "We must do something for the farmer." Well, they did it. But they had a slight mix-up in their preparations. They did it to him, instead of for him.

A special session of Congress first passed the agricultural marketing act and then, fearful that they might have been a little overgenerous, they just overhauled the tariff a little and lengthened somewhat those arms with which they were already deep into the pockets of the wheat and cotton farmers, especially the latter. Is it necessary to dwell much on the consequences? The U. S. Department of Agriculture, under the date of January 24, using 1928 as the average of prices for four years prior to the world war, gives an index figure for grain of 100 and for cotton of 45, whereas prices paid for the things which the farmer buys is shown as 12 1/2.

Stated differently, where the farmer got $1.00 for a given amount of cotton before the war, he now gets 45¢ and where he paid $1.00 for the things he bought in town before the war, he now pays $1.25. The two playmates of the farm board, cotton and wheat, deflated to one-half or less of their pre-war value, while the farmer must pay considerably more than pre-war prices for his agricultural implements for his tools! With this result before us, can we be accused for wondering if some of our great industrial geniuses might not have had more success if they'd been assigned the patriotic job of reducing the price of the things the farmer buys instead of trying to raise the price of the things he sells.

Facts are very stubborn things, and disinformation is oftentimes very embarrassing. The now empty United States treasury, even when full, did not hold enough money to maintain an artificial price for world commodities, like cotton and wheat. Failing in the attempt, the farm board advised cutting acreage, plowing up every third row, etcetera. These things are also legitimate progeny of the tariff and go hand in hand with it. No commodity can profit from the tariff so long as it is produced in excess of domestic consumption. Is there anybody left in Washington who still thinks the U. S. government can do a better job of cotton distribution than those of its citizens who developed a marketing system through the exercise of that individual initiative and vision and industry which have made our country great? Under that system, raw cotton has always been the greatest and most highly competitive commodity in the world, yielding for the service of distribution the lowest toll of any product of the farm, factory or mine.

You know of the grandiose plans of these Farm Board bureaucrats, which possibly some of them still cling to, despite the wreckage lying all about.

They would not only fix the price of cotton; they would substitute distribution by government bureaucracy for the existing private system. They would enroll all the cotton farmers into one huge combination under government control and direction. All the existing machinery of distribution would in time be scrapped—cotton merchants, cotton futures exchanges—all had to go. This gigantic paternalistic trust, financed by our Uncle Sam—half a billion this year and a billion next if needed, and directed by the wisdom of the federal farm board, would tell the farmers how much and what kind of cotton to plant, when and how and at what price to sell it; would tell the spinners of the world the quality and quality of the cotton they might have, when they might have it and incidentally the price at which they could have it.

If the farm board could have had their way about it, we were to see this chosen instrument of nature for clothing the peoples of the earth, after centuries of freedom of movement in accordance with natural laws, at last made captive of a government bureau, owing its power to a colossal act of deception and political trickery foisted upon the American people by its congress. They were doubtless some who voted for this act who were duped into the belief that it was the proper means of correction of the farmer's position of economic inequality. There were probably others who voted for it, knowing that it could never accomplish this but who acted in the hope that at least a portion of the half billion dollars appropriated might find its way into the pockets of the farmer. Van hope! The farmer's pockets which were supposed to receive the money and Uncle Sam's pockets, from which it came, are now both empty.

Almost everybody was fooled except the cotton farmer. In spite of all the glittering promises and inducements held out to him, including unlimited quantities of government money, eighty-five out of every one hundred cotton farmers preferred to stay with the old system of marketing and thus retain what was left of their economic independence.

The cotton farmer is an individualist. He knows he can not get something for nothing. He knows co-operative marketing will never work, unless a forced growth, developed from the top down, with government money, under the direction of a government bureau. One doesn't build a house by putting the roof on first.

Co-operative marketing of cotton died in that moment when the co-operatives accepted Uncle Sam's first check, and marketing by a government bureau stepped into its place. They tell us that Uncle Sam is merely the banker, banks supply credit not capital, for marketing cotton. On rare occasions, they find themselves involuntary furnishers of capital, but they have no illusions about it; they know that they are then in the cotton business.

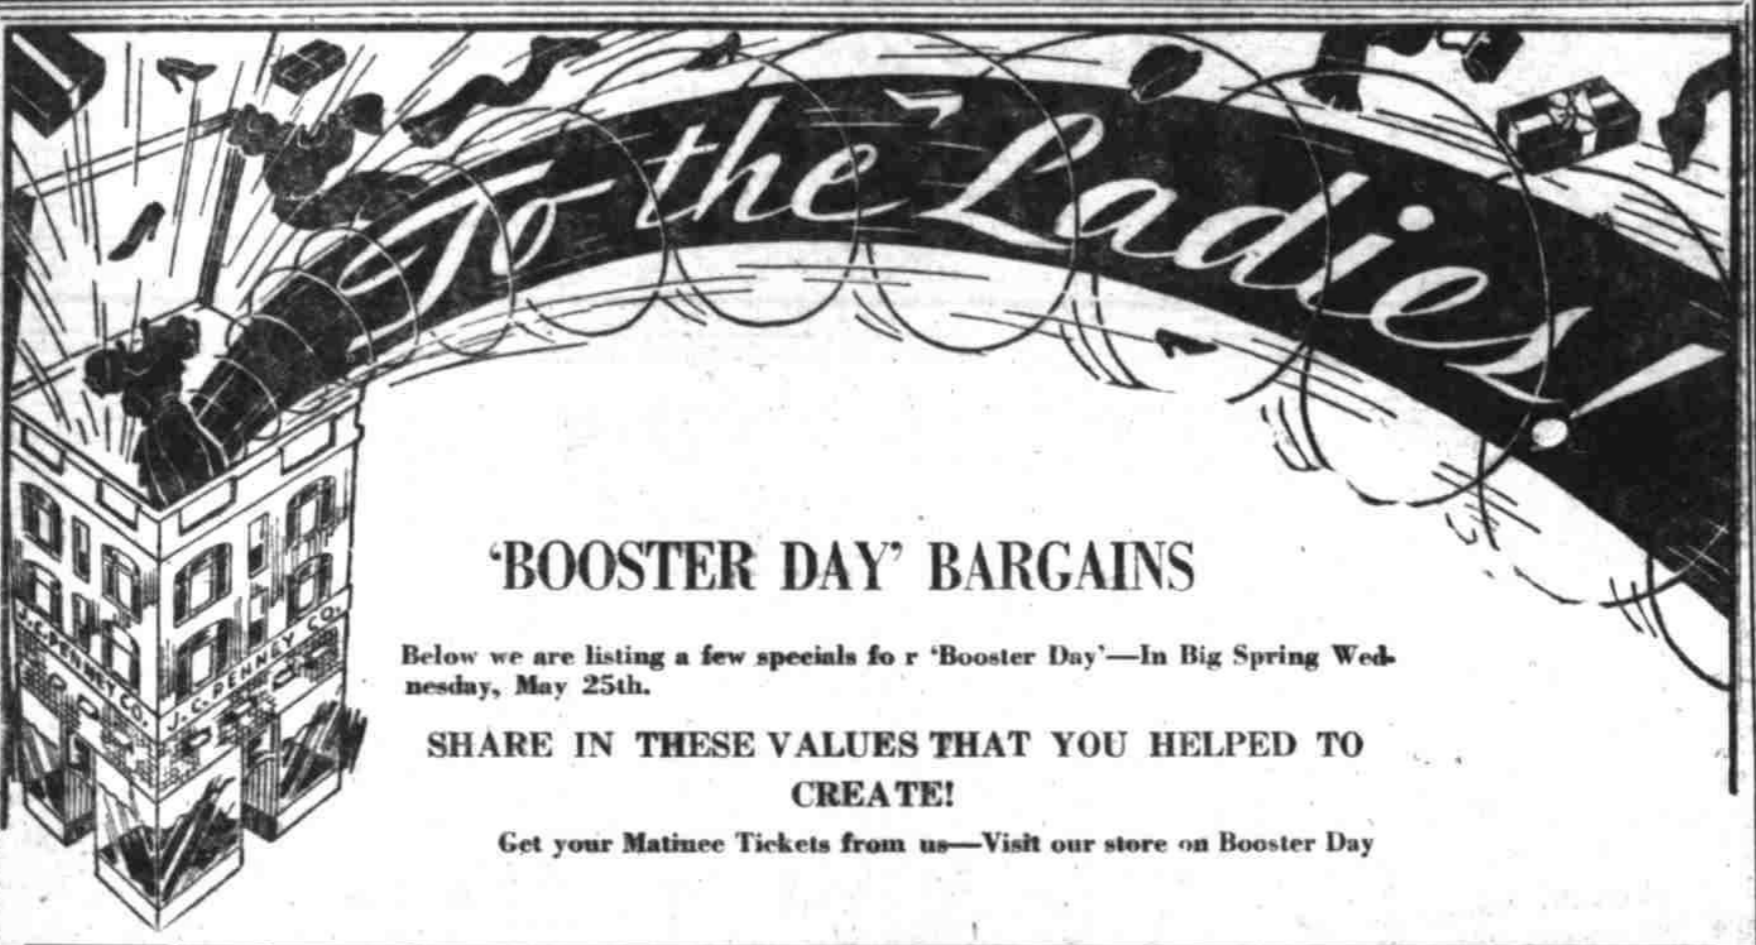

He is inclined to question a little whether Mr. Whitney has correctly interpreted events. Congress itself has proceeded so far in the process of giving our United States away to the racketeers of tariff, of liquor, of liquor, of farm board, of emergency, of political log-rolling and political patronage and to the disbands on the war debts that those 120,000,000 people of whom Mr. Whitney spoke have merely been engaged in desperate effort to salvage something out of the wreck of their former belongings.

The great majority of the people of the United States are sound on economic and governmental questions—asking for no governmental favors, they are unorganized and are slow to express themselves. Those who are now causing the powers and resources of government to be prostituted to their own selfish ends operate in small but powerfully organized groups. They are tireless, resourceful workers. Although greatly in the minority, the pressure which they exert on congress is so concentrated and powerful that it too often overcomes the feeble defense of the majority.

Someone has said that every people get as good government as they deserve. Think of that a moment. There's something to it. No man who hasn't been diligent in expressing his views to his congressman and senators has any right to complain if they vote contrary to his ideas. You may be sure the man who has some selfish and narrow views has not neglected to put congress of his views and he probably went there in person to do so.

ALL fast colors!

Now that the whole deceitful, paternalistic scheme is collapsing, what of the future?

This year's cotton crop, the second largest on record, is bringing about half a billion dollars. At prices of three or four years ago, it would have brought a billion and a half dollars. The cotton farmer has thus lost a billion dollars of his buying power. Even based on pre-war prices he has lost over half a billion of his buying power. The wheat farmer has been hit almost as hard. Present prices leave the farmer little with which to pay taxes and interest on his debt and practically nothing for buying things in town. His implements and clothing have been repaired for another year. His automobile is out of commission for the present. But his family, with a roof over their heads and a pantry full of good food from his own garden and orchard. His barn is full of the products of his own soil and labor. He can get along for some time without the products of the factories, but they can never go long without his buying power. They have closed down, or else run on short time, and eight million idle men walk the streets of our cities looking for work and food.

At last the tariff grabbers have overreached themselves. They destroyed the farmer's markets by depriving the buyers of his products of the means of payment. This in turn has destroyed the market among farmers for industrial products. Industry will never get back its markets until the farmer's buying power is restored. The farmer's buying power will never be restored until the protective tariff is materially reduced, the uncollectible of the war debts recognized and the cost of government drastically cut. Cotton is the main force in the application of enormous economic pressure now being exerted to break down those artificial barriers which have substantially dried up the movement of international goods.

Mr. Richard Whitney, straight-thinking and straight-talking president of the New York Stock Exchange, testified recently at one of the numerous investigations with which congress almost constantly occupies and amuses itself. He said in speaking of liquidation on the stock exchange, and 120,000,000 people seemed to be intent upon "giving our United States away." One

SPORTS ON PARADE

By CURTIS BISHOP

Bill Tate, for long an outstanding baseball and tennis representative of the Merrick-Bristow Oil Company, and who is also one neat basketball player, reports that the Moody Oil Co. team has lost its last game. Tate goes on to explain that he will in the future guard the second sack, and that there is no reason in the world why a team should lose a game when he is playing second base.

The employees of the various oil companies in the Furman Field met last night to discuss plans for the formation of a single club. With Beryl Cramer, Tate, Charlie Ferguson, A.
E. Chester and others available for service the oil field nine would be hard to defeat.

Incidentally Tate brings a story concerning the high school nine that played on their field a week or so ago. The Oilmen were enjoying a batting spree and about the eighth inning were leading 15 to 2, having combed the high school pitcher (whose name Tate did not know) for something like seventeen base hits, many of them for extra bases.

They were talking it over (Tate and the pitcher) between innings.
"You know," the high school kid said seriously, "I played baseball about six years before I ever learned I could pitch."

Formation of a league with Goohorns, the Oil Field, Tigers, and the high school team is being discussed. Nothing is expected to come of it.

San Angelo, through its sports servicer, reports that they are ready for inter-city tennis competition and prefer Abilene for competition. The local netters lack a month or so of practice before reaching their peak. Tennis among the high school physical education classes was so popular along the last two or three weeks of school that the tennis club players could not find a court available for practice, and many of them gave up the sport temporarily until the crisis somewhat subsided. At present George Dehoney is No. 1, H.

E. Dunagan No. 2, Joe Davis No. 3, and Bill McCarty No. 4. Winston Manuel, Vernon Shiva, a newcomer named Richardson, Bill Savage, and one or two others promise to make it hot for the ranking ladder once the season gets underway.
Toombo, the junior high coach, will be in line for a place if he does not attend summer school.

Coaches of District 4 were in their golfing glory Sunday. At Sweetwater Ed Hennig shot a 79 to lead in a one-sided 34 to 19 victory over the Midland
Linkens and at Lamesa Oble Bristow defeated Bill White 6 up and 5 to play, which is a fair margin of victory.

The Lamesa team has been voted favorites to cop the title this year.
From E. C. Nix and Frank Rose down to "Bert" Bernard the Davson county team presents a roster that is hard to beat. Fred Stephens, local player, lost his match 2 up and 1 to play in spite of his 51 over a strange course.

Cisco High School is filing suit against the state and district executive committee, with the petition to be legally placed today in the district court at Eastland. The action is an outgrowth of the suspension of Cisco High School from the 1932 football race of the interscholastic league.
The gist of the petition, so says

F. D. Wright of the Cisco school board, will be that the members of the district committee were moved by personal ill will and improper outside influence to seek the suspension of Cisco; that the meet at Abilene to ask the suspension was held without notice of intent, and that the committee willfully refused to announce the purpose beforehand.

It is probably the first time that the affairs of the interscholastic athletic league has been brought into Texas courts, and the results will be watched with interest. We have destroyed all back copies of this column in which ineligibility charges against George Decker of San Angelo were mentioned, the District 4 officials are going to repeal the rule that might keep Sheridan, Spiegel Woods and one or two others on the Sweetwater roster next season from playing, and a firm of attorneys will be maintained by each individual high school at all times.

The question may arise as to what jurisdiction the state courts have over the state and district athletic committees.

'The First American'
Theme Of St. Mary's
Auxiliary Session

The Auxiliary of St. Mary's Episcopal church met in the parish house Monday afternoon with Mrs.
John Clarke presiding over the meeting and Mrs. Gilmour leading the devotional.
"The First American" was the program topic and Mrs. Clarke made a talk on the subject. Mrs.

Van Gieson read a letter written by her father about Indian raids and Mrs. Beaudreau related an interesting experience she had. Mrs. Mount gave a reading, "Two Thousand Miles for a Book."

During the short business session
the members voted to hold a food sale next week, June 6, at Wilson & Clark's.
Those attending were Mmes.
Clarke, Gilmour, Van Gieson, Ned Beaudreau, E. L. Mount, W. H.
Martin, O. L. Thomas, Geo. Gar-rette, Shine Phillips and T. C.
Thomas.

The next meeting of the auxiliary will be held on June 6. After this the members will disband for the summer months.

YOU know which motor oil suits your engine best—a pure Mid-continent grade oil or a Pennsylvania. In either of these classes Sinclair offers you the very finest that money can buy. Sinclair Opaline Motor Oil is blended from the oldest of the Mid-continent crudes, averaging 80 million years of filtering and mellowing. Oldest of these is the Cambro-Ordovician crude taken from a mile and a quarter below the surface in Oklahoma. Sinclair Pennsylvania Motor Oil is refined 100% from Pennsylvania's costliest crude—the famous Bradford-Allegany crude so rich in lubricating quality that every barrel commands an extra price. Bradford-Allegany crude is a product of the Devonian Age—that wonderful age in earth's history when heat and pressure were most perfect for the forming of oil. Enhancing the quality of this remarkable crude has been its hundred million years of filtering and mellowing in the ground. Both Sinclair Pennsylvania and Sinclair Opaline are not only de-waxed in process of manufacture—they are also freed from non-lubricating petroleum jelly, a process which requires chilling the oil down to as low as 60° F. below zero. No matter which of these oils you choose—put it to the test of hard, fast driving. Note how it stands up—note especially at draining time how little oil has been used up—positive, visible proof of protection for the last mile as well as the first.'

Enforcement - Not Repeal

To the Editor:
A highly appreciated friend, who favors the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, said he resented being called a "wet"—that he and four members of his family were strictly temperate and yet all of them believed that if the Eighteenth Amendment were not repealed America was headed for Hades. The designations, "wets" and "drys" are not of my making. The old terminology was "anti" and "pro". These new words are of reportorial origin.

There are dry "wets" and wet "drys". The rule, however, is that a man votes as he drinks. This friend says that he and his family believe in temperance, but, notwithstanding he is able with tongue and pen, he has never made a temperance speech nor written a temperance argument. Having accompanied with such temperance orators as John E. Googh, George W. Bain, Sam Jones, John E. Finck, Luther Benson, Billy Sunday, Frances E. Willard, Samuel W. Dickie, Daniel A. Poling, Oliver W. Stewart, B. H. Carroll, Henry W. Grady, C. C. Seligman, George W. Truett, William S. Herndon and John G. Woolley, I found that a real temperance worker either refuses or becomes a prohibitionist. No temperance lecturer known to me ever voted wet.

I wish all the temperance wets and intemperance drys would begin working for temperance. We have never done enough. When we measure the devastation wrought by drink and compare it with the activities of those who claim to favor temperance, we bulk quite small.
But the fact remains that the drys are the ones who hold the temperance meetings. Everyone of Daniel A. Poling's company of allied prohibition speakers raises his voice for temperance. No such campaign as they are staging ever before overtook America. All the Anti-Saloon Leaguers are also temperance workers. Many who favor repeal are conscientious. Some of them drink as they talk, while many other wets are total abstainers.
If the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed, what then? No wet claims to favor a return of the saloon. What will we have if the wets win? Who will claim the tiger? He was running wild in the old saloon days. There never was a law-bidding liquor seller. Are we to cover before this monster like whipped spaniels and confess that booze is king?
The wets who talk for temperance are doing nothing for temperance and the drys who talk for the Eighteenth Amendment are asleep at the switch. All of us need to mend our ways. I have been on the firing line almost fifty years, and expect to die fighting for the American home. I am for temperance. None of my family use intoxicants. Why can not the family of five and my family of three and other American families get together and keep American dry by convincing the public that drink is deadly both to wets and dry, to whites and blacks, and is everywhere a curse.

"We ducked the detours in all eight states"
Mrs. Ernest Schumaker and her family, of Salina, Kansas, took a real vacation trip last summer—6,000 miles, through eight Western States.
Road construction was going on in every one of the eight states—but the Schumakers ducked the detours! They knew before they started where the torn-up roads were and how to miss them, thanks to a Conoco Travel Bureau routing map.
"We missed several awfully bad detours and lots of minor ones by following the trails you mapped out for us," Mrs. Schumaker wrote us. "We traveled 6,000 miles without any trouble whatsoever."

Last year, 68,000 motorists asked the Conoco Travel Bureau to help plan and route motor trips in all parts of the United States, in Canada and Mexico. Many thousands more, seeking road information, stopped at Conoco stations, each of which is a Travel Bureau branch. All found the Conoco men along the way their well-informed friends.

If you are planning a trip this year, write the Conoco Travel Bureau, Denver. Tell us where you want to go and when. Or, if more convenient for you, fill in one of our applications for this travel service at any Conoco station, and it will reach us without delay. We'll send you—free of charge and without obligation—an official Conoco Passport, excellent road maps with marked routes, illustrated travel literature and other information. Travel "the Conoco way"... duck the detours.

the MAN HUNTERS

BY MABEL McELLIOTT

CHAPTER XLV

The elder Dunbar glared at his tall son. "What's that you're saying?" he demanded. "I can't seem to get what you're driving at."

Deliberately Bob repeated, "I told you, sir, I expect to be married next week."

"Hah!" The veins stood out alarmingly on the forehead of the man in the swivel chair. "You're trying to tell me -- you have the face to announce that you're marrying a nobody. You know very well it's been understood you're to marry Denise."

Bob shrugged his shoulders. "That's just it," he said. "His father rapped out, 'What's just it? You're talking rot this morning.'"

Bob tried patiently to explain. "You talked me into that engagement. You and mother -- everybody."

"I suppose you don't know your own mind, hey? I must say, young man, I think you're behaving in devilish bad fashion. First you give us to understand that you want to marry Denise. Then you come around with a cock and bull story about a girl nobody knows. Some one you picked up God knows where!"

Bob gripped his hands against the back of the chair until the knuckles stood out. "I'll have to ask you to take that back," he said with deadly quiet. "I've told you all about her. There's nothing the matter with her family. She happens to be poor -- that's all."

The two men continued to stare at each other. The younger moved toward the door.

"There is nothing more to say, I guess."

His father detained him. "Where do you think you're going?"

"Back to my desk of course."

Mr. Dunbar stood up, emphasizing his words with a shaking forefinger. "You're to do nothing of the kind," he announced. "Until this affair is settled, you're persona non grata in this office. Do you understand?"

It was a blow but the boy gave no sign other than the darkening of his eyes.

"Very well, sir, if that's the way you feel about it." He turned again ed autocrat that he was, he loved his son dearly. This open break with Robert disturbed him. Mr. Dunbar decided to see the girl and talk a little sense to her.

He frowned with distaste as his taxi, bumping along the shabby side street, came to a stop. It was just as he had expected -- a house in a row of brave, run-down dwellings badly needing paint.

"Wait for me," he commanded the driver. Dunbar rang the bell with some trepidation. It was not a pleasant errand but it was one he must go through with whether or not he liked it.

A lean, gray-haired woman in a spotless blue house dress answered the ring.

"We don't want to buy anything," she began firmly. Then, struck by something in her caller's bearing, she stopped confused.

"I want to see Miss Susan Carey," Dunbar said in his courteous manner. "Is she in?"

"Oh, yes, I'll call her." The gray-haired woman gave him another penetrating look and then invited him to enter. As the man waited in the small living room he glanced about with annoyance. It was not at all the sort of interior he had expected. The old rosewood chairs, carved and upholstered in the manner of the '80's, had a decent self-respect about them. So had the ancient square piano. The whole place reminded him dimly of his mother's front parlor. It was uncompromisingly clean and the drilled white curtains showed no sign of the usual Chicago grime.

There was a faint rustle in the hall and he stood up, feeling rather ill at ease. The girl who faced him was tall and slender. Her dress of black woolen stuff had a nun-like frill of white at the throat. The man noticed that her skin had an extraordinary, translucent fairness and that she wore no makeup. Her eyes were enormous.

As the girl advanced Dunbar began to speak quickly and glibly. If Susan was not the sort of person he had expected to see, he gave no sign. His method of attack was simple. He would play on her better feeling. He would make her see that marriage with a penniless boy would be quite different from marriage to the heir of millions.

"I'm Bob Dunbar's father," he began. Susan was not surprised. From Bob the night before she had heard the whole story. "I don't want you to think," the man pursued winningly, "that I've come here in an antagonistic mood. On the contrary, I feel very friendly toward you and now that I've seen you I must applaud my son's taste."

He seated himself at her invitation. "I only want to make it quite clear that there were good reasons for my behaving as I did when my son told me his plans. Robert is, I'm afraid, very impulsive, and here he shook his head sadly, "extremely fickle. Perhaps you do not know that he is vitally bound in another agreement." He paused to let the words sink in.

Susan said, "I'm afraid I don't quite understand."

Mr. Dunbar smiled. "Of course you don't my dear young lady," he assured her. "The scamp would never tell you about himself."

"If you mean Denise Ackroyd, I do know all about that," Susan said quietly.

larkson on the eighteenth amendment. The convention was to ratify Rayburn's selection, but Hopkins announced he would denounce machine politics that was responsible for Rayburn's selection.

An element, led by Senator Walter Wood, of Houston, was standing solidly for harmony, while Steve Pindney, of Houston, heading another element was preparing a press convention for declaration of repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.

REPUBLICANS OPEN AT MINERAL WELLS

MINERAL WELLS, Texas (AP)—Texas Republicans opened their state convention at 10:45 a. m. here today to the strains of "America" resounding throughout the great convention hall, and approximately 500 delegates and a large number of visitors present.

The principal business was the selection of forty-nine delegates to the Chicago National convention. Sentiment was virtually unanimous for instructed votes for President Hoover, for re-nomination. Eugene Nolte, of Seguin, chairman of the state executive committee called the convention to order and the welcoming address was by John C. Miller, of Mineral Wells, whose reference to President Hoover brought applause.

The temporary chairman appointed the following committee chairmen: Orville Bullington, Wichita Falls, resolutions.

Henry Zweifel, Fort Worth, nominations.

W. J. Harris, Sulphur Springs, credentials.

J. W. Bane, Austin, permanent rules and organization.

Galveston was the only city bidding for the next convention.

The convention recessed until 2 p. m.

It ought to be very apparent to every thinking man by now, that he must take a hand in what's going on at Washington if we are to preserve the principles on which our government was founded. The economic committee of this association have done splendid work but we must not put the whole responsibility on them, they need our help. Talk to your representative in congress ascertain how they stand on all questions of special privilege and if they are against those things support them for re-election and ask others to do same. Talk to the editor of your newspaper, to your banker and to citizens generally and arouse them to the dangers which threaten. Fight every single measure of special privilege. The whole complexion of congress could be changed in forty-eight hours if those who have much to lose by unsound legislation would become as vocal as those who are working for their own selfish interests. Our country will ride through this crisis—don't doubt it. The only question is, how big will be the bill for our mistakes? That depends upon how long our mistakes remain unrecognized and uncorrected. That in turn depends upon you and me and 130,000,000 other American citizens.

up in the land of the fathers of their tribe, the Osage, at Hominy, Okla.

Miss Thornton is three-fourths Indian. She is very beautiful. Other diners "guessed" they were a couple of girls going home from some Indian school, because they wore dresses of the same color and pattern—linen in two shades of purple. The folks thought they were "uniforms" of some girls' school.

The girls usually spend their summers in Colorado Springs and their winters in San Antonio. They changed around this year, however, and spent the spring in Los Angeles, San Diego and Phoenix, with a visit in Tia uana for the races.

"You girls are not related," queried a reporter.

"Not too much," said Mary.

"They are related of course in the tribal sense and that means their families share in the rich Osage nation oil lands, which, the reporter took to heart for their care-less smiles," she remarked to "bubba" the waiter that he wished his grandpa had been one of the original campers in the Indian territory.

Mary got off an entirely original line, one that started a reporter to scratching his head, trying to figure out whether there might be a sort of veiled something or other in it.

"I've always wanted to see a newspaper reporter," she said.

And a reporter, taking in Rena's sparkling smile took her name and address and pulled a far-from-original line about "maybe so I'll be seeing you some other time" and "why not move your reservation out into this oil country?"

get the thrill... on Goodrich FLYING Silvertowns

6 Facts you'll want to know about Flying Silvertowns

- 1 They bring new comfort and ease to motoring. Rough roads or slippery roads can be traveled safely without cutting speed.
- 2 They increase the efficiency of brakes.
- 3 They carry only 15 pounds air pressure—they ride over sharp objects that puncture ordinary tires.
- 4 Because of low pressure, blowouts are practically impossible.
- 5 They ride easily through sand, soft earth, or snow, where ordinary tires require chains or become mired.
- 6 They ease the car—the driver—the passengers.

A NEW thrill in driving! More comfort—more safety—than you've ever experienced in a car. Now made possible by a revolutionary new tire—adapted from the Goodrich Airplane Tire.

IT BRINGS THE SENSATION OF FLYING TO THE HIGHWAY. INSTEAD OF POUNDING OVER ROUGH ROADS, THE CAR "FLOATS." INSTEAD OF SKIDDING ON A SLIPPERY PAVEMENT WHEN THE BRAKES ARE SUDDENLY JAMMED ON, THE CAR STOPS.

If you drive a light car you can enjoy the tremendous advantages of Flying Silvertowns now. Let us answer your questions. Come in today!

Four Brotherhoods And Auxiliaries To Give Oldtime Picnic
A large crowd of railroad people and invited friends is expected at the old-fashioned basket picnic to be given Thursday noon at City Park, jointly by the Four Brotherhoods and their ladies' auxiliaries.
A chairman from each organization is to be here to attend the occasion, coming from different parts of the state. Interesting talks from each of these is on the program.
Members are being urged to be at the park by 12 noon with well filled baskets to take care of their guests. Long tables, to create sociability, are being arranged by connecting several of the ordinary park tables; and no one is to leave hungry.

Scout Newspaper To Be On Newsstands Saturday
"The Scout" the first newspaper to be published by Boy Scouts, will appear on the streets of Big Spring next Saturday, says Scoutmaster Geo. Wilke.
The paper is being issued by Troop No. 2. It is sold by subscription (20 cents for a year or 2 cents a copy); also at the drug stores and on the streets.
The scouts have been working steadily on it. It will contain news of the troop, including sports and society, and reports of scout activities in general.

Saturday Last Day To Enter Dress Contest

Women and girls were reminded again this morning that Saturday, May 28, is the last day on which they may enter cotton dresses in The Herald's dressmaking contest.
Six prizes, three for the best dresses in each of two classes, will be awarded.
The dresses must be made of cotton materials. They may be turned in to any dry goods merchant of the city, with names and addresses of the makers attached on slip of paper.
The dresses will be judged and the winners announced in next Sunday's Herald.
Dresses made by girls 12 to 15 years of age will be judged in one class, those made by women 18 years or older in another.
